EXPLORER ASKS VOLUNTEER TO AID FAWCETT RESCUE

Dyott Needs Young Unmarried Man for Perilous Jungle Trip in Search for Scientist

[Copyright, 1927, in All Countries by North American Newspaper Alliance.]

EXPLORER—Man, 20 to 30 years old, small, spare, of wiry build, to join relief expedition and party of exploration into Brazilian wilds. Must be willing, with habits of discipline. Travel experience and technical training unnecessary. Apply at once, letter only, to Commander George M. Dyott, 30 East 61st street, New York City.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—"That, briefly, describes the man I am looking for," remarked Commander Dyott, referring to the advertisement. Incisive, keen, swift, this close-knit blond British-American soon to start for those "Green Hells of Amazonia" which hide the secrets of forgotten ages and the whereabouts of another explorer, Col. P. H. Fawcett, last heard from in May, 1925.

Commander Dyott is going in to find this man, and if his hunt is successful, or if he finds Fawcett dead, will push ahead in the very quest which led Fawcett into the jungles of the Amazon, the search for the ruins of a lost civilization.

"It is a dangerous venture, beset by the hostility of savage Indians, of wild animals, of tropical fever, and the endless unknown perils of an unexplored area of 100,000 square miles.

"I WANT MAN WANTED

"Success of this undertaking, Commander Dyott needs one more man to complete his party of four, a man to be a leader, and the comforts of home for him will mean very little. He must be thoroughly prepared for hardship," explained the commander. "He must be willing to subordinate himself, to obey his superiors without question. He must commit himself into my hands completely, doing what he is told to do, when he is told to do it, and to do one thing more; this is most important. The trace of a smile will cause Commander Dyott's lean, severe face. "He must be a man. No chatterboxes need apply. Talkative men are the bane of an explorer's camp. My camps, I repeat, are no place for LONELY MAN TOUGHFUL

"I want a man himself with the quiet confidence of a leader. This former officer of the British Royal Naval Air Service expedition into the heart of a lost fellow-countryman recalls the glorious hazards of Stanley's search for Livingstone, with triumphant result.

"I am looking for a man of not more than thirty-five years," Dyott announced. "He must be ready to begin formal rigid training at once. He is not set in his ways. He will be amenable to discipline.

"I can't for a small man physically fit, but a small man, if physically fit, may be full should he be, how much should he weigh?"

"Height, five feet six, or seven, inches."

PANIC RULES IN HANKOW

Crowds Plunder Burning City

Terror Reigns as Gen. Tang Flees and His Thieving Forces Evacuate

Many Persons Injured in Native Town and Foreign Holdings Barricaded

HANKOW, Nov. 12. (AP)—Gen. Tang Sen-Chi, commander of the Hankow Nationalist troops, took flight from Hankow this morning. It is reported that he is aboard a Japanese steamer bound for Japan.

The evacuating troops of Gen. Tang set fire to the native city of Hankow tonight. Thousands of troops and civilians are roaming the streets, plundering. Panic reigns. Many persons have been injured.

The building of the Chinese Tobacco Company in the heart of the city has been bombed.

Before departing Tang Sen-Chi's body guard plundered a large quantity of silver because they had not been paid for some time. During the plundering of shops, the whole population was terrified and the foreign concessions were barricaded.

Japanese marines have landed in Hankow.

Gen. Tang, who assumed power after the disintegration of the Hankow Nationalist government, has been harassed steadily by the Nanking Nationalists. All reports from the affected areas have indicated that the

Borah Demands Showdown

Idaho Senator Calls on His Party to Espouse Cause of Law Enforcement

Specific Stand by Republican Platform and Candidate in 1928 Race Urged

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—Senator Borah of Idaho called tonight for a showdown in the next Presidential campaign on the prohibition question and law enforcement.

Explaining that he would not assume to advise the Democrats, he aimed his demand chiefly at the Republicans, who, he asserted, should take a stand for rigid enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"It is my contention," the Idaho Republican declared before the New York Women's Law Enforcement Committee, "that the supreme political problem in the United States today is obedience to law—the integrity of the constitutional government.

"I contend that the highest duty resting upon a political party at this time is to recognize that fact, meet it openly and courageously call its voters and supporters to the contest and fight it through to the end. In the clear sunlight of this issue, mere political expediency is both discreditable and futile.

PERIOD OF STRESS

"We know from the decisions of the Supreme Court that we are passing through a period in which corruption has reached to the very doors of the White House, dominated cabinets and robbed the people of their inheritance.

"We know that our daily press day by day records a series of crimes, both in number and in horror, which have no precedent or parallel.

"We know, if we but stop to reflect, that this spirit of lawlessness has come to be the most stupendous problem of our national life.

"We know, too, that this spirit of lawlessness has now taken the form of an utter disregard and defiance of our charter of government itself."

ONLY TWO COURSES

Contending that there are only two courses open, enforcement or repeal, the Senator added:

"The only safe course—and certainly it is the only honorable course—is to meet the issue and throw the tremendous power of the party behind the law and the Constitution."

Enforcement of the law, Mr. Borah asserted, requires the election of a President and officials who believe in the prohibition law and "who will be as vigilant and active to enforce it as its opponents are to violate it."

Not only is the Constitution defied, the Senator said, "but its enforcement and maintenance in many respects has become a mere formality.

MORE RAIN RECEIVED IN BAY REGION

San Francisco Has Added Precipitation Forecast by Weather Observers

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Exactly on schedule rain fell in the bay district again today, starting before dawn, but clearing in the afternoon. A slight drizzle is perceptible again tonight. During the day, a fall of .40 of an inch was recorded. In the last week there has been only one twenty-four-hour period without at least a trace of rain, the total being 2.3 inches for a seasonal precipitation of 4.25, contrasted to a normal fall at this time of 2.18 inches and 2.89 a year ago to date.

The forecast is for clearing weather. Maj. E. H. Bowie of the Weather Bureau, anticipates general cloudiness and rains in the Pacific Northwest during the coming week, reaching California and Nevada the latter half.

Offshore, winds are high and storm warnings have been posted again from the Golden Gate north, to protect shipping.

Reports from northern stations are: Point Reyes, .30; San Jose, trace; Chico, .06; Colusa, trace; Orland, .08; Santa Rosa, .48.

Occasional showers of rain may visit Los Angeles and vicinity today, it was predicted last night by Col. H. B. Hersey, government meteorologist.

"The day will be mostly cloudy, and unsettled weather will prevail, with occasional showers," Hersey predicted.

Monday also will be partly cloudy, he thought, with moderate temperatures predominating.

The highest temperature recorded yesterday was 68 degrees and the lowest 56 degrees. Humidity and barometric pressure showed a decrease.

INDIANAPOLIS (Ind.) Nov. 13. (AP) Five persons were killed here early today in a fire, in the Graystone Hotel in the downtown district. Smoke began pouring from the building shortly before midnight and several women were said to have jumped from second story windows.

All five were women, whose bodies were reported to have been found in a hallway on the third floor of the hotel.

The origin of the fire could not be learned

Albert Fall On Way Homeward

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. (AP)—Albert B. Fall, accompanied by members of his family, left here tonight for New Mexico, where he will attempt to regain his health at his ranch at Three Rivers.

With the former Cabinet member are Mrs. Fall, Mrs. C. C. Chase and Mrs. Brant Elliott, his two daughters; Caroline Elliott, a grand-daughter, and H. G. Clunn, his secretary.

HUDSON AUTO TUNNEL OPEN

Subway for 3800 Cars Hourly from New York to Jersey City Finished After Seven Years

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—The opening of a $48,000,000 vehicular tunnel 9350 feet long and running seventy-two feet below the bed of the Hudson River between New York and Jersey City marks another giant stride in acceleration of the tremendous traffic of the metropolis.

After seven years spent in construction the formal opening of the tunnel late this afternoon required only the touch of President Coolidge on a telegraph key at Washington to draw aside two American flags at the entrance of the twin tubes of the tunnel and open the greatest [illegible] boulevard in the world to [illegible] christening party of the State [illegible] nois, 130 [illegible] and 15,000 gues...

Two tubes, each with a road width of twenty feet, have a capacity of 3800 cars hourly.

BORE DESCRIBED

The tunnels are paved with granite block, brilliantly illuminated and supplied with a complete change of air forty-two times per hour by eighty-four ventilating fans.

Five hundred thousand cubic yards of earth and rock were removed from beneath the river bed to make room for 115,000 tons of cast iron and 130,000 cubic yards of concrete with which the frame of the huge tunnel is built.

The tunnel, conceived by Clifford M. Holland, an engineer, and named for him, connects the lower end of Manhattan Island with Jersey City. Tunnels for trains have been in operation under the Hudson for years, but vehicles have had to use ferries.

JOB KILLS ORIGINATOR

Only one of the three engineers in charge of the construction of the Holland tunnel lives to see the work completed. He is Ole Singstad, present chief engineer. Holland died three years ago of strain and overwork in connection with the job. His was one of the fifteen deaths during the construction.

A toll of 50 cents will be charged for passenger automobiles containing not more than seven persons. Tolls for motor trucks range from $1 to $2. Authorities expect the tunnel will pay for itself inside of ten years. Annual gross revenue is estimated at $9,000,000.

Lindbergh Flys Army Ship from Detroit to New York, 600 Miles in 200 Minutes

MITCHEL FIELD (N. Y.) Nov. 12. (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh hung up another record today by establishing the phenomenal time of three hours and twenty minutes in flying the 600-mile direct airline distance from Selfridge Field, Detroit, to Mitchel Field.

Lindbergh made a brief stop at Teterboro, N. J., en route, to inquire about the condition of his precious trans-Atlantic monoplane, Spirit of St. Louis. The flying time from Detroit to Teterboro, two hours and forty-four minutes, also is a record for that course, Mitchel Field officials said.

Lindbergh flew an army pursuit plane, Uncle Sam's standard fighting airplane, which has a cruising speed of 130 miles an hour, but which army officials say can attain 175 miles an hour.

Favorable tail winds helped the Lone Eagle set the mark, operations officers said.

After landing at Mitchel Field, Lindbergh motored to the estate of Harry F. Guggenheim, where he is to spend the week-end.

Azores Plane Falls in Sea

GOVERNMENT PLAYS TRUMP IN JURY-TAMPERING QUIZ

Burns Man in League With Federal Attorney Exposes Asserted Plot to Wreck Trial

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. (AP)—Testimony that the Burns Detective Agency fabricated reports for use should the defense in the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy case decide that a mistrial was necessary, was presented today to the grand jury investigating the surveillance of the trial jurors.

It was furnished by one of Burns's own operatives, who, since October 24, last, had been assisting the government in weaving a net about William J. Burns, his son, W. Sherman Burns and the more than a dozen detectives sent here at the behest of Henry Mason Day, one of Harry F. Sinclair's confidential associates.

KNEW AFFIDAVIT FALSE

This operative is William J. McMullin of Philadelphia, a World War veteran and known to Burns and his men as William V. Long —"n the code designation of L-35. He swore that those directing the jury-shadowing operations required him to swear to a false affidavit on which William J. Burns based his charge of jury tampering by government agents and which was presented to the oil-trial judge, Justice Frederick L. Siddons, by counsel for Burns.

McMullin declared that at the time the affidavit was presented, the elder Burns, founder of the detective agency, knew that it was false. This affidavit had to do with the asserted activities of Harris R. Lamb, a special assistant to the Attorney General, whom McMullin declares was never shadowed for even a moment.

Some of the high lights in McMullin's whole story were made public by Dist.-Atty. Gordon after ex-Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania had appeared before the grand jury to tell that McMullin had voluntarily come to him on October 24, last, seven days after the Teapot Dome trial started, and explained what the Burns men were undertaking to do.

Pinchot reported immediately to Owen J. Roberts of special government oil counsel and plans then were laid to trap the private operatives, under orders of the government, McMullen continued to serve with the Burns agency and the story of how he and the government prosecutors outwitted the Burns men, including William J. Burns, himself, reads like a moving-picture scenario.

STORY TOLD PINCHOT

As Gordon told the story in the presence of Pinchot and McMullin, the Philadelphia man who formerly was an insurance adjuster, was employed by the Burns agency October 13 and sent here on October 18, after the trial jury had been sworn in.

"McMullin became so disgusted within a few days that he went to Gov. Pinchot," Gordon said. "He had read in the newspapers that Pinchot was in town and he sought him out because as he expressed it, he knew the Governor was on the level."

Roberts could scarcely believe the story at the outset, but had McMullin continue with the Burns men and report to the prosecutors. McMullin became disgusted because Charles G. Ruddy in charge of Burns operatives, required him to sign reports which both knew had not the slightest foundation in fact. McMullin told the District Attorney that these reports, bearing on asserted movements of Lamb, were to be used if the defense found it necessary to move for a mistrial.

It was on the basis of McMullin's reports that government counsel finally went before Justice Siddons to present the reports of the activities of the Burns men and to suggest a mistrial in which defense counsel joined. This was October 31.

Still the Burns people were in LONDON, Oct. 12. (Exclusive)—I have before me as I write a very momentous book. It is entitled "Conditioned Reflexes" and it is by Prof. Pavloff of Petrograd (Leningrad.) It is not an easy book to read, but it is not an impossible one, and when one has read, marked and learned one finds—I find—that one has at least attained the broad beginnings of a clear conception of the working of that riddle within us which is perpetually asking us riddles, the convoluted gray matter of the brain. The book is translated by Dr. Anrep of Cambridge, and it is published by the Oxford University Press, with the assistance of the Royal Society.

Quite apart from its subject, this book is a very reassuring book for those whose hopes for the future of mankind are bound up with the steadfast growth of scientific knowledge. It gives in broad headline the substance of nearly twenty-five years of wonderfully imagined and marvelously conducted research.

That res[illegible]was carried on in a city that [illegible]d its name three times, fr[illegible] Petersburg to Petrograd a[illegible] Petrograd to Leningrad; it se[illegible] flood, famnine, war and revolut[illegible]; there was a great shortage of medicaments and scientific apparatus, and one winter the whole town was well-nigh frozen to death through want of fuel, and people went out after midnight to steal the wood blocks out of the roadway for their stoves—but the work went on.

RUBBER MADE IN GERMANY

Development of Commercial Synthetic Process, Cheaper Than Natural Gum, Announced

FRANKFORT-ON-MAIN (Germany) Nov. 12. (AP)—Important progress by the German chemical industry since the war, including the development of commercial synthetic rubber was described today before the fiftieth anniversary meeting of the Chemical Industrialists' Protective Union.

It is announced that the German dye syndicate "I. G. Farbenindustrie" has sufficiently progressed with experimentation in producing synthetic rubber to apply for world patents and that synthetic rubber will soon appear on the world markets as a commercial commodity. The synthetic product is declared to be the equal of the natural rubber and cheaper in cost of production, thus permitting its active competition with the natural product.

Dr. A. Von Weinberg, a privy-councillor and director of Farbenindustrie, explained that the synthetic rubber is obtained by "contact synthesis," a process which has been under experimentation ever since the war.

SYNTHETIC MEDICINES

Dr. Von Weinberg also said that experiments are proceeding rapidly in the direction of discoveries of new synthetic medicines and described the latest electrolytic processes and production of synthetic substances such as ammonia, camphor, glycol, petroleum and hydrocarbides.

Dr. Von Weinberg declared that the progress of chemistry is an international affair and that nothing is more pernicious than to fall into the error of calling Germany, "the country of chemical industry" regardless of the achievements of others.

Negotiations are proceeding, he said, to re-establish international contact between the chemical interests of different countries, but the idea of a world trust is entirely baseless. Especially erroneous, he said, is the impression which appears to have gained ground in the United States that a chemical front is being combined in Europe against America. German industry, he declared, will never lend itself to such a scheme.

"After the oil agreements we are ready to co-operate with other branches of American industry, hoping that the day soon will dawn when German chemical industrialists may expect fairer treatment at the hands of America," he said.

(The oil agreements mentioned by Dr. Von Weinberg include an agreement concluded between the Standard Oil of New Jersey with the I. G. Farbenindustrie for the mutual use

A. J. Jones of Mayetta, Kan., claims that he is the only real Indian trader left in this country. The present business, which he presides, was started by his father when the place was nothing but an Indian pest and the present Jones succeeded to the business when the town was still surrounded by Indians and the business was largely restricted to dealings with the red men. The town grew and the store kept pace with the times, so that it developed into a really up-to-date department store. The Indian element still cling around the establishment, however, for there are a number of the representatives of the Potawatomie tribe living in the country around Mayetta and these people still deal with the Jones establishment.

MUNICIPAL RAILS HIT

Bay City Voters Against Bonds

Ballots Indicate Less Urge to Own Public Utilities in Northern City

Citizens Refuse $4,700,000 for Lines but Sanction $9,000,000 on Roads

BY FLOYD J. HEALEY
"Times" Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Two things stand out like the little boy's sore thumb from last Tuesday's most bitterly contested municipal election. One is the evident slipping of the urge for municipal ownership of public utilities and the other the inevitable revolt of the average American citizen from the shadow of a yoke.

Old guard proponents of municipal ownership will deny that the people are changing. The city charter, they will cite, commits San Francisco to such a policy. But the simplest element of the arithmetic table, addition, tells a different story. For instance:

Last June the voters were called upon to decide if they should shoulder a liability of $4,700,000 to extend and improve the municipal railway lines. Their ballots said "no."

PILL REFUSED

The Board of Supervisors, quite obviously perturbed at the willfulness of its enfranchised children, held a hasty consultation and decided the ordinarily meek and trusting voter, was off his feed. It was decided to administer another jolt of municipal bond issue, but with a wee bit more sugar. Accordingly, $100,000 was lopped off the Muny railway pill and it was spooned out again at Tuesday's municipal election. And, once again, John H. Voter gave the spoon a salutary shove and proclaimed, "I don't want $4,600,000 worth of municipal railway extensions."

Why? Can it be that John H. Voter questions the worth and economic integrity of a system which owes its existence to politics? The fact remains that the Market-street Railway Company, privately owned and operated, still pays dividends despite its impending disintegration from expiring franchises which the Supervisors refuse to extend because of the charter.

The fact remains that a question has been raised by responsible and representative citizen members of the Bureau of Governmental Research, and evidently by the man in the street as well, as to whether or not the municipal railway system is all its political sponsors claim it to be. The "muny" has been in the red; was, in fact, when the Bureau of Governmental Research called attention to the point.

QUESTION BOOKKEEPING

Since then its figures have been on the credit side of the ledger. The Bureau of Governmental Research quite frankly questions the system's bookkeeping. "True" the muny still has a 5-cent car fare. Equally true is it that its general manager is on record before the Board of Supervisors that some additional form of revenue will have to be derived or its going to be just too bad for "muny." Can it be that the lowly little chap with the ballot is wondering about these things.

Also on last Tuesday's ballot form was a proposal to bond for $2,000,000 to string a power line across the bay so it will be ready to assimilate Hetch-Hetchy power when Hetch-Hetchy water becomes available. And John H. Voter gave that a good swift kick, although the charter specifically warns him that he shouldn't do anything of the kind. That proposal was saved from an actual minority by twenty-two precincts out of 922, with a two-thirds' majority necessary to pass.

Politicians, naturally, are considering these things. They hasten to state that the voters established their faith in municipal ownership by balloting for public construction and maintenance of the proposed transbay bridge. Exactly why they did that undoubtedly is a puzzle, but here again fact and history become pertinent.

In the first place the War Department has said San Francisco can't have the bridge where it has been proposed and it will take Congress to overrule that opposition. In the second place, the voters went overwhelmingly for the municipal railway when it was in its abstract stage but the figures show them adamantly averse to it when its life means cold cash from the pocketbook. The checkbook is still intact against the time when it will be necessary to dig down and haul up the money to build the transbay bridge, and Tuesday's vote was merely one for an expression of sentiment.

Even thus, guilelessly disguised, its opponents look for the vote to complicate San Francisco's appeal to Congress as that body will now have the matter of financing to consider whereas, it is contended, it had hitherto to consider the simple matter of whether or not San Francisco could have its bridge.

The other matter of billboard proportions, i. e., the rebellion against political domination, brings to the fore the rather remarkable conclusion that W. J. Fitzgerald in his campaign for Sheriff garnered loads of votes, not because John H. Voter knew who or what Dick Fitzgerald is, but because Fitzgerald was the opponent of a man who had been revealed so convincingly as a political tyrant seeking domination of everything he could get his hands on that John H. Voter would have none of him.

Hence the overwhelming repudiation of Tom Finn, Sheriff, former legislator, lobbyist par excellence, driveshaft of a State-wide machine, San Francisco fallen boss; a man almost universally liked and politically hated. He made his strike for empire with a cold iron. His Wellington was the simple and simple issue of prospective, and undoubted, domination and history has shown the average American takes unkindly to domination. The average American's salvation is the ballot. The average San Franciscan piled up the greatest heap of ballots in this city's history to make sure there wouldn't be any question of the verdict.

In doing so the average San Franciscan did the same thing the average Angeleno did to Finn's Los Angeles counter-part and good-time pal, Kent Parrot, last spring.

By inference the average Californian is becoming interested in what makes the wheels go round and bankers to fill the oil cups himself.

Just by way of exemplification as well as contrast, there was one bond proposition on last Tuesday's ballot which was not flavored with a coating of municipal ownership. It was for a little more than $9,000,000 for good roads; improvement of bad ones, and needed new ones. The issue was approximately twice that of the next largest. It was carried, eight to three.

RATS FACE FINISH FIGHT

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive) California's 5,000,000 rats are in for a bad time. The State Board of Health, turned Pied Piper on a large scale, proposes to rid the State of these destructive, disease-carrying rodents and at the same time save $8,000,000 a year in foodstuffs now consumed by the rats.

"Great Britain has an annual 'rat week,'" declares Dr. Walter M. Dickey, State director of health, "but in most California cities every week is rat week. At least the municipalities are carrying on a war against the rats throughout fifty-two weeks of the year, under the direction of the State Department of Public Health.

"Not only are rats running up a tremendous board bill, but they are paying it in the form of disease germs. Their destruction is imperative, both from economic and health points of view."

RUBBER MADE IN GERMANY

of processes for producing synthetic gasoline under certain patent rights.)

Dr. Curtius, Federal Minister of Economy, said that the German chemical industry has passed through a hard school because other countries, since the war, have erected almost impassible trade barriers in the form of tariffs and important prohibitions. In his opinion it will be a long time before equilibrium is restored. Carl Diusberg of Farbenindustrie, who presided at today's session, said that the German chemical industry is now producing products annually valued at 3,000,000,000 marks (about $700,000,000,) constituting one-seventh of the whole German industrial production.

GIVES NO DETAILS

Rumors have been current for a long time of the development of a new synthetic rubber process by Farbenindustrie, but the first official admission of tangible results was given in Dr. Von Weinberg's speech today.

The details of the invention were not made public, beyond the fact that patents have been applied for and that there is expectation of commercially profitable production in the near future. It is claimed that the synthetic product in every way is equal to the natural one and that the cost of manufacture can be reduced to a point where it can compete successfully with natural rubber on the world market.

All Dr. Von Weinberg's statement committed him to is as follows:

"By means of contact syntheses we shall, moreover, succeed in producing by a simple process the fundamental components for synthetic caout-chou and gutta percha."

Trade circles generally regard the announcement as of the highest importance because they consider it as offsetting one of the postwar economic handicaps resulting from the loss of the German colonies and with them raw-product sources.

HANKOW RULES BY CHINA MOB

Nanking armies are marching steadily on Hankow to take over the city held by their erstwhile colleagues before the split in the Nationalist movement.

NANKING ARMIES MARCH UP YANGTZE VALLEY

SHANGHAI, Nov. 12. (Exclusive) The Nanking armies, variously estimated at from 40,000 to 100,000 men, continue virtually unhampered in their march up the Yangtze Valley, capturing city after city without appreciable opposition.

It is believed that at least 200 Americans are living in Hankow now, and there are at least a like number, if not more, of British. Women and business men have returned in comparatively large numbers recently as a result of the comparative quiet.

A considerable number of American, British and other warships are stationed at Hankow and they will be able to cope with the situation.

Coolidge Hears Rowell on Tax

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. (AP)—The argument which California has set before the House Ways and Means Committee against repeal of the inheritance tax was personally submitted to President Coolidge today by Chester Rowell of Berkeley, Cal., on behalf of Gov. Young of that State.

Angeleno Racer Killed in Arizona

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Nov. 12. (AP)—Frankie Boyer, 23 years of age, of Los Angeles, racing-car driver, was fatally injured on the State fair grounds here today when a rear wheel of his car collapsed and the machine turned over three times. He died en route to a hospital.

Boyer is said to have been the fourth person to meet a similar death on the track in as many years.

The oldest President of the United States at the time of taking office, was William Henry Harrison. He was 68 years and twenty-three days of age when inaugurated and died in office. Andrew Jackson attained the greatest age in office—69 years and 354 days.—[Liberty.

TRUMP PLAYED BY GOVERNMENT

ignorance as to how the government got its information. McMullin never came under suspicion and two days after the mistrial was ordered he was asked to make an affidavit based upon the false reports he said he had signed concerning the activities of Lamb "the government agent" to whom Burns referred in making his charge of jury tampering by the government.

As the story was related by Gordon, McMullin declined to do so until he could see the report dealing with Lamb. He was sparring for time until he could see Roberts. He was told to return to Philadelphia which he did after reporting to Roberts. The original report had been sent to New York and a Burns agent was ordered to take it to Washington so McMullin could see it.

Meantime Roberts had told McMullin to make the affidavit as requested. Frank J. O'Reilly, another Burns man, made another affidavit which was presented to Justice Siddons along with that of McMullin. Government counsel were kept informed of every move by the Burns men and naturally learned that the affidavits had been prepared.

Long was kept around the Courthouse from the beginning of the grand jury investigation and in order to camouflage the real purpose for which he was wanted, Dist.-Atty. Gordon summoned all of the private operatives to Washington.

Time and again the operatives were taken into the grand jury room singly and asked a few questions then excused. Gordon said his information was that they reported to William J. Burns as to what they had told the jurors and were told that they had done fine in not telling the grand jury anything.

On the day that Burns was announcing the filing of the affidavits directed against Lamb, McMullin was in the office of Neil Burkinshaw, Assistant District Attorney in charge of the investigation, preparing an affidavit of six or seven pages, embodying the knowledge he had gained from his contact with the operatives.

ELABORATE PRECAUTIONS

Gordon and Burkinshaw took elaborate precautions to deceive Burns and his own men as to what was going on behind the scenes scarcely a dozen feet away. The Burns men were hustled in and out of the grand jury room while McMullin was dictating to a stenographer.

When the dictation was over a notary was sent for and taken quietly into another room. McMullin was escorted to the grand jury room, sworn under the name of Long and, as Burkinshaw himself put it, was asked a number of meaningless questions by the young assistant prosecutor. When word went in that the transcribing of the affidavit had been completed, Long was hustled into still another room, where he read, swore to and signed the affidavit while there again was a procession of Burns men passing in review before the grand jury.

Burkinshaw explained that he decided to work right under the eyes of Burns and his men because if he met McMullin away from the Courthouse their suspicions would have been aroused. He was apprehensive that his plan might go awry, but apparently it was successful.

McMullin finally told his whole story to the grand jury today for the first time after Pinchot had testified. Monday the Burns, father and two sons, W. Sherman and Raymond, and their operatives will be recalled and given an opportunity to amplify their previous testimony. Most of them have been before the jury at least twice and some even more than that.

From the time of the mistrial the Burns men knew, as they put it, that they had been "sold out," but they professed complete ignorance as to the identity of the person from whom the government got its information. They even questioned newspaper men on that point.

And during the twelve days they were in doubt, McMullin mingled with them freely, attending what Gordon described as their "pep" meetings, at which the grand jury investigation was discussed seriously and facetiously, and promptly reporting to Dist.-Atty. Gordon or to Burkinshaw by telephone. Sometimes his reports went in while the meetings were in progress and Gordon said he had difficulty in understanding because of the "hilarity" of the other operatives in a near-by room.

These meetings continued until the early hours of the mornings and Gordon and Burkinshaw said they were awakened as late as 2 a.m. to receive reports from McMullin. This operative told Gordon that he had been directed by his superiors to stick to the story of his reports when he testified before the grand jury.

Far from suspecting McMullin, William J. Burns, according to the operative, frequently praised him and patted him on the back when he reported he had told the grand jury nothing, and even called upon him to drive him around Washington in his car which he brought from Philadelphia at Burns's request.

RUNNING IN CIRCLES

Besides the report as to Lamb, McMullin told the prosecutors that he had been required to make a number of other false reports, including one that he had been in near-by Maryland. He said he never had been out of the city of Washington while on the operation except to go back to Philadelphia occasionally and that the report that he shadowed Juror Norman J. Glascock to Potomac Flying Field near here was a "sheer fabrication."

This was known to the Burns men, he asserted, adding that after he had sworn to the affidavit that he had seen Lamb and Glascock at that field, his superiors took him there so that he would know the "lay of the land" if the grand jury questioned him about that particular report.

While previously informed by McMullin that this report was fabricated, Gordon explained that he summoned Lamb and Glascock before the grand jury for questioning about it so as to further mislead Burns and his operatives as to the extent of the government's information.

While this phase of the inquiry was going forward, Gordon said he was informed that Burns told his men that they had the government prosecutors "running around in circles" and that they had nothing to worry about.

"It now seems appropriate," Gordon remarked with a smile, "that we should ask, 'who's running around in circles now?'"

After Gordon had concluded his statement to the correspondents, Pinchot, who had remained at the Courthouse for more than an hour, declared that McMullin had come to him "freely and out of patriotic loyalty to the government; asked no promise of reward, though he was apt to lose his job and perhaps his life."

PINK PACHYDERM QUITS BIG TOP

Pawah, India's Sacred White Elephant, Going Back to Burma Home

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—The country is losing a white elephant. Rented to the circus during the last year for $45,000 Pawah, sacred beast of India, is returning to Rangoon.

The Maharajah of Burma wants him back.

Americans think Pawah is pink, but the guardian of what worshipers regard as the reincarnation of Buddha insists he is the only white elephant in the world.

ARREST IN DEATH LAID TO 'HUNCH'

Slaying Suspect Capture Attributed to Suggestion by Victim's Brother

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Police today released information covering the capture of a man wanted here in the slaying of Mrs. Mamie Schon in her apartment, indicating that the astuteness of the slain woman's brother is responsible for the arrest.

The brother, A. L. Peterson, had a "hunch" that the slayer would attempt to kill himself. The reason was not explainable. He watched newspapers.

Yesterday the story was printed of a man who tried to kill himself by slashing his wrists in French Camp, a mountainous mining district north of Stockton, after living for a week in Lodi under an assumed name. His description tallied so closely with that of the asserted slayer of Mrs. Schon that Peterson advised an investigation.

Personal effects identified the man as Bart A. Hull, the suspect in the case following the slaying here. He now is in a jail hospital at Stockton and will be returned to this city to face a murder charge.

GILES GETS LESSONS IN NAVIGATION

Flyer Waiting for Clear Weather on Hawaiian Hop Given Sextant Data

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—With the weather man holding the starting flag for the proposed South Sea flight of Capt. Frederick A. Giles, the latter killed time today attending a two-man navigation school at Mills Field. C. T. P. Ulm, navigator in the quartet making up the crew of the monoplane Southern Cross, now at Clover Field, Santa Monica, for final adjustments preparatory to an Australian flight, answered the call of a war-time buddy and came north to give Giles instructions in the sextant.

Aside from an electrical earth inductor compass and dead reckoning ability, the sextant is the only instrument Giles will carry for navigation and he has had no instruction in its use.

Giles said he is ready to go as soon as Weather Bureau officials report favorable conditions over the Hawaiian steamer lane.

Aviatrix Gets Spotlight at Actors' Dance While Other Celebrities Sit in Dark

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—Miss Ruth Elder, occupying a box of honor at the ninth annual Actors' Equity ball tonight, took the spotlight from celebrities of the stage, screen and business world.

Even Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, received but passing glances of those whose gaze was centered mainly on the pretty aviatrix, where she sat with George Haldeman and her husband, Lyle Womack.

On her entrance she was greeted with cheers, while below on the dance floor the music stopped and a searchlight was played on the box. Among other boxholders are Mayor Walker, Jane Cowl, George Arliss, Mme. Nazimova, Fanny Ward and Fiske O'Hara.

Turkey Shaken by Earthquake

BASRA (Asiatic Turkey)' Nov. 12. (AP)—Several earth tremors were felt here and in neighboring sections about 6 o'clock this evening. The shocks were not strong and no damage has been reported.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. (AP)—A sharp earthquake, estimated to have occurred about 4700 miles from Washington, direction unknown, was registered early tonight on the seismograph of Georgetown University. Director Tondorf said the tremors began at 8:18 p.m., and lasted more than an hour.

MANY SECTS IN ARMY

Chaplain Reports Twenty-eight Denominations

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. (AP)—The Army "is not cluttered up with religious dissensions," although there are twenty-eight denominations represented in the chaplains' corps, providing "abundant variety" in religious expression, Col. John T. Axton, chief of chaplains, points out in his annual report made public today.

Difficulty is experienced in maintaining "an established ratio" among the denominations due to "changes of denominational affiliations by men already in the corps," Col. Axton said, but he added:

"Over this the War Department does not expect to exercise control."

even five feet ten wouldn't bar him. These things are all approximate. And weight, well, we'll say 140."

The commander himself weighs 140, and is about five feet seven inches tall.

MUST BE HANDY

"But I exceed my own age limit," he observed, wrinkles of humor spreading in a little network at the corners of his blue eyes. "You see, I was born in 1883."

Commander Dyott was asked what this volunteer he is seeking would have to do.

"He must be a handy man," was the quick reply. "And willing to learn. He doesn't have to be a photographer. He doesn't have to know how to handle a gun or paddle a canoe or run a radio. If he is intelligent, he'll learn all these things with us."

PREFERS EDUCATED MAN

"Should he have had a college education?"

"Preferably. And he should be fond of outdoor life. He should have an interest in birds and animals and trees. And he should have an ingenious mind, a practical mind. Also, manual dexterity. He should be able to handle tools."

Commander Dyott was asked whether he preferred a bachelor or benedict. "Single," he replied, lighting a cigarette to disguise an embarassed half-smile. For Commander Dyott will be a bridegroom when he sails for Rio on the first stage of his long journey.

"Single," he reiterated, more firmly. "Married men are used to creature comforts, and they're always thinking about their wives. Give me a bachelor."

The volunteer accepted by Commander Dyott need supply none of his outfit himself. His passage money will be paid. His living expenses will be met by the expedition. And he will receive pay.

"Only a small recompense," observed the commander, dryly. "No riches."

PHYSICAL FITNESS

We went on to say that a physician's certificate of physical fitness was desirable, and that volunteers should be prepared to endure a constant steam bath.

"We are going where the weather is hot and yet," he remarked, "Our balmy days will show a temperature of 95."

With Commander Dyott when he sails from New York December 10 on the Lamport and Holt liner Voltaire will be a wireless man, an expert in photography, and the selected volunteer. The little party will arrive in Rio de Janeiro Christmas Day, thence by train 1000 miles to Corumba, then 350 miles by launch to Cuyaba.

ANGELENO IN PARTY

From there the Dyott expedition, augmented by native bearers, will strike out with pack bullocks and mules for the vast unexplored territory north of Cuyaba.

The undertaking will have the unofficial co-operation of the Brazilian government. "The Brazilian officials I have always found most helpful and courteous," said Commander Dyott.

Commander Dyott is definitely hopeful of rescuing Col. Fawcett, who was accompanied into the jungle by his son, Jack, and a youth from Los Angeles, Raleigh Rimell. But he does not expect to find Fawcett in the vicinity of Diamantina, in the Matto Grosso region, where a Frenchman, Courtelville, reported having seen a man resembling the lost explorer.

TRIP OF SIX MONTHS

It is possible Courtelville saw Fawcett, Commander Dyott believes, but if so the explorer has vanished again, and the mystery surrounding him becomes even greater than before. Fawcett's friends, however, think it improbable he would have come so close to civilization without communicating with his anxious family.

"No, my search will lead me far beyond Diamantina," said Commander Dyott, who expects to be in the wilderness at least six months. During this period he will keep in touch with civilization through radio messages sent exclusively to the North American Newspaper Alliance, of which this newspaper is a member.

Riffs Agree to Free Children

PARIS, Nov. 12. (AP) — An agreement for the release of the two little Arnaid girls, kidnaped after the murder of their parents by Moroccan natives a month ago, was concluded today, it was announced by Gen. Freydenberg on his return to Rabat from negotiations at Tadla.

Gen. Freydenberg did not make public the terms of the agreement, but stated that he would go to Beni Mellal tomorrow, where the children will be delivered to him.

The question of the ransom for the release of Yves Steeg, Jean Maillet and their women companions, who are prisoners in the Atlas Mountains, still is unsettled.

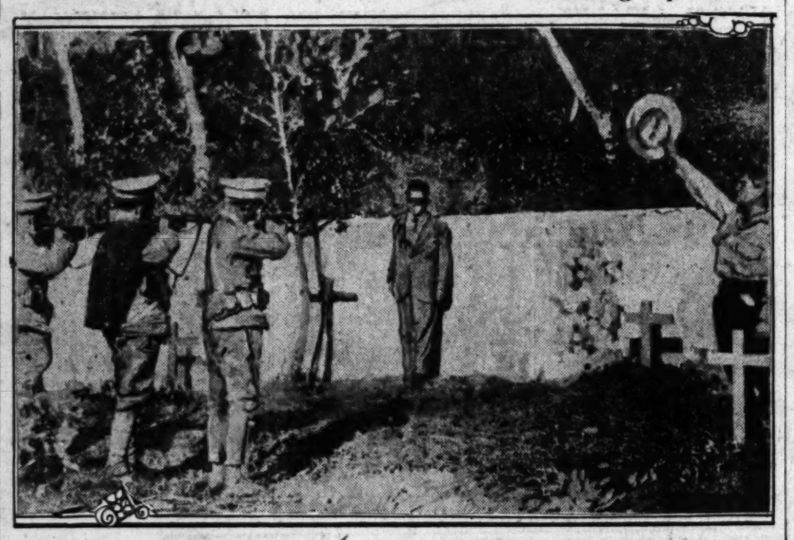
Last Mexican Revolt Leader Faces Firing Squad



Execution of Gen. Arnulfo Gomez at Teocelo, Vera Cruz, November 4

Gen. Gomez who, with Gen. Francisco Serrano, was accused by President Calles with having fomented and directed the recent revolutionary movement, was captured by Gen. Jose Escobar and a detachment of Federal troops after a pursuit of several weeks. Executed with Gen. Gomez was his nephew, Francisco Vizcarra, after court-martial conducted by Gen. Jose Alvarez, chief of staff for President Calles. At the time of his capture Gen. Gomez was smooth shaven. The signal for the firing squad was given by the officer at the right dropping his hat. This photograph was received from Vera Cruz last night.

MEXICO'S VICTORS RETURN

Five Thousand Regulars Parade at Capital After Campaign Against Revolters

BY JACK STARR HUNT

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Gen. Escobar's triumphant Federal army, which left here in the early days of October in a campaign against Gomez in Vera Cruz, marched through the principal streets at noon today, its various companies returning to their quarters after a parade before President Calles at the National Palace.

The soldiers, numbering close to 5000, bore signs of the campaign and its hardships, the officers still wearing their field uniforms, sun helmets and tropical country equipment. The veterans presented a well-trained, disciplined appearance as they marched through the streets lined with onlookers.

Mexico is getting back to normal now, with the last vestiges of the recent revolt being removed, according to today's press reports.

GENERAL EXECUTED

Jesus Sanchez and his aide, Felix Machucha, has been captured, tried and executed in Tlchinco, State of Oaxaca. Sanchez, a former brigadier-general, had been actively operating in that State, committing outrages and killings. Five rebels, the dispatch continues, were slain when the capture was made, twelve being made prisoners, together with horses, arms and important documents.

Following suspension of service during the uprising, the first night train goes toward Vera Cruz tonight, with traffic being resumed also nightly between the two cities over narrow-gauge lines, interoceanic lines, probably on Monday, since the government has authorized resumption of night service.

More army officers have been dismissed by the Secretary of War and Marine for their part in the revolt. Included in the list is General of Division Luis Gutierrez, Brig.-Gens. Abraham Carmona, Manuel Lopez, Armando Linares and Joaquin Muecl. Other lesser officers dismissed include Cols. Enrique Rodriquez, Carlos A. Duran and Jose Ortiz Hurtado, as well as Maj. Fernando y Noriega. Hurtado for a time was chief of staff for Gomez, having been unofficially reported killed in action in Vera Cruz.

Gen. Jose Gonzalo Escobar, chief of the Federal forces in Vera Cruz, after a conference yesterday with Jesus M. Aguirre, general in charge of Vera Cruz operations at present, returned here today to make a formal report to Calles. He brought with him Dr. Allonso O'Farril, who was Gomez's chief physician during the revolt. O'Farril will be asked to explain his conduct, it is said.

BORAH PLEADS FOR SHOWDOWN

and yet we are told that this is not a matter with which political parties may deal or about which they should be concerned."

In this stronghold of the wets and home of Gov. Smith, Senator Borah, himself mentioned as a possible Presidential candidate, insisted that the people generally are interested today in what is the position of a Presidential candidate on the Eighteenth Amendment.

REAL ISSUE SHOWN

Modification of the Volstead Act is not involved in the prohibition question, he argued, contending that repeal or enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment is the heart and life of the wet and dry issue.

Referenda on the prohibition question were characterized by Senator Borah as "insincere and ineffective." Modification of the Volstead Act, he declared, "cannot give that which the Constitution prohibits, to wit, intoxicating liquor."

Rallying the women to the issue, the Idahoan insisted they alone "can bring the political parties to the support of this Constitutional amendment."

"Organize," he shouted, "demonstrate your power, sit on the floor of the convention and not in the galleries, sit as delegates and not in the galleries as ornaments. Write platforms and not essays.

"There is only one way by which this law can be enforced," he declared, referring to the prohibition act, "only one way by which the Constitution can be maintained, and that is by placing the control of the machinery of government, the instrumentalities of enforcement in the hands of those who believe in the law and who will be as vigilant and active to enforce it as its opponents are to violate it.

"This is a Presidential election. The chief duty of the President is to see that the Constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof are enforced. Upon the Chief Executive rests that stupendous task.

"The people have seen fit to adopt this amendment. It is now a part of the law of the land. The Congress has legislated. Laws have been passed designed to carry into effect the Constitution. The courts have been called upon to pass upon the Constitutional amendment and to construe the statutes passed in pursuance of that amendment.

JUST ONE THING

"The Constitution is there. The statutes are there. The decisions are there. The only thing left is to enforce the law and to maintain the Constitution so long as they remain unrevoked or unrepealed. Under these circumstances the people must necessarily be interested in the views of their candidates for the Presidency."

Predicting that everybody "except the deaf and dumb and the candidates" will be discussing the wet and dry issue in the coming campaign, Senator Borah declared that "a political party which is unwilling to declare its purpose to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment will not enforce the Eighteenth Amendment.

"There is no reason in the world," he added, "why, if a party intends to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment, it should not say so."

French Flyers Reach Uruguay

MONTEVIDEO (Uruguay) Nov. 12 (Ø)—Dieudonne Costes and Lieut. Joseph Lebrix, the French aviators, flew here today from Buenos Aires in their Breguet plane, Nungesser-Coli. They were paying an official visit to Uruguay, and received an enthusiastic welcome.

IGNAZ FRIEDMAN Pianist

EXCLUSIVE STEINWAY ARTIST

Birkel Music Co.
Los Angeles, Cal.

Nov. 10th 1927

Gentlemen:—

Many, many thanks for the beautiful and most perfect Steinway grand piano furnished me Tuesday night. Being used to playing on my own Steinway en tour, I was indeed surprised to find another instrument with the same marvelous tone and easy action.

Yours sincerely
Friedman

STEINWAY DEPENDABILITY
•• IS WORLD-WIDE ••

The marvelous Steinway piano which Ignaz Friedman played during his concert and radio engagement in Los Angeles was a regular stock Steinway grand . . . not a specially selected instrument for this master-pianist. But he found that it possessed every attribute of his own Steinway which he takes with him en tour . . . breath and beauty of tone . . . action of exquisite delicacy and responsiveness . . . the ideal instrument! Wherever a Steinway is found . . . in Los Angeles, the Orient or Europe . . . it is an instrument of wondrous beauty . . . a noble work of art.

Everybody walks on moulded soles found from the start only in MATRIX SHOES

EVERYBODY wears a shoe with a moulded sole. Feel inside an old shoe. You will find the sole moulded to the shape of the bottom of your foot. An old shoe IS comfortable because its moulded sole now supports every arch and curve of the bottom of the foot. But to get it "broken-in" your tender foot had to pound its shape into the hard leather. What agony! And the cause of breaking down the foot and the shape of the shoe. MATRIX Shoes come to you with a sole already moulded at the factory to fit the bottom of your foot—already "broken-in"—as comfortable as an old shoe, from the very first step. This exclusive MATRIX feature of fitting the bottom of the foot, as well as the length and width, is attracting the attention of smart women everywhere. It makes possible a shoe that is at once stylish and comfortable—and does away with the painful agony of "breaking-in" new shoes.

And MATRIX Shoes are exquisitely styled. Note the dainty models pictured here. They are but a few of the many which we are presenting for every costume and for every occasion. They are light, dainty and stylish because their comfort feature in no way detracts from their outward appearance. Come in and try on the MATRIX Shoe. LORENA TRICKEY WINS ACQUITTAL

Jury in Rodeo Girl Case Out Only Twenty Minutes

Verdict for Freedom Signal for Courtroom Uproar

Spectators at Slaying Trial Yell, Laugh and Cheer

LAKEVIEW (Or.) Nov. 12. (AP)—Lorena Trickey, rodeo performer, was acquitted today of the charge of slaying her common-law husband, J. P. (Smiling Slim) Harris, by a jury which considered the case but twenty minutes. The verdict caused a wild and unrestrained demonstration.

The judge's gavel and the protests of the court were drowned out by the tumult. Miss Trickey appeared stunned.

Cowboy "yip-yips," women's screams, laughter and cheers filled the courtroom for more than five minutes. Lloyd Trickey, her brother, climbed over the shoulders and heads of the enthusiastic crowd and gathered his sister in his arms.

The little equestrienne hardly seemed to realize she was a free woman until she got outside of the courtroom, with the cheering crowd swirling about her.

The final argument of Sam A. Jetmore, Miss Trickey's attorney, was dramatic. Weak from a recent operation, the attorney talked slowly.

"Gentlemen of the jury, Lorena has given me a message for you. She asked me to tell you that she desires either to hang or to go free. She is used to life on the open plains and would rather die than be confined behind the gray walls of a State penitentiary."

SAILOR WINS HERO LAURELS

University Graduate Risks Life to Stem Fire After Explosion Tears Bow Off Tanker

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—A tall Norwegian sailor who went to sea to "build a bank roll," is hailed today as the hero of an explosion which tore the bow off the tanker Beta, killing three of her crew and severely burning a fourth yesterday.

He is Chief Mate G. A. Larsen, graduate of Georgetown University, who risked his life after the blast to climb down over the shattered bow, through the gaping hole and train a firehose on the smoldering hold.

"Sure," he said, "we knew there might be another explosion, but somebody had to get down there and put out the fire before it spread to oil fumes in the next compartment. That's all there was to it."

"We," he explained, included himself and Bos'n James O'Keefe, who followed him down the Jacob's ladder to keep the hose clear of jagged pieces of steel projecting from deck to waterline of the Beta's bow.

Larsen explained that he graduated from the school of foreign service at Georgetown University, but found himself "broke" after ending the course. He went to sea, he said, to save money and complete a study of the export business. Several times, he said, he has lectured on mechanical dentistry at Howard University in Washington.

Capt. J. B. Kehoe, master of the tanker, said he cannot tell what had caused the explosion.

"I think we struck a hidden war mine," he said. "Maybe it's stretching the imagination some, but I've seen practice mines explode in war time, and it was just like that."

Train Halts to Rescue Child

POTTSVILLE (Pa.) Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Passengers on a Reading train speeding at forty miles an hour between Tamaqua and Reading today felt the train jerk as the brakes were applied and then come to a quick stop.

As they crowded against the windows they saw J. F. Slattery, the engineer, leap from his cab, slide down an embankment and lift an infant from the waters of a small creek. He carried the baby into a near-by house, went back to his throttle and completed the trip to Pottsville.

The baby was Daniel Seely, 1-year-old son of Hugh Seely, the postmaster at New Philadelphia. As the train sped along Slattery had seen the child tumble into the water.

Outlaw Killed in Kansas Said to be Angeleno

GARDEN CITY (Kan.) Nov. 12. (AP) The bandit who fatally wounded Chief of Police Cox of Dodge City last week and later was killed in a gun fight with local officers was identified by the Department of Justice as John Waycoff, who formerly lived at 306 Fremont avenue, Los Angeles, a letter from the Department of Justice to the Chief of Police here today stated.

ICY BREATH OF WINTER GOES EAST

Cold That Visited Chicago Region Travels Onward to Atlantic Seaboard

CHICAGO, Nov. 12. (AP)—A rather realistic imitation of winter, which bounced boisterously into the Middle West yesterday astride a gale is due to hop to the Atlantic seaboard tomorrow. Its icy breath also will be felt as far south as the Gulf States, the Weather Bureau predicted.

The week will open under clear skies, with the forecaster's venture that snow will fall in the Middle West and in the East by Tuesday. A temperature considerably below freezing will prevail over the territory east of the Rocky Mountains.

As the gale yesterday romped in across the plains States it left a trail of damaged buildings in Chicago suburbs. Preceding it the visitation of an electrical storm took two lives, killing a boy at Milwaukee and another on an Illinois farm.

After kicking over a few structures on Chicago's northern edge, the storm leaped across Lake Michigan and bore down on Michigan and Indiana.

Commercial airplane service through Chicago was crippled by the severe weather.

Azure skies and a temperature with a snap to it prevailed today over the Central States, much to the gratification of football fans.

Noted California Surgeon Attains Remarkable Record of Performing His 14,000th Gland Operation

The Most Astounding Statements Ever Made by Former Discouraged, Disheartened Sick Men and Women Who, as a Result Following the Knifeless, Bloodless Gland Surgery as Perfected by Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler, Want Every Other Ailing Person to Learn the Truth!

ONLY those who have drunk deep the dregs of sickness and disappointment can know what it means to have trod the paths of physical despair and then suddenly to be transported to former health and activity and into productive usefulness.

It is to be expected that those who believe their affliction is greater than that of any other person, and who have tried almost everything suggested without benefit, conclude they must spend the remainder of their days in suffering.

To have these meet others who have suffered similar ailments and who have been re-established physically, is the most direct way of bringing to their consideration an entirely different and sensible means in health recovery.

Herewith are presented a few letters of the hundreds which have been sent Dr. Wheeler by former patients who have had his simple, knifeless gland operation, and which are on file at his Los Angeles and San Francisco offices. Many of the letters on file are not released for publication, but the writers have extended the privilege of their being shown to sufferers investigating gland treatment. Scores of former patients may be personally interviewed at their homes and places of business, having expressed a desire to aid others who are suffering from ailments similar to those of which they have been relieved, and thus aid their fellow-man in his efforts to regain health and happiness only to be had through a normal physical condition.

MEDICAL RESEARCH SYNDICATE,
By John D. Gleason.

"What You Did for a Physician of 20 Years' Practicing Experience is Nothing Short of Astounding!"

Los Angeles, Calif.
P. O. Box 611,
October 20, 1927.

Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler,
3173 Wilshire Blvd.,
Los Angeles, Calif.

My Dear Dr. Wheeler: To have a better understanding of what gland therapy accomplished for me under your methods, it is necessary to state, even if briefly, my physical condition when I first came to you, and the main underlying causes.

I am now in my 67th year, and my life has been a highly active one from early youth until incapacitated in later years. To be relieved of intense suffering and once again restored to former usefulness is hardly to be expressed in words, but just what that means will be appreciated by the sick in the sunset period of life—more especially by those who might be classed chronics.

My professional career began as an attorney, but with a definite leaning to medicine, by diligent application for a few years I qualified as a physician and enjoyed an extensive practice for 20 years. Being of an inventive turn of mind, what spare time I had was devoted to research and experimentation along commercial lines, and I contributed my improved methods in photo-engraving and the evolvement of artificial marble, and each have a prominent place in the history of industrial achievement. At one time I was president and managing director of five corporations. Interspersed with this, I did considerable lecturing and writing for publications. My naturally strong constitution was weakened and devitalized by overwork.

Most of my importnt business interests were centered in Mexico at the crises of the revolution in that country, and the disturbances and losses resulting therefrom added to my weakened condition through depressing worries.

Sleeplessness, nervous exhaustion and a depleted physical organism reached its apex one day when I fell to the floor unconscious. During the years following the last named happening was repeated so frequently as to make me practically helpless, and I was compelled to give up business almost entirely.

My health, my career and my life's efforts were shattered. My ambition was gone. All remedial measures proved impotent. Apparently, only a miserable end awaited me. It was at this time I came to you—but in grave doubt

I took the first treatment on May 9th of this year. Within four weeks my heart pulsations became normal; the nervous condition less manifest, and the unconscious attacks less frequent. However, I did not receive the fullest benefits of the treatment until early in September, since when there has been a definite sense of youthful exhilaration and joyous well feeling. My conclusion is that 35 years have dropped from my shoulders, and there is a revival of all my hopes and ambitions when I was half my present years. I have assumed my business activities in full, with all the vim, concentration and determination as when I was 30, and with substantial evidence of a successful crowning of my life's purposes.

How can one who has benefited as much as I put onto paper or voice a thankfulness which comes from the depth of my heart?

While I regard gland therapy as the wonder of this century as a direct, sensible means to health recovery, it is you, Dr. Wheeler, who is foremost as the world's exponent of this special blessing.

Appreciatively yours,
(Signed) Dr. William V. Backus

Dr. Wheeler Performing 14,000th Gland Operation

Intense Pain Disappears on Fourth Day Following Gland Operation.

333 Pierce St.,
San Francisco, Oct. 8, 1927

My Dear Dr. Wheeler: For the benefit of those who may be similarly afflicted, I am giving a little record of my case so that others may profit by my experience and know of the great work you are doing.

This month marks by 65th birthday.

In December, 1922, I contracted flu, was critically ill for some time; blood pressure 60 points above what it should be at my age; heart at 90; daily temperature. My recovery was slow and discouraging, and there were several after-effects which I was confident would never be entirely eliminated. I continued in this condition up to the early part of 1926, when I noticed I would tire more quickly than before and my mental and physical action had become very slow. Surely, this was old age. Then there developed a pain in the right hip which was giving me considerable trouble. At times this pain extended from hip to toes; the calf and foot would become prickly and numb. I could not stand for more than five minutes at the time. I tried remedies for rheumatism and sciatica, but without relief. I was under a doctor's care for a month when I read Dr. —— book on diet, fasted eight days, drank the juice of eight oranges daily, and otherwise followed the advice given. Then followed heat treatments. After this came the use of electric belts, but during all this time I was dieting under instructions by letter from Dr. —— of Los Angeles. From all this activity I received some relief, but it was short-lived. Mud baths, internal baths, massage, electric and heat treatments were only part of the program.

As a last effort, I thought I would try and see what you could do for me. On the 15th of July I took my first gland treatment. On the fourth day following I noticed the pain by its absence, and it has not returned since. Two and a half months later there is not a pain, and I take my evening walks just for the joy of walking. Before your gland treatment I could not manage to walk a city block. My general health has steadily improved. Every organ in my body seems to be revitalized and glad to be of service to me.

I believe that I am improving faster right now than at any other time since I took the treatment. I sleep, eat, assimilate and eliminate more naturally, so it seems to me, than at any time before in my life. Where the flesh of my arms and legs was flabby, it is now firm and round and the muscles are harder and more prominent. My body has become flexible again, and can run upstairs as well or better than I could before I had the flu five years ago.

A word about the operation. I can say from experience and with confidence and assurance to anyone considering your treatment, that there is no inconvenience before, during or after the painless operation, which requires only a few minutes to perform. To me, this is the work of a genius with the touch and precision of the master workman.

Words seem empty when I try to express my gratitude and admiration for Dr. Wheeler, and for the work he is doing. Anyone wishing to know more about my case need not hesitate a moment in coming direct to me. Thankfully yours,
(Signed) G. H. HOMER.

New Life and Usefulness Restored to Man of 69—"I Feel Like I Was Only 25 Years Old."

922 Paloma Avenue,
Burlingame, Calif.
July 25, 1927.

Dr. C. E. Wheeler,
535 Powell St.,
San Francisco, California.
My dear Dr. Wheeler:

I feel it my duty to write and thank you for the wonderful results following the gland treatment given me. The day I took that first operation I could hardly walk up to the operating room and I am sure had I put it off another week, I would have been in the cemetery, for I had been fighting off this deadly disease for about ten years and will say the money I paid you, was the best investment I ever made, for after one week after my first operation, I went to work and have been doing the hardest kind of work every day since and I have earned double the money I paid you since that date, about nine weeks ago, and if anybody suffering with gland trouble will call and see me, I will cheerfully tell that Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler has put new life in my old system. I am 69 years of age, and I feel like 25 years old.

You can use this letter, by showing or publishing it. This is my wish for you, that you may live to help and cure thousands suffering from this treadful disease. Yours very truly,
(Signed) GEO. E. McLEOD.

Professor of Dental Surgery for 25 Years—"A Salvaged Human Wreck," He Testifies!

234 Leavenworth St.
San Francisco,
Oct. 21, 1927.

My dear Dr. Wheeler:

I am sincerely grateful to you for the service you have rendered in performing upon me your remarkable, painless operation of gland transplantation.

My physical condition was so desperate that I was forced to resign as Professor of Operative Dental Surgery, Kansas City Dental College, a chair I held for 25 years. Also, was forced to relinquish my practice, writing, lecturing and research work in an earnest effort to regain my health, but which was in vain until I came under your care.

Following a serious surgical operation six years ago I had a complete nervous collapse.

At that time endocrinology (ductless gland therapy) was in its infancy, and you were just beginning your specialized work which has since carried your fame to all parts of the world. Had I known then what I have since learned, I should never have submitted to the operation for your methods would have rendered such an operation wholly unnecessary.

As a surgeon and physician I had access to any form of treatment, and privilege of investigation of all therapy for the relief of conditions like my own. Knowing my trouble was essentially of glandular origin, I made a study of the work and literature of Prof. Steinach, University of Vienna, Dr. Voronoff, whose clinics in the Pasteur Institute of Paris have attracted world-wide attention, and others.

I submitted to the vaso-ligation operation, as performed by Dr. Steinach, obtaining only transitory relief. Finally, I came to California to investigate your unusual technique in the transplantation of the live glandular tissue to any or all the endocrine glands to supply the particular deficiency of the patient, and which his own organism was unable to produce. To you, Dr. Wheeler, belongs the credit for being the first surgeon to successfully transplant any, or all, of the ductless glands.

WITH AN INTIMATE KNOWLEDGE OF THE RESULTS OF THE OTHER OUTSTANDING METHODS OF GLANDULAR THERAPY, AND FROM ACTUAL PERSONAL EXPERIENCE I DID NOT PLACE MYSELF IN YOUR CARE UNTIL I HAD BECOME CONVINCED THAT YOU ARE PERFORMING THE MOST EFFICACIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC WORK IN GLAND THERAPY WHICH IS AT PRESENT AVAILABLE TO SUFFERING HUMANITY. FURTHER, I CONSIDER YOUR PRACTICE AND METHODS OF ENDOCRINE SURGERY THE FOREMOST DEVELOPMENT IN SCIENTIFIC THERAPY IN THIS AGE.

That you may find a way to prolong your own efficiency indefinitely so that you may go on "salvaging wrecks of humanity" for the next hundred years, is the wish of myself, as it must be of the thousands unto whom you have given priceless service and who bless you.

Gratefully and Fraternally yours,
CHARLES L. HUNGERFORD,
M.D., D.D.S.

High Blood Pressure—Shattered Nervous System and Kindred Ailments Disappear After Gland Treatment

3208 Maple Avenue,
Oakland, California.
September 16, 1927.

Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler,
535 Powell St.,
San Francisco, Calif.
Dear Dr. Wheeler:

I feel it my duty and it is a great satisfaction to be able to give this expression of gratitude for the results I have received in taking your gland treatment.

I came to you with a dangerous high blood pressure, a shattered nervous system and other conditions such as Insomnia and constipation.

Simply had a remarkable recovery and I shall be a living witness. I can truthfully say I have been rejuvenated.

Should any sufferer desire to see me in person, I will gladly vouch for all of my statements and more than I have specified.

You are at liberty to use this testimony, as you desire.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) ARTHUR ANDERSON

Had Asthma 9 Years—Lost It One Week After Gland Operation

Olympic Hotel,

August 31, 19[illegible]

Dear Doctor Wheeler:

On July 16 I came to you feeling as if I was on trial for my life with the jury out, and I awaiting the verdict.

Had been suffering from bronchial asthma for nine years with all its attendant complications and miseries.

Had tried every cure and climate here and abroad, without the slightest result. In fact, as time went on my condition became more and more alarming. Lost much weight and was altogether in a pitiful wretched physical condition. Your treatment was the only hope left me, and it proved a miracle.

Almost immediately after the treatment pains in my chest ceased, the cough left me and one week later I was free of asthma. I can sleep well, enjoy my food, and have gained eight pounds in six weeks. Life is beginning all over again for me. I, who have been barred from social activities of every kind for so long, am enjoying these pleasures again. Danced an entire evening last week without any distress during the time or any bad effects following.

I hardly know myself and feel as happy as a child, and am writing this letter in deep gratitude for what your treatment has done for me.

Yours very sincerely,

Dear Dr. Wheeler:

It isn't possible for me to put into words the marvelous results I have had from the gland operation at your hands, but I believe the enclosed picture, taken about two weeks before, will convince anyone it isn't of a well woman. The one I will send you shortly will need no explanation when placed alongside this one. I wish to express causes which led to my former terrible physical condition, and to state that my improvement is one of the greatest satisfactions in my entire life. For years I have been a victim of insomnia due to a highly nervous state. My heart was almost constantly in palpitation, and I would faint when excited a little more than usual.

Most of my life, and I am now 40 now, I have been anaemic. Poor appetite, constipation and too many ills to mention beset my days and nights. I am so thankful to be able to say that since my last few treatments, I have improved to the point where I expect to know very soon what is meant by normal health, something I know little about.

Should you wish others to write me at your office, or call at my home, please do not hesitate to call me. I feel it my duty to aid any sufferer who is now suffering as I once did.

In gratitude,
(Signed) (MRS.) J. A. NIELSEN

Business Men's Commission Offers Report

General Tariff Adjustment One of Its Plans

Federal Farm Board Urged as Another Aid

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—The American agricultural situation is of fundamental national concern, the Business Men's Commission on Agriculture reported today after a year's study of the farmers' problems, and it made these remedial recommendations:

Gradual tariff adjustment to equalize more nearly the benefits of the protective-tariff system as between agriculture and the manufacturing industry.

Creation of a Federal farm board to assist in stabilizing farm production and prices.

Administration through an endowed and independent national agricultural foundation of a comprehensive land-utilization policy.

Revision of State and local tax systems.

Strengthening of the rural banking system.

Revision of railroad rates on farm products.

Development of waterway systems.

The recommendations are contained in a report made public by Charles Nagel, chairman of the commission, which for a year has been investigating agriculture from a business point of view. The commission, created by the National Industrial Conference Board and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, but reaching its findings independently of either, according to Mr. Nagel, has heard the testimony of hundreds of farmers and others connected with the industry throughout the country.

Times have changed since the days when those who knew how to read and write were scoffed at by men of action ? Is music an unknown world to you, just as literature was to the knights of medieval times?

MEN NO LONGER BOAST THAT THEY CAN'T READ

READING BOOKS was once the despised diversion of shaven-pated monks—men of the sword would have none of it. There are a few hard-bitten men of business nowadays who try to keep up the pretense that music means nothing to them.

It happens that next to food, music comes close to being man's greatest need. It is universal. The lowest savage has his music. Probably music came before speech—certainly before organized language.

Without music, the best part of you starves

This really happened. One of the biggest men in business went clear over to Vienna to consult a famous doctor. The doctor told him to stick to business but to go home an hour earlier, relax comfortably on a couch and listen to good music. The Duo Art helped him more than medicine.

As a matter of fact music is medicine. It soothes nerves, quickens or retards the pulse, brings natural sleep, actually aids digestion. Good music clears away the cobwebs in the mind, stimulates imagination, clear thinking, courage.

The Duo Art gives you all there is in music

The piano is, of course, the supreme musical instrument. The Duo Art plays the piano for you exactly as Paderewski, Hofmann or Bauer would play if he sat at your piano in person. Your ear could detect not the slightest difference between Duo Art reproduction and the actual rendition by the Master. Simply because the Master made the record. Says Harold Bauer himself:

"In fidelity of reproduction, in brilliancy, power, delicacy, quality and variety of tone the vast superiority of the Duo Art over all similar instruments is now definitely established. The Duo Art stands supreme among reproducing pianos and I do not hesitate to identify myself with it and to entrust it with my reputation."

You doubt, of course. It is always permissible to doubt the marvelous. But if you will drop in soon and listen to the Duo Art, you will no longer doubt.

A Duo Art can be costly or in accord with a limited income. Regardless of its price, your satisfaction will be complete. It can be paid for so gradually that almost anyone can enjoy immediate possession without financial strain.

Not merely for the emotional joy of it but for your health's sake—to live years longer—for your mental efficiency —learn what the Duo Art means.

Coolidge Dictum Ends Hope as Convention Site

Republican Meet to be Fight, Not Love Feast, Now

Congress Members Demand More Central Place

BY ROBERT B. ARMSTRONG
"Times" Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—As another evidence that Calvin Coolidge is entirely eliminated from the 1928 Republican convention and campaign the majority of the members of the Republican National Committee is expected to reverse its decision in favor of San Francisco as the place for the convention. Already from New York and other Eastern States demands are being made to cancel all commitments made to Republican National Committeeman Crocker of California in favor of the Golden Gate meeting place.

When it seemed certain that President Coolidge would run for a second elective term and before he made his famous Black Hills statement that he did not choose to run, enough votes in the committee were tentatively pledged to locate the Republican convention at San Francisco. All the leaders and the rank and file members of the party felt that it would be much like the 1924 convention at Cleveland and be more or less of a ratification meeting with only the platform to be perfected at the convention and a Vice-President to be named. But since that fourteen-word statement that startled the country when broadcast last August from the summer White House, there's a complete change of sentiment.

CONDITIONS CHANGED

Practically all the leaders of the party in the Eastern and Middle Western States want the best delegations that can possibly be selected to be in attendance at the next convention, for the nominee will have to be selected there and then, wherever the convention is held. Congress will not adjourn until a few days before the convention opens—probably about the twelfth of June next year—and the Republican leaders want the trip to the convention to be not more than an overnight trip from the capital. Many of the delegations of the States will be uninstructed or pledged to favorite son candidates and the final nomination will not come until all those are eliminated.

The 1928 fight will be an open and free one for all candidates and even the platform will be written there, for the candidate named will have much to do with the adoption of many of the planks of the platform finally agreed on and at this time the place may go to any one of half a dozen candidates.

DETROIT INDICATED

Chicago or rather, Illinois, has two candidates—Lowden and Vice-President Dawes, and is therefore not likely to get much encouragement as the convention city. Cleveland, the only Ohio city, will have an uninstructed delegation with a favorite son in Senator Willis and is not looked upon with favor. Other western cities, aside from Detroit, are either too far away or have not adequate hotel facilities for the large number of men that will be attracted to this open Republican gathering. Philadelphia, New York and all of New England will scarcely be considered and Detroit now is regarded as the most probable place where the Republican convention will be held.

Besides its hotels it has a new auditorium seating 17,000 people, which will be completed in February. All the hotels are near this gathering-place and the rail and automobile as well as water transportation conditions for the Michigan city are ideal for the delegates to quickly reach the convention center and quickly return home once the convention is at an end.

CONGRESSIONAL VIEW

Leading Republican Senators and members of the House who will take an active part in the next convention want to be sure that they can be here for the adjournment of Congress, preceding the convention, and reach the convention city in time to take part in the usual preliminary conferences before the convention opens. Therefore they have already put tremendous pressure on all of their local members of the Republican National Committee to withdraw from any pledges previously made in favor of San Francisco, when nearly everybody in the party expected President Coolidge to be renominated for his second elective term without opposition.

Now that he is definitely not a candidate and will not be drafted, either before the convention or during its sessions, the leaders want to have the best element of the party there as delegates to select the best candidate to insure a Republican victory with the growing certainty that Gov. Al Smith of New York will be named by the Democrats approximately two weeks after the Republican candidate is named. They are more than anxious this year about the location of the convention and the character of the delegates than ever before, as there is no definite candidate and the platform will be drawn largely at the convention.

FOE GIVEN ADVANTAGE

Many of the party leaders feel that this year the Republican convention should not be before the Democratic decision but as history and long years of custom cannot be overturned, the Republicans will meet two weeks before the Democrats, name their candidate and declare their platform with all the advantages for the Democrats, as they will then know the strength of the Republican chosen and the platform on which he will run.

It is expected that when Republican Committeeman Crocker arrives here in Washington he will find such opposition to San Francisco for the reasons stated above that he may find it necessary to withdraw any active struggle for the convention and let some eastern city be selected that will best solve the new problems faced by the Republican party with Calvin Coolidge eliminated as a candidate.

SIMPLIFIED TAX LAW ADVANCED

Committee Approves About Two-Score Changes

Only One Recommendation Finds Group Split

Writing of New Bill Will be Begun Tomorrow

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. (AP)—The joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation approved today with only a single exception upward of two score recommendations submitted by its advisory board for simplification in administration of the nation's revenue statutes.

It ordered a favorable report on the proposed changes tendered the House Ways and Means Committee the first of the week along with the recommendation that they be enacted into law by Congress.

The joint body failed to agree on a proposal to modify Section 220 of the revenue law which deals with the taxing of corporations and ordered this proposal submitted without recommendation.

Representative Green of Iowa, who heads both committees, said it was impossible to obtain unanimity of opinion on the proposed change, although he favors its revisions. He said he believes there is a large evasion of taxes by holding companies under this section.

"As the matter stands now," he added, "I think that Section 220 should be made definite and certain and obligatory to enforcement."

This section imposes a tax of 50 per cent on the net income of a corporation which permits its gains and profits to accumulate for the purpose of preventing the imposition of the surtax upon its stockholders and the joint committee's advisory board reported that enforcement of the section is "obscure and difficult of administration."

It suggested a provision which, it said, "will tend to give some incentive to corporations to make reasonable distributions without going to the extent of enforcing unwise distributions."

The principle was stated as follows:

"Allow the corporation a deduction in computing net income equal to say 20 per cent of the excess of dividends paid other dividends received, the deduction in no case to be more than, say, 25 per cent of the corporation's taxable net income before such deduction. In computation, no account should be taken of stock dividends."

Of all the recommendations, only one, the proposal for revising the present method of computing the earned income credit, constituted any approach to a change in tax rates. The suggestions were of a technical nature and designed primarily to guide the confused taxpayer in making out his tax returns.

It was reported that a simple income tax law for complex business appeared almost out of the question, but it was felt that some degree of simplification could be attained. One of the recommendations along this line is for consolidation of the sixty-four offices of the collector of internal revenue and the thirty-six offices of revenue agents into a total of approximately sixty offices.

PREACHER SUES FOR WAGES

ALAMEDA, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—For his labors in the spiritual vineyard of the Citrus-avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Redlands, Rev. George M. Gardner gained a net salary deficit of $400 and, to be quite outspoken about it, it rather nettled him. Such is the gist of his explanation for taking an asserted unpaid salary claim against the church to the State Labor Commission. Mr. Gardner now is pastor of the Court-street Methodist Episcopal Church here.

After declaring that his three-year pastorate at Redlands was an agreeable one except for a "little unpleasantness between myself and some of the church stewards," Mr. Gardner in a statement said that prior to his departure the "Sunday school with most of the church members present unanimously passed resolutions of commendation of my work and directed the secretary to forward them to the conference at San Jose."

In explaining the salary controversy Mr. Gardner said:

"The board of stewards fixed my salary at $1500 for the year. Between October 25, 1926, and June 30, 1927, I was paid $825.77. After that date and up to October 9 the board paid me only $55.26. During this period members of my congregation, who seemed to have some knowledge of the situation, contributed $218.97, which left a balance due of $400."

DERN ASKED TO EXPLAIN STAND

House Committee Wants Utah's River Views

Chairman Denies Charge of Neglecting Upper Basin

Hint Made Governor Seeks Colorado Publicity

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. (AP)—Gov. Dern of Utah was invited today by Chairman Smith of the House Irrigation Committee to appear before that body as soon as Congress convenes to "explain your opposition to the legislation which will be introduced providing for the improvement" of the Colorado River.

The invitation was telegraphed in reply to a letter from the Utah executive which, Smith said, accused him of neglecting the interests of upper basin States in the prospective development.

"I am in doubt if you expected a reply or if it was written for publicity purposes only," the chairman said. "There are but two methods by which the waters of this great stream may be apportioned, first by agreement among the water-shed States, and second, by court decree.

"If the first method cannot be accomplished, the enactment of legislation will afford those who object an opportunity to appeal to the courts. Delay warrants the accusation that the American Congress has reached a state of impotency to meet and solve great problems."

Smith added that as chairman of the committee responsibility rests upon him to expedite consideration of legislation dealing with the project.

DERN WELCOMES CHANCE TO TELL VIEWS

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 12. (AP)—An opportunity to present to the members of the Irrigation Committee of the Lower House of Congress views of the Upper Basin States on the development of the Colorado "will be welcomed" by Gov. Dern of Utah.

Gov. Dern made this statement to the Associated Press when dispatches from Washington were read to him stating that he had been invited by Chairman Smith, Idaho, to appear before the committee.

Conferences of representatives of the seven States in the Colorado River basin opened last summer in Denver have not been concluded, and no definite date has been set for reconvening. This, Gov. Dern said, is contingent upon the outcome of conferences now being held in Los Angeles.

Gov. Dern is of the opinion a date will be arranged when views of the Upper Basin States might be presented to Representative Smith's committee because "we are of the opinion that Congress is unfamiliar with this problem which is so important to the West."

PISH, REPLY TO ATTACK ON CO-EDS

Prof. O'Shea's Statement on Girl Students Draws Scoffing Rejoinder

CHICAGO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Should Prof. M. V. O'Shea of the University of Wisconsin visit Chicago, he would do well to travel in an armored car. His recent statement that co-eds have a bad influence on universities, met with a flood of indignant pishes and poshes today. Commenting upon the Eveless-Eden-honor system at the University of Virginia, Prof. O'Shea said:

"Standards at the southern university are unusually high and it is generally felt that this is due to the fact that women are not admitted.

"There is little cheating, lying or stealing at the University of Virginia," he continued. "University of Virginia alumni are conducting a campaign to keep women out of that institution on the charge that they lower the moral standard."

Dr. George H. Betts, of Northwestern University, arising to the defense of the co-educational system said:

"Adam is still at it, blaming it on the woman. A man whose morality must be maintained by the absence of women has not a social or scholastic morality worth saving. Conclusions drawn from a single instance are unfair. The status of men's morality at Harvard, Princeton and Yale would have to be examined first."

Bay City Traffic Changes Tuesday

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—San Francisco's new traffic system, designed by Dr. Miller McClintock, the father of the present Los Angeles traffic system, becomes effective here Tuesday, the 15th inst. In virtually every major respect, it is a duplication of the Los Angeles system, including the jay-walking feature.

Up to the present, the agile San Franciscan has had all the advantages, as the ability to cross a thoroughfare depended entirely on navigation instincts and fleetness. The halt, the feeble, the lame, the blind and the lazy now get a gambling chance for existence.

NAME HELD INFRINGED

Standard Oil Sues Standard Oil of Canada, Nevada Concern

RENO, Nov. 12. (AP)—The Standard Oil Company of California filed suit in District Court against the Standard Oil Company of Canada, incorporated under the laws of Nevada on March 28 of this year, charging intent to sell stock and sell oil products under the name of "Standard Oil Company" and asking a permanent restraining order to prevent use of the name "Standard Oil" in selling shares of stock or products handled by the Standard Oil of California.

The Nevada company is organized for 250,000 shares, 200,000 of which is common stock and 50,000 shares common A stock, the latter having only voting power. None of the stock has a par value. The incorporators are Leslie E. Johnson, M. H. Brooks and F. A. Warring, all of Reno.

Don't Try To Justify Sickness! Cure It

THE WAR ON SICKNESS

The war on sickness and premature death will be won while those who are suffering and ailing stand on the side lines virtually doing nothing to help themselves. You are as sure as you, who are ailing, to arm yourself with the correct knowledge of correct living and proper diet, the grim specter of suffering and premature death will be defeated.

You, who perhaps for years have not known the possibilities of a happy normal healthy life which is the God given heritage of everyone, will be given the happiness that wrong living and lack of health has kept from you.

You whose success has been retarded because of ill health will be able to attain success like other men and women.

It matters not if it is a case of asthma, rheumatism, catarrh, constipation, overweight, that tired worn out feeling or any of the various ailments that you may have, you have either got to gain the proper common sense knowledge of your case and the care you, yourself, must give it, or continue to suffer unnecessary pain, worry and inconvenience.

Dr. McCoy has prepared a home treatment booklet treatise on every common ailment. Each booklet tells of the cause and effect of your ailment and then you are told exactly what to do every hour of the day to help bring about a cure. You are given the same information in each booklet that Dr. McCoy has given to his thousands of patients during years of private practice.

One hundred and thirty-seven thousand have already been sent to people in North America who have written for them at $1.00 each (regular rate.) These booklets may save you from an operation and other oft' unnecessary suffering but it is positive that they will help to give you definite assistance and the relief that you are seeking.

Composer of the Operas "Shanewis" and "The Witch of Salem" and many other famous works.

MARGARET MESSER MORRIS
Noted soprano, and Cadman's soloist, says: "As an accompanist to my singing the Ampico in the Knabe is indispensable."

"Let your children hear and know good music, just as they read and know good books"
...says America's foremost composer...

"GREAT EDUCATORS say that music is one of the most necessary and fundamental studies in your children's education.

"I believe the Ampico in the Knabe is AS IMPORTANT IN THE HOME AS THE LIBRARY. For it gives them in music what good books give them in literature and practical sciences.

"The Ampico re-enacts the ACTUAL HAND PLAYING and personality of the artist. I have amazed listeners by playing in direct comparison with my recordings on the Ampico. The most acute ear could detect no difference. The Ampico reaches its loftiest achievement when combined with the Knabe, for to my mind the Knabe is the KING OF ALL INSTRUMENTS."

COOK'S COXEYS GAIN ON LONDON

Unemployed English Miners Arrive at Swindon

Leader and Wife March Bravely in Ranks

But from Here Privates Will Hoof it Alone

SWINDON (Eng.) Nov. 12. (AP)—A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation and organizer of the valiant band of unemployed, known as "Coxey's Army," led the marchers tonight into this little old town which King Charles I helped to get on its feet by granting it the right to hold a great fair. Mrs. Cook also was in the ranks, and she tramped as bravely as any of them.

The army left Chippenham this morning for Swindon, and the Cooks joined the procession at Wootton Bassett, where the men left the train after a ten-mile ride, which made it possible for the hikers to reach Swindon by nightfall.

The men will remain here for two nights, and Mr. and Mrs. Cook will remain over Sunday, but the miners' secretary must hurry back to London by the next day. He will therefore march no more.

Papers Issued Against Pacifist

BERLIN, Nov. 12. (AP)—Papers have been issued for the examination of Prof. Wilhelm Foerster, widely known pacifist, for his asserted revelation of information about the Reichswehr, which was calculated to prove detrimental to the interests of the country.

The asserted revelations were made in the pacifist organ Die Menschheit, whose editor was arrested on a charge of treason. As Prof. Foerster is living in Switzerland at present the papers have no practical significance.

The Federal Attorney General at Leipsig today stated that no warrant had been issued, but that a legal process had been granted for a preliminary examination of Prof. Foerster.

H. G. WELLS HITS AT SHAW

than made up by the reports of results that came out in the subsequent years, when the tide of paper flowed again.

There is something vastly heroic in this persistence and something profoundly significant in the respectful cessation of political violence in the precincts of the Institute of Experimental Medicine.

It happened that when I was in Russia in 1920 I visited Prof. Pavloff and saw something of his work. I remember that the corners of his study were piled high with potatoes and turnips that he had grown in a patch of earth outside his laboratory, and dug up and brought in. He remarked casually that that was how he took his exercise nowadays, and that was all the notice he gave to the immense political and social stresses of the world about him.

EXPLAINS METHOD

He went on to talk about the more permanent realities with which he was dealing and took me through the ingenious building in which he and his little band of assistants were conducting his researches. I saw the dogs on which he was working. They did not seem to be in the slightest degree uncomfortable; they wagged their tails and he patted their heads. He explained as much of his methods and ideas as he thought my unspecialized mind could grasp.

He was a brownish-faced, gentlebred man, with brown eyes and a general cast of countenance that reminded me of portraits I had seen of the late Lord Kelvin. He showed a lively interest in the explorations he was conducting, and he did his best to make his points clear to me, without any attempt to astonish me by any sudden strangeness of statement or epigrammatic gymnastics. He was pleased, I think, to get some one from outer Europe again, asking him questions. He spoke of the work of other people and particularly of Sherington without any note of rivalry or attempt to caricature; he spoke of them as collaborators and collateral explorers in this great work of illuminating some of the obscurist niches of the world of reality.

Never in a moment in his talk did he seem aware of anything besides his subject, and least of all was he aware of himself. He seemed in another world from any thoughts of personal competition. He embarked upon no praises of Sherington. Merely he spoke with respect and interest of his work. To have raised the question of whether he thought Sherington or himself the greater or more remarkable would have been like letting a drop of ink or mud fall into a glass of clear wine.

REMARKS ON VIVISECTION

My sense of the man's simple greatness returns to me as I read this skilful, patient piecing together of fact and inference and question, doubt, experiment and conclusion for the third of a lifetime, which supplies the matter of this book. And as I read I am reminded of a vehement outbreak I recently provoked in another great man I know, a man for whom I have an admiration and affection at least as strong as I have for Prof. Pavloff, though my admiration is of an entirely different quality, George Bernard Shaw.

I recall that Prof Pavloff is one of the greatest of vivisectors—"these scoundrels," Shaw called them—and that, according to Shaw, it is his habit to boil babies alive and see what happens. Queer that one fine man should write so of another! In that screaming, wildly foolish denunciation of vivisection to which I refer, Shaw, just to give his readers an idea of what vivisection meant, described one of the villains as chopping off the paws of a dog one after the other, to observe its behavior, and as being quite surprised to find that after his fourth operation there were no more paws. And such like platform stuff.

It is interesting to compare the reality of vivisection as it is given in this book. For the most part the amount of operation performed involved far less temporary suffering for the animals than lies at the door of any "dog lover" who has the ears of a Belgian Griffon docked, and the vast mass of the experiments and observations recorded required as a primary condition that the animals should be altogether calm and comfortable. The distraction of even a slight pain or any alarming or distressful circumstance would have inhibited altogether the delicate responses to stimuli upon which this great mass of new knowledge has been erected. I know it will outrage the dearest feelings of the antivivisector to say this; it is his peculiar delight to gloat upon imagined "tortures," but this book is available for the judgment of the intelligent reader. One dog, Pavloff described incidentally, as jumping into the stand, impatient for what any hearty antivivisector would no doubt describe as its "torment."

CONTRASTS MEN

But when I set out to write this article I did not intend to touch so definitely as this upon the delicate sensibilities of the antivivisectionist, probably the most indefatigable and fiercest of all epistolatory creatures. That issue is a little off my present track.

I had in mind the remarkable contrast of these two eminent figures, both in their way commanding my admiration and both in their way very sympathetic to me. I come somewhat between them; in my humbler measure I partake a little of both. I do not know what Pavloff thinks of Shaw, probably about as much as he does of the "proletarian science" of Moscow. But we have Shaw's ringing 'scoundrel" for Pavloff properly on record. I have been amusing myself for some minutes with that amusing game of the 'one lifebelt." Probably you know and play that game. You put it in as a problem rather after the fashion of the "Doctor's Dilemma;" if "A" is drowning on one side of a pier and "B" is equally drowning on the other, and you have one lifebelt and can not otherwise help, to which of the two would you throw it? Which would I save, Pavloff or Shaw?

I do not think it would interest the reader to give my private answer. But while I was considering it, I was manifestly obliged to ask myself, "What is the good of Shaw?" And what is the good of Pavloff? Pavloff is a star which lights the world, shining down a vista hitherto unexplored. Why should I hesitate with my lifebelt for one moment?

WEIGHS SHAW

To begin with the elements, so to speak, Shaw writes English extraordinarily well. I feel a sort of benefit of clergy attaches to that alone. Pavloff translated by Anrep is rather clumsy reading and I doubt if that is altogether the fault of Anrep. I doubt if Pavloff is much of a writer. Sometimes I try to write English, and I am always keenly interested in the writing of English, and I am even interested in the writing of stuff about the writing of English, and I know enough of the business to know how beautifully it is done by Shaw. And he walks about writing in a little notebook, avoiding passers-by with remarkable skill, and willy nilly he produces, out of his head and out of his vivid conceptions about life, shows for the theater of the brightest, liveliest, freshest quality, so that there is nothing like them in the world.

"John Bull's Other Island" and "Androcles and the Lion" and "Saint Joan" float off from reality like vast soap bubbles, reflecting it in vivid patches, curved and brightened, iridescent and delightful. And he talks incessantly and a larger proportion of that talk than is found in the talk of any one else on record is fun of the very best quality.

Moreover, he has invented a most amusing personal appearance; he is an adept at gravely absurd conduct, and his extraordinary industry in sitting to painters, photographers and sculptors will fill the museums of the future with entire galleries of his portraits, medals, statues and busts. All the rest of us will be rare in comparison. The likeness varies with the artist, and it is possible that various series of these representations will be ascribed to different contemporary reputations which have been less sedulous for physical record. Some may even be attributed to eminent vivisectors. So Shaw may even defeat his end of individual assertion and become the general type of our time. But certainly he is the greatest living artist in expression, in self-expression, and he does it so excellently that it seems ungracious to raise the question whether he has ever had anything but himself to express.

SHAW'S IDEAS

But with the rifle belt in my hands and Pavloff, so to speak, splashing, it is a question I must raise. What has Shaw added to our arsenal of ideas, to our store of knowledge, to the illumination of the world? Has he been more than a confusing commentary, a gesticulating shadow athwart light not his own? He has been a prominent Socialist What is there in Socialist thought, what contribution, or correction, or deflection to which one can attach the initials of G. B. S.?

He has been a mighty reverberator for Samuel Butler's self-consoling detraction of Darwinism. He has restored the inheritance of acquired characters by proclamation, and he has co-operated with that equally vigorous expressionist Mr. Belloc in proclaiming Darwinism—whatever it is—extinct. He has made a free use of the phrase "the life force," but what meaning he attaches to these magic words is unknown.

He expands the word "will" on the lines of various nineteenth century German thinkers. He seems to be suggesting that man can do anything by merely willing it, but whether that is possible on any dietary or only upon vegetarian nourishment, and whether it can be done without apparatus, is never clear. He has an aversion from sex and children which may be either Butler or temperamental, and he seems to want mankind to try laying parthenogenetic eggs and coming out of them fully whiskered. I doubt if there will ever be this will to the egg on the part of mankind.

INVENTS ANTAGONIST

And in his wonderful prefaces—as good as the best Dublin-brewed talk they are—he has made a vast jungle of shrewd commentary and dogmatic statements that collectively amount to somewhere in the region of nothing at all. It is interesting to read these prefaces and the rest of his abundant controversial literature and note how inevitably he slides away from any general question to issues of motive. If he has no visible antagonist, he invents one. Just as he shirked all the issues of vivisection by describing imaginary monsters of stupidity and cruelty, so always he has dressed a punching dummy for every view he has assailed. It is not that he is a dishonest controversialist, but because he is incurably a dramatist, that he does this. The poverty of his abstract thought assures the excellence of his plays.

People call him a thinker. I doubt any consecutive thinking at all. Most intelligent men have their ideas in some sort of grouping and order, even if it is no more than the order of a patchwork quilt, but I do not find even that much coherence in Shaw. His ideas are a jackdaw's hoard, picked up anyhow and piled together anyhow. Knowing my Shaw fairly well and knowing his surroundings, I think I could trace to some quite near personal influences nearly everything he has ever held. This he got from Samuel Butler and that from Webb; this he expanded from a chance remark by Haden Guest and that was loaded into him by one of Mussolini's sedulous propagandists.

The worst element in his mental make-up is a queer readiness to succumb to the poses of excessive virility. His soul goes down before successful force. He exalted the maker of enormous guns in "Man and Superman;" he has rejoiced in the worst claptrap of the Napoleonic legend; now he is striking attitudes of adoration toward the poor, vain, doomed biped who is making Rome horrible and ridiculous to all the world. When it comes to the torture of intelligent men, to vile outrages on old women, to the strangulation of all sane criticism and an orgy of claptrap more dreadful than its attendant cruelties, this vituperative antivivisectionist becomes an applauding spectator. So he is welcomed to Italy and feted in the sunlit streets along which other less fortunate intellectuals have been hurried through the darkness to an ignominious death.

DECLARED TRIFLING

What does it matter to him that the shadow of destruction creeps closer and closer to so great a man as Ferrero? What does it matter that the soul of a whole people is dishonored and bowed and bent? To him it does not matter because his thought is too trifling to apprehend the threat this triumph of base violence conveys to the whole world of man. He is taken and subdued by posturings that outdo his own, and his political thinking like his thinking about life and medicine, brings him at last to no better end than a defense of impudent quackery.

MOTORMEN FAIL TO HIT A SOUL

Three Get Gold Medals for Cruising 80,000 Miles in Sacramento Safely

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—The Pacific Gas and Electric Company operates a street car system in Sacramento, its only utility of the kind. To placate the natural hunting instincts of its motormen, the company awards gold stars for not hitting pedestrians.

Indicative of the dullness of a motorman's life in Sacramento is the fact that three galloping street-car chauffeurs have just drawn the medals for cruising 80,000 miles without a single pedestrian notch in their fenders.

Two Thousand Cows Will be Kept on Property

Los Angeles to Get Product in Chilled Containers

PHOENIX, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Long-proposed plans for supplying Los Angeles with milk from this locality appear to have come to a head in a lease by the Gold Medal Creamery Company of Long Beach of a 4000-acre tract twelve miles from this city. The land lies in the Pima Reservation, south of the Salt River Mountains, and has been held under a long lease originally obtained by Lincoln Fowler, deceased.

Irrigation for 2000 acres now in alfalfa is from surplus waters of the Tempe Canal District. According to J. H. Chamness, president and manager of the Coast corporation, $75,000 will be spent on new buildings and headquarters equipment, 2000 dairy cows will be brought from California, Wisconsin and Texas, and provision will be made for a monthly expense of $30,000.

Shipment will be in chilled jacketed containers. On the ranch at present the creamery company is raising 8000 lambs for the Los Angeles market.

TROTZKY COUP PLAN REVEALED

Western Diplomat Discloses Deal in Report

Precaution Taken to Effect Peaceful Seizure

Moscow, Nov. 12. (AP) — The Central Communist Committee tonight expelled Leon Trotzky, Gregory Zinovieff, Leo Kameneff, Radek, Smilga and Proebrashensky from the Communist party.

[Copyright, 1927, by Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—A most sensational statement of events in Moscow is contained in the report of a western diplomat, which has come to my knowledge. The diplomat, who has been a resident of Moscow for some years and on closest terms with the soviet authorities, informs his government that Leon Trotzky has come to an agreement with the chiefs of the Cheka (State political police,) who are the real rulers in Russia, to seize the power, expelling Commissar Stalin, the present dictator.

This agreement was arrived at in a secret conclave a fortnight ago when it was agreed that M. Stalin is not fit to hold the power, but in order to avoid giving the world a spectacle of bolo killing bolo, it was decided to give him rope enough to hang himself by creating disgust with his weakness in the minds of the party so that when the time comes M. Trotzky can step in with a minimum of friction.

For Willys-Knight offers not only higher compression, insuring greater speed and liveliness, but uniform compression, insuring velvet smoothness at all times, at all speeds. Thus, you always enjoy an even, unfailing flow of power.

Willys-Knight brings you all the advantages of high compression with none of the disadvantages. There is no undue wear on the engine, as is the case with many poppet-valve high compression motors. And with the Willys-Knight, you can USE ANY GAS; there is no need to buy special and more costly fuel.

Unlike most great advances in motor car design, the Knight sleeve-valve engine is controlled by one organization exclusively, and is rigidly protected by PATENTS. The self-starter, lacquer finish, balloon tires and four-wheel brakes are common to many cars; but this, one of the most valuable developments in all automotive history—the PATENTED Knight engine — still remains the property of a single company.

You owe it to yourself to see and drive the finer "70" Six or the Great Six. Their beauty will command your instant admiration. You will enthuse over their low, graceful lines, their rich, harmonious colors. But your deepest appreciation of the Willys-Knight will result from smooth, unfailing performance through the years.

Exquisitely Beautiful New Colors

Your choice of many distinctive colors, both in lacquer and upholstery. Colors that are rich, harmoniously blended, lastingly attractive.

FASCIST CHIEFS SUPERSEDE LAW

Provincial Leader to Settle Wage Controversy

Government Ignores Statute in Order Issued

Labor Courts' Functions Now Held Questionable

ROME, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—A decision which may have a very important bearing on the ultimate Fascist system for settling disputes between capital and labor just has been made. Despite its importance, it passed practically unobserved by the Italian press.

Owing to unfavorable labor condition in the Province of Brescia, the native Province of Secretary-General Turati of the Fascist party, employers declared themselves forced to effect some small wage reductions. The laborers did not believe reductions justified and, according to the existing law, referred the adjustment to the Ministry of Corporations. The usual routine followed, but the two parties in the conflict failed to agree on suitable terms.

According to the law, the question should then have been brought before the special labor magistracy of the Court of Appeals of Brescia for a final indisputable decision. Instead, by government order, it has been handed over to Sig Turati, not as secretary of the party, but as the Fascist leader of the Province, thus ignoring the law only recently passed and which was recurred to in the case of the rice workers of Ferrara a few months ago.

It will be remembered that in the Ferrara case the Court of Appeals decided in favor of the workers. Although it was clearly stated that the decision was prompted by a spirit of conciliation, not all Italians were convinced that it was just. Now it is the intention of the government to avoid a repetition of the Ferrara case.

Since both employers and workers have agreed that Sig Turati's decision will be accepted without question, it is believed the case will be settled quickly and quietly.

But the question is raised whether the labor court is going to function henceforth or if decision in labor conflicts are going to be left to the provincial Fascist authorities, acting in the name of the central government.

TROLLEY REVENUE TRACKED

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Street railway systems, whether publicly or privately owned, have come to the point where their financial future is problematical and the Railroad Commission of California is in the position of experimenting to determine the best method of sustaining their operating lives, it was said here today by Ezra De Coto, president of the commission.

Recently, the commission has ordered carriers in Oakland and San Diego to reduce rates in an effort to stimulate patronage and recommendations that the same be done in San Jose and Stockton have been offered.

"If the fares are raised to permit the street-car company to earn a fair income, patronage goes down," De Coto stated. "If the fares are lowered, the income is not sufficient.

"The situation has been resolved to the stage of experimentation. The commission has not been able to find a means of keeping street-car companies afloat successfully, so it is a matter of trying first one plan and then another."

Secret Burial of Girl Charged in Mother's Suit

OAKLAND, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—A mother's right to view the body of her daughter is valued at $10,000 by Mrs. Ethel Allnett of Brookside, in a suit for damages against Maude Walker, W. C. Walker and Harold Walker, charging that they secretly conveyed the body of her daughter, Mardella Jones, from New Orleans to Oakland and had it cremated.

She thus was deprived of the right and consoling privilege, she asserts, of viewing the remains. Had she been informed, Mrs. Allnett states, she would have brought the body to her home in Brownsville and had it interred.

FRANCE AGREES TO NEW TARIFF

Temporary Plan Approved by Cabinet

Schedule of Duties to be Promulgated Shortly

Former American Rates Will be Reinstated

PARIS, Nov. 12. (AP)—The French Cabinet today approved a temporary Franco-American tariff arrangement. A new schedule of duties on American goods will be promulgated shortly by a government decree.

The Cabinet approved the arrangement at a meeting and Minister of Commerce Bokanawski, presenting the matter, announced that the "negotiations have been very happily concluded."

While the French and American experts take the time necessary to negotiate a durable arrangement between the two countries, the new schedule will reinstate the tariff formerly accorded to the United States except where the recent German commercial treaty with France establishes higher minimums. In this case the United States will be on the same basis as Germany.

UNEARTH WALLS OF ANCIENT CITY

Archeologist Interested in Find Near Berlin

Believed Later Bronze Age Home of Illyrians

Pottery Points to Tribe of 1000 Years B.C.

BERLIN, Nov.) 12. (Exclusive—Three thousand years and more ago a people from Southern Europe established a fortified settlement near Frankfort-on-the-Oder, only some fifty miles from Berlin.

There is no record of this in history, but excavations now going on have disclosed it and are daily leading to new finds of the highest importance for archeologists.

Less than four miles from Frankfort lies the railroad station Buesh-muehle, and near it a considerable hill. Some time ago remains of an ancient Slav settlement were discovered there when a cut was made for a new railroad line, and excavations brought to light typical shards of pottery and other things indicating that Slavs had once occupied the hill for a considerable length of time. The settlement appears to have been at its height about 600 A.D.

DIGGERS ASTONISHED

Some months ago systematic excavations were begun under the direction of the head of the Prussian Ethnological Museum, and other noted archeologists.

Their astonishment was great when, getting below the 1200-year-old stratum on which the Slav settlement had stood, the workmen's spades began to turn up finds of a quite different character, and the sensational fact was established that a non-Slavic tribe had lived here in the later Bronze Age, 1000 years before Christ, or, perhaps, even somewhat earlier.

The finds, together with the manner in which the fortification wall was constructed, indicate that the original settlers here were either Thracians of Illyrians.

FIND SKULL

The wall is of a unique type. Its builders filled boxes with earth, much as concrete walls are constructed today, piled them together and covered the whole with a layer of earth. The method of construction can still be clearly seen, 3000 years after the wall was erected. When the Slavs came, probably 1500 years later, they found the wall in such a state of preservation that they were still able to employ it as a defense for their settlement.

In the middle of the settlement the excavators have found a number of shafts, some of them thirty feet deep, containing the bones of men and animals, which appear to have been deliberately buried there. In one of these shafts the top of a human skull was found in circumstances suggesting human sacrifice. Only a small part of the settlement has as yet been excavated, but it is already obvious that Buseschmuehle is destined to become as important for the study of the Bronze Age as is Dordogne for the Stone Age.

The finds establish for the first time the presence of Thracians or an allied folk so far northward. Both Thracians and Illyrians occupied the Balkan peninsula before the ancient Greeks appeared in history, and they may even have extended into Italy. Thrace still exists, but the Thracians long ago disappeared. The remnants of the Illyrians have survived in Albania.

USE CHURCH FOR LOVING AND DINING

Sexton Raps Disregard of Londoners for Sacredness of Cathedral

LONDON, Nov. 12. (AP)—"Many people go to church, but few to pray," is an old saying which is applied today by newspapers here to the report of one of the sextons of St. Paul's Cathedral that the historic pile erected by Sir Christopher Wren is used for many other purposes than divine worship.

"Women sit in the niches just inside the side doors," he declared, "and do not seem to care if a service is on or sacred music is being played. People have some strange ideas of what a church is for. People come in here during the lunch hour and bring out sandwiches, newspapers and novels, and even write letters. We have to tell them that the cathedral is neither an eating-house nor a reading room.

"We have even found courting couples in the niches of the Cathedral."

Bootlegger Hit by "Still Law"

STOCKTON, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—The first sentence in San Joaquin county under the new State "still law" was imposed by Superior Judge George F. Buck when he fined Joe Hernandez $1000 and sent him to San Quentin prison for one year. Hernandez had pleaded guilty to using a still to make intoxicating liquor.

In sentencing the man, Judge Buck scathingly denounced him as not only "corrupting and debauching his own countrymen with poison liquor" but of tempting them to steal also by giving them liquor in exchange for beans and potatoes far exceeding the value of the liquor given in return. automobile tires and quantities of

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER KILLED

ABERDEEN (Wash.) Nov. 12. (AP)—Mrs. Edna McBride Shryock of Potlach, Idaho, and her daughter, Miss Gene Shryock, 23-year-old school teacher, were killed in Wishkah River today when the automobile the daughter was driving plunged through the gates of an open drawbridge.

NOTE

SIGNOR JOSEPH DABISSI, whose connection with the art world dates back nearly thirty years, devoted many years to the careful study of the great masterpieces of early Italian craftsmanship, in the Museums and private collections of Europe and America. Being a man of means, he acquired a most extensive private collection in his travels, among which are many rare and interesting examples of practical and decorative value in a home. Circumstances, which we are not at liberty to publish, force him to dispose of this collection at unrestricted Public Sale to the highest bidder.

This sale offers a special opportunity to acquire at competitive bid unusual acquisitions for your home not ordinarily available in the regular channels of trade.

Partial List of Contents

This collection consists of over five hundred (500) pieces and the following is merely a partial list, so as to give a general idea of the scope and importance of the sale.

It is essentially made up of Italian Florentine, Tuscan, Umbrian and Spanish Designs, ranging from the 16th to the 19th Century. There are a number of exceptionally fine pieces of Boulle and other French designs of the 18th Century. Also a few 18th Century English pieces.

FURNITURE—Large and small carved cabinets, credenzas, cassones, prie-dieus. Sofas, settees, love-seats, benches and choir stalls. Refectory tables, octagonal tables, pedestal tables, console and library tables. Carved beds, day-beds and chaise longues. Stools and a large variety of chairs, individual, in pairs and sets, covered in brocade, tapestry, needlepoint and leather. Screens, mirrors, and carved pedestals. Desks and dressing tables.

TAPESTRIES—An important collection of twelve (12) tapestries, including large and small Brussels, Flemish, Aubusson and Gobelin weaves, ranging from the 16th to the 18th Century.

BROCADES—Renaissance velvet hangings and covers, vestments, rich damasks, brocatelle and banners.

WROUGHT IRON—Andirons, braziers, flower stands, lanterns, brackets, torcheres, grillings, five-light candlesticks, elaborate gates, processional lanterns.

RUGS—A collection of Savonery carpets conceded to be the finest examples of Savonery that have ever left France. The sizes range from 13x17 to 15x26 ft. There also is a small collection of Antique Oriental carpets in small and large sizes.

GARDEN FURNITURE AND MARBLES—Carrara marble bird-baths, garden benches, large and small urns, garden stools, oil jars, statuettes and marble mantels.

MISCELLANEOUS—Three fine Russian Silver Icons, Dresden and Capi di Monte figures and vases, carved and gilded candlesticks, bronzes, carved and polychromed figures, beautiful clock sets, and extraordinary jewel casket.

This sale is without limit or reserve. Do not judge the importance or magnitude of the collection by the brevity of this announcement.

DOWNTOWN CORNER LOT

Possibly only once in several years is the investor afforded an opportunity to buy a downtown Los Angeles business corner lot at a forced sale, at public auction.

AUCTION

on Tuesday, November 15, at 11 A.M. This is a very large corner, being about 178 feet on Towne Avenue by about 85 feet on Ninth Street.

Ninth Street is the real street of destiny. Get a Major Traffic Plan Map at our Security Bank. You'll see how a NEW 10th St. is to be cut through the heart of the downtown district from Main St. to join 9th St. at San Pedro St. Ninth St. at Towne is thus made to benefit by the great 10th St. plan. All seems set to go ahead AT ONCE on this cut as, we understand, it is just out of the courts.

When the cut is made, Ninth St. at Towne will be fed by two main arteries—the present Ninth St. and the NEW 10th St. Visualize values then. Surely 9th St. is a super highway, and Towne Ave. is about as close to Main Street as Figueroa.

Now, consider these facts. Business must find a location on a Main highway close to the center of town. Prices on west side vacant lots are absolutely prohibitive. There remains the Eastside, whose day is here now. Acquaint yourself with the Eastside situation. What street compares with Ninth St. as (a) a through highway, (b) in offering less resistance to improvement because it is comparatively unimproved at present, east of San Pedro St. Remember, business follows the line of least resistance. It builds on a great through street where there are no expensive blocks to demolish. Look around. Use your own judgment. There's only one conclusion, East Ninth St., great today, will be the scene of the next great development, already started. Prices will never be lower. Sure as the sun rises, they must go higher quickly. There has never been a year when downtown Los Angeles property did not advance in price. Every block that goes up will increase the value of your property. "Big Business" knows this. The $5,000,000 Sears-Roebuck store and the great new market on 9th St. just east of Towne, show their opinion of 9th St.

Here you have all the ground necessary for a hotel or any business which needs a location on a main street right downtown. Being a forced sale, the shrewd investor or speculator can pick this corner up at a price that will show an enormous profit in a short time. The owners cannot hold it and are forced to liquidate at once. Terms, cash above an existing small mortgage for $15,000 at 7% held by the Security Bank.

Investigate values in this vicinity. Come to the sale and put in your bid. Many have made fortunes just this way, and do you know anyone who ever lost money on downtown Los Angeles property? November 15 is the day. Buy along with someone else only if you have to. You have always wanted to own downtown Los Angeles property—especially a corner—and the size of it, almost 178 feet by 85 feet. The circumstances of this sale create your greatest opportunity—on Nov. 15 at 11 a.m. See map of lot today on sign on property. SALE REGARDLESS OF WEATHER CONDITIONS.

INDEPENDENCE, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—W. W. and Mark Q. Watterson having been convicted of embezzling more than $460,000 in funds of the Inyo County Bank, a new court battle over the pair is scheduled to take place here Monday when they come up for sentence.

Before sentence is passed upon them it is understood that the Watterson will ask for probation and it is at that point that the residents of the valley already are taking sides and drawing their lines. Superior Judge Lambert, who was called here from Bakersfield to conduct the trial, will be back here to handle the matter of probation and pass sentence. Naturally he has not indicated what position he will take on the matter of probation.

MOVE FOR PROBATION

It is learned here that W. W. Watterson called upon Dist.-Atty. Heaston and took up with him the matter of probation for himself and his brother. Heaston said he preferred not to discuss what transpired at the meeting. He would not deny, however, that he will oppose probation.

It is possible that if probation is granted for, the Wattersons will request some time in which to present further arguments in support of their application. Among the valley resi- 17-

NEW FIGHT DUE IN INYO FIASCO

Paterson Probation Move Slated for Tomorrow

Action Expected When Pair Come Up for Sentence

Residents of Valley Taking Sides on Question

BY CHESTER G. HANSON
"Times" Staff Correspondent

INDEPENDENCE, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—W. W. and Mark Q. Watterson have been convicted of embezzling more than $460,000 in funds of the Inyo County Bank, a new court battle over the pair is scheduled to take place here Monday when they come up for sentence.

Then sentence is passed upon them it is understood that the Wattersons will ask for probation and it is at that point that the residents of the valley already are taking sides and drawing their lines. Superior Judge Lambert, who was called here from Bakersfield to conduct the trial, will be back here to handle the matter of probation and passing sentence. Naturally he has not indicated what position he will take on the matter of probation.

MOVE FOR PROBATION

It is learned here that W. W. Watterson called upon Dist.-Atty. Hesse and took up with him the matter of probation for himself and his brother. Hesse said he preferred not to discuss what transpired at the conference. He would not deny, however, that he will oppose probation. It is possible that if probation is granted by the Wattersons will request some time in which to present arguments in support of their petition. Among the valley residents the matter is being discussed pro and con. The chief argument of those supporting probation is that the Wattersons will not do the valley residents any good in the penitentiary and they might be able to help get some of the money back if out of prison.

OPPOSITION ATTITUDE

And the antiprobationers say: "Well, the bank had to suffer to keep their corporations going and even then made a flop of it. The chances are that the receiver will run the business better. And besides when a man is convicted of a crime he ought to pay the penalty."

Up and down the valley they go, the probation matter taking the place of the old question as to whether or not the Wattersons were guilty.

Both of the Wattersons were called before a hearing of the temporary receivers of Watterson Brothers, Inc., to determine some of the assets of the corporation. The meeting was conducted at Bishop before E. E. Moss of Los Angeles, referee in bankruptcy. A. H. Swallow is attorney for the temporary receiver. Nothing of any particular consequence developed at the hearing, according to Swallow.

WOOD LAYS CRASH TO ABUSE OF POWER

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Abuse of unrestrained power caused the downfall of Mark Q. and W. W. Watterson, bankers of Inyo county, who will appear Monday in Superior Court at Independence for sentence on their conviction on thirty-five counts of embezzlement and one of falsifying a bank statement. This opinion was expressed today by Will C. Wood, State Superintendent of Banks, upon his return from the trial.

The conviction of the Wattersons on Thursday night followed charges filed after the collapse of their chain of five banks. The embezzlements aggregated $460,000, it was charged.

"I am not one to gloat over the downfall of any man or men," declared Wood. "However, the interests of safe banking in California call for drastic action. The moral of the Inyo county affair is one with which we are familiar.

"This is that whenever a man or group of men assume unchecked power they abuse it and eventually destroy themselves. The world is full of examples of this kind.

"The Watterson brothers virtually were dictators of Owens Valley and it is said that anyone who questioned their absolute power was crushed or banished. Too much unrestrained power brought their downfall."

FAMED PAINTING HELD COPY

NEWPORT (R. I.) Nov. 12. (AP)—The authenticity of a Gilbert Stuart portrait of George Washington, which has hung for more than a century in the old State House at Newport, is questioned by William Homer Leavitt, Boston artist.

In a letter to the Newport Herald he says it is a mediocre copy.

In 1880 Gilbert Stuart was commissioned by Rhode Island to paint two portraits of Washington, one for the State House in Providence, the other for the State House in Newport. The State in those days had two capitals. For this work he was paid $1200.

For many years residents of Newport have believed the painting here to be of great value as an authentic Stuart.

Los Franceses Quieren Evitar Secuestradas en el Aute

PARIS, Nov. 12. (Exclusivo)—Los fabricantes de automóviles se están preocupando mucho por construir unos resortes independientes para cada rueda, que sirvan para evitar, en lo sucesivo, las sacudidas, que tiene un vehiculo de estos actualmente, cuando atraviesa por caminos, llenos de monticulos y simas. Con esta medida las ruedas recibirán el golpe, pero no lo comunicarán al "chassis". Unos de estos fabricantes está tratando de colocar resortes también en los ejes de propulsión, para que estando abordo de un carro de estos uno se olvide por completo de que se halla en él, en marcha. Sin embargo de todo esto, se cree que pasará todavia mucho tiempo, antes de que se llegue a perfeccionar de tal modo el método de suspensión del carro que permita la sensación de ir por el aire.

En Méjico se Inaugura un Servicio de Aeroplanos

EL PASO (Texas) Nov. 12. (Exclusivo)—Se han recibido noticias de la declaración hecha por Cosme Hinojosa, administrador general de Correos de Méjico, en la que anunciaba que iba a ser inaugurado un servicio de aeroplanos de pasajeros y correspondencia, el próximo enero, entre la ciudad de Méjico, Veracruz, Progreso y la frontera con Estados Unidos de Norteamérica. Un grupo de aviadores australianos, que se hallan en Ensenada, Baja California, han comenzado a hacer gestiones con el gobierno mejicano para que les permita usar el campo de aviación que hay allí, a fin de emprender el vuelo sin interrupción hasta Australia. El permiso, según de dice, será concedido por el gobierno.

El Gusto Por la Buena Ropa, Perdido en Inglaterra

LONDRES, Nov. 12. (AP)—Los ingleses han perdido la afición por la ropa. Piénsan demasiado, al presente, en aparatos de radio, automóviles, casas y muebles que pueden ser adquiridos por medio del sistema de pagos a plazos. Y don Guillermo Gerrish, presidente de la asociación de comerciantes de ropa al por mayor del distrito de Londres, opina que ésta debe tomar cartas en el asunto. Para el efecto ha sugerido a sus consocios que ideen una vasta campaña de anuncios, en la que se induzca a los hombres, a que arrojen sus trajes viejos y se compren nuevos.

Dickens se Interesaba por la Maquinaria

LONDRES, Nov. 12. (AP)—Como director de periódico Carlos Dickens, el celebre novelista inglés, se interesó muchisimo en los inventos de maquinaria agricola que sirvieran para ayuda de granjeros o pequeños hacendados. El siguiente párrafo tomado del Daily News de Londres, fue el que lo impulsó a tomarse tanto interés en el asunto: "El marqués de Tweeddale ha conseguido, al fin el llevar a un alto grado de perfeccionamiento un arado de vapor, con el cual se han llevado a cabo experimentos muy interesantes". Esto pasaba en el 30 de septiembre de 1851.

Ejército que Usará Otra Vez Pantalones Rojos

PARIS, Nov. 12. (AP)—Los antiguos pantalones rojos de la infanteria francesa parece que volverán a usarse, dicen algunos que estan al tanto de la politica de Painlevé, ministro de la Guerra, y se dá como causa de esta determinación el desfile de la legión Norteamericana en Paris. Todo el mundo se encantó con el color que lucian los soldados de aquélla, y empezaron a preguntarse porqué los franceses ya no usaban colores en sus uniformes, máxime cuando allí hay tanto gusto en lo que a color se refiere. Se ha pensado que el uniforme de diario sea un adaptación de los trajes tipicos, usados por los aldeanos en las diferentes partes de Francia.

Méjico Niega Cambio Alguno en sus Leyes

MEJICO, Nov. 12. (Exclusivo)—El gobierno, según se lee en la prensa local, niega oficialmente lo que se ha declarado últimamente en la prensa de los Estados Unidos de Norteamerica, acerca de que habria un cambio en pu politica agraria. Por lo contrario, esta politica no tendrá alteración alguna pues se considera una de las conquistas de la revolución, y se está haciendo y se hará todo lo posible por llevar adelante la aplicación de las leyes recientemente promulgadas sobre tierras. Se espera que en el curso de lo que falta de año se complete el número de 500,000 hectáreas de la tierra que ha sido repartida entre los campesinos.

INJURED CO-ED ENTERS TENTH DAY OF COMA

DYING PLEA OF FERDINAND TOLD

Manoilescu Makes Strong Defense Address

Says King Begged to Have Carol Brought Back

Former Secretary Tells of Rumanian Deficits

BUCHAREST (Rumania) Nov. 12. (AP)—M. Manoilescu, former Undersecretary of Finance, who is on trial for complicity in a plan for the restoration of state rights to former Crown Prince Carol, continued speaking in his own defense today. He made an impassioned five-hour address, which was pronounced even by his adversaries as a magnificent effort of oratory. He disclosed many heretofore hidden facts concerning the late King Ferdinand's attitude toward Carol, and Carol's difficulties with Premier Bratiano.

The text of a letter from King Ferdinand to the president of the council a few days before the King's death, as disclosed by M. Manoilescu, begged the president to bring Carol back to his rightful place on the throne.

While quoting this letter from memory and offering to divulge its whereabouts, Manoilescu brought tears to the eyes of many by its touching appeal, and the court proceedings momentarily were halted until composure was regained.

POPOVICI APPEALED TO

Later in the trial, appeal was made to M. Popovici, who was Finance Minister in the Stirbey Cabinet, to confirm that Ferdinand desired Carol's return and his succession insured before he died. Popovici said he had gathered from audience with King Ferdinand that the sovereign retarded renunciation and the regency as only traditional measures until Carol should mend his ways.

M. Manoilescu startled the court by declaring of his own knowledge as former Assistant Minister of Finance that there is an enormous deficit in Rumanian finances, amounting to 2,500,000,000 lei (approximately $21,000,000.) "of which nobody speaks." He charged that other great deficits exist in the public debt and that proper equilibrium can be restored only by a strong authoritative ruler.

There were gasps of surprise when Manoilescu revealed that the government had tried to win him over to its side by offering him the post of Minister at Rome or Berlin.

SEEKS WAY OF HONOR

"Thinking I was dissatisfied with the price," he went on, "the government then offered me the Ministership at London. I declined, and out of one prison I may enter another. I have chosen not the way to honors, but the way of honor."

He charged the government with being afraid to allow its members to testify before the court. The apparent sincerity and frankness of Manoilescu in his five-hour effort greatly impressed his auditors. Protesting that he had been an engineer all his life, and therefore constructive, he exclaimed, "That I am in revolt against the government is due to the tragic state of the country."

Denying that Carol's matrimonial differences were responsible for his renunciation, Manoilescu declared there was a document written in Carol's own hand to King Ferdinand, containing the real reasons for his renunciation and showing that it was the outcome of politics! intrigues. Manoilescu accused Premier Bratiano and his administration with being tactless and blundering in their efforts to induce Carol to return.

EXPLAINS USE OF CODE

Asserting his innocence of any revolutionary intention, the witness explained that the employment of a code was essential because the censor always stopped telegrams or eliminated the names of any of the opposition leaders, and he was ready to prove that the postoffice had opened his letters. Throughout, he emphasized that his deep attachment for the fatherland is the sole inspiration of all his acts, and he concluded with these words:

"Whether the court's verdict is guilty or innocent, I shall never cease to cry 'long live Rumania—long live the army!'"

With these words he sank into a chair utterly exhausted.

Several witnesses for the defense then were called, including the leaders of the Peasants' party, Maniu, Madearu, and former Minister Popovici. They declared their disbelief that either Carol or Manoilescu is capable of subversive, illegal or unconstitutional acts, and they consider it perfectly feasible that Carol might become a member of the regency.

The court adjourned until Monday, when it probably will render a verdict.

Four Arrested in Bond Theft

CHICAGO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Four Chicago business men were taken into custody by Capt. Thomas J. Callaghan of the United States Secret Service today, pending investigation of their possession of $2600 in Liberty bonds found to have been stolen from the administrator of the estate of the late W. C. Wooten of Helena, Ark. That the bonds were stolen came to light when the men attempted to pass them at a loop bank.

Those in custody are Earl Jackson, stock and bond salesman; William B Lathrop, certified public accountant, and George Carroll and George W. Kuehl, associated in an advertising business.

Gen. Summerall Coolidge Guest

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. (AP)—President and Mrs. Coolidge with ten guests boarded the Mayflower today for a trip down the Potomac.

The guests were Senator and Mrs. Swanson of Virginia; Representative and Mrs. Aldrich of Rhode Island; Representative and Mrs. Frear of Wisconsin; Maj.-Gen. and Mrs. Summerall, and Admiral and Mrs. Eberle.

OSLO (Norway) Nov. 12. (AP)—The medal of the Explorers' Club of New York has been presented to Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, Polar explorer, by Laurits S. Swenson, American Minister, in behalf of the National Geographic Society of America. The presentation was made at a banquet at the American Legation, in recognition of Nansen's Arctic achievements.

QUEEN PARADES IN WHITE PANTS

Marie and Ileana Startle But Delight Moslems in Sleepy Town

BALTCHIK (Rumania,) Nov. 12. (AP)—The Dowager Queen Marie startled and at the same time delighted Mohammedan dwellers of this sleepy little town today by appearing in the white Turkish trousers and flowing white shroud and veil which constitute the Moslem women's national costume.

Princess Ileana, who is staying with the Queen at the royal seaside castle here, made her appearance in the same garb.

The Turks who form a majority of the town's population, took it as a compliment to their race.

ANGELENO OF WEALTH ARRESTED

Man Held by Seattle for Auto Embezzlement Shows Check for $40,000

SEATTLE (Wash.) Nov. 12. (AP)—George B. O'Connor, 43 years of age, a real-estate salesman, was arrested here today on information from Los Angeles police that he is wanted there on a charge of embezzlement of an automobile.

O'Connor had in his possession a check for $40,000, which he said represented his profit from a deal in California oil leases, but the transaction is tied up by court litigation, he said, and the check cannot be converted into cash until the legal end of the deal has been settled. The check was drawn on the Security Trust and Savings Bank of Los Angeles by Edna V. Cooper.

O'Connor said the embezzlement charge arose when he became "a couple of payments behind" in the purchase of an automobile.

Bankers Report Conditions Good

AUSTIN (Tex.) Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—In a review of conditions in the Eleventh Federal Reserve District, the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas points out that the indications are that trade generally is on an upward trend throughout the area embraced in the district.

"Bank debits to individual accounts in sixteen cities show an increase of 20.6 per cent in September over August," the review says. "Department-store sales show an increase of 32.1 per cent. Reserve bank loans to member banks show a decrease of 59.9 per cent. All this indicates a marked betterment in business and financial conditions in this district."

HUSKIES

CARROLL GETS SINGLE SCORE

Washington Trims Old Rival in Epic Struggle

Huskies Stave Off Valiant California Threat

Twice Saved by Gun as Bears March Down Field

BY ED R. HUGHES

BERKELEY, Nov. 12. — A terrific battle in the mud today in Memorial Stadium resulted in Washington defeating California, 6 to 0, and the sweetest sound of the whole afternoon in the ears of Capt. Pat Wilson and the other Washington players, was the pop of the pistol that ended the game. California was marching then for a touchdown and one touchdown would have made a tie score a certainty, while a touchdown and a goal kicked would have given California victory.

CHUCK CARROLL

Irvine Philips had just made a ...ick Muller catch of a forward pass, knocking the ball down with his right hand and catching it as it fell, for a gain of 13 yards and putting the ball on Washington's 10-yard line. Clymer made 4 on the first play, leaving only 6 yards to go and three downs in which to make it, when the gun sounded to end as hectic a battle as has been staged on the Coast in years.

TALLY IN SIGHT

The rain and threatening weather cut the attendance down to about 40,000 which in these days of monster crowds is considered a poor attendance, but not one of those 40,000 in the stadium because California battled so bravely in that fourth quarter that a touchdown was in sight several times and one touchdown meant a lot just then.

Washington won the game, so the Huskies do not have to make any explanations, but around the fireplaces of the frat houses of the two big state institutions there will be plenty of arguments about what might have happened.

Chuck Carroll scored the only touchdown of the game in the second quarter. The quarter opened with Washington having the ball on the 11-yard line and Carroll made 10 yards in two plays. He was stopped on the first play after the quarter started, but on the second play he made the 1 yard necessary for a touchdown. Capt. Pat Wilson tried to kick the goal, but the ball hit one of the uprights and bounced back on the field.

Washington had made that touchdown in such impressive fashion that it seemed only a matter of time until they would make more, but as things turned out that one lone touchdown was all that Washington could make, and California fought so fiercely afterward that those 6 points kept getting smaller and smaller in the eyes of the Washington men.

BEARS ROBBED?

California partisans always will contend that the Bears were robbed of a touchdown in the third quarter when Stanley Barr broke through the Washington defense and ran 70 yards across the goal line.

While the California rooters were slapping each other on the backs, the officials calmly called the play back and penalized California 5 yards for being offside. So instead of getting a 70-yard run and a touchdown that would have tied the score and possibly won the game, California actually lost 5 yards on the play.

Washington was stopped on the 1-foot line in the first period. Great defense on the part of California, to be sure, but what about the feelings of the Washington men?

To match that, California lost the ball on the 1-yard line just at the end of the second quarter, after having made a march of 39 yards.

Washington lost a touchdown in the third quarter when Tesreau threw a ball right into the arms of ..., who was back of the last ... mark and no California man near him, but Douglas dropped the ball. That pass was missed after Washington had marched 55 yards.

How the Golden Bears fought in that last quarter! In order to get started at all Barr had to intercept a pass from Tesreau to give California the ball on the fifteen-yard line and after a futile attempt to pierce the strong Washington line Barr had to kick and pretty soon California had the ball on the 26-yard line.

The brilliant Marcus nearly got away, but he was grabbed by the belt and hauled down, but not until he had made ten yards and a first down. Soon after that Barr passed to Phillips for a gain of 26 yards and the California stands were in an uproar. But in plugging for the next ... yards Marcus was given the ball

FLEMING STARS DEFEAT CALTECH

BY EDWARD LAWRENCE

Chasing the elusive Joe Fleming over the Rose Bowl greensward broke the heart of a battling Caltech eleven yesterday afternoon and for the first time in Southern California Conference football history the Bruins defeated the Engineers. Two touchdowns, both coming as the results of lengthy gallops by the hip-wiggling Josephus, brought Caltech's downfall by a 13-to-0 score.

JOE FLEMING.

Coach Bill Spaulding can now take an undefeated team into the Pacific Coast Conference next year and perhaps a championship team depending on the outcome of the Occidental-Pomona game Saturday.

Coach Layton "Fox" Stanton, who stopped the Bruins for seven years in a row, did his darndest and but for Fleming might have scored another upset. Stanton's lateral passes, featuring "Two-

TROJANS SPANK COLORADO TEAM

S.C. Cops Intersectional Tilt by 46-7 Score

Jeff Cravath Leads Herd to Lop-Sided Victory

Long Pass Saves Visitors from Being Shut Out

BY PAUL LOWRY

The football boys from the University of Colorado showed the Trojans nothing new except some glided helmets, and U.S.C., had no trouble in winning the intersectional combat at the Coliseum yesterday by a score of 46 to 7.

JEFF CRAVATH

In the absence of all the other coaches, who were either at Berkeley watching the Washington - California struggle or in the East peeking at Notre Dame, Jeff Cravath, last year's captain, ran the U.S.C. team.

Jeff stuck in the second team at the start of the game, let them stay in until they made two touchdowns and then gave the regulars a workout. After they had amassed three touchdowns and proved they were at least as good as the second team the varsity boys were sent to the showers, and from that point on it was a parade of substitutes onto the field. All in all Cravath used thirty-five men, some of whom never have appeared in a Trojan line-up before.

The Colorado boys fought to

SANTA CLARANS PROVIDE UPSET

While Pop's Away Stanford Eleven Fails to Play

Broncos Bump Cardinals by Score of 13 to 6

Regulars Rushed to Rescue and Take a Licking

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 12. A little bunch of green-jerseyed boys slipped up today from the University of Santa Clara and invaded the Stanford stadium while Head Coach Glenn S. Warner was looking out for the interests of his big red football machine by scouting the University of California in its game against the University of Washington. And while "Pop" wasn't looking the aforesaid Santa Clarans threw a lot of monkey wrenches into the before-mentioned machine and utterly discombobulated it. In terms of a football score, it was ruined to the extent of 13 to 6.

ADAM WALSH

SPILLS BEANS

There have been a lot of football beans spilled this season, but the Santa Clarans kicked over one of the biggest pots of them when they started out by outplaying the Stanford second-string players and then just to make a perfect day of it for the Broncos, proceeded to make the regulars look more impotent than their substitutes.

Assistant Coach "Tiny" Thornhill, who was in charge during the absence of "Pop," probably figured that when his subs had run up a comfortable margin of score during the first half of the game, he would then let his regulars have a little fun and, incidentally, get their plays running smoothly.

With the end of the first half he experienced the rather uncomfortable sensation of finding the score only 6 to 6. Hence when the second half started he put in his entire team of aces with the exception of Capt. Hal McCreery, who was away with "Pop." What Santa Clara did to them was more than a plenty.

There were some Stanford rooters who said that it was the reaction from the important game played the week before against the University of Washington. Maybe it was, but that's taking away a lot of credit from the Broncos. To anyone who knew nothing about either team, it is safe to say they would have opined that the smarter, faster team won on its merits.

Santa Clara didn't waste any time showing just how it felt. During this entire first period it never allowed Stanford to get past midfield. In fact, when Warner's men chanced to get as far as 40 yards away from their goal, it began to look as if they were doing pretty well.

SIMONI PUNTS 'EM FAR

Simoni kept the Cards at bay throughout the game with his punting. Two of the kicks carried for 70 yards each and another one was placed so accurately that it went out of bounds on the Cardinals' 3-yard line. His kicking was the best seen in the Stanford stadium this year.

Santa Clara scored with a rush after an exchange of punts in the first period when Cummings ripped through left tackle for 30 yards and in the next play, on a pass from McCormick, went 27 yards for the score. The Cardinals showed their only drive of the game in the next few minutes, working the ball to the goal line with passes and Fleishhacker going through center 5 yards from the touchdown which tied the score. After this Stanford was through so far as an offensive drive was concerned.

Although the Stanford regulars came on the scene in the second half, the Broncos continued to outplay the Cards. The winning touchdown was made in the fourth quarter when Falk lobbed a pass over the goal line to McCormick.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—An alert Army team stopped Notre Dame in its tracks today to win an exciting, but none-too well-played football game, 18 to 0. The fighting team from South Bend never quit fighting, but it never had a chance. The Army was in command of the situation throughout.

REGIS COLLEGE GRIDS DEFEAT LOYOLA TEAM

BY FRANK ROCHE

Jim "Doug" Douglas, a hardy mountainer, wearing Regis College football breeches, with the aid of ten other Rangers from Denver crushed the Loyola Lions yesterday by a 20-to-18 score in what was perhaps the most spectacular football contest ever staged at the Lion institution. The Rangers with Douglas a mighty Man Mountain, leading the way came from behind in the last quarter to score two touchdowns that gave them victory which left the 5000 spectators almost stunned. Going into the last period the Lions led the Rangers by an 18-to-6 score. Douglas ripped through the Loyola team in the last session for the two winning touchdowns, displaying almost super-human strength while accomplishing the feat.

BILL HESS

RANGE RRUNS AMUCK

The giant Ranger was almost unstopable. He made a touchdown from the 50-yard line, running part of the distance with three Loyola Lions hanging on his back. The Lions fought back madly after Douglas had made his first run in the last quarter but Douglas was not to be stopped yesterday. After Hoeffer had punted the ball to the Ranger 35-yard line Douglas came through the Lions with the ball, shedding Loyola players right and left. He plunged down the field for the winning touchdown of the afternoon. "Ole" Reardon, Ranger fullback, converted the last two touchdowns for Regis giving them a victory by two points.

Up until the last period the Rangers were outplayed by the fast-stepping Lions. "Gentleman" Jim Tunney, "Beno" Currin and Al Hoeffer completed forward passes that had the Rangers dizzy. The Lions scored a touchdown in each of the first three periods. The Rangers seemed to be unable to stop the Lion passes although they held them on straight football.

DOUGLAS ALWAYS DANGEROUS

The Rangers with Douglas in the game were always dangerous but they made several bad fumbles in the first quarter that took away any advantage Douglas might have given them with his line plunging. The game

CALDWELL-LESS YALE TEAM BATTERS DOWN PRINCETON IN FINAL MINUTES, 14 TO 6

BY ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) Nov. 12. (AP)—Yale snatched victory from Princeton today, 14 to 6, with a sensational last-period rally that turned the tide with dramatic swiftness just when it seemed that the big Blue football machine was stalled and powerless to score without the aid of its ineligible cog, Bruce Caldwell.

With as thrilling a finish as these ancient rivals have ever put on, the Elis came from behind with a sudden display of aerial fireworks, scoring both their touchdowns with not much more than five minutes to go and with Princeton seemingly putting up a stone-wall barrier to keep the 6-point margin gained in the second quarter when Eddie Wittmer dashed over for a touchdown.

LONG PASS TURNS TIDE

With an electrical suddenness that sent most of the vast crowd of 76,000 in the Yale Bowl into a delirious frenzy, Johnny Hoben, standing on Princeton's 47-yard line, hurled a long pass to Dwight Fishwick, giant end, who raced 25 yards for the first Blue touchdown. Duncan Cox, big fullback, booted the goal that put Yale into the lead and clinched the game, but the Elis, now rampant, rushed over another touchdown as Charles Worth recovered a fumble on the Tiger 20-yard mark and Bill Hammersley, in Caldwell's post, reeled off the remaining distance to the goal line in a series of short thrusts.

For more than three-quarters of the game, however, it appeared that the absence of Caldwell and the scoring punch he had exhibited in most of the previous Eli games would cost Yale a keenly desired triumph over her ancient foe. In civilian clothes, tense and immovable, Caldwell himself sat on the Blue bench as he saw his team-mates batter and lunge at the great Tiger line without scoring.

On two occasions, in the second period after Wittmer had plunged across the Eli goal as the climax of a 75-yard Tiger march, Caldwell watched his understudy, Johnny Garvey, fail to penetrate the Orange and Black wall with only 3 yards to go. On the first drive, with Yale making a first down on the Tiger 3-yard stripe, Garvey hurled himself four straight times at the Princeton line,

HARVARD PLAYS SMART GAME TO DEFEAT BROWN, 18 TO 6

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) Nov. 12. (AP)—A smart Harvard football team that used its weight and brains with telling advantage forestalled Brown's latest attempt at a comeback and sent the somewhat corroded remnants of the 1926 iron men down in their sixth successive defeat by a score of 18 to 6, here today.

The Bruins fought savagely, played excellently as a team and always appeared dangerous, but as their repeated advances reached midfield or overlapped into Crimson territory the fire died and an avalanche of Harvard forwards, reinforced by secondaries, halted the running game and the Bruins were forced to kick away their chance.

two-to-fo" Cravitz and Elmer Muff, gave the Bruins a scare or two. Muff, a 145-pound demon, ran circles around the Bruins on a couple of occasions, but lacked support.

The Bruins got a break right at the start of the game when Shields fumbled and Beck, ever alert, pounced on the ball on Caltech's 40-yard line. An off-side penalty put the ball on Caltech's 45-yard line. Earl Fields, the plunging Bruin fullback who sparkled only less brightly than Fleming, made a first down on Caltech's 29-yard line in three plays. Fleming galloped 9 yards over right tackle and Fields made another first down going over center. Bert LaBucherie clicked off 5 yards on a reverse, placing the oval on the Engineer's 13-yard line. At that point the Engineers stiffened and the Bruin attack flickered out when Birlenbach passed over the goal line.

FLEMING GALLOPS

Romping off tackle and through center Muff and Shields brought the Engineer fans to their feet with a devastating drive which carried the ball to U.C.L.A.'s 45-yard line before the Bruins recovered.

The Engineers were forced to kick when Cravitz muffed a lat-the best of their ability, but they were badly outclassed and furnished the Trojans less competition probably than would the stronger teams of the Southern Conference like U.C.L.A. and Pomona.

Henaghan saved the Colorado team from a shutout when he completed a forward pass from Beresford and dashed over the goal line for a touchdown in the closing minutes of the game. It was a 48-yard gain, half pass and half run. Beresford kicked the goal.

Aside from this score and a previous forward passing splurge in the final period which nettec 55 yards and three first downs the Silver and Gold offense amounted to little. The Trojans rolled up twenty-four first downs to six for Colorado, and the visitors got one of these in tne second period, two in the third and three in the fourth.

TROJANS SCORE

The Trojans scored a couple of touchdowns in every period except the second, the regulars collecting only one tally and missing another by a whisker when an alert Coloradoan intercepted a forward pass on the visitors' 10-yard line in this quarter.

The Silver and Gray boys made most of their yardage through the air, completing twelve tosses out of twenty-four for a total of 117 yards, while the Trojans gained 83 yards as a result of four successful passes out of twelve attempted.

Capt. Drury as usual was U. S.C.'s biggest ground-gaining star and he scored three touchdowns while he was in the game, one resulting from a brilliant 41-yard run through his own right guard. With an interferer cutting down the only man of the secondary defense who had a chance to get him Drury crossed the goal line without a tackler getting a hand on him.

However, it remained for little Rocky Kemp, fourth-string quarterback, to register the longest run of the game. He sneaked over Colorado's left tackle in the last period and skipped through the secondary defense for a 52-yard run and a touchdown. The pee-wee signal caller shot out of the line like a flash and nobody touched him as he cut back and in between the boys backing up the Colorado forward wall.

LONG DASHES

There were several other fair to middling runs, such as dashes of 15 and 30 yards by Don Moses, a 28-yard runback of an intercepted pass by Lloyd Thomas, some foxy runs from fake punt formation by the giant Hibbs, which proved that he can travel with the ball when he wants to, a 40-yard pass from Elliott to Steponovitch for a touchdown, etc., etc.

The Trojans wasted no time in getting their first touchdown, moving rapidly down the field from their own 32-yard line on runs by Elliott and Moses, which culminated in Elliott going over from the 3-yard line. Elliott missed the goal.

Two plays after the ensuing kick - off the Trojan secondstringers secured another score, Elliott passing to Steponovitch from midfield. Elliott kicked goal this time and the score was 13 to 0.

The U.S.C. regulars entered the game shortly after the second period opened, but their coming only imbued the Colorado boys with a new spirit of fight, and they not only stopped the regulars, but pushed them back.

It was not until toward the close of the period that Drury was able to uncork one of his devastating smashes for 17 yards and a first down on the 3-yard line. He took the ball over on the next play with about 10 yards to spare. He kicked his goal, making the score 20 to 0.

It was in the same period that Colorado got away with what appeared to be a sure touchdown as the result of a combined 55-yard pass and run. It seems that Loucks, the eligible man, stepped out of bounds before he grabbed the ball on his way down the field, and the officials brouhgt it back and gave it to U.S.C. However, it was a beautiful play, and perfectly executed. The pass was from Capt. Wittemyer, who played a bang-up game, both offensively and defensively, until forced to leave the game from injuries.

After Drury had scored two touchdowns and kicked one of the goals in the third period, Acting Coach Cravath sent all the regulars to the dressing-room and stuck in the subs.

Ryan went over from the 17-yard line soon after the fourth quarter opened, but the ball was brought back because the U.S.C. backs were in motion, and it took a 15-yard pass from Elliott to Kreiger and a 5-yard buck through the line by Moses to reclaim the touchdown. Kemp's crusade through the line for the final Trojan score has already been chronicled. He kicked the goal, and did it more neatly than any of the Trojan regulars, who have been missing the kicks from touchdown with impunity.

OBSERVATIONS

THE greatest all-around athletic hero that Southern California ever produced is back doing his stuff where the public can see and enjoy it. But he's using his athletic ability in a different way. Away back in the dim early history of athletics in these parts, when U.S.C. Pomona and Occidental were battling on more or less even terms for all the various athletic championships, there entered Occidental Academy, at that time located at Avenue 50 and Pasadena avenue, just across the tracks from the college proper, an overgrown, gangling youth who had completed his grammar school education at the age of 11, and was entering high school.

The young man in question was Fred Thomson, and his greatest claim to fame was the fact that he was the younger brother of Henry Thomson, an athlete of some note. Freddy, being considerably overgrown, was looked upon as quite a prospect, but he was about as big and about as clumsy and goodnatured as a big bear cub. Fred was so awkward that nobody paid much attention to him and as a result he just fooled around, getting in everybody's way for four years as a prep. He kicked a football all around, his specialty being drop-kicking with his bare feet; fooled with the shot, hurdles and jumps and generally laid a foundation for future greatness.

When Fred entered Occidental College he was not yet 16 years of agt, but he was a young giant, being as far ahead of boys his age physically as he was intellectually. He didn't do much as a freshman or even as a sosopsomore, but as he grew older the unruly limbs were better controlled, and he got better and better in everything that he did until as a senior, 19 years of age, and weighing 185 pounds stripped, he really "arrived," bursting into fame after his long years of apparently aimless fooling around, with such suddenness that his own best friends could hardly believe it.

He rally began to make use of his strength on the gridiron and was a general utility man playing nearly every position on the team and playing them all well. He was an excellent dropkicker, a bearcat at carrying the ball, but was generally used at end, tackle or guard because at that time Occidental had so few men of any considerable size that he was of more use there than in the backfield. With the football season over Thomson turned his attention to track and field athletics and in the spring of his senior year, he set records for all-around ability that have never been equaled and probably never will be.

In the Pomona-Occidental dual meet, which Pomona won, 76 to 46, Thomson won six first places, or 30 of his team's 46 points. He ran the high hurdles in 16 1-5 seconds, the low hurdles, around a turn, in 25 3-5 seconds, threw the sixteen-pound hammer 127 feet 11 inches, put the sixteen-pound shot 43 feet 10 inches, cleared 5 feet 7 inches for first in the high jump, high jump, and twenty-one feet and 21 feet 2 1-2 inches for first in the broad jump, and topped things off by running a 440-yard lap in the relay, the only lap on which Occidental was ahead. No athlete in history has ever duplicated that record in a single afternoon.

A couple of weeks later Thomson performed in the conference meet between U.S.C., Pomona, Occidental and Whittier. The Trojans won with 47 points to Occidental's 41 1-2. Thomson won the high hurdles in 15 3-5 seconds, the low hurdles in 24 4-5 seconds, the hammer throw with a toss of 134 feet 7 inches, and the broad jump with 21 feet one-half inch. He also tossed the shot 45 feet 1 1-2 inches, for second place and cleared 5 feet 6 inches for third in the high jump. He topped the afternoon off with a lap in better than 52 flat, in the relay and his total of 24 points in a conference meet has never been equaled.

Thomson, after graduating from college at the age of 19, went to Chicago and upset the world by winning the national all-around championship, a grueling program of ten events all run off in a single afternoon, making a total of 7009 points out of a possible total of 10-000. The world's record at the time was 7385, held by the great Martin Sheridan. Thomson went on to Princeton University for a three-year post-graduate course, majoring in philosophy and religion and won the all-around title again in 1911 and 1913. He is the only man who ever won the all-around championship three times, although his younger brother, Harrison, won the all-around title twice and the decathlon, which has since been substituted for it, once.

In 1913, when Thomson did not compete, Jim Thorpe, the great Indian athlete, won and broke Sheridan's record with a score of 7476 points. Thomson, in 1913, set a record of 7411.50 at Bovard Field and in June, 1913, at Princeton, set the present unbroken world's record of 7499 points. While a student at Princeton, Thomson played on the team of ineligibles which gave practice to Princeton's "Team of Destiny" of that period, and Thompson, playing fullback, was in the papers regularly as the only man who ever made that team look weak, ripping and tearing through it for long gains during the practice scrimmages.

Anyhow, after Thomson graduated, he went into the ministry and taught the wild and woolly town of Goldfield, Nev., what muscular ministry meant by generally cleaning house in more ways than one on the local bad men. The war came along and Fred joined up as chaplain of the Fortieth Division. He starred on their football team, went over to France and after the war won some fame in the interAllied games. He met and married Frances Marion, the screen's foremost scenarist and promptly dived headlong into the films with as much success as he had experienced in athletics, playing a lead for Mary Pickford on his first appearance.

Since that time Thomson has been producing his own pictures, of the athletic type, and shares with Tom Mix the distinction of being the star most in demand throughout the country, his pictures far outdrawing those of the stars who shine brilliantly in the big cities, but are a total loss elsewhere. He has produced the life of Jesse James, which is showing at the Metropolitan this week, and does some stunts that indicate that he has lost none of his athletic ability while the big crowds testify to his popularity. Freddy—welcome to our city.

on the fourth down with three yards to go and he made only two yards.

HARD DEFENSE

Washington took the ball on the 18-yard line and from then on the clock ticking in the tower was working in favor of Washington. The Huskies already had six points, and so stout was the California defense that the Huskies were very well pleased to hang to their advantage.

Tesreau had to punt and then Marcus ripped off a run of thirty-eight yards. He was almost in the clear but Johnny Geehan grabbed him by the heels with one hand and dragged him down.

Marcus's run put the ball on the 16-yard line, but the Bears lacked the power to make ten yards in four tries, so the ball passed to Washington on the fourth down with nine yards to go. Breckenridge tried a forward pass which was intercepted by Carroll, and the Huskies were saved temporarily.

Washington could not gain. Tesreau had to kick and once more the infuriated Bears started for the goal line. Breckenridge carried the punt back to the 25-yard line and on the third down Clymer threw a pass which Philips knocked down with one hand and then caught on the rebound for a gain of thirteen yards.

The Bears looked to be on their way, for the goal was only ten yards away and Clymer made four yards on the first play. Then the pistol popped ending the game.

PENN'S SECOND TEAM TRIMS COLUMBIA EASILY, 27 TO 0

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12. (AP)—Pennsylvania staged a second comeback in as many weeks today to beat Columbia, 27 to 0.

The Lions were outplayed and Coach Lou Young thought so little of his opposition that he sent a full sub team into the game toward the end of the second and last quarters. Penn scored two touchdowns in each of these periods.

Incidentally, the 50,000 persons who were in the stands at Franklin Field today saw the Quakers give Columbia the worst drubbing since the first game of the series in 1900.

PLAY-BY-PLAY STORY OF CALIFORNIA-WASHINGTON TILT

Washington won the toss and chose to kick from the north goal. Coltrin received Tesreau's kick-off on his 37-yard line and came back to his 47-yard line. On the first play Washington was penalized 5 yards.

The same penalty was inflicted on the northerners on the next play. Both sides were offside on the next play and the ball was called back. Newman tried the left side of the line, but was held. Lom cut through left tackle for 6 yards to stop just past Washington's 40-yard line.

California was penalized 15 yards for holding and the ball went back to the Bears' 49-yard. Douglas shot around end to throw Lom for a 15-yard loss as the California back attempted to throw a pass. It put the ball on the 36-yard line. Lom punted 29 yards to Tesreau.

TESREAU RUNS 21 YARDS

The Washington fullback signaled for a fair catch on his 36-yard line. Tesreau cut through right tackle for 4 yards and then went around left end for 21 yards. He was thrown on California's 39-yard line.

On the next play Tesreau gained 2 yards through right guard. Carroll added 3 yards more around the other side of the line and piled up 3 yards more through tackle. Tesreau passed to Wilson for 8 yards and a first down. It put the ball on California's 23-yard line.

Geehan made a yard through the line. Tesreau fumbled, but recovered on the next play. He was held for no gain. Newman intercepted Tesreau's pass on the next play and California took the ball on its 13-yard line. Lom punted immediately, Tesreau catching the oval and being downed on California's 33-yard line.

Tesreau bolted through center for 16 yards to California's 17-yard line. Washington took time out. Both squads dug a few pounds of mud out of their shoes, head and uniforms during the rest.

Carroll bored through right tackle for 8 yards and the ball was on California's 4-yard line. California was penalized 5 yards for offside. Carroll bumped tackle for 2 yards and Tesreau faked a reverse to stop on California's 2-yard line.

WASHINGTON HELD

Carroll was stopped at the line of scrimmage. Tesreau gained a little more than 2 yards and California rooters went wild as their alma mater took possession of the ball 8 inches from the goal line.

Lom punted 42 yards and Washington took the ball on the California 42-yard.

Carroll and Tesreau hit guard for 10 yards to California's 32-yard line for a first down.

Carroll and Tesreau gained 10 yards through the line to stop on California's 23-yard line for another first down.

Tesreau made 3 yards on a fake reverse through center. Carroll added 4 yards through right guard and the ball was on California's 11-yard line. Carroll hit the line for 4 yards as the period ended. Score: Washington, 6; California, 0.

SECOND QUARTER

Carroll hit center for 7 yards to stop on the 4-yard line. He tried again and made 3 yards. Carroll went over on the next play for a touchdown. Wilson's try for point failed when the ball hit the goal post and bounded back.

COLTRIN RUNS BACK

Coltrin caught Tesreau's kick-off. The California captain shook off a half dozen tacklers as he drove back to his own 48-yard line, a run back of 24 yards.

Washington was penalized 5 yards. Dougery hit left tackle for 3 yards to stop on Washington's 41-yard line. The Bear fullback went another yard and a half on center bucks. Lom punted 32 yards and the ball was grounded on Washington's 16-yard line. Tesreau kicked and Newman, receiving it, came back 5 yards to Washington's 36-yard line.

Lom tried left end, but lost 2 yards. The Huskies swarmed through again and sot R. Dougery, who had picked up Newman's fumble, back 3 yards more. It put the ball on Washington's 41-yard line.

Lom tried to pass, but threw the slippery ball away and then California kicked. The ball was grounded on Washington's 9-yard line after a 32-yard punt by Lom.

HUSKIES PICK UP FUMBLE

Tesreau kicked from behind his goal line. Newman fumbled Tesreau's 42-yard punt and Douglas, and, recovered for Washington, on California's 47-yard line. Tesreau drove through left guard for 7 yards and made first down on the next play, the ball going 3 yards to California's 33-yard line. Carroll made 2 yards through center and Washington took time out.

Every player was caked with mud, even the officials had their share. Carroll made 3 yards through center and the Huskies were then penalized 5 yards. Tesreau's pass to Wilson was incomplete, the ball slipping through the latter's hands as he leaped high in the air to snag it.

Lom intercepted Tesreau's next pass and California opened up on its own 28-yard line. The Bears were penalized 5 yards for offside and Lom dropped back to kick. He faked it, however, and went around left end for 7 yards, to stop on his own 30-yard line. Lom fumbled and recovered, but lost 5 yards. With the ball on his own 25-yard line Lom punted 39 yards, Washington taking it on its own 36-yard line.

Tesreau pierced center for a yard and kicked on the next play. It was a low boot, barely over the players' heads, but the ball traveled 50 yards.

Lom gained a yard through left guard to stop on his 15-yard line. Dougery made 2 yards through left guard. Clymer came in to replace Lom at left half for California. He punted at once.

It was a 35-yard kick and put the ball on Washington's 49-yard line. Eisan replaced Evans at quarterback for the Bears; Marcus went in for Newman and Schmidt went in at fullback for California.

PUNT IS BLOCKED

Sahli took Schuh's place on the Washington line. Tesreau fumbled and Geehan recovered on Washington's 49-yard line. Riegels broke through to block Tesreau's kick and California rooters broke into a cheer as the Bears started a drive from the Washington 49-yard line.

Schmidt was thrown for a yard loss. Frank Gill replaced Clymer at left half for California. Fitz replaced Ned Green in the California line. California was penalized 5 yards for offside.

Schmidt went out in favor of Barr, California fullback. Marcus went around left end for 8 yards. Barr punted 35 yards and Washington took the ball on its 5-yard line.

Harry Gill replaced Schwartz for California. Tesreau kicked from behind his goal line again. It was a weak 16-yard kick and Marcus was downed on the Washington 21-yard line.

HALF STOPS BEAR THRUST

Huhta replaced Shaw at left guard for Washington. Barr went off right tackle for 7 yards and made 4 more and a first down on the next play. He added 2 more to stop on Washington's 7-yard line. Marcus squirmed through for 5 yards more to stop 2 yards from the goal. Barr was stopped 3 inches from the line as the half ended. Score: Washington, 6; California, 0.

THIRD QUARTER

Both teams came out in the third period in new, dry outfits. Barr took Tesreau's kick on his 8-yard line and ran it back to the 33-yard line. He added two more to stop on the 35-yard line, but Marcus lost 3 yards on an attempted left-end run.

Barr punted 37 yards to Washington's 30-yard line.

Tesreau hit left tackle for 3 yards. Carroll was held for no gain on a pass from Geehan. Tesreau kicked 34 yards and California put the ball in play on its own 35-yard line. The Huskies were penalized 5 yards for offside. Barr lost 2 yards, carrying the ball out of bounds. It put the oval on California's 30-yard line.

Washington was penalized 5 yards. Barr went through the line for a yard; the Bears were penalized 5 yards for offside. Barr punted 32 yards. The ball rolled to Washington's 31-yard mark.

Carroll went through center for 3 yards, pushing two Bear tacklers ahead. Tesreau found a 5-yard hole in the line and Geehan added two more for a first down. It put the ball on Washington's 42-yard line. Carroll chalked up another yard on a tackle and two more on the next try, the ball on the 45-yard line. Tesreau passed to Douglas for an 8-yard gain and first down.

TESREAU SMEARED

Tesreau was smeared for a 3-yard loss, but added 6 yards on the next play, a fake reverse through center. Carroll plunged through left guard for 7 yards, to stop on California's 37-yard line. The Husky halfback went through center for 3 more yards and reeled off 9 more on another drive through the line.

He made another yard for a first down, to put the ball on California's 24-yard mark. Tesreau delayed too long on his delayed buck and was held for no gain. Wilson slid around left end for 4 yards and Carroll added 3 yards more through center. Tesreau's long pass to Douglas slipped from the latter's arms over California's goal line and the Bears took possession of the ball on their 20-yard mark.

LONG RUN CALLED BACK

Marcus wiggled his way 5 yards around left end. Barr broke away from several tacklers and ran 75 yards to cross the Washington line, but the play was called back and California penalized 5 yards for offside.

Jubilant supporters of a moment before groaned inwardly and outwardly at the loss of a touchdown. Marcus was thrown for a 5-yard loss and Barr punted from his 15-yard line. Geehan signaled for a fair catch and Washington put the ball in play on its 48-yard line.

Tesreau threw a pass and Phillips intercepted it for California on the 34-yard line. California was penalized 15 yards for holding. Marcus lost 6 yards on a lateral pass from Eisan. He was thrown on California's 16-yard line. Barr kicked 33 yards and Washington put the ball in play on California's 47-yard line.

Tesreau plunged and slid 8 yards through right tackle. Shaw was hurt, but returned to the game. Carroll cut through right tackle for 6 yards and a first down as the period ended. It put the ball on California's 34-yard line. Score end third period: Washington, 6; California, 0.

FOURTH QUARTER

Geehan carried the ball out of bounds, but gained nothing. Carroll fought his way for 10 yards and first down on California's 23-yard line. Geehan went out of bounds on the next play, losing a yard.

Barr jumped to intercept Tesreau's pass and was downed on the 14-yard line. Marcus fumbled, but recovered, losing a yard. Eisan lost a yard and Barr booted the ball from the 12-yard line to Washington's 43-yard line. Carroll bored through center for 11 yards and first down. He added another yard and the ball was on California's 47-yard line. Tesreau was held for no gain. Tesreau kicked to Eisan, who went back 12 yards out of bounds, on California's 26-yard mark.

Marcus skirted right end for 10 yards and first down. Washington was penalized 5 yards for offside. Marcus went through left guard for 8 yards and another first down. It put the ball on Washington's 49-yard line. Marcus came around left end, but was thrown for a 7-yard loss.

Umbrellas opened up all over the stadium as the showers began.

Barr passed to Phillips for a 26-yard gain, the ball resting on Washington's 27-yard line. Barr gained 2 yards and then added 3 more on the next play through the line. The ball was on the Washington 23-yard line.

Gill made 2 yards through the line and Marcus added three more. The effort missed by inches and Washington took the ball on its own 18-yard line.

MARCUS GETS LOOSE

Tesreau kicked 39 yards to California's 43-yard line. Marcus electrified the stands with a 38-yard run. He was tackled on Washington's 18-yard line. Marcus was held for no gain and Barr's pass fell incomplete. Breckenridge went in for Eisan at the California quarterback position and Lauson took Bonamy's place at center for Washington.

Carroll intercepted Barr's pass and Geehan ran out of bounds on Washington's 15-yard line.

Tesreau punted 25 yards out of bounds, and California, with three minutes to play, started a drive from Washington's 42-yard line. Frank Gill gained a yard through the line and Marcus's pass to Breckenridge was incomplete. Marcus fumbled, but recovered and lost a yard.

Barr punted 44 yards over the goal line and Washington put the ball in play on its 20-yard line. Washington was penalized 15 yards for holding. Tesreau went back behind his goal line to kick.

BOTH TEAMS OFFSIDE

The ball went out of bounds, but was called back, as both sides were offside. Tesreau kicked again and Breckenridge returned it 13 yards to the Washington 24-yard line.

With one minute to play, Coach Price sent in a new backfield, consisting of R. Dougery, fullback; Evans at quarter and Clymer at half.

Marcus chalked up a yard through left tackle. Clymer's pass was incomplete. Another pass, Clymer to Phillips, netted 13 yards. Clymer gained 4 yards off tackle as the game ended with the ball 6 yards from Washington's goal.

Final score: Washington, 6; California, 0.

KEYSTONE STATE IS HAVEN FOR HUNTERS

Pennsylvania, one of the most thickly populated States in the Union, and probably the greatest for its industries, is one of the best big-game hunting districts found on the North American continent. In the forest of Northeastern Pennsylvania, less than 200 miles from New York, are to be found bear, elk, deer, wildcats, an occasional mountain lion and practically all known species of the smaller game. A few wolves and many foxes also are to be found in the thousands of acres of forest land scattered over all parts of the State.

QUAKERS GET GRID CLASSIC

The Army-Navy football game will be played in 1928 at Franklin Field, in Philadelphia, Pa. Alterations will be made to increase the seating capacity of the double-decked stadium to 120,000 for the classic battle.

YOUNG RIDING MARVEL

Lee Hardy, the 18-year-old jockey, won 200 races this year. The record has been equaled only twice in modern turf history, by Guy Garner, now riding in France, and Ivan Parke.

GRIDIRON YEAR NEARING CLOSE

Middle Western and Eastern Teams in Final Tilts

Notre Dame-Trojan, Army and Navy Late Games

Many Upsets Mark Season Championship Races

BY WALTER ECKERSALL

CHICAGO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—With the exception of the Army-Navy and Notre Dame-Southern California struggles and a few games slated for Thanksgiving Day, the 1927 football season will come to a close on Saturday, when a number of important contests will be played in all sections of the country.

Despite the important changes in the rules, the season has been featured by some bitterly-fought battles and the usual number of upsets has taken place Teams which appeared like champions faded into oblivion as the season faded into oblivion as the season wore on and elevens not given much championship consideration earlier in the year are now in positions to lay claims to sectional and national honors.

DARTMOUTH IS UPSET

In the East Dartmouth, which gave every indication of being one of the undefeated elevens of the country, met with an unexpected setback by Yale. Old Eli, like former Blue elevens, rose to expected football heights when it met the Green eleven and won a 19-to-0 victory New York University, which had a clean record, was held to a scoreless tie by Colgate, which had been previously beaten by Wabash.

In the Middle West, Northwestern, which gave every indication of being a contender for honors in the Western Conference, fell before Illinois, 7 to 6. A week later Coach Zuppke's Orange and Blue eleven toppled the strong Michigan team into the defeated class by a 14-to-0 score. Previous to the playing of these games, Illinois had been held to a 12-to-12 score by Iowa State, generally known as Ames. Ohio State, which had been picked to be a strong Big Ten contender at the start of the year, lost to Northwestern and Michigan.

NEBRASKA TOPPLED OVER

In the Missouri Valley Conference, Nebraska, which has generally been a strong contender for honors, was beaten by Missouri, 7 to 6. A few weeks later Missouri invaded the southland and was beaten by Southern Methodist, 32 to 9. Then Missouri recovered sufficiently to come into the Western Conference territory and win from Northwestern, 34 to 19.

On the Coast St. Mary's won from Stanford, 16 to 0, but Coach Pop Warner reorganized his squad to such an extent it held Southern California to a 13-to-13 tie. In the meantime California defeated St. Mary's, 13 to 0. Just recently Southern California won from California, 13 to 0. There were many other interesting struggles and upsets, which only go to show the present game of football cannot be doped like the old game of the 5 yards in three downs and the mass plays.

BIG CLASHES ON TAP

Among the important contests to be played on the week-end will be the clash between Minnesota and Michigan at Ann Arbor. The Gophers have not been defeated this year and the only blemish on their record is the 14-to-14 tie with Indiana, a team which had been previously defeated by Chicago. Aside from the Indiana game, Minnesota engaged in two other conference struggles. The Gophers won from Iowa, 38 to 0, and defeated Wisconsin, 13 to 7.

Illinois, the surprise of the Big Ten season, will wind up its season with Ohio State at Columbus. Coach Zuppke has developed an excellent well- balanced eleven at Urbana and it is executing its plays with that precision so necessary to success. The players are blocking and tackling in the desired manner. They are making strenuous efforts to gain that extra yard after being tackled and in general they are a fighting aggregation which is making a splendid record.

In the other conference games Wisconsin will play Chicago on Stagg Field, Northwestern will entertain Iowa at Evanston and Purdue and Indiana will engage in their annual struggle at Bloomington.

Notre Dame, one of the strongest elevens in the country, will meet Drake at Des Moines. This will be the final game for the Rockne eleven before it clashes with Southern California in one of the great intersectional battles of the year on Soldier Field in Grant Park, Chicago, on the 26th inst. Notre Dame should win from Drake and then intensive preparations will start for the Southern California game which will attract a gathering of at least 100,000 football fans.

In the East the Yale-Harvard game at Cambridge will command all interest. Although the Crimson has been defeated this season, the team is certain to rally and make a splendid showing against its ancient and respected football rival. The Army and Navy have comparatively easy games on the schedule. The cadets will clash with Ursinus and the middies will engage Loyola. Princeton has completed its schedule, while Pennsylvania and Cornell will devote the day to practice for their annual contest at Philadelphia on Thanksgiving Day.

In the Missouri Valley Conference, Missouri will meet Kansas at Lawrence, Nebraska will clash with the Kansas Aggies at Manhattan and Oklahoma and Oklahoma Aggies will mingle at Norman.

On the Pacific Coast the important struggle will bring together Stanford and California at Palo Alto. This game will attract a huge gathering and Stanford must win to be given a share of the championship honors. Washington State will be Southern California's opponent at Los Angeles.

Most of the teams in the South will be idle because their closing and important struggles will be played on Thanksgiving Day.

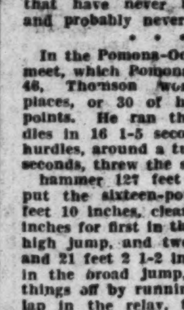
DOUGHERTY OFFERS TO CONSOLE FIGHT VICTIMS

"A friend in need is a friend indeed."

That's what Seth Strelinger, Los Angeles member of the Boxing Commission, thinks of Jim Dougherty, manager of George Godfrey, the "Black Shadow of Leiperville."



For Dougherty yesterday dispatched a wire from Philadelphia offering to send Godfrey into the ring in Los Angeles against any man of Strelinger's selection, the proceeds to be applied to a refund for the victims of the Wrigley Field fiasco.

In all probability nothing will come of the generous offer because no feasible way has yet been established of refunding anything to the fans.

In his wire to Strelinger the manager of Godfrey said he was sorry to hear of the Wrigley Field episode, and that after Godfrey opens Humbert Fugazy's new club in New York December 14 he will be available for a date out here.

Strelinger said Dougherty is the only one of the fight profession who has come forward with a pat on the back while everybody in general has been booting the members of the commission around since the Dundee-Hudkins contretemps.

Since Godfrey left the Coast he has established himself as an outstanding challenger for Gene Tunney's crown. He has knocked out Jimmy Maloney, Monte Munn and Tom Sayers in about a round apiece.

BY BRAVEN [illegible]

Santa Clara's stunning defeat [illegible] terday leaves only Washington an[illegible] sible representatives of the West [illegible] New Year's Day game at Pasadena [illegible] thumped the Cards, 13 to 6, they [illegible] of the Pacific Coast season and th[illegible] the outstanding reverse of the [illegible]

Of course, Stanford wasn't very much in the running for the honor anyway, inasmuch as the Cards lost to St. Marys', but it makes things a lot easier for Tournament of Roses officials if the field is not narrowed down too finely, as is the case at present. Stanford was coming along nicely following the St. Mary's reversal, but this Santa Clara thing can't be laughed off the books and now the Cards are out of it for fair.

DECIDE A LOT OF THINGS

All of which means that the Washington-Southern California game here December 3 will decide a lot of things. In the first place, it will definitely settle the Pacific Coast Conference championship, which rests between the Trojans and Stanford at this writing. Secondly, it will give Tournament of Roses officials the best team on the coast as a foe for whatever eastern invader they select. For if Washington beats the Trojans they'll rank higher than Stanford, despite the defeat at the hands of Warner's men. And Southern California, by thumping Washington, will be the only undefeated western team available, provided the [illegible] get over Washington State and Notre Dame. We make no mention of Idaho, because three tie games played by the Vandals let them out in a hurry.

So it will be either Washington or Southern California with the Trojans more likely to be selected than the Huskies. Coach Bagshaw, after coming down here during the early part of December, won't want to return right away for a New Year's Day [illegible]

The situation in the East became considerably more complicated yesterday as the result of Yale's victory over Princeton, the Tigers being the only undefeated and untied major-league team of that territory prior to yesterday. Now there are some [illegible] teams available, but none which have escaped untied.

ONE MORE GAME

Right now the best prospects are Pittsburgh and W. and J. These two teams are undefeated and played a scoreless tie against each other a week ago. Washington and Jefferson has rolled up 145 points as against [illegible] for their rivals. This team has one more game to play, opposing West Virginia at Morgantown on Thanksgiving Day.

Pittsburgh has a brilliant offensive record, having tallied 201 points to 20 for opponents. Yesterday the Panthers trimmed Nebraska, 21 to 13. Prior to that game Carnegie Tech was the only team to score on the Pittsburgh eleven. Penn State is the only foe left on Pittsburgh's schedule, this game being scheduled for one week from Saturday in the Smoky City.

Pittsburgh and W. and J. rank in [illegible] one. They are the preferred [illegible] because they are undefeated. Class two includes Dartmouth, [illegible] and Penn State. These have suffered one defeat. Dartmouth [illegible] the most appealing of the lot, but couldn't be coaxed away last year, and probably can't now. The big [illegible] lost, 19 to 0, to Yale, but rolled up some horrible scores on other opponents. The Army probably can't [illegible] for various reasons, while Penn [illegible] has Pittsburgh to knock over.

GEORGIA UNDEFEATED

Down south Georgia and Tennessee remain undefeated. The latter team was tied yesterday, 7 to 7, by Vanderbilt, which leaves Georgia the best of the southerners. There's a lot of [illegible] to Georgia at that, this team having defeated Yale, 14 to 10, at the start of the season. Georgia has scored 202 points to thirteen for her [illegible] Tennessee has amassed 218

[illegible] on the fourth he was tossed back [illegible] the swirling mass, only 6 inches from the last chalk mark. Soon afterward, Yale again penetrated to the 5-yard line as Garvey twisted his way forward in brilliant fashion, but again the Tiger barrier held. Garvey not only was unable to gain in two thrusts, but was thrown for a 2-yard loss on the last dash.

WHAT WOULD HAVE HAPPENED

The huge and colorful crowd cheered Garvey's heroic efforts to the echo, but in the back of their minds was the thought: "What would Yale have done with Caldwell in there?" Caldwell himself might also have found the Tiger line impenetrable, but there would have been less sting if the Elis had "Galloping Bruce" on at his customary post, leading the charge.

It was a gloomy figure that huddled on the Yale bench and a gloom-riddled Eli cheering section that, having seen the Blue warriors try and fail, was suddenly whipped into the most excited outburst when "out of a clear sky" Fishwick grabbed Hoben's pass and raced for the tying touchdown. It was fourth down and seven yards to go when this play was completed—fourth down, the Elis just set back by penalties and the ball on the Tiger 47-yard line when the big shot exploded.

Eli enthusiasts broke loose in as wild a demonstration as the big bowl has seen in years. The score was tied, but Yale needed the extra point to go ahead and there was a sudden

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 12. (Exclusive) Pitt avenged itself for an unexpected defeat back in 1921 from the Nebraska eleven, when it defeated the Cornhuskers, 21 to 13, at the Pitt stadium in a game marked by the all-around play of Gibby Welch, who scored two touchdowns. Incidentally, Pitt's victory will entitle it to recognition as one of the outstanding teams of the country as it has only a tie to mar its record.

It was a great battle between two powerful teams, but notwithstanding that fact that Pitt's line was outweighed an average of fifteen pounds it gained victory.

Gibby Welch, catching the opening kick-off, ran it 93 yards for a touchdown without a visiting player laying hands on him. But the game did not remain deadlocked long. On the initial play of the second period Whitey Hagan on a double-pass play skirted the Nebraska right end for 63 yards for a touchdown and later when Nebraska was held Pitt made its final touchdown when Hagan hurled a forward pass to Welch, who caught it on his 40-yard line and ran 60 yards for a touchdown.

Leading by 14 points at the opening of the second half the Pitt field general foolishly called for a forward pass in his own territory and it was intercepted by Howell, who ran the ball to the 33-yard mark. Nebraska made another advance which resulted in its second touchdown, but did not make good the extra point.

PANTHERS WALK OVER LAWYERS

California Christian College Team Defeats Southwestern, 51-0

Coach Ralph Welch's California Christian College Panthers ran rough-shod over the Southwestern University eleven yesterday afternoon on Moore Field to win by the score of 51 to 0. At no time in the game was the Panther goal in real danger, though twice Southwestern carried the ball by means of short line bucks and passes to within 10 yards of the goal, only to lose it each time.

The Christians were out to win by a large score and realized their goal, though Southwestern fought all the way through. Thompson, however, playing at quarterback, was perhaps star man, doing most of the passing; Butterley galloped all over the field for yardage at will, carrying the ball over the goal line four times. Daniels received a pass and raced 30 yards through a broken field for one touchdown and otherwise performed creditably at halfback. Thompson's long passes to Capt. "Swede" Nervick resulted in two touchdowns, while Butterley intercepted one and carried it 30 yards for a score. Kennedy, tackle; E. Starr, guard, and H. Smith, end, played a good game.

The Christians scored once in the first quarter, twice in the second, three times in the third and twice in the fourth. Three goals were made, two by passes, Thompson to Nervick, and the third by an end run by Thompson.

Stanford's Defeat by Santa Clara Leaves Only Trojans or Huskies for Pasadena Game

PITTSBURGH AND W. & J. BEST OF EAST'S TEAMS

Panthers, Presidents Only Major Eastern Elevens Undefeated; Georgia is Possibility

BY BRAVEN DYER

Santa Clara's stunning defeat of Stanford at Palo Alto yesterday leaves only Washington and Southern California as possible representatives of the West against the East in the annual New Year's Day game at Pasadena. When Adam Walsh's boys dumped the Cards, 13 to 6, they perpetrated the biggest upset of the Pacific Coast season and there are those who rank it as the outstanding reverse of the entire country.

Of course, Stanford wasn't very much in the running for the honor anyway, inasmuch as the Cards lost to St. Marys', but it makes things a lot easier for Tournament of Roses officials if the field is not narrowed down too finely, as is the case at present. Stanford was coming along nicely following the St. Mary's reversal, but this Santa Clara thing can't be laughed off the books and now the Cards are out of it for fair.

DECIDE A LOT OF THINGS

All of which means that the Washington-Southern California game here November 3 will decide a lot of things. In the first place, it will probably settle the Pacific Coast conference championship, which lies between the Trojans and Stanford at this writing. Secondly, it will give Tournament of Roses officials the best team on the coast as a foe for whatever eastern invader they select. For if Washington bests the Trojans they'll rank higher than Stanford, despite the defeat at the hands of Warner's men. And Southern California, by thumping Washington, will be the only undefeated western team available, provided the Trojans get over Washington State and Notre Dame. We make no mention of Idaho, because three tie games played by the Vandals let them out in a hurry.

So it will be either Washington or Southern California with the Trojans more likely to be selected than the Huskies. Coach [illegible], after coming down here during the early part of December, won't want to return right away for a New Year's Day game.

The situation in the East became considerably more complicated yesterday as the result of Yale's victory over Princeton, the Tigers being the only undefeated and untied major league team of that territory prior to Saturday. Now there are some untied teams available, but none of them have escaped untied.

ONE MORE GAME

Right now the best prospects are Pittsburgh and W. and J. These two teams are undefeated and played a scoreless tie against each other a while ago. Washington and Jefferson has piled up 145 points as against [illegible] for their rivals. This team has one more game to play, opposing West Virginia at Morgantown on Thanksgiving Day.

Pittsburgh has a brilliant offensive record, having tallied 201 points to 20 for opponents. Yesterday the Panthers trimmed Nebraska, 21 to 13. Prior to that game Carnegie Tech was the only team to score on the Pittsburgh eleven. Penn State is the only foe left on Pittsburgh's schedule, this game being scheduled for one week from Saturday in the Smoky City.

Pittsburgh and W. and J. rank in [illegible]. They are the preferred [illegible] because they are undefeated. [illegible] two includes Dartmouth, [illegible] and Penn State. These have suffered one defeat. Dartmouth [illegible] most appealing of the lot, but [illegible] be coaxed away last year, [illegible] probably can't now. The big [illegible] lost, 19 to 0, to Yale, but rolled up horrible scores on other opponents. The Army probably can't [illegible] various reasons, while Penn [illegible] Pittsburgh to knock over.

GEORGIA UNDEFEATED

[illegible] south Georgia and Tennessee [illegible] undefeated. The latter team [illegible] yesterday, 7 to 7, by Vanderbilt, which leaves Georgia the best [illegible] southerners. There's a lot of [illegible] Georgia at that, this team [illegible] defeated Yale, 14 to 10, at [illegible] of the season. Georgia has [illegible] points to thirteen for her [illegible] Tennessee has amassed 218

It is extremely doubtful if Tournament of Roses officials will invite another Southern team this time, Alabama having shown here two years in a row. In addition an all-Southern team is to play an all-Pacific Coast eleven in the Coliseum Christmas Day, which gives local fans about all the southern football they desire.

Of course, the greatest drawing card of all would be Yale vs. Southern California, Tad Jones vs. brother Howard. But Tad has written Howard that's impossible, which is just too bad, for although Yale has one defeat to mar an otherwise perfect record, the Rose Bowl wouldn't hold half the fans who would want to see that classic.

Minnesota, undefeated, but tied by Notre Dame and Indiana, is a possibility, but the Big Ten has shown no desire in the past to waive a conference rule against postseason games and there is nothing to indicate that the moguls would change their plans this year.

Les Henry, who does the picking for the Tournament of Roses, was in Berkeley yesterday, watching California and Washington. He may have something to divulge upon his return today, but the odds are against his saying anything for publication inasmuch as his hands are virtually tied until the four outstanding teams—Washington, Southern California, Pittsburgh and W. and J. have completed their respective schedules.

Turnesa Leads in Golf Event

PINEHURST (N. C.) Nov. 12. (AP)—Clipping three strokes off the record of the difficult No. 2 course in the afternoon round, Joe Turnesa of the Elmsford Club, New York, turned in a 64 to forge ahead in the second round of the mid-south open championship tournament here today with a total of 138 for thirty-six holes.

Th record-breaking round was barely sufficient to win, however, a 74 in the morning holding Turnesa down to a one-stroke advantage over Willie Burke of Port Chester, N. Y., and Leo Diegel of Fenimore, N. Y., who finished with a total of 139 each.

Eight birdies fell under the capable stroking of Turnesa on the incoming eighteen holes. He was never over par on any hole.

MULLEN OUT TO SIGN TUNNEY FOR TITLE GO

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—Jim Mullen, Chicago fight promoter, came to town today and although he failed to meet Gene Tunney, he expressed confidence that the world's heavyweight champion would box for him at Soldier Field in Chicago next June.

Mullen communicated with Billy Gibson, Tunney's manager, by telephone and afterward announced he had received assurances Tunney would fight for him. Tunney is not expected here until Tuesday, but Mullen is returning to Chicago tomorrow.

The Chicago promoter said he expected a meeting with Tunney in Chicago in about a week at which time Mullen hopes to sign Tunney for a title match.

UTAH BOWLS OVER B.Y.U. IN EASY GAME

PROVO (Utah) Nov. 12. (AP)—Displaying their characteristic fast-charging attack with massive interference for the ball carrier, the University of Utah rolled over Brigham Young University Cougars here today to win, 20 to 0.

Consistent gaining of Utah backs through gaping holes in the Y line seemed to warrant a larger score but Y showed remarkable defensive strength in critical stages. The Cougars were dangerous several times on blocked punts and recovered fumbles but could hardly gain through the Utah line.

THRILLING RALLY IN FINAL MINUTES WINS FOR OLD ELI

In the fourth he was tossed back in the swirling mass, only 6 inches from the last chalk mark. Soon after, Yale again penetrated to the [illegible] as Garvey twisted his way [illegible] in brilliant fashion, but the Tiger barrier held. Garvey [illegible] was unable to gain in two [illegible] but was thrown for a 2-yard [illegible] the last dash.

[illegible] WOULD HAVE HAPPENED

[illegible] huge and colorful crowd [illegible] Garvey's heroic efforts to the [illegible] but in the back of their minds [illegible] the thought: "What would Yale [illegible] done with Caldwell in there?" [illegible] himself might also have [illegible] the Tiger line impenetrable, [illegible] there would have been less sting [illegible] the Elis had "Galloping Bruce" [illegible] at his customary post, leading [illegible] charge.

It was a glossy figure that [illegible] on the Yale bench and a [illegible] Eli cheering section [illegible] that, having seen the Blue [illegible] try and fail, was suddenly whipped into the most ex[illegible] when "out of a [illegible] day" Fishwick grabbed Ho[illegible] pass and raced for the tying touchdown. It was fourth [illegible] and seven yards to go when [illegible] play was completed—fourth [illegible] the Elis just set back by [illegible] and the ball on the [illegible] Tiger goal line when the big [illegible] exploded.

[illegible] bedlam broke loose in as [illegible] demonstration as the big bowl [illegible] in years. The score was [illegible] but Yale needed the extra point [illegible] and there was a sudden hush as Duncan Cox carefully sighted the uprights for the decisive try for goal. Cox's toe landed true.

HAMMERSLY HAMMERS

This kick decided the game, but Yale continued on. Garvey, battered and bruised, had spent himself in Caldwell's post in the first half, but another understudy, Bill Hammersly, was ready with the final scoring punch. The opportunity came when Dud Charlesworth, alert Eli center and defensive star of the game, pounced on a fumble by Wittmer on the Tiger 20-yard mark. It took only four thrusts by Hammersly to cover this distance and give the Elis their final touchdown, to which Cox added another point with his unerring toe.

In the closing moments of the game, Princeton threatened to score as Scarlett, subbing for Wittmer, led a 57-yard advance to Yale's 23-yard line, but here four long passes were blocked and the last Tiger hope was extinguished.

was a thriller from the opening kick-off. Tunney, Lion ace, grabbed Mellinger's opening kick and ran it back 72 yards before he was downed by Vegher. The Lions worked the ball down to the 10-yard line but ould not put it over. The Rangers got the ball on the 20-yard line after Loyola had been penalized for throwing incomplete passes. "Butch" Vegher and Douglas hammered away at the Lion line for a first down. Vegher fumbled the ball on the 38-yard line and Von der Ahe of Loyola recovered it. Currin made 8 yards on the next play and then Hoeffer tossed a beautiful pass to Currin who scampered over the Ranger goal line for a touchdown. The Lions missed their attempt for the extra point when Tunney and Currin spilled a pass.

Neither team was able to put the ball across after the Loyola touchdown in the first session. The Rangers had it within a few inches of the goal line in one instance but were unable to push it over. The Loyola boys recovered a fumbled ball in the second period and things looked bad for the Rangers but they managed to squeeze out of danger by holding the fast-stepping local players. Hoeffer punted the ball to Douglas, and that husky young mountaineer ran 25 yards before he was pulled down. On the next play he crashed over left tackle throwing Loyola tacklers out of his path and ran 60 yards for a touchdown.

The Lions retaliated a few minutes later by scoring on a pass that was thrown from Lowery to Hoeffer to Tunney. They again failed to convert it when they attempted another pass. The Lions took the play away from the Rangers altogether in the third period as Coach McNamara had Douglas on the sidelines resting up. The Lions completed several lateral passes for long gains in which Tunney, Lowery and Hoeffer played the leading roles. Hoeffer made a third touchdown for the Lions by diving over with the ball from the 1-yard line.

They failed to convert again for the third straight time.

Then came the last period which left the fans almost speechless before it was over. Douglas began his mighty lunges through the Lion team. He ripped off his first touchdown with a 50-yard run. Reardon converted and Bill Hess, who had sent out his regulars, put in a hurry call for them. They trooped on the field but Douglas went right through them a few second later for another touchdown. Reardon kicked goal. The Lions went fighting mad and they began throwing passes in a desperate manner from all sections of the field. They completed several of them, but they were halted before thy could put one over for a victory. The Rangers with Big Douglas again leading the way had possession of the ball and were pounding away at the Loyola line when the game ended.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY COPS FOOTBALL TILT

KINGSTON (Ont.) Nov. 12. (AP)—Queen's University of Kingston today won the Canadian intercollegiate football championship by defeating McGill University of Montreal, 11 to 5. The two teams were deadlocked until today.

The Hamilton Tigers won the interprovincial championship, although they suffered their first defeat of the season today, losing to Toronto Argonauts, 13 to 3.

Queens and Hamilton will meet next Saturday in the first play-off game, and the following Saturday the winners of that game meet Balmy Beach of Toronto for the Canadian title.

PRO SCULLING TITLE AT STAKE NEXT MONTH

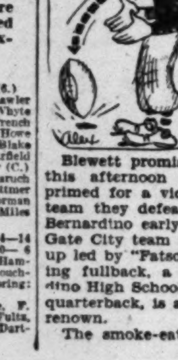
VANCOUVER (B. C.) Nov. 12. (AP)—Maj. Charles Goodsell, the titleholder, and Bert Barry of England, have signed for a return match here December 26 for the world's professional sculling championship. Goodsell defeated Barry here Labor Day.

FRENCH TENNIS ACES DEFEAT ARGENTINES

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 12. (AP)—The French tennis stars Borotra and Brugnon today defeated Boyd and Casinos of Argentina, in a doubles match. The score was 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

SMOKE-EATERS TO GO AGAINST SAN BERNARDINO GRIDS TODAY

Out to make it two wins this season over the San Bernardino Santa Fe Apprentices, the Los Angeles Fire Department football team will meet the Gate City aggregation at Wrigley Park at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon. The game will mark the second appearance of the smoke-eaters at the baseball stadium, Bill Blewett's gridders having dropped a 19-to-6 game to the Prep All-Stars last Sunday.



Blewett promises a different result this afternoon and has his men primed for a victory over the same team they defeated 19 to 13 at San Bernardino early in the season. The Gate City team boasts a strong line-up led by "Fatso" Levering, hammering fullback, a former San Bernardino High School star. "Dinty" Moore, quarterback, is also a player of some renown.

The smoke-eaters will present a somewhat changed line-up with Bill Barclay at fullback in place of Les Grimes, who is out with an injury. Royce Wheeler is back at end with Fisher and Zumwalt at tackles. Morse will start at center in place of Lawrence Casey, regular snapperback.

The firemen are playing every Sunday throughout November at Wrigley Park in preparation for their game at the Coliseum December 10 against the police eleven. Vic Kelley is coaching the cops this year and has a fast and heavy team and one that promises to take the measure of the smoke-eaters following the comparatively easy 20-0 victory scored by the latter last year.

Already over 15,000 tickets for the game have been sold and its success has been assured. Over 30,000 witnessed the Coliseum clash in 1926 and 45,000 are expected for this December meeting.

Today's game will start at 2:15 o'clock.

MONTANA TIES WITH GONZAGA

Grizzly Players Hold Bulldogs to 0-0 Draw in Fast Game

SPOKANE, Nov. 12. (AP)—The University of Montana Grizzly stood on his hind legs this afternoon and with teeth and claws fought off the Gonzaga Bulldog, which for four periods tried unsuccessfully to get its fangs in the Grizzly throat. The game ended, 0 to 0.

Time after time the Grizzly had his back to the wall and on one occasion in the first period he repelled the bulldog attack a foot from the Montana goal line. Both teams resorted to kicking when line plays failed to gain needed yardage. Gonzaga outrushed the visitors, gaining 198 yards from scrimmage to 93 for Montana. The Bulldogs made six first downs to two for Montana. The line-up and summary:

SORREL-TOPS have figured strongly in the history of the world from the time of Julius Caesar down to George Bernard Shaw, the pink-whiskered bard who once penned a most amusing play about the aforementioned Roman redhead's girl friend, Cleopatra. So, too, have flaming-thatched athletes left a crimson trail across the pages of athletic history, and it is about some of these "Scarlet Stars in Sports" that I write—using red ink, of course.

Red is the badge of courage and redheaded athletes seem to have more fighting spirit, more aggressiveness and more of the "will to win" than their blond or brunette brethren.

In boxing the most famous examples of sorrel-tops are Bob Fitzsimmons, known as "Ruby Robert;" Frank Moran, who once fought a twenty-round bout with Jack Johnson, if memory doesn't fail, and Bobby Barrett.

Baseball boasts of many flaming-thatched wonders. "Red" Faber, famous old spit-ball pitcher of the Chicago White Sox; Larry Benton, who did such noble work for the Giants last summer; Hughey Jennings, "Red" Ames, "Red" Murray, Fred Lucas, "Red" Wingo, "Red" Smith, "Red" Ormsby, the umpire, and you might even say that those two great right-handers, Grover Alexander and Dazzy Vance, are redheaded.

Now for football! "Red" Grange—you've probably heard of him—also "Brick" Muller, that wonderful end, who can throw a football as you or I would throw a baseball, and who likewise excelled in track-and-field athletics. And remember "Red" Barron, that much-feared ball-carrier from Georgia Tech, and "Red" Roberts, the giant end from Centre College in 1921 and 1922? Last year "Red" Barnes was captain of the Alabama team—in fact, the Crimson Tide boasted of three sorrel-topped backfield stars—and the Notre Dame team was led by two redheaded captains, "Red" Hearden and "Red" Edwards.

MOGULS SHUN TY COBB; PURSE STRING TIGHTENED

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

CHICAGO (Ill.) Nov. 11.—Mr. Tyrus Cobb, who has been called the Georgia Peach and a lot of other things, is out of a job. As Mr. Cobb is the owner of something close to $1,000,000 his loss of employment is of no significance to him. The significant feature is that Cobb is not employed just at this time because the American League, in which he spent his baseball career, is not exactly flush with ready money. Of course, the age of Mr. Cobb also has worked to his disadvantage, but if the junior major league hadn't suffered a poor season this year, it is a downright certainty that at least one of the eight owners would be willing to take a chance on the fading star's drawing powers at the turnstiles.

Last season, his first in any uniform except that of a Detroit Tiger, Cobb was paid something like $60,000 in salary, bonus for signing and bonus for a few other things. If his reputation meant anything, he may have been worth at least two-thirds of the amount, but as he was hired on the hunch that he might elevate the Athletics to the role of pennant winners, he turned out to be a poor investment. Therefore, when his case came up recently before Manager Connie Mack, the latter didn't hesitate about giving the veteran an unconditional release in lieu of another fat contract.

ATTENDANCE FALLS OFF

When Mack parted with Cobb's services he naturally was thinking of how the club had drawn patrons in 1927. The start of the season was fine. The fans had been fed up on a lot of "hooie" about the Athletics being sure-fire pennant winners so business was brisk but it wasn't long before the Yankees began to show the rest of the league a clean pair of heels. This was discouraging to the Quaker City fans who had been kidded into thinking they'd see a world's series, so they promptly quit baseball or went to watch the Phillies.

It wasn't long before Mack was convinced that he had been far too generous, also overanxious, when he entered the struggle to land Cobb after the latter, along with Speaker, had been whitewashed of the scandal charges that disturbed the atmosphere last winter. The fans would not go out just because Cobb was sitting on the bench or hobbling around the outfield on one and one-half legs. They wanted victories, not reputations.

Mack's luck of last season was not a league exception. Boston and St. Louis were actually heavy losers. The Detroit attendance fell off. Chicago, usually one of the league's strongholds, slipped after a brilliant start, and Cleveland and Washington did not come up to expectations. Much of this decline was due to the fashion in which the Yankees ran away from the rest of the league. In one or two of the cities, other factions also entered into the decline. The loss of interest in the White Sox, for instance, was due principally to the fact that the Cubs hogged the spotlight most of the summer.

EYES NATIONAL LEAGUE

Cobb's only remaining chance to continue in the game that he seems to think well of is the National League, where for a year at least he might be a drawing card. Only about two clubs in the parent major could afford to hire him, unless he lowers his idea of appropriate pay for a man of his experience. One is Chicago, the other New York, but the former is hardly likely to enter into any spirited bidding for his services, and there is no reason to think the Giants are going to throw away any money unless Cobb is fairly certain to give value received.

There is an angle about hiring such men as Cobb that any manager or owner should take into consideration. Giving Cobb around $60,000 a season probably didn't help the morale of any of the other players on Mack's roster. One man known to be dissatisfied was Al Simmons, who had been offered about $7500 just after the club had announced the acquisition of Cobb at a big price. The signing of Speaker by Washington at an equally ridiculous figure had the same effect on some of the Senators. Certain of the players were in open rebellion over the vast differences in salaries, and it is just about a certainty that President Clark Griffith, having learned his lesson, will make no effort to retain Speaker for next year.

Georgetown's Eleven Again Collects, 47-0

BOSTON, Nov. 12. (AP)—Georgetown University's eleven went in full blast against Boston College today and rolled up a 47-to-0 score, bringing its total for the season to 339 points. Led by Nork and McLean, the Georgetown team outplayed Boston College throughout.

SOCCER

Resuming the pursuit in quest of the soccer championship of the Southern California loop, fourteen teams will swing into action today on the various circuit grounds. Games are as follows:

First division—Rangers vs. L. B. United; Excelsiors vs. Pasadena; Santa Monica vs. Spanish Americans; Caledonians vs. Victorias.

Second division—Rovers vs. Germania; L.A.A.C. Reserves vs. San Pedro; Italians vs. Magyar Reserves.

Five of the above games are to be played in the city, of which the Ranger-United game at the Los Angeles High School will be the classic of the day. The United, undefeated to date, faces a new and aggressive Ranger squad, whose determination to regain laurels held last season certifies the fans of a highly competitive match. The Excelsiors tangle with the Bulldogs from Pasadena at the Arroyo Seco playground, past performances favor the visitors to take the points in this match.

The Los Angeles Athletic Club Reserves, leaders of Division Two, receive a visit from the San Pedro Scandia at the Ross Snyder field. The Scandia report an improved team, in which case the pace-makers may suffer a reverse. At Yosemite playground, the Rovers and Turnverein Germania mix. The former eleven appear to have an edge on their opponents but will be forced to the utmost for the points. A third second-division match, featuring the Italians and Magyar Reserves is to be played at Hazard playground. All games start at 2:30 p.m.

The following teams will represent the Vikings and Hollywood in the feature game at Loyola today, kick-off at 3 p.m.:

Vikings		Hollywood
Wathne	Goal	V. Copeland
Mortensen	R.B.	Thompson
Blick	L.B.	Hawkins
Hedblom	R.H.	Holmes
Hopen	C.H.	E. Copeland
Hansen	L.H.	Stewart
Fredericksen	R.O.	Whittingham
Winckel	R.I.	Downie
Brix	C.F.	Parkinson
Cleve	L.I.	Robertson
Cull	L.O.	Ramsey

With Mortensen, Cleve and Fredericksen back in the game there is every possibility that the Vikes will be able to hold the "all-star" Hollywood eleven. Wathne, in goal, can be counted on to keep the Shieks' score at zero, leaving it only necessary for Brix and company to pierce the Hollywood defense.

The 1 o'clock game between the Richfield Oilers and the Sons of St. George is likely to produce a hard-fought battle. The Sons, following last week's disaster against the L.A.A.C., are having to rearrange their forward line at the expense of their halfback division. They have, however, the return of Jack Marsden to help their attack.

At the meeting of the Los Angeles League held last Thursday evening, at the Los Angeles Athletic Club, it was learned that the following teams have entered the all-California cup competition:

Los Angeles Athletic Club.
Sons of St. George.
Scots.
Magyars.
Vikings.
Richfield Oil.
Hollywood.

Elimination games will be played in Sacramento, Oakland, Los Angeles and San Francisco and two successful teams of each district will enter the competition proper. Some of the games being played in the north and some in Los Angeles. The first draw will take place early in December.

LEO GATES KAYOED BY TIGER FLOWERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—Tiger Flowers, the Georgia deacon, knocked out Leo Gates, New York heavyweight, in the fourth round of a feature ten-round bout at the Olympia Club tonight. It was a one-sided contest with the former middleweight champion dancing rings around Gates. Flowers scaled 171 1-2 pounds; Gates, 200.

eral pass. LaBucherie downed the ball on his own 8-yard line and it looked bad for the Bruins. Fleming took the pigskin over his own right tackle for a twenty-three-yard ride which put the Bruins out of danger and gave the team a new lease on life.

Marching straight down the field, Fleming and Fields made five first downs in a row and the ball was on Caltech's 24-yard line at the close of the quarter.

Fleming opened the second period with a thirteen-yard run which put the pigskin on the Engineers' 11-yard line. Fields failed to plug the line and Fleming again was given the oval. Twisting and battling for every inch, the Bruin star plowed to the Caltech 2-yard line. Spaulding decided Fields had seen enough service and Ted Simpson, sophomore fullback, replaced him. Simpson cracked right guard for the touchdown.

Bob Angle, the hero of the Pomona game, went in and converted for the extra point.

Led by the spirited Mr. Muff, the Engineers came right back with a drive which ended on the Bruin 21-yard line. Muff took a beautiful lateral pass from Cravitz on his own 30-yard line, sneaked down the sideline and dashed to the Bruin 41-yard line before being tackled. A five-yard penalty and a neat run by Shields put the ball on the 21-yard line. The Bruins held and the Engineer drive halted when a long pass was grounded over the goal line.

That ended the fireworks for the half, Muff being downed on his own 19-yard line as the half ended.

Both teams opened up in the third period. The Bruins were held on fairly even terms until the final minutes of the quarter, when Fields plowed to Caltech's 17-yard line. A long pass from Birlenbach to Rasmus was grounded, however, and Caltech took over the ball on downs.

Epstein's recovery of Reed's fumble stopped a Caltech drive in the fourth period. An exchange of punts gave the Bruins the ball on the Engineer 40-yard line, and Fleming single-handed marched down the field to a touchdown. Runs of five, fifteen and eight yards, respectively, put the oval on Caltech's 12-yard line. Soloman knifed through right tackle to place the ball on Caltech's 4½-yard line, and Fleming crashed through left tackle for the touchdown. Soloman's attempted place kick was blocked.

Next week the Bruins travel to Arizona for a game with the University of Arizona. The intersectional contest with Drake University in the Coliseum on the following week completes the Bruin schedule.

Next Time is the Best Time to Get Rough

BY AL DEMAREE
Former Pitcher New York Giants

The colored gentry can be counted on for a laugh in any walk of life, even football.

Michigan State, with two negro boys on the grid squad, was anticipating some real fun, and the coaches were not disappointed. Jackson was a candidate for tackle, and on the freshman team was another ebony-skinned lad named Smith. Smith was the most aggressive lineman on the squad and too often during the season he made life tough for the varsity candidates.

One evening, the coach, bent on finding a man who could keep Smith out of the varsity backfield, called Jackson. The very first play after Jackson went in, Smith came charging through him with the apparent ease of a tank going through barbed wire.

The coach rushed up to Jackson and shouted, "Jackson, you are in there for just one purpose. When the next play is completed I want to see Smith on his back and you sitting on him. Understand?"

Ruffled, but undaunted, Jackson replied, "Believe me, coach, ah will next time. Ah is sure goin' to handle that black rascal rough next time."

Martin Clips Par to Defeat Jelliffe, 1 Up, in Potrero Club Golf Invitational

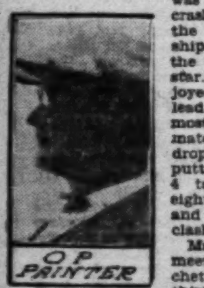
DEFENDING CHAMP HOLES LONG PUTT TO COP PLAY

Girard Golfer Unable to Match Shots With Rio Hondo Ace; Mixed Foursome Today

BY BILL WISE

David Martin of Rio Hondo, playing-through titlist, yesterday defeated W. L. Jelliffe, of Girard, 1 up, in the feature semifinal flight match of the Potrero Club golf invitational.

The Girard golfer, one of the longest drivers in this vicinity, staged a game battle at Potrero yesterday, but was unable to crash through the championship defense of the Rio Hondo star. Martin enjoyed a slight lead through most of the match and dropped a long putt for a birdie 4 to halve the eighteenth hole and win the clash, 1 up.



O. P. PAINTER

Martin will meet Milo Marchetti in the thirty-six-hole finals today for the club title. Marchetti, playing near-perfect golf all week, scored a 75 yesterday to eliminate Ted Lampton, 2 up, and will afford Martin some real competition today.

Potrero officials have made arrangements to handle a record invitational gallery. Martin is a great golfer to watch—a perfect shot maker, and, when right, capable of upsetting the best amateurs in this vicinity.

In addition to the championship and other flight finals today, Larry Kelly and Potrero club officials have completed arrangements to stage a two-ball mixed foursome tournament. The alternate shot affair will be open to all golfers, members of clubs affiliated with the Southern California Golf Association. Entries for the added event will be accepted at the first tee, after 10 o'clock this morning.

Semifinal results in all invitational flights yesterday were as follows:

FIRST FLIGHT (36 HOLES,) 9:30 A.M.
Dave Martin defeated W. L. Jelliffe, 1 up.
Milo Marchetti defeated Ted Lampton, 2 up.

SECOND FLIGHT, 9:25 A.M.
G. A. Armesu defeated C. B. Biddle, 1 up, 20th.
J. W. Huntley defeated J. E. Lindley, 2 and 1.

THIRD FLIGHT, 9:20 A.M.
R. W. Walls defeated R. A. Ryan, 2 and 2.
A. K. Saunders defeated Jim Seifres, 3 and 1.

FOURTH FLIGHT, 9:15 A.M.
Al Klein defeated T. P. Moran, 1 up.
Tom Harbeson defeated Atkins Nickerson, 1 up, 19th.

FIFTH FLIGHT, 9:10 A.M.
T. M. Bay defeated Frank Coleman, 5 and 6.
R. S. Phillips defeated K. W. Jenner, 1 up, 21st hole.

SIXTH FLIGHT, 9:05 A.M.
F. M. Hodge defeated W. N. Shell, 5 and 3.
George Parry defeated Trustin Clark, 7 and 5.

KELLER MAY COP TITLE AT RANCHO

Husky Golfer Favored in Annual Club Championship Tournament

Leon Keller, W. W. Beckwith, Dr. P. A. Moulton and Fred Langdon remain in the running for the championship of the Rancho Golf Club as the result of matches stoged over the week-end, it was announced yesterday by Arthur Clarkson.

LEON KELLER

In the semi-finals this week Keller will oppose Beckwith, while Dr. Moulton will match strokes with Langdon.

Keller advanced to the semifinals at the expense of one J. Hatler, whom he defeated, 1 up. Beckwith eliminated H. Atwater, 1 up. Dr. Moulton took I. A. Thorsen down the line by the same score and Langdon sprang a surprise by defeating Milo Marchetti on the nineteenth green.

Kellar, who was medalist, still remains a favorite, although W. W. Beckwith is not so sure of this.

In the president's cup tournament at Rancho, Paul Jones defeated S. C. Boyer, 5 and 4. H. H. Morgan won over E. R. Northmore on the nineteenth hole. S. W. Thompson defeated Fred Barman and H. A. Green conquered H. H. Wagonseller, the score of each match being 1 up.

Results of matches in other flights follow:

Vice-president's cup flight—Judge Cheerbro defeated F. Rubin, 19th hole; H. H. Rhoades defeated George Hahn, 1 up; J. Meiss defeated L. M. Holper, 3 and 2; I. E. Lynn defeated J. A. Burke, 2 up.

Directors' cup flight—E. O. Leake defeated F. B. Woolley, 7 and 6; E. Shenberg defeated T. V. Humphreys, 1 up; J. Maltman defeated M. Kaye, 5 and 4; G. Gittleson defeated P. H. Calhoun, 4 and 3.

Rancho flight—H. Phelps defeated A. D. Birdsall, 1 up; A. Cavett defeated L. Metcalf, 3 and 2; J. Baird defeated M. Randolph, 4 and 2; H. C. Whalen defeated Bert Rose, 1 up.

Moser Leading S. C. Golfers in All-U Play

Alan Moser, youthful Wilshire Country Club golfer, shot a nobby 79 during the past week over the Potrero course to top all qualifiers in the all-university golf tournament now in progress at S.C. under the direction of Leo Calland, intramural coach.

Moser's nearest rival is "Pexy" Eckles, who turned in an 81, with Russell "Bud" Thompson third with an 82.

Qualifiers will be determined from scores turned in, and match play will start at once, according to Calland. Moser, through his stellar performance, rules a heavy favorite to win. In addition to Eckles and Thompson, Gerald "Red" Kerr, defending champion, and Ed Woods, newcomer from Indiana, are expected to furnish the main opposition.

CALIFORNIA DECLARES WAR ON SCALPERS

BERKELEY, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—University of California authorities have plans afoot to make the occupation of the ticket scalper an unusually hazardous one. According to Jack MacKenzie, athletic manager, special operatives are to be employed to purchase tickets at scalpers' prices for the stand just before the game and prosecution carried out according to the evidence obtained. Under the Federal internal revenue laws, conviction carries a penalty of fine or imprisonment or both. Although in most cases the scalper is not the person to whom the ticket originally was issued, the original recipient automatically is blacklisted for future tickets, nevertheless. This will mark the university's first attempt to actually bring into court those persons accused of scalping.

LEADERS IN FOURSOME EVENT AT FLINTRIDGE

Champs of the past, present and not so far distant future, will compete in first-round matches of the women's auxiliary mixed foursome tournament, scheduled for the Flintridge Country Club, today. Miss Helen Lawson of Wilshire, winner of the women's Del Monte title last September, defeated Mrs. Ted Haas for her home club title last week and should be one of the most brilliant players in the affair today. Local golfdom will get its first competitive glimpse of Mrs. George M. Lewis, formerly Miss Florence Halloran, Salt Lake City, Utah State and California State champ, and many other tee-and-greens celebrities today.

REORGANIZE SERRANOS GOLF CLUB

Will Develop 739-Acre Tract as Recreational Center Soon

Development of the 739-acre Los Serranos Country Club near Chino has been started as a result of the recent purchase of this site by O. W. Heinz and associates of Los Angeles. A recreational center, within whose confines every popular sport and diversion may be enjoyed, will be incorporated in the large area, all of which will be utilized, according to the statement of Mr. Heinz.

The layout will include a golf course and a lake fronted with a 2000-foot sand beach. Devotees will find diversion in their respective sports of tennis, horseback riding, canoeing, swimming, golf, fishing, archery, trap shooting and dancing. A swimming pool 60x125 feet will be under construction soon, the contract having already been let. The pool will be surrounded by a broad vari-colored cement walk on which will be placed wrought iron tables and chairs for the comfort and convenience of members and guests. Erection of an out-door dance pavilion is now under way.

The landscape gardening development in the vicinity of the lake calls for parks and lawns all along the drive skirting the lake. Water is being placed in the arroyos, serving a two-fold purpose in that it provids a water course for canoeing and adds several water hazards to the golf course.

Los Serranos is said to have much of the color of old Southern California tradition, and it is believed to be the site of the famous battle of Chino. It was for many years the home of Don Antonio Lugo who established a reputation for hospitality to the early travelers who passed his place.

WOMAN IS SUCCESS AT RACING HORSES

The leading woman owner of race horses in England for the last three or four seasons is Mrs. Sofer Whitburn, who was among the first twelve winning owners last year, winning nearly $40,000 in stakes with only eight horses. Her most successful horses have been Chivalrous, Drake—who won the Coventry Stakes at Ascot and the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster two years ago—and Proconsul. She is a very keen sportswoman in every way and one of the best riders to hounds in the shires.

COLORFUL FIELD OPENS MATCH PLAY IN AUXILIARY FOURSOME PLAY AT FLINTRIDGE TODAY

The most colorful field of the season will get under way in the first-round matches of the women's auxiliary mixed foursome tournament, slated for the Flintridge club, today.

Past, present and future women's champions, paired with low ranking amateurs, should turn in an exhibition today that would be a competitive credit to any section of the country. Southern California is particularly fortunate in having so many men and women golfers, capable of near-perfect stroking over any layout and before the alternate shot field is cut in half late this afternoon, enough tee and greens fireworks should be unloosed to please and excite the most fastidious.

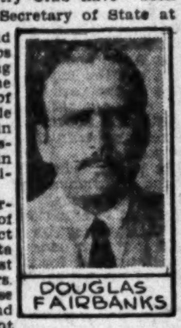
HONOR GOLFER AT WILSHIRE

Mrs. D. A. Lewis, one of the three local women to win flights in the women's Del Monte championship last September, was presented with the club trophy, awarded annually at Wilshire to the golfer who improves her game the most during the year. Mrs. Lewis started with a 30 handicap one year ago and is now playing to a 20—and proud of it. Mrs. Donald Forker was reelected women's tourney chairman and will be in charge of feminine competition at Wilshire for the ensuing year.

PLAN GOLF LINKS FOR SAN DIEGO

Will Start Work on Rancho Santa Fe Club Proposition Early Next Month

Articles of incorporation for Rancho Santa Fe Country Club have been filed with the Secretary of State at Sacramento and approved. Steps are now being taken toward the construction of an eighteen-hole golf course in this country estate project in northern San Diego county.



DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

Douglas Fairbanks, owner of an 850-acre tract at Rancho Santa Fe, heads the list of incorporators. Others whose names are found on the document are: Robert Fairbanks, J. Theodore Reed, Briggs C. Keck, H. H. Hunnewell, Barton Millard, Ronald MacDonald, Ellis Bishop, Clarence Cook, D. M Richards, Russell Millar, G. Aubrey Davidson, George Burnham, Glenn A. Moore, U. L. Voris, A. H. Barlow, J. P. McKitrick, H. E. Ketchum, W. C. Campbell, C. A. Shaffer, James C. Smillie, W. A. Bechberger, C. F. Pease, T. L. Carothers and H. L. Porter.

CLEGHORN RUNS OUT ON SAN JOSE BOUT

SAN JOSE (Cal.) Nov. 12. (AP)—Walter Cleghorn, Indian middleweight of Portland, who was signed to meet Jack Willis in a ten-round bout here on the 15th inst., today advised Promoted Forman that he will not go through with the match. Forman has called off his card for Tuesday night, and referred Cleghorn's refusal to live up to his contract to the boxing commission.

HAGEN TO PASS UP TOURNEYS

World's Greatest Pro to Store Knickers Until Next Spring

DALLAS (Tex.) Nov. 12. (AP)—Walter Hagen, who added his fifth Professional Golf Association crown to his collection here recently when he defeated Joe Turnesa of Elmsford, N. Y., in the 1927 finals, departed for his home in Rochester, N. Y., today.

Walter Hagen

"No more golf for me until spring," said Hagen. "I am going home to build up my ball club and that will take all my time until the 1928 season starts."

Hagen recently purchased an interest in the Rochester Club of the International League.

"The professional champion broke all records that had been established in capturing national golf titles in the 450 years of the pastime's history," said Alex Pirie, veteran president of the P.G.A. "Never before had any golfer won five consecutive national titles. James Braid, English pro, won the British national three times, which is the nearest approach to Hagen's achievement."

BALLERINO OUTCLASSED

CHICAGO, Nov. 12. (AP)—Showing superiority in every round, Joey Medill, Chicago, defeated Mike Ballerino, former junior lightweight champion, last night in ten rounds. Medill weighed 132 pounds and Ballerino 134 pounds.

PALOS VERDES TO HOLD OPEN

Popular Course to be Site of $2500 Event

Award Long Beach Tourney to New Club

Fiske Promises Great Test for Money Golfers

Topping the list of preliminary tournaments leading up to the Los Angeles $10,000 open will be the Palos Verdes $2500 open which according to Don Lawyer, in charge of the event will start December 29 and end December 31, being played over the Palos Verdes course.

The Palos Verdes event will replace the Long Beach open which heretofore had been the anticlimax to the ultimate open event of the winter's gold play.

The Palos Verdes tourney will be a seventy-two-hole event that should prove an even bigger magnet to the competitors who plan to play in the Los Angeles event. The Palos Verdes course has been one of the most popular courses in Southern California and is gaining even more supporters with every event staged there.

Jim Fiske, genial pro of the Estates course, is leaving nothing undone to assure perfect fairways and faultless greens for the host of nationally known pros and amateurs who will top off their preliminary work for the Los Angeles event with the Palos Verdes tournament.

With more than seven hundred of the leading professionals of the country invited to compete in the $10,000 open, many of them will follow their usual trend of competing in all of the open events scheduled in and around Los Angeles.

The schedule of play for the Palos Verdes event as announced by Lawyer and Fiske calls for 18 holes on each of the first two days of play and 36 holes on the final day. In addition to the $2500 prize for professionals, trophies for amateur golfers will also be at stake.

FORMER BEARS AND CARDS TO JOIN HANDS

BERKELEY, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—The prospects are that former California and Stanford basketball players will join hands as fellow-members of the San Francisco Olympic Club team this season. Nip McHose, one-time Stanford captain and an Olympian last year, will be out again for the Winged O. The probable California additions to the Olympic line-up are George Dixon, all-American coast guard last year, and Benny Holmes, captain of the Bears in 1925.

TITLE PLAY AT HILLCREST

First-round matches in the annual club championship will be staged over the immaculate Hillcrest course today. Milton Hoffman and Mike Rosenberg, who tied for medal honors in the qualifying play last week, will clash in the feature match for club glory—and Calcutta gold, this afternoon.

First-round pairings are as follows:

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT
Milton Hoffman vs. Mike Rosenberg; Herman Politz vs. A. H. Lee; Harry Grossman vs. L. S. Jacobs; Bert Allenberg vs. Sam Berliner; E. H. Eikeles vs. M. Reingold; Curt Rosenthal vs. Max Feltz; Jack Feldman vs. Frank Newman; George Germain vs. Sam Seelig.

HARRY COOPER STAGES GREAT FINISH TO PRESS FARRELL FOR HONORS IN GOLF LEAGUE

The phenomenal forward thrust of Harry Cooper in golf medal averages is the sensation of the closing weeks of the 1927 season. Culminating in his great victory in the Oklahoma open, when he turned in a score of 283, it has placed him right in the forefront of low-average men in the country.

HARRY COOPER

Only two men are showing their heels to him—Johnny Farrell and Macdonald Smith. Smith has played in seventeen fewer rounds than Cooper, and Harry really should be ranked second to Farrell.

Another player who has been showing fine form is Al Espinosa. The Chicagoan also has been climbing in the averages, although not so successfully as Cooper.

It is only a short time since the Los Angeles star was pretty far down in the list. But he has grown better as the season has progressed.

Leo Diegel has slipped back a tiny bit and no longer is among the "73" shooters.

John Golden continues his consistent efforts, which always seem to place him in the money.

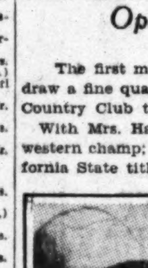
WOMEN PLAY AT H. C. C.

First Match Play Feature on Current Auxiliary Card Opens Over Popular Course Tomorrow

The first match play invitational on the current auxiliary program will draw a fine qualifying field of more than 100 local women to the Hollywood Country Club tomorrow.

With Mrs. Harry Pressler, women's western champ; Mrs. Dan Jones, California State titlist; Mrs. Gregg Lifur, Southern California champion; Mrs. George M. Lewis, former California State crown bearer; Mrs. W. W. Campbell, Miss Kathleen Wright, Miss Margaret Cameron, Miss Helen Lawson, and other representative low-handicap golfers signed to compete in the affair, the tournament bears all the earmarks of a real championship.



MARGARET CAMERON

Entrants are requested to start qualifying play by 12 o'clock noon, tomorrow. Low-gross and low-net winners will be awarded suitable trophies. All contestants will qualify and will be paired in groups of sixteen, to start match play, Tuesday. All flights except the first will be at handicap.

The Hollywood course is in very fine condition. Greens that formerly were fast enough to frighten most golfers have been whipped into the finest putting surfaces imaginable. Ed Dudley, club professional has worked with club officials in revamping and tightening up the Hollywood layout and the course offered women golfers tomorrow should be conducive to good scoring.

Miss Helen Lawson, newly crowned Wilshire club champion, learned much of her golf at Hollywood and if permitted by school work to play in the Hollywood affair, should prove a dangerous challenger for the invitational crown. The title-flight match play will give local fans an opportunity to compare the stroking ability of Southern California's leading women golfers, and all Hollywood contestants will be title challengers in title events to come.

SQUASH TOURNAMENT TO HOLD LIMELIGHT

Fast competition in both singles and doubles is anticipated when the senior national singles and doubles titles in squash-handball are decided on the Hollywood Athletic Club courts, beginning the 21st and 28th inst., respectively.

The race for the singles title is expected to lie between Les Klawiter, junior national champion, Dan Jones, former junior national champion, Dan Jones, former junior national champion, Bill Holman and Chet Cooper of the Hollywood club and Mort Kline of the University Club. Two strong players from the Los Angeles Athletic Club, Dave Butler and Ad Schaumer, may also be heard from.

JIM BARNES TOPS OFF BAD YEAR BY FAILING TO PLACE IN P. G. A. CHAMPIONSHIP

BY BUNKER

What has happened to Jim Barnes? In the number and importance of his victories Jim ranks second only to Hagen among modern professional golfers in while Hagen has gone on at the America. But, front, his one-time rival is slipping.

Jim Barnes

Barnes captured the national open in 1921 with one of the lowest scores on record—289. As late as 1924 he was a finalist in the Professional Golfers' Association championship. In 1925 he won the British open, placing himself in the select coterie of experts who have captured both the British and American titles.

This year, however, Jim has slipped inexplicably. Near the season's end he had played twenty-six rounds of competitive golf and had average 76 7-13 strokes to the round. Not a single tournament had been won by him, and in no instance had he come near winning one.

With his average of 76 7-13 strokes, he was 2 7-13 strokes higher in scoring than his old rival Hagen, while his one-time protege, Johnny Farrell, averaging 73 7-74 strokes in seventy-four rounds, had a margin under him of approximately 3 7-16 strokes to the round.

Leaving out qualifying rounds, and a brace of other isolated rounds, Barnes's record for the year has been:

Event.
Southern Open	78	73	78	74	303	40th
Metropolitan Open	80	78	80	77	315	19th
North and South Open	74	73	77	71	295	9th
National Open	78	73	80	77	313	25th
Metropolitan P. G. A.	78	78	75	74	305	13th

In these twenty tournament rounds Jim broke 75 but four times. Mostly he was hovering around 78, 79 and 80.

To top off a disastrous year, he failed to qualify for the P.G.A. championship at Dallas, losing his chance to make up, through match play, at which he excels, for the misfortunes of the remainder of the year. Never before has he been absent from this event.

A great golfer, Jim. However, not so great in 1927 as in other years, and perhaps one of the first of the old guard to make way for younger blood. Maybe he'll come back in 1928, though. Here's hoping!

Marty O'Laughlin, former Metropolitan open champion, continues to tell good stories about the golfers of a negro country club located not far from his club, the Plainfield (N. J.) Country Club.

Marty went over one day to give the colored lads' course the once over. A tournament was on and Marty noticed the contestants each had two caddies, one to carry the bag and one to do scout duty ahead.

"Why is that?" he asked one of the players, a lad who formerly caddied for him.

"Well, you see," was the confidential reply, "I've got to have that second caddie to see that my ball never gets in a place where you can't find it—and, if it does get there, that one just like it is where it can be found."

Archie Compston, who won the recent British match play championship for professionals at Gleneagles, seems to be among the best of the professionals over there when it comes to match play. He took the Gleneagles tournament in 1925, beating Abe Mitchell, who is just now staging a comeback after an appendicitis operation.

When Compston was over here he described one shot in his match with Mitchell as the luckiest he ever made.

"With sixteen holes to go," he said, "Abe had me five down. Then I went mad, winning seven of the next eight holed.

"When we reached the final hole I only needed a half to win. After a decent drive, though, I played my iron second shot fearfully. The ball was on its way to overrun the green by twenty yards, when it struck the leg of a boy who was trying to get out of the way and bounded back, leaving me an easy approach putt for the half."

Compston, by the way, is an odd character. The next year, at Roehampton, Mitchell got back at him, partly because Archie conceded a six-foot putt.

Rain was falling in torrents. Going to the fifteenth hole Mitchell was three up, with four to go. On the fifteenth green Compston had a seven-foot putt and Mitchell a six-foot one.

Compston missed. "Come on," he said to Abe. "I've had enough of this. I'll give you that." And he beat it.

HOLLYWOOD AND ROMANS TANGLE

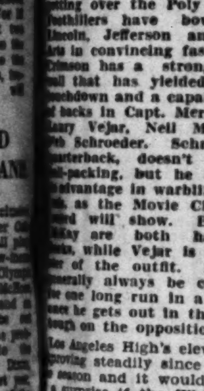
Undefeated Squads Hook Up for City Grid Title

Winning Eleven Will Cinch Prep Championship

Coliseum Probable Site of Big Football Clash

BY BOB RAY

Unless the vice-principals decide to shift the Hollywood-Los Angeles High game to Thanksgiving Day, the undefeated Foothillers and Romans will tangle next Saturday, probably in the Coliseum, in the game that will decide the City League championship.



Although both teams have another game remaining on the schedule after the coming championship clash, the title will go to Friday's winner regardless of what happens in the last game of the season. Both Hollywood and Los Angeles High have won four games in a row and the winner of the coming clash will have a higher percentage than any of the other teams. There is a possibility that the winner of the Hollywood-Los Angeles High game might lose its final struggle, which would leave the two teams deadlocked in the percentage column. However, the league has a way to cover this possibility, should it happen, for it gives the title, in case two teams tie, to the team which holds a victory over the other.

FAVOR HOLLYWOOD

The dope points to a Hollywood victory for Coach Vic Kelley's athletes have been going along at a rapid pace and winning by healthy margins. After getting over the Poly game, the Foothillers have bowled over Lincoln, Jefferson and Manual Arts in convincing fashion. The Crimson has a strong forward wall that has yielded only one touchdown and a capable quartet of backs in Capt. Merrill Brown, Laury Vejar, Neil McKay and Bob Schroeder. Schroeder, the quarterback, doesn't do much ball-packing, but he has shown to advantage in warbling the signals as the Movie City squad's speed will show. Brown and McKay are both hard-hitting backs, while Vejar is the speedster of the outfit. Laury can generally always be counted on for one long run in a game and once he gets out in the open it's tough on the opposition.

Los Angeles High's eleven has been improving steadily since the start of the season and it wouldn't be much of a surprise if the White-Rich machine should spring an upset Friday. The Romans have a fighting line, as strong if not stronger than any Hollywood has been up against, and there are four or five hard-hitting backs available behind the Los Angeles High forward wall.

Quirk, King, Pozzo and Kerns Compton are the outstanding tackle and White linesmen and they play a consistently driving game. Art Levy at left end is another capable Roman lineman.

WELL-FIXED FOR BACKS

In the backfield the Romans have Jimmy Owens, Phil Wilson, Bob Beaver, Aubrey Grossman, Briggs Hunt and "Click" Bowles to shoot at the Foothillers. The Romans are blessed with splendid backfield reserves and they may swing the tide in their favor if the going gets tough in the third quarter. L. A. High has scored a touchdown in the fourth quarter of every game and these reserve backs are the real reason for their finishing drive.

Following are the records of the two elevens:

POLY FACES FRANKLIN

Another important game on this week brings together the Polytechnic Mechanics, who seem to have recently discovered an offense in the person of Freddy Furtsch, and the Franklin Kiteflyers. The Mechanics will be favorites to win but the Kiteflyers will be dangerous with their passing attack.

The third game on the list brings together Lincoln and Jefferson. Jefferson has not won a game in five starts and has the cellar cinched, so there's no reason why the Railsplitters should not be favorites, especially after their 20-to-6 triumph over Franklin last week.

New City League schools, heretofore ranked in the category of a kid brother to the City League group, have reached the stage where they are beginning to elbow their older brothers for some of the athletic spotlight in the Los Angeles high school family. This is very evident on the gridiron this season, where the Minor League squads have more than held their own in practice games with the older institutions. The Minor League teams from Fremont, Belmont, Roosevelt, Harding, Fairfax, and Garfield showed that they were ready for the big-time stage in scholastic athletic circles from the very start of the present season.

The Minor Loop schools turned out football teams that compared favorably in every way with the teams from older institutions. They even went so far as to beat some of the City League squads during the practice period. The Minor gridders were every bit as big and fast as their older brothers. The turnouts for the squads

BRUIN CAGERS PREP FOR COAST CONFERENCE DEBUT

Coach Caddy Works, builder of several Southern California Conference championship basketball teams out at U.C.L.A., has been working for the past few weeks on his first Pacific Coast Conference machine. Bruin basketball teams hold victories in past years over California, Stanford, and the Oregon Aggies, and expect to make a good showing in their first year of big-time competition. Art Williams is a letterman from last year and the smallest man on the team, but one of the hardest to stop. Capt. Jack Ketchum is the big threat on the Bruin team. Cliff Burnhill and Al Sunseri are battling for varsity jobs at forward and guard, respectively. Milo Young was first-string center last year.

PIPAL HAS OXY TRACK SQUAD OUT

Scovell, Howard Lost to Bengals; Freshman Stars Strengthen Team

Coach Joe (Timber Wolf) Pipal, veteran mentor of Occidental spikesters, is rapidly rounding into shape several of the Tigers' 1928 track hopes, upon whose shoulders a great responsibility rests to carry the Orange and Black colors to victories in dual meets.

Joseph A Pipal

During the past six and possibly several weeks the candidates for the season's varsity squad, which opens its schedule in February, have been under the eager and careful eyes of Pipal, and many of those who are candidates but failed to show up as yet for instruction, due to football and other activities, are expected out in some two weeks, when the gridiron season closes for the Bengal warriors. Freshmen have been receiving the majority of attention on Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons, with the varsity aspirants turning out on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The loss of such talent as Atward Scovell, conference miler and two-mile record holder; Cecil Howard, sprint star, and other veterans of the cinder path, lost via failure to return to the Oxy camp, will cripple considerably the varsity hopes by some fifteen points or more. The ineligibility of Al Clayes, football star and sprint ace, further adds to the gloomy outlook of Coach Pipal.

These losses to the Tiger lair, totaling a good twenty digits in strength, will be somewhat regained by the return to Oxy ranks of Leral Goodheart, a distance ace of the 1926 squad, and another former star, James Coyne, former weight man on Oxy teams, holder of the conference records in the discus and other events. In addition, the all-around ability of one "Iron Man" Harold Webb, and then Milt Nash, and several sophomores of the past frosh track squad are expected to boost the Eagle Rock institution hopes greatly.

During the early part of next month, the A.A.U. will conduct a ten-event meet at the college oval for the track aspirants of the Southland. This decathalon event under the association officials is one of the many preliminary Olympic trials, to some extent, for the Olympic games in this city in 1932.

Officials in charge of athletics in the Minor Loop succeeded last season in dropping the name Juniors and now some of them want the Minor part of it cut. There is some talk of breaking into the City League. Just how this is to be done has not been disclosed. A good idea of the size of the Minor League schools is given in a list of figures compiled by a local high school athletic official. The list gives number of students in both Minor and City leagues.

Whittier Has Veteran Five Back on Court

WHITTIER, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Athletic interest at Whittier College is centering upon the basketball prospects for the coming season.

Three of this season's players were chosen all-conference last season; six of the players, lettermen, were on the varsity squad last year. With these as a nucleus, as the saying goes, and a long list of likely players coming up from last year's frosh team, there is no well-grounded foundation for discouragement.

William (Bill) Sucksdorf, captain, has called unofficial biweekly practice, although no organization has as yet been completed. Both coach and manager are to be chosen, and official basketball practice will begin December 5.

Sucksdorf, Barmore and Weaver are the all-conference men; Hunnicutt, Jertberg and Cummings are from last season's varsity. Basketeers who are out from last year's frosh team and who may make the regulars step lively to hold their berths are Miller, Lewis, Reitz, Strahl, Reese, Ashton, Lee, Marshall and Coate.

The Poet conference schedule calls for five games at home, and, aside from the regular conference contests at home and abroad, the locals will play practice and exhibition games with Loyola, Arizona, U.S.C. and the University of California at Los Angeles.

AMHERST DEFEATS WILLIAMS ELEVEN

WILLIAMSTOWN (Mass. Nov. 12. (AP)—A forward pass that failed in an attempt to add the point after touchdown, left Williams one point behind Amherst today in the struggle for second-place honors in the "Little Three" series. Amherst was victorious, 7 to 6, after a hard and evenly fought contest.

Wesleyan's victories over both Amherst and Williams in earlier games had already decided the traditional Little Three title, but the Lord Jeffs and Williams strove valiantly for the loser's prize.

APART LONG TIME

The meeting between Harvard and Pennsylvania this season was their first gridiron clash since 1905, when the Quakers won by a score of 12 to 6.

BRUIN CAGERS WORK HARD

Caddy Works Driving U.C.L.A. Casaba Team for Bow in Pacific Coast Conference

Coach Caddy Works's University of California at Los Angeles basketball team will be the first to represent the Bruins in the Pacific Coast Conference. For several years, the Bruin tossers have held the upper hand in the Southern California Conference, and Coach Works hopes to do as well in the faster league.

Last year the Bruins tied Whittier for the conference championship, each team winning a game. From that outfit Works has Sammy Balter and Capt. Jack Ketchum, forwards, and Milo Young, center. The Bruins were hard hit, however, in the loss of two fine guards in Jimmy Armstrong and Ralph Bunch. This year's job seems to be the development of guards.

CADDY WORKS.

Some fine talent is coming up from last year's frosh team. Dave Williams is a likely prospect to make the varsity. He was an all-city guard at Hollywood a couple of years ago and one of the most consistent men on the frosh team. Carl Shy, another graduate from the peagreen ranks, is making a bid for the center job. Shy is tall and rangy and covers a lot of floor space. Wilde, a forward, also looks good.

Al Sunseri, a junior, who started out as a forward, is being made over into a guard. He gained considerable weight this past summer and tips the beam around 180 pounds. Hal Smith also shows promise of making the varsity.

Art Williams, one of the smallest university forwards on record, is also back, and, while he may not get a regular job, should prove valuable as a substitute. He played a flashy game last year. Woodruff and Ed Potter are also battling for the center job. Woodruff was the shining light in U.C.L.A.'s win over Whittier last year when he shot a couple of seemingly impossible baskets for the winning points.

The Bruins have already been running off offensive plays in practice and the squad has been cut to eighteen men. Coach Works is building his team around Ketchum, who last year was one of the outstanding forwards on the coast. Ketchum is a dead shot from almost any angle and plays a heady defensive game as well. This will mark his third year of varsity competition.

Caddy Works has scheduled a stiff practice season to start early in December. Caltech, Whittier, and one or two other Southern California Conference quintets are on the schedule. The Bruins will tackle California, U.S.C. and Stanford on local courts.

BRUIN STUDENTS GO IN FOR DIVERSIFIED SPORT PROGRAM

According to statistics just compiled by William C. Ackerman, intramural athletic director at the University of California at Los Angeles, 80 per cent of the men attending the university participate in some kind of athletics each year.

Under his supervision four divisions of competition have been organized: fraternity, unattached, interclass and departmental teams. The men participate in the following sport events: Tennis, golf, football, track, baseball, swimming, boxing, wrestling, basketball, soccer, fencing, horseshoes, handball, water polo and gymnastics.

Roman Casaba Tossers Plan Court Season

With only three more rounds in the City League grid schedule, rival coaches of as many rival institutions about the city have long since started work with their respective basketball material in attempts to round out prospective teams to represent said institutions when the season begins in January.

Out at L. A. High Coach Albert "Happy" Hemsath faces the difficult task of shaping a picked squad of twelve recruits into a basketball team of championship caliber. Coach Hemsath has only one experienced varsity man returning in Capt. Jimmie Kelly, a sub on last year's squad. Kelly looks good in scrimmage and will no doubt prove the mainstay of the team once the season is under way. Walter Milford, "Rusty" Cline and Henry Shapiro, all tried lightweights of last year's standing, have graduated to the varsity ranks and figure to play an important part in the Romans' bid for a title which they have never yet won. Fred McMahon, Dudley Tower and Curtis Spangler are putting up a "fine" game of basketball and will see plenty of front line action before the season is very far fetched.

The Pioneer lightweight melon slingers have also begun to get the range of the "buckets." Claud Branstool, star varsity forward of two terms back and Abraham Shanman, lightweight player of last season, are coaching the team. Coach Dave Ridderhof, who is at present occupied with his championship-bound 130-pound grid team, will assume regular control of the loopsters as soon as his duties on the football field are relieved.

Compton Held to 7-6 Score by Fullerton

Although Fullerton Junior College has no chance to grab a share of the honors in the Southern California Junior College Conference race, they certainly have undisputed possession of the biggest jinx in local footballistic circles. After throwing the Compton cohorts into countless beads of perspiration, they finally fell short of their goal, losing, 7-6. No less than three times did Fullerton camp upon the Compton 5-yard line, only to be repulsed.

White, Compton's chief threat, was stopped dead nearly every time, while his colleague, "Goldielocks" Holmes, was forced to leave the game early in the first quarter, after making a brilliant 60-yard run. Holmes will be lucky to see action again this season. Ralls played best for Compton, while Bogue turned in a good game for Fullerton.

As in all the previous games in which Compton has been scored upon, Fullerton's touchdown came in the first three minutes of play, Bogue traversing a distance of five yards off tackle. Point was missed, to make the score read 6-0. Compton's tally came soon after an electrifying pass from Ralls to Abbott put the ball on Fullerton's 8-yard line. Ralls took the ball over, Fesler converting for the needed point.

The rest of the game was all Fullerton, with opportune fumbles enabling Compton to keep their record unsoiled. No less than four fumbles were recovered by Compton, but they seemed to be able to do nothing with the advantages obtained.

The line-ups were:

Compton		Fullerton
Brown	L.E.R.	Grigsby
McCart	L.T.R.	Stevens
Fesler	L.G.R.	Heineman
Burke	C.	M. Curtis
C. Stevens	R.G.L.	Davis
Burris	R.T.L.	McOmie
Abbott	R.E.L.	Schulte
Holmes	Q.	E. Curtis
Wheeler	L.H.R.	Moreau
Ralls	R.H.L.	Bogue
White	F.	Hughes

Substitutions—Compton: Howard for Holmes, Roby for Wheeler, Katz for McCart. Fullerton: Gilber for Heineman.

CHAMPIONSHIP AT STAKE WHEN RIVALS STRUGGLE

Sagehens Rate on Even Basis With Tigers; Win for Bengals Gives Title to Bruin Eleven

CLAREMONT, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Combining all the thrills of a clash between two ancient rivals, with a championship flavor to the result, Pomona and Occidental, the oldest antagonists in the Southern California Conference, battle together in their annual "big game" on Alumni Field next Saturday. The two elevens, both championship possibilities, take the field at 2:30 p.m. after a preliminary game between the freshmen.

Saturday's game will be one of a long series of struggles between Pomona and Occidental, extending over a period of thirty years. The two institutions have met annually every year since 1898 and their game has come to be the "big" game, the climax and highlight of every southern conference season, regardless of where they are in the standings.

POKE HARTMAN

As it happens, next week's clash has a direct bearing on the final outcome of the southern conference, for both elevens are right up at the top, the Sagehens being undefeated while Oxy has dropped but one game to the University of California at Los Angeles. A victory for the Tigers will knock Pomona out of the running and give it to the Bruins. If Pomona wins, it goes into a tie with the Bruins for the title.

Another point of interest to the game is the fact that it will mark the homecoming of the Sagehen eleven after three weeks' absence. Pomona met San Diego, U.C.L.A. and yesterday Redlands on foreign fields, playing on home territory against Whittier College October 22. Pomona has been uniformly successful in that invasion, but will undoubtedly play its best game at home.

POMONA LINE WEAK

Despite the fact that Pomona held even a team that was able to beat Occidental, there is probably no superiority on the side of the Sagehens in the coming tilt. Pomona tied U.C.L.A., 7 to 7, while the Bruins whipped Oxy, 8 to 0. Those scores don't indicate any decided advantage and probably don't mean anything at all, for Oxy had its chances to score against U.C.L.A. and should have won the game, according to all good logic.

As usual, the great mechanical weakness and disadvantage of Pomona will be its line in the struggle with Oxy. The Tigers have a strong, well-balanced forward wall that will undoubtedly be the toughest thing Pomona has gone up against yet. The Bruins were big and powerful, but didn't have the experience and polish of the Tiger forwards. Pomona, with a line averaging less than 170 pounds to the man, will be at a fearful disadvantage. Al Klein and Ed Beebe, two of the big boys who occupy center and guard, have wreaked a lot of havoc all year and can be counted upon to do things to Pomona's light opposition.

In the backfield, Pomona probably has the edge. The light, speedy Sagehen offensive has come to be regarded as one of the most dangerous combinations in the southern conference. There isn't much weight or brilliant talent there, but any of the four backs are good ball carriers and they have enough speed and polish to be dangerous all the time. Harold Merrit, Poke Hartman, Lee Williams and Capt. Jack Manildi are the blue backs and they're good. They have scored well above 100 points in conference games and have been the leading point-getters since the very first. It's on the backfield that Pomona will have to depend again.

SPEEDY BACKFIELD

Occidental has the speedy Jack Schweitzer, Eberhardt, Glen Rozelle and Mike Fusco as the stars of its offensive. The Tigers haven't been what you could call stopped since they opened their season. They even were able to make good substantial gains against U.S.C.'s mighty Trojans. It should be a great struggle between them and the Sagehen backs.

SAN DIEGO COPS TILT IN NORTH

Santa Barbara Loses Hard Fought Game to Aztecs by 16-13 Score

SANTA BARBARA, Nov. 12.—The San Diego State Teachers' College football team defeated the Santa Barbara State College eleven in a bitterly-fought battle here today by a 16-to-13 score.

Santa Barbara led until the final minute of play, when Johnson, quarterback, intercepted a pass and ran fifty-eight yards to Santa Barbara's 27-yard line. A pass, Garner to Mott, resulted in the final score.

The final quarter was played in semidarkness, neither the players nor the spectators being able to follow the ball.

Santa Barbara was easy meat during the first period, San Diego galloping about at will, but the remaining three-quarters were all Santa Barbara's. Five minutes after the game opened, San Diego blocked Bastens's kick, and put the ball into play on the 2-yard line. Johnson carried the ball over on the third attempt. He also kicked goal.

Later in the period, Hildreth intercepted a pass on the 30-yard line, and San Diego carried the ball to the 5-yard line, where Santa Barbara held for three downs. On the fourth down, Cameron put a drop-kick over the bar from the 12-yard line.

Early in the second quarter, Bert Clemore, fullback, dashed twenty-five yards through tackle, only to be downed on San Diego's 12-yard line. Hickman made eight yards through center on a double criss-cross, and Clemore carried the ball over on the next play. Foss failed to convert.

From a fake kick formation, Glover, who substituted for Quarterback Curtis, ran thirty-five yards through right tackle to the 17-yard line, and a pass, Foss to Clemore, resulted in Santa Barbara's second touchdown. San Diego was offside on the try for point.

Santa Barbara lost another opportunity to score just at half-time, when the whistle blew with the ball on San Diego's 1-yard line. Clemore had dashed forty yards around right end to San Diego's 21-yard line, and Basten then passed to Glover, who was downed on the 1-yard line.

Late in the fourth period, Clemore ran forty yards to San Diego's 21-yard line, but Johnson intercepted the pass on the 15-yard line, and returned it to Santa Barbara's 27-yard mark, from which San Diego scored the winning tallies.

On the following kick-off, Santa Barbara successfully hid the ball and carried it to San Diego's 15-yard line, but the whistle ended the game.

Line-ups:

San Diego.		Santa Barbara.
Allen	L.E.	Martin
Ault	L.T.	Denno
Hildreth	L.G.	Johnson
Smith	C.	Vince
Tenwolde	R.G.	Annin
Walton	R.T.	Allred
Hansen	R.E.	Basten
Mott (C.)	Q.	Curtis
Johnson	L.H.	Foss (C.)
Fox	R.H.	Hickman
Garner	F.	Clemore

SCORE BY PERIODS

San Diego	10	0	0	6	—16
Santa Barbara	0	13	0	0	—13

San Diego scoring: Touchdowns, Johnson, Mott. Sry for point: Johnson. Goal from field: Hildreth.

Santa Barbara scoring: Touchdowns, Clemore, 2. Try for point: Penalty.

Officials: Referee, Schutte, Minnesota; umpire, Latham, California; head linesman, Clark, California; field judge, Shipkey, Idaho.

CREIGHTON BUMPS SOUTH DAKOTA, 14-0

OMAHA, Nov. 12. (AP)—Creighton University's grid machine rolled to a 14-to-0 victory over South Dakota State at Creighton Stadium today.

Creighton scored a touchdown in the first quarter when Bombough smashed over for a touchdown and again in the final quarter when Behn wiggled through the line. Not once did the South Dakota team threaten the Creighton goal.

DAN O'LEARY GIVES EXHIBITION WALK

Dan O'Leary, the 89-year-old world champion walker, will give an exhibition at Hawthorne today as the opening feature of the semipro baseball game between Hawthorne and Delsmo.

As a workout for today's exhibition, O'Leary walked from the Broadway Hotel to the summit of Mt. Wilson Friday, a distance of twenty-three miles in the fast time of 7h. 25m.

BENGALS TO MAKE BID FOR CONFERENCE CASABA TITLE

Though Whittier is virtually the favorite to cop the 1928 basketball championship of the Southern Conference since the slated departure of the U.C. at L.A. Bruins from the conference ranks, the Tigers at Occidental will be one of the title favorites alongside the Poets.

Five letter men, three forwards, one guard and one center, return to the Oxy campus this year and are already tossing the casaba about in the alumni gym in preparation for the circuit race. In addition, three classy transfers from the Pasadena Junior College, Getts, forward; Davies and Murray, guards, are expected to add great strength to the Bengal quintet, while the addition of unlimited numbers of freshmen of the 1927 team, all of whom are promising, gives the Tigers a lot of room to boast of title chances.

Coach Eddie Kienholz, now busy with freshman football activities, is planning to open official cage practice immediately after the close of the present grid schedule, which ends on Thanksgiving Day, when the Bengals meet Hawaii. The following Monday will find the prospective candidates in short panties and minus stockings of any length, tossing the large pelota here and there in the gym.

Whittier has been runner-up to the Bruins for some seasons now for the conference casaba crown, but in each case fallen short by a few digits for victory. Occidental has offered stiff opposition also, not quite that of Whittier, however. But the Poets will install a new cage mentor this year, unfortunately, and a new system to learn always detracts a bit from the candidates. For this reason, in addition to the fact that Oxy has an established coach, and several stars, would indicate that the Poets and Tigers are the rivals for the conference crown in 1928.

The loss of Les Haserot, Solly Mishkin, Mike Godett and Howard Black, veteran floor artists, would cause any coach to shed tears but the returning letter men and the sophs lend hopes to Kienholz and one of the greatest quintets in Oxy history is anticipated.

Notre Dame's Hopes for National Championship Court-Martialed by Army Gridde

FANS EAGER FOR PEEK AT CAPT. MORLEY DRURY

Battle of Soldier Field Commands National Interest; Rockne Has Brilliant Grid Aggregation

BY JOHN P. GALLAGHER

CHICAGO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—"Southern California and Notre Dame. Let's go!" That is the slogan prevailing here as Chicago and adjacent cities and towns are busily smoothing out the preliminaries incident to the launching of the Far West vs. Midwest gridiron classic of 1927 at Soldier Field two weeks from today—November 26.

That the battle between these two powerful, scintillating elevens will command national interest goes without saying; that it will be an epic struggle is a certainty; that it will draw the largest crowd of the 1927 football season is a foregone conclusion. Soldier Field has a seating capacity of 110,000 persons. Two weeks ago, or a month before this outstanding sporting event, every seat in the huge and massive stadium stretching along the shores of Lake Michigan was sold out. And it would not be too much to say that if Soldier Field could accommodate 200,000, one would not be able to buy a ducat at the field offices today.

CAPT. DRURY

There is an impeding number of persons of Celtic origin in this immediate vicinity, most of whom are willing to pay any price to see the famous miscalled Irish in action. Perhaps the good old Hibernian name of Neimeic is the magnet!

WANT TO SEE DRURY

Speaking of names, there are other thousands who are every whit as eager to see Capt. Morley Drury, the "thunderbolt" of the Trojan Horse, who now has a national reputation of having crashed, battered, plunged, kicked and intercepted his way into Pacific Coast Conference history. The football fans of the Middle West have heard that Morley is one of the greatest backs to perform on the West Coast in many years, and that he promises to become the "Nemesis of Notre Dame." One doesn't have to use much imagination to realize that such an appelation is a powerful seller of pasteboards in these parts.

Naturally, there is much speculation as to who will emerge victor in the big game. And there is just as much speculation as to how the California boys will react to the cold weather. There is a well-defined opinion here that an Angeleno, when he lands upon Michigan Boulevard during the cold weather, should promptly turn into an icicle.

"What will our well-known Lake Michigan nor'easters do to your sunkissed lads from Los Angeles?" I am asked a score of times daily.

"Pep 'em up and they will tear the side out of Soldier Field," I answer with an air of finality. But apparently it doesn't register because there are rumors of doubt.

Two years ago there probably would have arisen the question of a muddy, soggy field, but the splendid drainage system at Soldier Field precludes any such condition today.

To Knute Rockne, the sage of Notre Dame, is ascribed mystic power. That is what makes the South Benders the greatest drawing card in football. Tradition has webbed an illusion about Knute. He is hailed as the gridiron magician, the master mind, the keen wit, the impresario who waves a wand and has his will.

ROCKNE DARING

But Rockne is not a magician. He is a man with keen common sense, imagination and daring. He knows human nature and takes advantages of the credulity, carelessness and obtuseness of his opponents. Rockne has a mind that flares in intensity. Attuned to football throughout the year, he sometimes sees sharp features in the light of these flares. To this extent, Rockne is a whit smarter theorist than most coaches. Neither Rockne nor Notre Dame is invincible, but the world will admit he is the hardest coach to beat.

There is also a fallacy regarding the Notre Dame type of play, which is usually painted as brilliant devilry based upon the use of the pass. Rockne's football system is based upon percentage. He teacher his quarterbacks to exact the last ounce from the strategic situation.

The basic Notre Dame attack is a running game slanting off the tackles with fullback bucks at center for variation. When this game is running smoothly there will be no passes except one or two safe ones for the sake of variation. Rockne is a good gambler—he never becomes too obvious. But when the going is bad; when the running game is stopped, one may expect anything from the Notre Dame trouble box carried by Charley Riley, this year's quarterback. Rockne has lateral passes as well as forward, but he will not use them unless it becomes necessary.

PLAN RUNNING GAME

With a fast set of running backs and available substitutes, the South Benders will give the running game a thorough test against U.S.C. If the middle line holds up under the shots of its tackles and the bulging at its center, the unusual plays will come.

Supporting the Rockne method are two full teams that he alternates from period to period. His starting combination, known as the second eleven, is a burly array. They will match, or almost match, the weight of any team the miscalled Irish may meet. Their job is to test out the enemy strength defensively and meet physical shock with physical shock when the enemy is attacking, and they are provided with the best kicker on the Notre Dame squad—"Butch" Neimiec—in order that their experiments may be carried on in enemy territory.

They do their stuff while the first team is looking on and then that first team—more keen mentally if less ponderous physically—is shot into the fray and Notre Dame begins playing football in real earnest.

There is a brilliant array of players in the first-team line-up. Christy Flanagan, the twinkling-toed young man whose sensational run sent Army to its only defeat last year, is one of their number. But he has talented backfield mates in Charley Riley, Buck Dahman and Fred Collins or Elmer Wynne, and a knowing line in Ike Voedisch and Chile Walsh, ends; Fred Miller and Jack Polisky, tackles; Capt. John Smith and George Leppig, guards, and John Fredericks, center.

They put on Rockne's stuff as it should be put on, and, take it from those who have faced them this season, it is some stuff. The Trojan Horse will meet a foe worthy of their steel.

Because the Minnesota-Notre Dame game will probably more nearly portray the U.S.C.-Notre Dame of November 26, let us briefly go over the game played last Saturday to see how Rockne met the bone-crushing offensive of one of the greatest backfields in the country—Herb Joesting (pronounced Yosting,) one of the greatest plungers of all time; the off-tackle runners, Nydahl and Almquist and the blocking back, Barnhart.

It was a game of breaks. Neither team was superior to the other in either power or skill. A fumble by Minnesota early in the contest gave Notre Dame a chance to score a touchdown, while a bad pass from center late in the final period, when spectators already were leaving the field, believing the game won by Notre Dame, 7 to 0, gave the Gophers the chance to turn what appeared to be a certain defeat into a drawn battle.

SPEARS OUTGENERALED

The Gophers might have won the game if Doc Spears, the Minnesota coach, had not allowed himself to be outgeneraled by Rockne. For two years Rockne has been starting his big games with his second or third team, as we have mentioned before, and reserving his stars until the opposition tired. Last Saturday Spears sought to beat Rockne at his own game, but the wily Knute crossed him by starting his first-string line and second-string backs. It was this combination that scored the touchdown for Notre Dame.

Late in the first quarter, there came the fumble of a punt. Notre Dame had the ball on the Gophers' 18-yard line. The Minnesota first team had been warming up and everyone looked for them to rush out on the field to replace the scrubs. But no, Doc Spears did not think he crucial moment had arrived. He wanted, and the delay was fatal.

"Butch" Neimic grabbed the ball and, aided by wonderful interference, swept around his own right end for an easy touchdown, his interference putting all opposition out of the way.

In came the real Minnesota team and all subsequent efforts of the Notre Dame eleven to threaten the Gopher line were futile, despite the fact that soon afterward the famous Christy Flanagan, Dahman, Collins and Riley were in there, fighting their hardest.

Flanagan could do but little. He did get away once, but was tackled so hard from behind that he dropped the ball. From then on he was a marked man and all but a total loss in the South Benders' attack.

JOESTING ALSO A BUST

But if Flanagan was a bust, so was Joesting, the plunging ace of the Gophers. Like Flanagan, he was marked for extra attention and was thrown for losses and smashed to the ground wickedly time and again, and with their greatest ground-getter unable to perform, the Gophers lacked the punch to cross the Notre Dame goal until the break of the game came just before the battle ended.

Feeling that they had the victory cinched, Rockne's green-jerseyed pupils began to resort to the punting game. But there came a 15-yard penalty that moved the ball to their own 15-yard line, from where it was up to them to kick. A bad pass from center that hit one of the backs on the hip was recovered by the ever-watchful Nagurski, who made a dive that gave the Gophers the ball on Rockne's 14-yard line.

Three times the mighty Joesting, the elusive Almquist and stocky Nydahl hit the line. It withstood the crushing attack and Minnesota still had 6 yards between the ball and the goal line.

It was the fourth down.

A pass was obvious. A pass it was. Joesting heaved to Leonard Walsh, who stood, unguarded, behind the goal line. The ball dropped into his hands and the Gophers had 6 points to their credit. In came Pharmer to kick goal and his effort was successful, tying the score.

A lucky break, of course, but no luckier than that which had given Notre Dame its touchdown. The chances are that, although Doc Spears rejoices that his team held the crafty and courageous Ramblers to a tie, he is blaming himself for not sending in his first team a minute sooner.

ROCKNE HAS ONLY PRAISE FOR ARMY

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—"The Army played heads-up football and deserved to win," said Head Coach Knute Rockne of the Notre Dame team as he walked out of the Yankee Stadium after the game today. Rockne said it wasn't Notre Dame's day and that it was a clean-cut decision.

"We fired our best at them, but the Army fired back just a little harder," Rockne added. "The Army was alert and took advantage of every opportunity. Wait until next year."

YANKEE JOCKEYS IN FRENCH TURF SLUMP

PARIS, Nov. 12. (AP)—For the third consecutive year American jockeys failed to finish among the leading three riders on the French flat racing season which closed today at Saint Cloud. This fact is looked upon among the French racing public as the passing of American supremacy on the French turf which existed since the days of Tod Sloan.

Charles H. Semblat of France, with ninety-three winning mounts, carried off first honors. Semblat won the third race at Saint Cloud today at the fat odds of 30 to 1. With the race he broke a tie between himself and Arthur Ealing, at ninety-two winning mounts.

HARDY MEN OF THE NORTH COUNTREE

It won't be long now before Babe Hollingbery and his Washington State Cougars are again in our midst. They play Southern California at the Coliseum Saturday. The Cougars are tough, despite their 14-to-0 deefat at the hands of Washington, and the Trojans will have to be on their toes if victory is to be achieved.

HERE'S NEWS FOR HUNTERS OF SOUTHLAND

The rain of last week brought more ducks and geese to Southern California and made hunting at most of the watering places excellent, according to word received by Pete Peterson at the B. H. Dyas Company.

Wonderful duck hunting was had at the Mecca Duck Club last Wednesday and yesterday. Many hunters have planned to head for Salton Sea clubs today.

Word from Buena Vista Lake indicates the hunting is excellent also at Cuyamaca Lake. A report from the Alamo Duck Preserve at Salton Sea tells of the arrival of thousands of ducks and that a limit should be bagged by hunters without much trouble.

George B. Clarkson, Southern California member of the State Fish and Game Commission, and Alexander Heron have consummated a deal whereby 500 pair of Hungarian partridges have been purchased abroad and upon their arrival here will be placed in a game farm now under construction. In about three years, Clarkson declares that sportsmen may expect an open season on the partridges and also an open season on pheasant. This is another example of the wonderful work the new commissioner is doing. Old-time hunters and fishers around town declare that Clarkson is the kind of a commissioner Southern California has wanted for years.

The California Forest, Fish and Game Protective Association will hold its annual turkey shoot a week from today, the 20th inst., at Chatsworth Lake.

Andy Booth is back from the Kaibab National Forest, where during the month of October he presided as an official of the California Fish and Game Commission, a guide out of Pine Flats, hunter and all-around good fellow. He declares that the statistics of the park officials show that 1142 shooters registered for deer hunting and that each bagged a deer, 386 bucks being bagged at Pine Flat. Seventy-five per cent of the shooters were from California, the majority being from Whittier. Booth also declares that mountain lion hunting in the Kaibab was good. E. J. Boyes of Pico, Cal., reported at Dyas's last week with a 265-pound deer with fourteen points on each side, which he killed near Beryl, Utah.

SAUERS TO APPEAR IN BILLIARDS EVENT

Returning to exhibition pocket billiard play after an absence of almost seven months, Eddie Sauers, recognized coast champion, will meet all comers at the Hillstreet Billiard Parlor in 300 point contests weekly. Blocks of 100 points will be played Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights of each week.

WATCHING COAST ELEVENS

WITH HOWARD JONES
FOOTBALL COACH, U.S.C.

Betting on football games has presented a problem which is not easily remedied. Betting has a bad effect, not only on those who wager, but also on the teams concerned. The evil has existed for many years but of late it has seemed to be more prevalent, probably bcause there is more interest in football now than at any other time during the game's history.

Bad as the betting situation is on the Pacific Coast, it does not begin to compare with the evil as it exists in the Middle West. Large sums of money are wagered on the outcome of all important games, and pools are organized which run into thousands of dollars. I can remember during my coaching days in the Midwest that it was not unusual to see men running up and down the sidelines just prior to a game, seeking to get bets from those in the stands.

"NIBS" PRICE.

On many occasions in the past I can recall having to keep my teams out of the lobby of our hotel because there was so much betting going on that the players were bound to be influenced one way or the other.

Betting is bound to have an effect on the players. Constant reference in the papers to one team being a 10-to-8 favorite or another being on the short end of the odds naturally creates the wrong attitude in the minds of the players as well as supporters of the teams.

Take the recent California-Southern California game, for instance. California, in most quarters, was a 10-to-8 favorite to win. And this, despite the fact that Coach Nibs Price's team had not won a single conference game the year before, and that the team numbered many of last year's players in its line-up. These were false odds, created for the most part by San Francisco betting commissioners and overzealous supporters of the Golden Bears. As a result of these false odds and the subsequent defeat, California players and followers all felt the sting of defeat more than they would had there been no betting and no such mention of the Bears being 10-to-8 favorites.

Of course, there is no way to prevent betting on football games, or at least none has been discovered up to this time. Betting is not allowed in baseball parks and arrests are frequently made of persons violating the law in this respect. There is so much betting that goes on under cover and in pools that the law is powerless to stop it. And in the case of football there seems to be no remedy other than an appeal to the loyalty of students and alumni. Coaches, players and academic officials of an institution do not desire students or other followers of the team to bet money on the outcome of any game. They have a selfish motive in frowning on this practice because it influences the attitude of the players. They have an altruistic motive in that betting does not make for strong moral character. It brings dissatisfaction with the team, one's rival in the betting, and with oneself for failing to pick the right team to bet on, for the average of bets won is known to be no greater than those lost. The best plan of all is to refrain from betting and go out and enjoy the game for what is is worth.

GRID GOSSIP

BY BRAVEN DYER

What Pacific Coast Conference football team has the best record over the past four years? What would your answer be if somebody popped that question all of a sudden? We tried it on several dyed-in-the-wool fans and Stanford and Washington were the teams most frequently mentioned. Stanford is right, the Cards leading the Huskies by a mere whisker.

COACH BAGSHAW

Here's how the "Big Four" of the Pacific Coast rank over the past four years, conference games only being listed:

Team	W	L	T	P.C.
Stanford	13	3	1	.764
Washington	16	4	1	.761
Southern California	12	6	0	.667
California	9	7	2	.529

Inasmuch as there is no generally accepted method of figuring tie games in percentages these games have been counted as games lost, for they don't appear in the win column. With Stanford and Washington each having played a tie game over the four-year period, what is a handship for one is the same for the other.

These figures are for 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1926. Stanford will probably wind up this season with a better average than Washington and the Cards will continue to hold the lead.

There will be those who say the Huskies don't play as heavy a schedule as Stanford, California or Southern California, but Bagshaw dodged nobody but the Trojans during that four-year regime. He did beat Southern California in 1923, 22 to 0, but has shied clear of the local eleven ever since. Hostilities will be resumed in the Coliseum here December 3.

Stanford's spot in No. 1 position is due almost solely to Pop Warner. Before he arrived on the Farm the Cards were slapped around in a scandalous manner. It is our impression that Stanford has dropped but one conference game since Warner took over the reins in 1924. The Huskies copped that in Seattle when Ernie Nevers was flattened. Quite a record for Pop.

Of the six games Southern California has dropped in four years, Howard Jones has lost three. Two of these were to Stanford and one to Washington State. Gus Henderson dropped one contest in 1924, California turning the trick, and two in 1923, these to Washington and the Golden Bears.

Incidentally George Wilson, the all-American riot of 1925, started his great intercollegiate career when the Huskies were administering that 22-to-0 beating to the Trojans. Sherman, Zlel and Elmer Tesreau were the other members of the backfield. Elmer's little brother, Loule, is playing with Bagshaw's club this year.

Hayden Phythian and Hobbs Adams were the Trojan ends in that game, Norm Anderson and Ralph Cummings the tackles, John Hawkins and Honey Earle the guards, Cot Rice the center, Chet Dolley the quarterback and Otto Anderson, Chief Newman and Gordon Campbell the other ball carriers. It was Rice who started Southern California's downfall at Seattle by tossing a bad pass from center. In the Stanford game the following week Rice was replaced by Holly Adams, who picked up two blocked kicks to score the touchdowns that beat the Cardinals, 14 to 7.

Washington has played in two New year's Day games during the four-year period. The Huskies tied the Navy, 14 to 14, in 1924 and lost to Alabama, 20 to 19, in 1926. Stanford also had two January 1 dates, losing to Notre Dame 27 to 10, in 1925, and tying Alabama, 7 to 7, in 1927. Quite interesting, eh what?

Turkey Shoot on Tomorrow

It is announced by the B. H. Dyas Company that commencing tomorrow the qualifying round to one of the most unique turkey shoots ever held in Los Angeles will start. The affair will be carried on with bows and arrows on the Dyas indoor archery range and it is open to anyone who can qualify.

The qualifying round will continue until next Friday. On next Saturday the final will start and continue on the following Monday and Tuesday. In the qualifying round each contender will be allowed five arrows and if he makes a suitable score will be allowed in the finals. The distance is forty feet, the length of the Dyas range.

Some months ago Dyas installed their indoor archery range, running parallel with the rifle range. The archery range is in charge of Little Bison, Sioux Indian exhibitor and archery instructor.

The contest will be in four events, A and B class of a senior event and A and B class of a junior event. One turkey will be up for the winner in each class.

ALABAMA LOSES TO FLORIDA GRIDDERS

MONTGOMERY (Ala.) Nov 12. (AP) The University of Florida outplayed and outgeneraled Alabama here today and defeated the Crimson, 13 to 6.

It was the first time a Florida team has triumphed over Coach Wade's machine since 1922 when the Alligators spoiled championship plans of the Crimson by setting Alabama back in its only defeat of the year.

Sarazen Near Paddock Mark

TIA JUANA RACE TRACK (Mex.) Nov. 12.—A world's money-earning record for a thoroughbred racer may be set up at Tia Juana during the meeting which opens on Thanksgiving Day.

The great Sarazen is the horse that can turn the trick, providing Mrs. Virginia Fair Vanderbilt elects to bring the little red gelding out of retirement and can send him to Tia Juana, pointed for the richest stake in the world, the $100,000 Coffroth Handicap.

Sarazen's retirement is not because of any physical ailment. He is as sound as a $20 gold piece, fresh from Uncle Sam's mint. A sulky temper, the result of too many races in which he had to pack a ton of weight, sent him back to the farm.

Three hundred and three thousand odd dollars is the mark Sarazen would have to knock down to become the champion money-earner of all time. Zev took down that tidy sum before bowing his way out.

Sarazen has earned during his career over $250,000, and if the high-time-Rush box little wonder annexed the Coffroth his earnings would top the mighty Zev by over $20,000.

As Samuel Riddle's great son of Man o' War, Crusader has been nominated for the Coffroth. Sarazen would not be overburdened with weight, as the Riddle horse would get the top impost.

ARGENTINA LOSES NET MATCHES TO FRENCH

BUENOS AIRES (Argentina) Nov. 12. (AP)—Yesterday's matches in the international tennis singles between France and Argentina were won by France.

Jacques Brugnon defeated Ronald Boyd of Argentina, 6-4, 3-6, 6-1 and 6-4, while Jean Borotra of France took three straight from Willie Bobson, 6-4, 6-2, 6-5.

Tut and Amador to Battle in Feature Event at Olympic Auditorium Tuesday Night

HE'S GOING TO FIGHT ANYWAY

After two readjustments of the main event it was finally decided by the Olympic management yesterday that King Tut, shown herewith, and Pedro Amador will battle ten rounds or less next Tuesday night. Tut burst into the local limelight recently by thoroughly trouncing Stanislaus Loayza, Chilean, who is one of the ranking lightweights of the East. Originally Tut was billed to fight Luis Vicentini, but the latter broke some ribs in training.

MANDELL MEETS SPUG MYERS

Lightweight Champion Goes to Post in Ten-Round Contest at Chicago Tuesday Night

CHICAGO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Sammy Mandell, the world's lightweight champion, will meet Spug Myers of Pocatello, Idaho, in a ten-round decision contest in Chicago on Tuesday night. Sammy's title will not be at stake as the agreed weight will be 137 pounds at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the day of the fight.

When this match was made, Eddie Kane, manager of Mandell, wanted to toss the champion's title into the ring. Myers, however, admitted he cannot make 137 pounds and still be strong enough to go a fast clip with the champion.

Spug was signed as the champion's opponent after efforts to get contenders into the ring had failed. Joe Coffey, the promoter, and Jim Mullen, the match maker, tried to sign Jimmy McLarnin of California and Billy Wallace of Cleveland. This pair, however, had been previously matched to meet in Detroit. Sid Terris, the New York contender, refused flatly to meet Mandell in any place except New York. Stanislaus Loayza, the South American, has an engagement a few days later while Billy Petrolle stated he will not be in shape to fight until the middle of December.

What Mandell took the title away from Rocky Kansas, the present champion had to guarantee Kansas $50,000. When negotiations were on with some of Mandell's opponents, Kane offered to waive a substantial guarantee demand and work on percentage. This is just what Sammy will do on Tuesday night and indications are the fight will draw a capacity crowd. It will be Mandell's first appearance in Chicago since he won the title from Kansas a year ago last July. This fight will be supported by one ten-round event and three six-round contests.

Following his one-round victory over Mike McTigue, every effort will be made by Manager Jack Kearns to match Mickey Walker with either Jimmy Slattery or Tommy Loughran. The former is recognized as the world's light-heavyweight champion by the National Boxing Association, while the New York commission contends Loughran is the 175-pound king. In order that there may be no question as to the light-heavyweight champion, Kearns is willing to match Walker with both men. In fact Kearns honestly believes Mickey can whip Jack Dempsey and nothing would please him more than to send Walker against the former heavyweight title-holder.

Kearns and Dempsey are scheduled to go to bat in court this week in Trenton, N. J. Kearns says that Dempsey owes him $333,333.33 as his share of his manager's contract. Teddy Hayes, a former secretary of Dempsey, also says Dempsey owes him money and these matters are expected to be straightened out this week. Parties concerned have engaged able legal talent and some nasty remarks may be made by the principals involved.

Roleaux Saguero, the Cuban light-heavyweight, continues to be a card in Chicago. Just recently, the Cuban stopped Benny Ross of Buffalo, N. Y., in two rounds. He is a southpaw who has the kick of a mule in his left hand. He can take punishment but once he connects with that straight left hand it is curtains. Promoter Mullen is planning on using Johnny Risko against this knock-out expert.

Jimmy McLarnin of California and Billy Wallace of Cleveland, two of the outstanding contenders for the world's lightweight title held by Sammy Mandell, will meet in Detroit on November 23. The winner of this fight will be generally recognized as Sammy's contender and promoters in all sections of the country will start bidding for the bout. Eddie Kane, manager of Mandell, does not fear any of the contenders and will sign for matches as soon as satisfactory terms are offered.

If Gene Tunney, the heavyweight champion, lives up to his promise, he will defend his title for Promoter Jim Mullen in Chicago this summer. After the Tunney-Dempsey affair in Chicago last September, the champion told Mullen he had not been treated fairly by having Rickard come in and run the big affair. In order to make amends, Gene said he will fight for Mullen this summer. Jimmy Bronson, who was Tunney's chief second in both of the Dempsey fights, stated that Gene intends to go through with this promise.

CALIFORNIA SHOOTERS BEST

California amateur trapshooters lead in three out of five classes, according to the latest figures released by Jimmy Robinson from national headquarters at Vandalia, O.

A. Elasho of Monterey is the leader in the 500-to-1000 class with a percentage of .982. A. J. Stauber of this city tops the 1000-to-2000 class with a percentage of .990, while Dr. H. W. TEXAS SAILORS DROP GRID TILT

New Mexico Battleship Tars Win Game, 12 to 0

Mississippi Squad Trounces West Virginia, 26 to 6

Texas Line Gives Way After Terrific Struggle

Battling against heavy odds, the Battleship Texas yesterday afternoon went down to defeat, 12 to 0, on Tron Field, before the onslaught of the heavy hard-pounding battleship New Mexico squad.

Fighting tooth and nail, the Texans managed to hold their own during the first half of the game, but in the final periods were unable to stem the surging rushes of Lieut. Hunt's wonder ship squad.

In the second game of the day, played on No. 2 award, the speedy battleship Mississippi team downed the hard-fighting U.S.S. West Virginia aggregation, 26 to 6, in a game which featured several sensational runs and numerous long-distance passes.

A crowd estimated at 20,000 persons witnessed the contests.

In the feature game of the day, the New Mexico opened by kicking off. The Texas went 10 yards on receiving and continued to make gains throughout the quarter with line smashes. The Texas line was given wonderful interference for the backfield men and it appeared as if the New Mexico who were pre-game favorites to win by at least three touchdowns, were going to give way before the hard-fighting Texans.

The second period found the New Mexico pounding the Texas line and the Steers were weakening as the half ended. The third quarter found the wonder ship again hitting the line and shoving the ball toward the Texas goal. The New Mexico made two incomplete passes, the last of which was intercepted by the Texas. The New Mexico then shoved the ball down to the Texas 1-yard line where they were held for three downs. Pigg of the wonder ship squad managed to lunge through center for the first touchdown and then failed in his attempt to convert as the quarter ended.

In the final period, Dumbler, who also played great football throughout the game, made the longest run of the day when he went 50 yards on pass from Pigg. He was overtaken by Gulette of the Texas on the Steers' 5-yard line. Chapman, another outstanding player on the New Mexico team, scored the final touchdown of the game when he went 5 yards around right end to deposit the ball behind the Texas line. The Texas made several long gains via the aerial route in the final period in their attempt to score but were unable to get the ball in the New Mexico's goal area.

SAILORS USE AIR

The game between the Mississippi and West Virginia was one of the hardest fought this season. The home ship scored with several long passes with McBride, quarterback for the Mississippi, taking part in nearly every play. The Mississippi scored a few seconds after the opening whistle had sounded when Vain scored a touchdown after running 20 yards upon receiving a long pass from McBride. In the final quarter the Mountaineer sailors weakened long enough for the home ship boys to score two touchdowns. The Mississippi also crossed in the third stanza.

Indiana Team Sweeps to Win Over Wildcats

EVANSTON (Ill.) Nov. 12. (AP)—A fighting alert Indiana team swept the Northwestern Wildcats to a decisive 18-to-7 defeat before 37,000 persons in a home-coming football game at Dyche Stadium this afternoon. The defeat was the fourth in a row for Northwestern, several of whose stars today were forced to watch the game from the side lines because of injuries.

Two factors stood out in today's victorious invasion of the Hoosiers—first, the Indiana line outweighed, outbucked and outsmarted the purple wall, ripping large holes for the charging Indiana backs; second, the Hoosier backs thought nothing of a tackle, squirming away time and again for long runs when it seemed as if they were smothered by the Wildcat avalanche.

Northwestern appeared to be the vicious line-smashing eleven of earlier conference games when the game started, pushing the fighting, but yielding Hoosiers to their own territory within the first few minutes of play. But when it came to the scoring punch the Indians came to life, punishing the Wildcats with losses and hard tackles. Northwestern made fourteen first downs as against Indiana's seven. The Hoosiers, however, made 385 yards from scrimmage, compared with Northwestern's 223. The Purple tried thirteen passes, completing three for 35 yards. Indiana attempted seven passes, completing none.

ERNIE OWENS TO MEET CORBETT AT HOLLYWOOD

Light-heavyweights and heavyweights will furnish most of the thrills at the Hollywood American Legion Stadium Friday night. Ernie Owens, very cocky and confident since he flattened Oscar Baker, is meeting Tom Corbett in the main event and his brother, Al Corbett, will fight Vigo Doman, a very good heavyweight in the semi-wind-up.

The Corbetts are rated as two of the best big boys in California today. Tom is a kayo artist and all he wants is just to get Owens in the ring with him. "I'll do to Owens what he did to Oscar Baker," says Tom Corbett.

Big boys are always attractions. They have the wallop and the fans like to see sockers go into action.

Two of the best young heavyweights in the West today are Vigo Doman and Al Corbett. While the Corbetts have done all their fighting in California around the Bay district their reputations are known here.

Billy Hoon, a new face at Hollywood, will fight Phil Harris in the special event. Harris is a regular performer at the stadium and has always delivered. Ed Remy battles Joe Rickey in the second spot and Tony Francis will swap socks with Herman Ritterhouse in the opener.

CAVLIFLOWER ALLEY NOTES

Disgusted in the extreme by the bunny caressing of Bud Taylor and Jimmy Furr in their close-fist battle at the Olympic Auditorium last Tuesday night, one of the regular customers peered forth as follows: "That constant clutching and embracing of two good fighters is a pain in the public's neck. The followers of boxing want to see fights and not wrestling contests. The scrap between Sangor and Taylor was real mitt stuff—that between Taylor and Furr a sort of miniature Davis-Court and Londos bugfest. If there are any boxers to be thrown around human barrels, let them confine the work to catch-as-catch-can babies. In England they throw a fighter out of the ring if he tries to pull off a petting party with his opponent."

After a number of autos well filled with collapsible chairs from the open field of the Dundee-Hudkins fiasco had filled Pico-Wright Park, a copper playing the role of "Lone Wolf" was seen shooing back to the grounds with one chair under his arm. The gang bidded him unmercifully, but he never swerved one inch from his course of duty. The lone salvager afterward proved to be the officer, who in answer to the question, "Where did the Battle of Bunker Hill take place?" knowingly spouted, "At First and Flower streets."

Many still believe that Ad Wolgast is not so coco nutty as he is cracked up to be. Some time ago when Johnny Schiff drove out to Patton to see the ex-pugilist, Ad greeted the referee with, "So they finally got you out here, too, Johnny."

At the Manhat last Tuesday afternoon two palooks spun off a lot of cheap swash about fighters in general. They finally drifted around to Ace Hudkins's toughness and gameness. "It's his toughness that wins fights for him," maintained one of the camp lizards. "Nothing of the kind," countered the other. "It's nothing more or less than his bulldog veracity."

"That's feeding lambs to the wolves," said Bob Perry as Ernie Owens and Oscar Baker squared off for action at Culver City. Now peaceful citizens, when you come to think about it, Bob was pretty near right.

Capt. Corola in his own quiet little way burbles as follows: "Now bring on your Ted Morgan and see how quick my boy Darlo Barrec will knock the junior lightweight crown from his topknot. Darlo is a real champion and make no mistake." It's now up to Morgan to see that his crown does not pass over the Rio Grande.

Darby Kelly (one of the most illustrious of the Kelly clan, including Marcus Aurelius) tantalizingly spiels as follows: "I have the greatest lightweight on the Coast today, and his name is Charley Feracl." Larney Lichtenstein got back with, "Ah—he's not such a much—he's lost several battles." "So did Napoleon," the world's greatest fighter," uppercut Darby and Larney stay put.

They have a moan and groan room at the Manhat, where referees toiling and spinning in the dear little sticks let off their superfluous steam. The usual wail is, "Why in the h—— do they shoot me clear out to the jerk waters and I sure think I can referee as good as George Blaka. Gee, I wish I had a drag with the Governor. I sure would make some babies dance to my music." Referees may come and go, but the Boxing Commission goes on forever, perhaps.

Mind you, this is what George Hussey articulates, and George is known as the "main event" "Ace Hudkins has the best pair of legs of any pugilist I have ever seen, and I have seen 'em all from John L. Sullivan up to Jack Dempsey." Jack Clark disputed this, claiming that Clara Bow's have got Ace's skun to death.

Kid Broad, Johnny Schiff and Teddy Silva went over last Sunday night to hear Aimee. At the grand-kick-in time the kid fainted and Johnny and Teddy carried him out.

Yotta get Tom Doyle to tell you about his invasion of the Arctic regions and his thrilling adventures in and around Wasilla during his six weeks' sojourn. Tom declares that the trip by boat was worth the price of admission alone. He had a hair-breadth escape from a spouting whale and nothing but his O'Sullivan heels saved him from a fate similar to that of Jonah's.

"Whatin the hell's the matter with this town?" growled Shuffles Callahan at the Manhattan last Tuesday as he shooed up after a sleepless night. "I tried to go to sleep last night about 11 o'clock and not a damned gun went off. In Chicago, the music of the old gats soon put me into dreamland every night. This is sure one punk burg."

Philadelphia Kid Broad got the trimming of his life from Mike Gibbons some years ago at Winnipeg. The kid's face the next day looked like the stern end of a Herkimer cheese. He met Mike in front of the sporting headquarters of the town and as they shook hands, Broad queried, "Where'd you git the black eye, Mike?" "Fell off one of those trick street cars this morning," was Gibbons's quick rejoinder and the best part of the whole shooting match was, the kid believed him.

Introducing Gene Doyle, who fathers the following: "Trojan faculty was deploring the fact that the boys would lose much precious time in their studies in their trip to play Notre Dame. A wag suggested, 'let 'em hold class on the train going and coming and they can take up Scotch.'"

When Jack Dempsey returned to Los Angeles recently after his fight with Tunney, he met a friend on Spring street and after the two had shaken hands, the friend complained, "I was there, Jack, but didn't have any to speak a seat; I was too far back." "I was luckier than you," countered Dempsey, "why I had the best seat in the whole place in the eighth round."

Strolling down Pug's Plaza (rear fover of the Olympic Auditorium last Tuesday night the following pillars of the local boxing game were run up with, Benny Whitman, conspecutive referee; jolly-bodied Jack Clark; Darby Kelly, cauliflower fly; Freddie Gilmore, arbiter par excellence; Doc Mace, the gink that puts fouls on the hum; Clyde Hudkins, head of the wicked industry; Pop Nealis, keeper of the stole for Carlo Curtis; Charley McDonald, beauty expert and kisp of Burlesque; Al Wirt Ross, the Robinson Crusoe of the Panama fight game; Billy Vas, the lad that names 'em; Art Brashen, white hope seeker; Morris Cohn, the wandering Jew; Eddie McKenna, the human glove cushion; Dave Landau (whatchen; Johnny Schiff; Dave Barry, Jr.; Eddie Long, prospective Mayor of Terra Haute; Chowface Larry, who knuckles 'em for Bud Taylor; Harry Lykke, the greatest promoter in Culver City; Eddie Smith, dean of American sports writes; Bob Perry, the real Bon Hur of the movies; Larney Lichtenstein, head of Uncle Tom's Cabin stable of mauleers; Max Winkler, who hasn't missed a local bout since John Brink sank that famous right of his into Jeff's breadbasket; Phil Kessler, czar of the Gallopping Ghosts of the Piggly Wiggly junior championships.

Race Driver Meets Death

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Nov. 12.—Frank Boyer, 23, of 968 West Forty-third street, Los Angeles, was killed at the fair grounds track early this afternoon, as he was tuning up a Peoria Special racing car owned by Sam Palmer of Los Angeles, by whom he had been employed. Palmer had been disqualified by the A.A.A. representative, on production of a record of outlaw driving, it was stated. Boyer, unfamiliar with the car, hugged the fence too closely on the third turn and overturned five times. He died of skull fracture as he was being rushed to the hospital.

The event was the last, of twenty-five miles, won by Glenn Heitt of Rock Island, Ill., in 19m. 27s., Charles Gardner of Albuquerque, second. A ten-mile sprint was taken by John Kruger, Longmont, Colo., in 8:49 2-5. Gardner was second. The five-mile race went to Kruger, trailed by Heitt. The fastest mile was in the elimination trials, 45 2-5, by Kruger, just a second slower than DePalma's record on the local track. A freak two-mile race, for cars older than 1908, was taken by Peterson in a 1902 Peerless in 5m. 8s.

JOE CARDOZA AND TONY TOVAR CLASH

Middle-sized boys will mingle in the three feature bouts at Ocean Park Athletic Club next Wednesday evening, it was announced yesterday by the management. In the eight-round main event Joe Cardoza and Tony Tovar, 150-pounders, will exchange hooks and jolts. Said to be two of the hardest-hitting boys in the beak-busting business, these lads are expected to stage a sock-fest de luxe. Veteran ringworms are predicting that this bout will be the fastest and classiest ever staged in the beach arena and that it will end via the knockout route. The semi-wind-up will feature Joe Bitto and Walter Caldwell at 155 pounds.

IOWA WINS TILT FROM WISCONSIN

Brilliant Attack Gives Hawkeyes Victory Over Badgers, 16-0

MADISON (Wis.) Nov. 12. (AP)—Flashing a brilliant attack, backed by a defense that proved virtually impenetrable, Iowa spoiled Wisconsin's home-coming celebration today by downing the Badgers, 16 to 0, here.

To nearly 40,000 fans, it was the Hawkeyes' answer to recent criticism of their coach. But Ingwersen, for they fought with a new-found fury that repeatedly swept aside the vaunted Badgers' line.

This rejuvenated Hawkeye strength showed itself at the outset principally in the attack of the dashing, plunging Armil at left half and supported by quick moving and effective interference and a line that would not give.

In gains from scrimmage, the Iowa backs showed themselves superior, garnering 141 yards, principally on the 86 yards Armil got and the 37 yards Glassegow added. Wisconsin netted 120 yards on rushes.

Bud Taylor Home Finds ex-Wife Better

TERRE HAUTE (Ind.) Nov. 12. (AP) Bud Taylor, claimant of the bantamweight championship, who made a hurried trip by air and rail from the West Coast when informed that his divorced wife, Mrs. Iris Ward Taylor, was seriously ill, arrived here last night. He found Mrs. Taylor much improved although physicians said she was still in a critical condition as the result of peritonitis.

When informed of Mrs. Taylor's illness, Taylor started from Los Angeles by airplane but changed to a railroad train at Salt Lake City.

FRAYO COPS CLOSE GO OVER FERNANDO

Manuel Frayo defeated Johnny Fernando in a fast, hard eight-round main event at the Main-Street Athletic Club last night. Frayo scored a knockdown in the seventh round which gave him an edge on the bout after Fernando had battled at an even pace for six rounds.

Manuel Vasquez won over Amadio Terrazas in a slow six-round semifinal go. Vasquez substituted for Joaquin Elias.

Jimmy Hart and "Battling" Fleming fought to a fast draw in six rounds. Courtney Reese knocked out William Bayon in the first round of a scheduled four-rounder. Bayon was on the floor six times before taking the final count. Claude Stotts defeated Charley McClintock in the opener.

DEMPSEY MAKES BIG HIT AT GRID CLASSIC

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP) — Jack Dempsey's popularity was demonstrated today when the former heavyweight champion was besieged for autographs at the Army-Notre Dame gridiron battle at the Yankee Stadium. Dempsey was kept busy between periods writing his signature on gloves, hats, vanity cases and other articles, and, incidentally, the demand was heavy from the fair sex.

VIRGINIA GRID PREPS CLAIM TEAM RECORD

PORTSMOUTH (Va.) Nov. 12. (AP)—Woodrow Wilson High School of Portsmouth is believed to have established a long-distance record by holding opponents without a score in eighteen consecutive football games. The team has not been scored on since the 1925 season.

GOLD RUINING BOXING GAME

Experts Claim Huge Purses Hurt Ring Sport

Fighters Forget to Fight for Mitt Titles

More Fights and Less Money May Change Card

BY BENNY LEONARD

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—After reading the fight news in the papers the last few days and listening in on many of the arguments along what has come to be known as "tin ear alley," in fact, all over the middle of the city where "fight" is talked, —I feel inclined to remark like the fellow who came to town on a load of hay:

"Wall, I swan."

What with the promoters squawking back and forth about "monopoly," the managers suing and counter-suing, the fighters bickering and quarreling but not fighting—the game is falling upon what my scholarly friend, Gene Tunney, alludes to as "parlous times." And unless something is done these times will become "parlouser" and "parlouser," or I miss my guess.

Here we read that the heavyweight champion of the world is out with a statement that he suspects, nay, believes, Tex Rickard is the real manager of Jack Dempsey; there we read of the charge made by Jack Kearns that he was "forced" into a contract in connection with the Mickey Walker and Tiger Flowers battle in Chicago, that "virtually amounted to blackmail." Going further afield we come across the Joe Dundee and Ace Hudkins fiasco in Los Angeles, and coming back we read of a movement afoot by the reformers to have the Walker boxing law repealed. All of which in the language of the industry, is fine stuff.

TOO MUCH MONEY

What is the cause of all this? Can it be that boxing has grown into a financial Frankenstein that it will finally destroy the game?

Something must be done, is what we hear on all sides, but nobody seems capable or willing to offer a solution as to just what it is that must be done to save boxing.

In this connection I cannot help but recall the words of Mayor Jimmy Walker of this city when he said:

"It is not the game of boxing that is wrong; it's some of those that are in it."

The whole thing the matter is that boxing is becoming too commercialized. There's too much talk about "big" money. Nowadays a champion doesn't want to fight in the ring. The real battle is in the counting rooms of the managers and the promoters.

The action in the ring is the last thing considered, it seems. Even in my day or some of my days as champion, this was starting. But the fight was still the thing when I was in there doing my stuff. As I said in another article time and again I have gone on and fought when the guarantee wasn't in the house. And so did many of my contemporaries.

Thinking it all over I am led to believe that nowadays the champions are afraid they're going to "lose their titles" every time they step into the ring to defend them. In our time, not so very long ago, either, dear reader, we went into the ring thinking we were unbeatable, hoping the challenger could give us a good fight, but nevertheless leaving nothing undone to secure ourselves victory—so long as it was fair and square.

FIGHTS CHANGED

Yes, sir, all the fighting is done nowadays "outside" the ring. They swap adjectives instead of punches—they lead with a habeas corpus instead of a left hook. The lawsuit has replaced the corkscrew punch. They go to court instead of into a clinch.

There's one way of remedying all this.

That is to get back to the old order of things in a way. Keep all the real constructive improvements and cut out all of the funeus that is growing around the roots of the game and threatening to destroy it. Let's not offer $1,000,000 purses. I don't want to appear to be a Bolshevik. But the real champion today can make enough money without $1,000,000 purses. It is these enormous purses that cause all the troubles. They bring into action factions that are inimical to boxing as a sport. They breed hatreds and differences, because they require so many different fingers in the pie. And naturally the fight itself becomes a secondary consideration to the purse. Also it might be well to give a thought to this: In the old days when the boys were really fighting for the bigger percentage of the purse there was less unpleasant notoriety than there is today.

And now, once more. Let's remember this; there's nothing the matter with boxing that can't be remedied, if those that are in a position to remedy it have a mind to do so.

LA HOOD WILL BATTLE ZORILLA IN HARBOR GO

Dixie La Hood, Butte (Mont.) battler fighting his third Wilmington bout, meets Santiago Zorilla in the ten-round main event Wednesday night. Zorilla, rated one of the best featherns in this section and probably the greatest showman among the little fellows, is the outstanding box-office attraction in the harbor section.

Al Nelson and Billy Blake, lightweights, are slated to box the six-round semifinal. Skip Leabo and Sailor Billy Engman meet in the feature preliminary. The fours show Al Wilton against Ted Sluder and Sailor Ratkin meeting Babe Jackson.

BAY CITY TO HOLD OLYMPIC RIFLE TILT

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive) Tryouts for places on the United States rifle team to the international competition at Amsterdam, Holland, next July, will be held at Leona Heights, San Francisco, on the 27th inst., Adjutant-General R. E. Mittelstaedt announced today. The best riflemen from California will go east for the final elimination competition to be held at Quantico, Va., next spring.

Michigan Backs Pulverize Navy Line to Defeat Midshipmen, 27 to 12, at Ann Arbo

RECORD CROWD LAUDS VICTORS

Wolverines Smash Sailors' Line at Will

Score Two Touchdowns in First Half

Lloyd Races 85 Yards for Navy Touchdown

MICHIGAN STADIUM, ANN ARBOR, (Mich.) Nov. 12. (AP)—A slashing, fighting Michigan backfield tore through the Navy line and off the ends to win their intersectional clash with the Midshipmen, 27 to 12, here today.

"HURRY UP" YOST

Some 87,000 persons crowded into Michigan's new $1,000,000 stadium to witness the game.

A versatile line - smashing attack which twice took the ball over the Navy goal line in the first period gave Michigan a lead which they did not relinquish despite the brilliant passing and running attack of Lloyd and Ransford, Navy backs.

Lloyd, Navy's triple-threat man, bore the burden of the Middies' attack until late in the third period when Ransford entered the game with Michigan leading, 27 to 6. Immediately following Michigan's second touchdown, Lloyd tore around Michigan's right end and, outdistance the Wolverine' defense men, ran 85 yards for a touchdown. The second Navy score came in the third period, when Ransford, after carrying the attack to Michigan's 4-yard line, slipped through the line for touchdown. Both of Lloyd's tries for point after touchdown went wild.

The Michigan passing combination, Bennie Oosterbaan to Louie Gilbert, got under full headway. The Michigan captain displayed the form which gave him all-American honors. He grabbed a 40-yard pass from Gilbert late in the final period, which took the ball to Navy's 17-yard line, where the Wolverines lost the ball on downs. The second Michigan touchdown was the result of a pass from Oosterbaan which Gilbert took on Navy's 2-yard line, where two Navy tacklers dropped him.

Despite the overwhelming lead which Michigan ran up in the first two periods, Navy continued to threaten, Lloyd and Ransford breaking away time and again for long gains, usually starting from a triple pass.

Michigan's most ancient of plays, the "old 83," paved the way for the first touchdown, when Gilbert tore around Navy's right end to go out of bounds on the 17-yard line. Rich and Oosterbaan combined to drive through the line to Navy's 4-yard line, where Rich plunged over center for a touchdown.

Two minutes later Gilbert broke away on a triple pass to run 22 yards, aided by perfect interference, to Navy's 8-yard line. Here a lateral pass, Oosterbaan to Gilbert, put the ball on Navy's 2-foot line, where Rich again dove high over the line for his second touchdown.

On the first play following the kick-off, Lloyd sneaked off Michigan's right tackle into an open field and outran Oosterbaan for Navy's first score. He crossed the goal line 15 yards ahead of the Michigan captain.

Line-up and summary:

Michigan (27)		Navy (12)
Oosterbaan	L.E.	Blosse
Pomerening	L.T.	Wilson

NET EXHIBITIONS AT 'SAWTELLE DEDICATION

Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, former world's women's singles tennis champion, and Ben Gorchakoff, Occidental collegian luminary, will feature at the dedication this afternoon of Sawtelle's two new cement tennis courts recently constructed and completed by the city ficials.

The exhibitions will be opened by Edward Berry of the Los Angeles Tennis Club, and Ben Gorchakoff, Intercollegiate national finalist, who will tangle at 2 o'clock in a men's singles. Immediately following, Mrs. May Sutton Bundy and either Marion Williams or Miss Midge Gladman, the latter girls' national title-holder, will perform in a women's singles, to be followed by men's and mixed doubles matches in which the remaining of the troupe will compete.

LINCOLN PARK NET TOURNEY CONTINUES

The annual Lincoln Park tennis championships will resume play this afternoon on the park courts with quarterfinal and a few semifinal round matches on tap for the racketers in competition for the 1927 titles. Alfred Duff, Joe Ciano, Jack DeLara and Robert Paige continue to lead the field in the men's ingles event. Dale Robinson and Lee Osborne, by an upset of the Duff-Busch combination last week-end, rest comfortably in the semifinals and are favored to enter the finals and cop the doubles crown. The chairman of the committee has arranged several features for this afternoon, with all the seeded favorites on the program. The tourney ends tomorrow afternoon when finals will be staged.

COLORADO FARMERS BEAT MINERS, 37-6

GOLDEN (Colo.) Nov. 12. (AP)—After the fighting Colorado Mines eleven gave all it had for the three periods the steam roller of the Colorado Aggies started to function and the weary Ore Diggers gave way, allowing the Farmers to score four touchdowns in the final period and take the Mines home-coming game, 37 to 6, here today.

For those who crave problems only, the Nebraska State Journal has a chess department edited by Edward P. Sharp, 3435 R street, Lincoln, Neb. Drop him a card for a clipping.

The Los Angeles Chess Club has been running a Kings Gambit (accepted or declined) tourney, with all wins scored on a handicap basis taken from the players' rating in the club's perpetual ticket tourney. All of the gambit tourney games unplayed by the 20th inst. will be scheduled.

Following are the results of the fifth-round games played last week in the 1928 Los Angeles Chess Club championship tourney: Patterson 1, Austrian 0; Schrader ½, Weinbaum ½; Mugridge 0, Pray 1; Bateman 1, Holt O. Total scores at the end of the fifth round: Borochow, 4½—½; Scholtz, 4—1; Schrader and Weinbaum, 3½—1½ each; Patterson and Pray, 2½—2½ each; Bateman, 2-3; Austrian, 1½—3½; Mugridge, 1—4; Holt 0—5.

United States Champion Frank J. Marshall, in his chess department in the November issue of the Sportsman, gives the following game from the Topleix Schaeman tourney in 1922. Dr. Tartakower considers this his best game, because it was played against a master of the highest rank and victory was not obtained through a serious blunder by his opponent, and because the sacrifice at move 17, when subsequently analyzed in all variations, proved perfectly sound.

Kriegspiel, a branch of chess, is becoming more and more popular at clubs in this country and Europe. Starting today, a regular feature of this column will be articles on Krieg by Alfred N. Pray, local expert and national authority on the game.

THE GAME OF KRIEG, NO. 1
By Alfred N. Pray

Beginning with the present I shall offer a brief weekly article on Krieg, or "Krieg-spiel." This game was adapted from chess by an ingenious London player some twenty years ago, and its fascinating qualities are recognized wherever it is known. Suppose you could play a game of chess in such a way that your moves are hidden from your opponent, and his from you, except as the two forces interfere with each other's play. You would have a sort of war game, full of ambuscades and surprises, instead of an analytical game like chess. It is not practical to conceal the moves on a single chessboard. If you place a curtain in the middle of the board, sooner or later a piece must be placed beyond the curtain; and the blindfold player sees the whole board in his mind. For this game we need a special arrangement of boards and men.

Stanley Hunt, Trona, Cal., inquires regarding play by mail. A. T. Leise, secretary of the Correspondence Chess League of America, 1680 Avenue A, New York City, will gladly mail information to anyone. Correspondence players wishing games may send their names to this column for publication.

A. E. Lacomble, care of the Shell Company, Postoffice Box A, Wilmington, Cal., inquires regarding chess in his vicinity. The Los Angeles Chess and Checker Club, 921 Union League Building, is open seven days a week from morning till midnight. Visitors are always welcome. L. W. Palmer, secretary, will gladly give further information.

Donald McKenna, chess champion of Pomona College at Claremont, Cal., sends in analysis of the ending of the twelfth game of the world's title match which we published three weeks ago. The position at resignation was Alekhine (white,) K-KB2, Q-QN2, R-QB, P's-KR2, KN3, KB4, K3, QB5, QN4, QR3; Capablanca (black,) K-QB, Q-KB3; R-QB6, P's-KR3, KN4, KB2, K3, K5, QN4, QR3. Resignation was justified by: If PxP; 42. RxR, PxNPch; 43. K-N, PxPch; 44. KxP, and Black can get no perpetual check

At this writing the world's title match is Alekhine 4, Capablanca 2, with twenty draws. October 23 we published a statement by Capablanca that the match would go to the player first winning six games; this column was probably the first chess medium in this country to give that fact. The widespread impression was that the match would end at twenty games. The misunderstanding was probably due to the rules formulated last August by the National Chess Federation to govern United States championship matches, limited to twenty games, but the rules adopted at the London Chess Congress in 1922 to govern world's title matches stipulate that the title goes to the player first winning six games.

During a brief visit to Cuba last January the writer enjoyed a chat with World's Champion Capablanca, and yet didn't get to see him. And how? Over the phone.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 12. (AP)—The twenty-eighth game for the world's chess championship, which was adjourned Thursday, today was declared a draw after the forty-third move. In the resumed game only three moves were necessary.

In the present series Alekhine has won four games, Capablanca two. Twenty-two games have been drawn. The twenty-ninth game will be played Monday.

IGNORE CROWD, IS GRID RULE

Tad Jones Tells Players to Forget Spectators

"Put the Game Above All Else," Says Yale Coach

Eli Mentor Successful in Developing Men

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) Nov. 12. (AP)—Football is a game and a sport, not a spectacle; that is the message that has been preached to successive classes of football players by "Tad" Jones, now serving his last season as head football coach at Yale.

"Tad" Jones

Jones has taught his players that the roar of the crowd is of minor consequence and that the cheers of today are the "boo" of tomorrow.

"Put the game above everything else," he urged, and because Yale men have admired Jones and respected his teachings, they did.

The result of his teachings has made his teams as "glorious in defeat" as in victory, although that phrase has been used sometimes more in sarcasm than in sincerity.

The doctrine Jones preached to the teams he has followed himself in his capacity as coach. While the efficacy of his methods sometimes has been questioned, no one has questioned his sincerity or the results he has attained with the individual player.

Just before he developed the great Mallory, he was the subject of severe criticism, not only in print but wherever Yale graduates met, but he kept right on plugging. And when he turned out an invincible team, the tide of criticism turned to praise, but he paid no more attention to one than to the other. He has taken heart-breaking losses of material, due to scholastic standing, along with the other "breaks" and offered no alibis.

The difference between the methods used by Haughton, Harvard's famous coach, and Jones, has been a subject of conversation wherever football fans have gathered. Those who have studied both methods say that Haughton's goal was a football machine, whereas Jones was content to build up the individual player. That Jones's method was at least partly successful was attested to by the number of games in which Yale was triumphant through the work of an individual.

Jones leaves Yale for one reason alone, and that is, pressure of business. He wanted to quit earlier this year. He asked the faculty to accept his resignation in the spring, but he was prevailed on to "think it over" during the summer. He has thought it over and decided that football's demand upon his time is too great.

Santa Barbara High Wins Tilt

SANTA BARBARA, Nov. 12.—The Santa Barbar High School eleven handed Harvard Military Academy of Los Angeles a 25-to-13 trimming here this afternoon, in a battle featured by the Franciscans' exceptional passing.

Santa Barbara started the scoring in the second quarter when Greeson passed to Barker from his own 43-yard line to Harvard's 25-yard line, the latter running the remaining distance to score. Pierucci scored the second touchdown after Greeson had passed to Barker for 37 yards to the three-yard line. The third score was also the result of a 20-yard pass, Greeson to Barker, the latter again running thirty-nine yards to score. And another pass Greeson to Barker, for 14 yards, gave the final score to Santa Barbara.

Harvard scored early in the encounter on sweeping end runs, John Deuel finally galloping around end to score. Late in the final period, Loveall scored from the four-yard line, after Deuel had packed the ball on seven downs to within scoring distance. Santa Barbara had its entire second string in the game at the close of the encounter.

MERRITT MAY NOT PLAY IN GAME WITH TIGERS

CLAREMONT, Nov. 12. (Exclusive) Causing no little anxiety and perturbation on this campus, was the news today that Harold Merritt, star Pomona College halfback and leading scorer of the undefeated Sagehen eleven, is injured and may not play against Occidental when the two colleges clash next Saturday in their annual game. Merritt injured the muscles in his hip against University of Redlands Friday and had to be taken out of the game in the first quarter. He could hardly walk after the game and was little better after medical treatment. Coach Eugene Nixon declared that Merritt would probably be withheld from all scrimmage this next week in the hope of recovery in time for the crucial game.

HOLY CROSS BOWS TO MARQUETTE GRIDDERS

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 12. (AP)—The West turned back an eastern invasion today when Marquette University downed Holy Cross of Worcester, Mass., 12 to 6.

Tied at the half by virtue of both teams scoring touchdowns in the first period, Marquette gained the advantage through a brilliant passing attack, led by Gebert, that swept from the Holy Cross 38-yard mark across the visitors' goal line.

AMONG THE FANS

J. B. Hanson played two matches while in Kansas City, Mo. One ten-game match with George Farley in which he "spotted" Farley one game and then won by score of 3 to 2 and 5 draws. The second match was a twenty-game affair with Willie Ryan which he lost 4 to 1 and 13 draws. Ryan won the third and fourth games (both sides of 12-16, 22-17) and the sixteenth and seventeenth games while the twelfth game was the only win Hanson scored. In the sixteenth game Hanson lost the black side of the "switcher" and in the seventeenth game lost white side of the "fife." His lone win was scored with the black side of "Will-o-the-Wisp."

William Jordan recently passed away at his home in Edinburgh, Scotland. This is the last of the three Jordans (however none of them were related) who were prominent in the checker world. William was better known as an analyst and correspondence player while Richard and Alfred will always be remembered for their cross-board ability, although the latter done a lot of playing by correspondence before coming to this country. William Jordan assisted Richard Jordan in his preparations for his world's championship matches.

The Roseville Citizen carried an announcement of the death of Joe Collins, a veteran player of Pittsburgh. Joe was very popular wherever he was known and an extended biography of his checker activities can be found in the Sixth American Tourney Book

The best book ever published on the Switcher is part 3 of Ketchum's Handy Manual No. 2. The editor has several copies on hand at fifty cents each.

NEW GYM FOR CAGERS ON REDLANDS SQUADS

REDLANDS, Nov. 12.—The University of Redlands basketball games this year will be played on the new gymnasium flood of the Y.M.C.A. floor, for while excellent progress is being made on the $300,000 university gym it probably cannot be ready in time.

Ashel Cunningham is to coach the varsity and is to be assisted by Lee Trine. Cecil Cushman is to have charge of the freshman squad.

HASKELL INDIANS BEAT LOYOLA TEAM

LAWRENCE (Kan.) Nov. 12. (AP)—The Haskell Indians accomplished what no other team has been able to do during the last three years and turned back the Maroon cyclone of Loloya University from New Orleans in a thrilling intersectional grid contest here this afternoon. The score was 3 to 0. A place-kick by Capt. Hawley from the 20-yard line in the final quarter gave the Braves the victory.

BARNEY OLDFIELD SELECTED AS HEAD OFFICIAL AT ASCOT

BY GASON OYLE

Barney Oldfield, veteran of veterans in the automobile racing game, is to be the supreme official at the staging of the first major A.A.A. automobile classic November 27 at the Ascot Speedway.

Harlan Fengler, former race driver who is putting on the classic at the big dirt bowl, made this announcement last night as the A. A. A. champion ship drivers were ready to open practice for this first big major dirt-track racing event in the West.

HARLAN FENGLER

Oldfield, whose name has been synonymous with this hazardous sport since the days of the original Vanderbilt Cup races, and who was the first man to drive at the "unbelievable" speed of a mile a minute in Henry Ford's first racing car, the mysterious 999 that had a bar of wood for a steering gear, will officiate at the November 27 event as referee, Fengler stated.

Back from another grueling cross-country drive—one of the several terrific test drives he makes yearly, Oldfield yesterday inspected the rebuilt Ascot track with Fengler.

With the inevitable cigar stuck in the corner of his mouth, Barney enthused over the prospects for the classic two weeks from today.

"This looks as if we were going to see whether such lads as Lockhart, De Paolo, Duray and all these young bloods have so much lead in their right feet as we think. It's going to take some fancy driving to keep a motor roaring wide open through those steep, banked curves," Oldfield said.

"Harlan, my boy, your track sure looks in the pink. I just wonder what the old Golden Submarine wouldn't have turned this track in. She was such a nice, ladylike, gentle automobile, she was. Had cylinders like pickle beer kegs, and how that lady could snort.

"Talk about your superchargers on your little ninety-one cubic inch motors for pushing in the gas. I'd have needed a storm drain pipe if I was to start FORCING gas into little Goldie. Talk about thirsty flappers, why she could take her gas straight, shake herself as if there was a slight earthquake when you'd crank her, and, after letting out a bellow from her exhaust like a French 75, beat it for the turn like a dray horse heading for the barn on Saturday night.

"But I must admit that the Golden Submarine couldn't have made any 147.1 miles an hour like Lockhart did during this past summer with his little ninety-one cubic inch car. He sure must have been awfully anxious to get home that night to hurry so. Why you could almost put Lockhart's whole motor in one of the Golden Submarine's cylinders.

"Well, when the boys line up for the start in two weeks and 'Wag' drops the red flag in front of them for the start, we're going to see some plain and fancy hurrying, that's for sure. I wouldn't want to be picking berries in that first corner when they start bending through. If they don't see new world dirt-track records I'll be surprised. And I don't think any of those boys is going to wear out any brakes, either."

OSCAR BAKER MEETS TRENKLE AT CULVER

The much discussed return bout between Oscar Baker and George Trenkle will be the headliner at the Culver City stadium Thursday night.

ILLINOIS GRIDDERS PUSH OVER CHICAGO MAROO

CHAMPAIGN (Ill.) Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—It will take better than Stagg's Maroons to stop the Illini march toward a claim on the big-ten grid championship. It will take speed, beef, skill and finesse all combined in one to bring them to a halt and the Maroons didn't have these today when the two old enemies clashed before 50,000 in their annual gridiron engagement this afternoon in the Memorial Stadium.

There was speed in the Illinois backfield, beef in the line and a general all-around finish that was both shattering to Maroon hopes and impregnable against Maroon drives, and a struggle that was stubborn and thrilling even though one-sided came to its conclusion with the Orange and Blue charging out in front with a margin of 15 to 6.

Luckily for Chicago, the Illini fumbled once, for without that Stagg's unhappy warriors would have gone home without the crum of h been even close enough to the State goal to cause a thrill this fumble that gave the their lone touchdown.

ERNIE HOOD MEETS GOUYD AT PASADENA

An all-star card at the Pasadena arena Thursday night will be Ernie Hood, Pasadena favorite and one of the best flyweights on the Coast, who is coming back after six months' lay-off occasioned by a broken hand. His opponent in the eight-round main event will be a two-fisted fighter, Clayton Gouyd, who was last year's Far Western amateur flyweight champion and who has not lost one of his twenty-five fights since turning pro.

The rest of the card will bring many favorites who have fought past main events at the arena, the line-up being:

Six-round semifinal: Ham Jenkins vs. Harry Bubber Johnson, 148 pounds. Four rounds each: Don Kennedy vs. Manuel Martinez, 118 pounds; Bud Forrester vs. Dud Eades, 130 pounds; Ray Cardinas vs. Kid Doto, 138 pounds.

SKIPPERS OF GOOD SHIP MATRIMONY CHART TRUE COURSE

SHOALS OF SELFISHNESS BUOYED AS WORST PERIL

Bear and Forbear' and Sharing of Watch Equally Bring Craft to Haven of Happiness

Steady, mates! Steady!! Just because some of the mischievous lads have set the deck boats to rocking does not mean, in the opinion of some of Los Angeles' leading thought navigators, that the good ship marriage is breaking up. Not a bit of it. Undismayed, some of the old-time skippers and their mates who have sailed the matrimonial sea for years find the sailing good, despite an occasional squall.

Every mess of words being dashed overboards anent the conventionalities have brought on bridge and those who know how to steer a true course and how to hold an even keel.

From some of the ministers, a rabbi, university president, layman, public official and long-married couples some other ideas about marriage than those in which it is declared the practice needs "adaptation to modern conditions."

For instance, there is Rev. Hugh K. Walker, doctor of divinity, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. He comes of old American stock. He has been ministering to the welfare here for some thirty years or more. In that time he has united in marriage some 4000 persons. He has an observation or two about things that may calm some of the young folks who may be a bit bewildered by some of the things they have heard said about marriage. Leaving out the all-important sacrament in marriage and considering what is left somewhat analytically, Dr. Walker said, "they who might be grouped into three general classes.

"First, there are the normal man and woman linked by love, a combination of the divine, the human and the biological. Their souls are stirred, their hearts beat as one and they have no other thought about marriage than to love and to work together, sharing sorrows as well as joys.

"One of the major motivating forces of life is at work. It is almost axiomatic that this is the stabilizing foundation upon which our civilization was built and on which it depends and progresses.

"Naturally some of these unions turn out to be failures. Perfection is not readily attainable. But I do not say that from this class of marriages no trouble sufficient to destroy any particular worry.

IMPULSIVE UNIONS

"Next, there is the impulsive union. It is plunged into with little understanding. I should say the participants are mostly well-meaning and doubtless many such couples go on happily through life. However, more of these unions will be unsatisfactory than the first class. But even here I do not believe there is enough trouble to disturb them very much.

"Then comes the third class necessitating some frankness. Stripped of all pretext as a union to provide a cloak of conventionality or respectability for two who have little thought of striving to attain an ideal home with its sacred family circle of permanency. I would not deny that from such association occasionally might come a home that would adjust itself to normality, but I would not go out for convenience, position, wealth or comfort.

"It is my opinion that from this type of a union comes our so-called marriage and divorce problem. If there be children of such a union the problem becomes sadly complicated.

DISGRACE TO RACE

"It seems to me that this sort of union is becoming bolder and bolder. It is strutting itself so audaciously before us as almost to proclaim that it really is and to demand that it be recognized as requiring special marriage vehicle to establish a social and legal status of its own.

"It is a shame and disgrace to true love and has no right to be permitted to take its place alongside this sacred institution. The evils that come from it ought not to be attributed to marriage as now cherished.

"Let those who talk about marriage and its problems distinguish between normal marriage, which has but little of a problem at all, and this thing, which is but an ever present manifestation of the flesh now claiming for its particular purposes a particular kind of marriage, be it trial, term, companionate or what not.

"And if they would deal wisely with such an evil they do not need cumbersome laws and enforcement machinery—just character building. And there are untold thousands who from satisfying experience will recommend the teachings of Jesus Christ for this purpose."

JUST TOMMY-ROT

Rev. James A. Francis, First Baptist Church pastor, lands a wallop on the new-fangled marriage theories. Casting subtlety to the winds, Dr. Francis spoke right out, saying:

DR. JAMES A. FRANCIS

"We are hearing a lot of tommy-rot on the subject of trial marriages, companionate marriages, five-year limited contracts and such stuff—some of it from folks who ought to know better.

"Marriage always is a failure where those who are married are themselves failures.

"God's plan can never be improved upon but the folks who work under that plan are capable of a lot of improvement.

"When I marry a couple if I have any doubt about the permanency of the union it is never about the contract end but about the character of the contracting parties.

"So when we undertake to make the marriage bond easier, lighter and looser, we're working on the wrong end of the job.

"What is needed is to enable folks to rise to ideals and then to live by them.

"I have seen a young man wait on a blind and helpless wife for years with more than a mother's care. I have seen a wife do the same thing for a husband who could not lift his hands and when I hear the silly, selfish, pleasure-seeking, empty-headed crowd clamoring that the bond be made so it can be untied easier, I am sick at heart—not concerning marriage but concerning them.

"Would such folks be any more faithful on any other kind of a contract?

"God help us to have in our romance the fine gold of a divine passion and the family will be safe."

FIFTY-FIFTY BASIS

Then there is the case of Capt. and Mrs. Olaf Corby, 2105 Echo Park avenue, who celebrated their fiftieth anniversary of marriage on Armistice Day. Capt. Corby sailed the seas for many years. His first daughter was 8 months of age before he saw her and, in fact, the unhappiness to them both over being separated so much was the reason for the captain giving up his life on the rolling deep, leaving his home in Norway and settling in Los Angeles.

"We've been happy," said Capt. Corby, "because we have lived simply. We knew that both of us couldn't have our own way so we have made concessions on a fifty-fifty basis. Instead of quarreling about the little things that send so many young people into the divorce courts today, we used a little common sense and reason and our difficulties always ironed themselves out."

"Our respect for married life has been one of the chief reasons why we've been happy," added Mrs. Corby. "Then, too, we knew each other very well before we married. We were engaged for five years. I think young people are too hasty these days. They should find out everything possible about each other before they marry and then after they marry they should make the best of their differences instead of just giving up at the slightest provocation."

Joseph Scott, an orthodox layman, Catholic, has his opinions about marriage. Attorney Scott said:

JOSEPH SCOTT

"There is no divorcing at all in North Carolina and society there has not gone to the bowwows. People live happily in that State. There may not be as many marriages in North Carolina, but, I'll venture, those who do marry do so with some sense of responsibility.

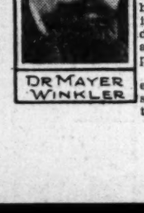
"I would say to young people contemplating marriage that this country was founded on courage—not cowardice—courage to face the responsibilities of life together.

"Life is made up of service and sacrifice. Primarily, the home lays the foundation for this.

"Marriage contains some of the components most vital to human happiness. It is a most basic part of society.

"Young people who have courage, who are not overawed by cowardice in the face of life's problems and who are willing to accept life's sacrifices and give of its service, need have no fear of thoughtedly entering marriage and accepting its responsibilities, regardless of meandering theories."

Something of the marriage theory of an ancient and a stable people is contained in a comment by Rabbi Mayer Winkler of Congregation Sinai. He said:



DR MAYER WINKLER

"In the Jewish view, marriage is absolutely a divine institution.

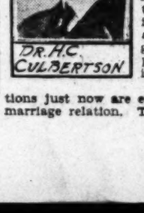
"Constancy and permanency of the marriage relation, the home and family is the foundation of real and natural happiness in life.

"Marriage is an emotional and sentimental thing and is not a reasoning proposition. They are on the wrong track who would rationalize marriage.

"The nation is composed of families and if based on inconstant families then the whole structure is unstable. Civilization began when man and woman began perfecting the home. It is necessary to begin there now for national permanency and real progress of any kind.

"Term marriages are inconstant marriages and are to be avoided."

The ideal of the human race is monogamy, in the opinion of Rev. H. C. Culbertson, pastor of Plymouth Congregational Church, "just as," he said, "bees have a different system."



DR. H. C. CULBERTSON

"The human race," Dr. Culbertson said, "instinctively is monogamous. No matter how many failures take place, that ideal still persists unextinguishably. It will prevail until it is obtained.

"Many conditions just now are entering into the marriage relation. The old idea was that a man virtually owned his wife about like a slave. Today we have come into an equal rights and partnership idea.

"This kind of a relationship requires a lot more brains and character than the old and during the process of adjustment there will be some failures and many plans offered, but our instinctive ideal of monogamy will prevail. Meanwhile, let us look with a great deal of kindliness and pity on the failures."

BASED ON CHARACTER

Some sage observations about marriage come from the ripened experience of Dr. and Mrs. L. W. Brigham, Arcadia. For sixty-five years they have made on together. Dr. Brigham for years was State superintendent of churches in Chicago. From the summit of the years they look down life's vista with these observations:

"When Mrs. Brigham and I were married we started with the idea that marriage is a union of two personalities which must work in harmony. Whenever a question of business, family discipline or any of the problems of married life came up we consulted each other and agreed upon a working principle and then acted accordingly. We have moved always as a unit. There was never

Tried and True Formulae for Marital Stability

SIXTY-TWO YEARS WEDDED

Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Clever, Alhambra:

Raising children and working hard kept us so busy we had no time to gad around and pick up false notions. We trained our children to work. That's one of the chief difficulties today. Children are helpless and pampered and grow up without a sense of responsibility. Then when they marry they don't know how to do anything.

SIXTY YEARS WEDDED

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Nelson, San Fernando:

Hard work, common interests, tolerance, common sense and spiritual belief are the essentials of a happy married life. Early marriages, lack of proper home influence and an unwillingness to pull together are largely responsible for the divorces today. Young people ought to be old enough to know what they're doing before they get married.

SIXTY-FIVE YEARS WEDDED

Dr. and Mrs. L. W. Brigham of Arcadia:

Neither happiness nor unhappiness is the result of a certain ceremony but of the appreciation of the proper adjustments which must be met in marriage. The whole question of marriage is based upon character and the proper state of mind. The present discussion of marriage is an awakening of humanity to a realization that conditions are not ideal.

FIFTY YEARS WEDDED

Capt. and Mrs. Olaf Corby, Los Angeles:

Instead of quarreling about little things that send so many young people to the divorce courts today we used a little common sense and reason and our difficulties always ironed themselves out. We were engaged for five years. Young people are too hasty these days. They should find out everything possible about each other before they marry.

This is the last article of mine that will appear in The Times, for I am due to move to San Francisco as the next stage of my year's tour through the United States. The majority of them I have already dealt with at some length in different articles. Here, they are collected in condensed form.

WRITING FOR MONEY

The fact that a novelist of the prominence of Sherwood Anderson says that he can't make a living out of writing is not encouraging to the minor literati.

He has had to buy a couple of country newspapers to make ends meet.

The fact that he has the money to buy two newspapers in one day doesn't look exactly as though he were starving in a garret; but it certainly is true that writing is a hard game.

JUST LOVE WARS

Mr. H. L. Mencken must be running short of topics of conversation.

So he has taken to writing some extremely silly articles in praise of war—which he admires as comparatively safe, harmless and highly enjoyable.

Life to him seems quite unbearably tedious without a war or two going on.

MORONIC TREAT

What fascinates him, he says, is the moronic excitement of the war-fevered.

any double discipline in our household where our children were concerned. Yet we have respected each other's individual opinions always."

"We agreed to disagree sometimes," Mrs. Brigham remarked.

"Neither happiness nor unhappiness," continued Dr. Brigham, "is the result of a certain ceremony, but of the appreciation of the proper adjustments which must be met in marriage. This appreciation Mrs. Brigham and I have always had, fortunately. The whole question of successful marriage, I believe, is based upon character and the proper state of mind. A person must have the will to be happy or nothing in the wide world will make him so.

"This present discussion over trial marriage, contract marriage and the like is an indication, I believe, of the awakening of humanity to the realization that conditions are not ideal. Until comparatively recently woman has been in a subordinate condition which she will no longer endure and now it is necessary for men to adjust themselves to that fact and learn to appreciate women from a new viewpoint. We are really in the midst of revolution with its resultant confusion, extremes and experiments, but I believe that all in good time balance will come and with it a higher conception of marriage."

RACIAL INSTINCTS

"Why all the racket about term marriages?" is the title of a sermon that Rev. Lloyd C. Douglas, pastor of First Congregational Church, will preach tonight. In advance comment, Dr. Douglas said:

"Persons who are interested in term marriages are not much interested in marriage, the institution, of which we know.

"There is a racial instinct behind marriage and the home that gives the idea of marriage something more than what is contemplated in term marriages. A lot of this talk is whimsical and is not to be taken seriously. Why, a stable marriage and home is the very foundation of the state as we know it."

OPTIMISM HELPS

In San Fernando live Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Nelson, with some sixty years of married life, seven children and a lot of experience to their credit. They have a right to expostulate a little on this marriage business. Read what they had to say about it last week, when they passed their three-score milestone:

"Hard work, common interests, tolerance, common sense and spiritual belief are the essentials of a happy married life," Mr. and Mrs. Nelson agreed.

"I don't say we didn't have our disagreements," Mrs. Nelson continued, "but we always looked on the bright side of things. We never lost our optimism even when things looked darkest, and if we disagreed on some matter we at once tried to reach a friendly understanding about the question and didn't go around nursing a grudge or ill feeling. The result was that our disagreements usually ended in complete agreement."

Early marriages, lack of proper home influence and an unwillingness to pull together are largely responsible for the divorces today," declared Mr. Nelson. "Young married folks want to have their own way too much. They ought to be old enough to know what they're doing before they get married. Those boys they have no notion of the serious side of matrimony. They fail to consider the trials, sacrifices and possibly the hardships they may have to meet. I was 28 when I was married."

"Trouble is," Mrs. Nelson interjected, "that marriage often is not looked upon as a life proposition but just as a trial affair or an experiment."

Marriage is more than a whim in the opinion of Prof. George M. Day, of the department of sociology at Occidental College. He said: "Marriage is necessary to satisfy the innate social needs of man, and carries with it obligations that are of the highest order. Marriage did not originate in the whim and carnal desire of individual men and women. It is a fundamental social institution whose purpose is to safeguard the perpetuation of the race. Through the institution of the family it serves society as a training school for the development of social citizens.

"As for divorce, it is usually, though not always, the selfish rather than the social impulse that drives men and women into the divorce courts. When husband and wife are wishing wholeheartedly for each other's happiness and highest self-expression, divorce becomes impossible. If marriage is founde don the shifting sands of personal passion and caprice, it is bound to end in shipwrecks."

WORK AN ANTIDOTE

Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Clever, Alhambra, now on their way to their sixty-third anniversary of their wedding, have a good bit of homely philosophy behind them. They just worked and did not have time to gad around and pick up fool notions, they said.

"Well, we lived for fifty-two years on a farm in Iowa," said Mr. Clever, "and both of us have always worked. I guess that's why we were happy. We didn't have time to do anything else. Young folk nowadays never have a thought for the future. They live for the pleasure of the moment from day to day. They have nothing permanent to anchor to and it makes them restless and dissatisfied.

"Raising eight children and doing my own work kept me so busy," said Mrs. Clever, "that I had no time to gad around much and pick up false notions. And I trained my children to work. That's one of the chief difficulties today, I believe, children are helpless and pampered and they grow up without a sense of responsibility, then when they marry they don't know how to do anything, they aren't willing to rule families, they have too much leisure and trouble usually results."

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Russell of Long Beach, have done some summing up of ideas about marriage. Speaking from more than sixty-two years of experience, Mr. Russell said:

"Success in married life comes when the two persons concerned learn to bear and forbear. There can be no quarrel if only one is willing to argue. No two people think and act alike, but those who want a happy home life are undisturbed by the petty things that people now run to the divorce courts for.

"Divorce is too easy to obtain these days. I believe that there should be the same divorce laws for all of the States, divorce only granted on the ground of infidelity, remarriage not allowed for ten years following the divorce and then only legal in the State where the divorce was granted.

"Trial marriage does not give children the stability of a home and the love which should be every child's heritage. I think a solution to our present difficulties would be trial divorce instead of trial marriage."

HAVE NO SECRETS

No secrets from each other, was a rule in the Myron E. Hutchinson family of Alhambra. It seemed to have worked pretty well for the family endured some sixty years and still is carrying on.

"There never were two people yet who could agree on everything," said Mr. Hutchinson. "I've heard of them but I've never believed it, but Mrs. Hutchinson and I never got out of patience at the same time and marriage to us has been a give-and-take proposition. That's why we've been happy, I suppose. My rule has been to tend to my own business and let others tend to theirs, and I think it's a pretty good one to apply to every situation in life."

"Well, I think one of the most important reasons for our happiness is that we never had any secrets from each other," said Mrs. Hutchinson. "It isn't a good idea for a husband and wife to keep things to themselves, so we've always made it a rule to talk all of our problems over together. We've raised seven children too. Six of them are living and happily married and we think the fact that we trained them to wait on themselves and to realize their responsibilities has had something to do with it."

Los Angeles County Clerk Lampton believes that the new law requiring applicants for a marriage license to give three days' public notice of their intentions before they may procure the license is a great deterrent to hasty marriages and consequently a divorce preventer. Its stop-'n'-look-listen effect he believes to be most beneficial for all unless it be some fee-loving clerks.

"Marriage is a serious thing and affecting one's entire life no matter how long it keeps up and should be approached with a great deal of thought. This law at least provides time for a little think it over. Young people sometimes are a little impulsive about marriage. Naturally we believe that the more impulse, the more divorce and annulment business. Hasty and ill-advised steps toward marriage have at least some chance for correction because of this new law. Elopements certainly do not work so well under it and lots might be said about elopement marriages and divorces."

Riverside County Clerk Clayton commented:

"At least one beneficial effect is the practical elimination of runaway and spasmodic marriages of youngsters. We have few visits now from anxious mothers."

Whatever may be the situation regarding marriage and divorce theories figures released last week by the United States Department of Commerce say that last year the population of the United States increased about 1.5 per cent, marriages 1.2, divorces 3.1. Comparative figures for California were given as 2.9 and 13.6 without the population increase being given.

Culture and Virture of China and Japan Praised

Boosters for Southern California are modest in their praises of the Southland, compared to the native New Zealanders in boasting of the beauties of their homeland, according to Mrs. Alfred McLaughlin, who, in an address at the City Club yesterday, told her audience that both New Zealand and Australia look with frank disfavor on any suggestion of further immigration to their countries of oriental peoples.

Mrs. McLaughlin, who is international relations chairman of the California League of Women Voters, spoke in terms of appreciation of the culture and virtues of the Chinese, Japanese and other orientals and expressed the hope that thinkers and leaders of the Occident will employ their wisdom and Christian character in aiding the orientals to solve their various political, social and economic problems.

"As a matter of fact, within 200 years the United States will be in practically the same position as Japan, agriculturally, with no possibility of greatly increasing production and it behooves us to prepare for the establishment of a standard of living that will be commensurate with our population two centuries hence," said the speaker.

Another speaker was Dr. Graham C. Hunter, who discussed "Lights and Shadows of Eastern Europe," and who said that the statesmanship of the world should keep close watch of the Balkans in order to prevent the rekindling of the fires of international strife. Dr. Hunter expressed gratification over the fact that the best leaders in the Balkans are exerting every effort to abolish pogroms against the Jews and to minimize race prejudice generally.

NEW CLASS IN COOKERY INSTITUTED

Three Weekly Lessons at Manufacturers' Exhibit to be Rule in Future

From now on three cooking classes will hold forth in the Manufacturers' Exhibit, Southwest Building, 130 South Broadway, every week, instead of the two formerly given.

On Monday afternoon Mrs. Mae Cummings will demonstrate the Dangler ranges, one of which she will present to some class member this month, and on Tuesday and Friday afternoons, Mrs. Maybelle Wyman will hold her classes, which formerly met only on Friday.

All three of the classes begin at 1:30 p.m. to allow for earlier darkness. They are held in the new demonstration room and model kitchen on the third floor with entrance directly from the elevator.

Dr. Philip M. Lovell's largest class yet assembled last Thursday, and with the improved arrangements provided, found it possible to hear every word he uttered. Dr. Lovell now talks from the third-floor balcony through a microphone, and several loud speakers convey his voice all over the halls. His health talks have proved the most popular drawing feature the exhibit has yet installed.

MARITAL TURBULENCIES

BY ALMA WHITAKER

We are becoming alarmingly involved in marriage and divorce problems these days. Many people feel that something ought to be done about it.

Mrs. Franklin White, vice-president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is campaigning ardently for uniform marriage and divorce laws—and managing to give us some staggering details of confusion, injustice and awkward complications, in the process.

Then there is Judge Burnell recommending five-year marriage contracts. Judge Ben Lindsey is talking all over town about his companionate marriage scheme. And, added to this, novels, plays, pictures galore tackle the problem. All the advocates of change are being very frank and plain-spoken, while all the rest of us feel impelled to maintain an air of delicacy about it. It doesn't seem quite nice to be too frank about "love and romance" . . . and besides, neither male nor female feels very secure about how these suggested reforms are going to hit.

While the rest of us listen goggle-eyed, the reformers are divided into two classes—those who want to make marriage easier and less "shackling," and those who want to make it more permanent and dutiful. They all put up excellent arguments.

Of course if marriage and divorce are to properly be organized and standardized, we must tackle the question as we have efficiently tackled other vital problems.

NEW CABINET MEMBER URGED

When it is labor, agriculture, commerce, foreign affairs, education, the Army or the Navy, we appoint a Cabinet minister, institute a government department to take care of it. Why not a Minister of Domestic Relations? Here is marriage, one of the most important activities of the nation, left to muddle along as best it may, along with dog licenses (which cost $1 more,) and letting it get all complicated with police courts, civil courts, criminal courts, churches, lawyers and "personal liberty."

Municipal bureaus everywhere are selling $2 worth of marriage license blithely to all comers, but after that no two States in the union agree about anything much. Any pastor can marry a couple—but we don't let the pastors divorce them—yet even Bolshevik free-love Russia has less divorces per 1000 marriages than our more righteous United States (vide Judge Lindsey's figures.) So even the most sentimental among us has to agree that marriage doesn't necessarily mean "living happily ever after."

If there was a muddle like that in commerce or education, it would be effectually handled at once. If it's war debts, we give the job to Charles Dawes. We expect Herbert Hoover to organize and simplify commerce. The picture industry appoints a Will Hays, baseball a Judge Landis and so on . . . How about Mabel Walker Willebrandt for the Minister of Marriage and Divorce . . . with a few of those clever insurance chaps that have devised "protection" for pretty well every other known risk on her committee?

ENCOURAGING SCANDALS

But at that we have Judge Lindsey warning us to beware of these suggested uniform marriage and divorce laws between the States. He rather implies that it is quite an advantage to be able to hop over into another State with different laws, when the marital shackles become too uncomfortable for either party. In fact, this judge is "agin" more laws, but only wants a few that exist repealed.

Still, even while the rest of us affect to frown upon divorce and religions decline to recognize it (even if they are occasionally amiable about annulments and only recognize marriages in their own churches,) we have to admit that quite a lot of divorce is current and becoming increasing "respectable."

But while divorce may be "respectable" it is almost never decent—in our courts. We do sort of encourage couples who don't want to remain married, to bring a peculiarly nasty assortment of mean charges against each other. If we concede divorce at all, we ought to concede decent, honorable, scrupulous divorce. It ought not to be necessary to cook up a nasty array of scandalous, and often untruthful, lies about a person who has merely, in most cases, "outgrown our liking."

I have just been reading Anne Austin's new book, "Jackson Street." Her heroes and heroines try everything, marriage, free love, companionate marriage, careers—with comparative impunity. I suspected Anne of being a rabid feminist, a crass sentimentalist, everything in turn, until I reached her clever last chapter. Then I discovered she was quite a wise lovable little philosopher. Anne's heroine believes that "free love" spells freedom, but her hero makes a supreme discovery worth six of that. And he approves of "freedom" to . . . after he has discovered that free love is whipping slavery! We ought to put Anne on that committee with a minister of domestic relations.

BICYCLING DAYS TO BE RECALLED

Wheelmen of Past Century Will Meet Saturday

Men Now Prominent Will Dine and Reminisce

Permanent Organization May be Perfected

Days when the bicycle, not the automobile, was the king of Los Angeles and Southern California highways and byways will be recalled next Saturday evening at the annual gathering and dinner of the Wheelmen of the Past Century, an organization numbering many men now prominent in Southern California affairs, at the Jonathan Club, Figueroa and Sixth streets. Several hundred members are expected to gather around the banquet table at 6:30 o'clock and from then on reminiscences prefaced by "Do you remember that time when—" will be in order.

"Few motorists today realize how much of their present comfort and pleasure they owe to these bicycling pioneers of the "pumping '90's" who pedaled their way in advance of the heavier and more luxurious rubber-tired vehicles to come. "Good Roads for Bicyclists" was a political slogan and battle cry long before automobilists began to cast their ballots for men with vision enough to realize that the day had gone when anything passable for a loaded team could be considered a road. Bicycle road racing and touring was responsible for the birth of the good roads movement in this country, veteran wheelmen assert.

PATH BUILT

An example of the energy of these Wheelmen of the Past Century was the Santa Monica Cycle Path, constructed from the Los Angeles city limits to the beach as a bicycling continuation of Western avenue at Washington street (which was not a boulevard then.) This perfectly surfaced path was built partly through the sale of "cycle path bonds" which attested the proud wearer of the of had done his bit by donating $1. The "bicycle boys" not only contributed money, but got out with picks and shovels to level off the "thank ye marms" along the narrow strip.

Santa Monica was a Mecca for cyclists, and it was a common sight to see thousands of bicycles stacked along its shady streets and atop the old Auditorium, a favorite "parking place" of the "Humping 'Nineties." Chanslor's ranch, out near Monrovia, was another favorite Sunday rendezvous, and no better food ever was served than Crank's home-grown watermelons and fried chicken a la Crank. Sometimes one of the clubs would put on a watermelon party and dance, and W. G. Furman of Santa Monica, known as "Long Bill" and the champion bike racer of the State in his day, has a musty old bicycle club ledger wherein, under "collections and sundries," is an item noting a nespenditure of "$3 for 4 doz. fine watermelons," which shows that a dollar rolled quite a respectable distance then.

"Long Bill" Furman still is an enthusiastic cyclist. Six feet and four inches in height and weighing 240 heavy pounds, Long Bill's splendid physique, and

BICYCLING DAYS TO BE RECALLED

Veterans of Past Century Will Meet Saturday

Men Now Prominent Will Dine and Reminisce

Permanent Organization May be Perfected

Back when the bicycle, not the automobile, was the king of Los Angeles and Southern California highways and byways will be recalled next Saturday evening at the annual gathering and dinner of the Wheelmen of the Past Century, an organization numbering many men now prominent in Southern California affairs, at the Jonathan Club, Figueroa and Sixth streets. Several hundred members are expected to gather around the banquet table at 6:30 o'clock and from then on reminiscences will be in order.

"Do you remember that time when—" will be in order.

Motorists today realize how much of their present comfort and pleasure they owe to these bicycling pioneers of the "pumping '95's" who paved their way in advance of the faster and more luxurious rubber-tired vehicles to come. "Good Roads for Bicyclists" was a political slogan of battle cry long before automobiles began to cast their ballots for men with vision enough to realize that the day had gone when anything passable for a loaded team could be considered a road. Bicycle road racing and touring was responsible for the birth of the good roads movement in this country, veteran wheelmen assert.

PATH BUILT

An example of the energy of these members of the Past Century was the Santa Monica Cycle Path, constructed from the Los Angeles city limits to the beach as a bicycling accommodation of Western avenue at Slauson street (which was not improved then.) This perfectly level path was built partly through the sale of "cycle path bricks" which attested the proud wearer had done his bit by donating $5. The "bicycle boys" not only contributed money, but got out with picks and shovels to level off the "bricks" along the narrow path.

Santa Monica was a Mecca for cyclists, and it was a common sight to see thousands of bicycles stacked up in shady streets and atop the auditorium, a favorite "parking place" of the "Humping Nineties." Dan Casey's ranch, out near Monrovia, was another favorite Sunday rendezvous, and no better food ever was served than Crank's home-grown watermelons and fried chicken a la Casey. Sometimes one of the clubs would put on a watermelon party for Casey and W. G. Furman of San Francisco, known as "Long Bill" and champion bike racer of the State in his day, has a musty old bicycle ledger, wherein, under "collections and sundries," is an item noting the expenditure of "$3 for 4 doz. watermelons," which shows that the latter rolled quite a respectable distance then.

"Long Bill" Furman still is an enthusiastic cyclist. Six feet and four inches in height and weighing 240 pounds, Long Bill's splendid physique, developed in the days when he won races all up and down this coast, recently won a silver cup at Venice in a contest with younger men who boasted physical perfection. Constant "bike" pedaling between his home and the newspaper office in Santa Monica where "Long Bill" writes his Sunday feature and other stories has kept his stomach flat and his legs trim.

The old East Side Cycling Club, largest in Southern California, and numbering many who later became prominent, will be well represented at the gathering of Wheelmen of the Past Century. Former Senator Frank P. Flint, Dist.-Atty. Keyes, former Mayor Owen McAleer, Coach Dean B. Cromwell of U.S.C., Jim Jeffries, once heavyweight champion of the world, and his two brothers were members of this popular Los Angeles bicycling organization. It turned out many of the crack track and road riders of the day, including F. G. (Fritz) Lacy, Ralph Mussey, the Cromwell brothers, and many others.

BAY CITY REPRESENTED

Other old-time cycling organizations represented will be the South Side Cycling Club, deadly rivals of the eastsiders in the old days. Ralph Hamlin, of automobile distribution fame today, captained the southsiders. Other organizations represented will be the Los Angeles Wheelmen, Oberon Club and Overland Wheelmen. From San Francisco will come delegates of the Bay City Wheelmen and Olympic Club, Alameda will send members of the Reliance Club and Garden City Wheelmen will come from San Jose. Federal Judge Kerrigan of San Francisco is an active member of the Bay City Wheelmen.

A movement to make the Wheelmen of the Past Century a permanent organization, according to its officers, has met with wide approval and the gatherings, already an annual affair, will be attended "to the last man." Membership in the historic body can be obtained by applying to the secretary, Tracy Q. Hall, vice-president of the Security Trust and Savings Bank, Los Angeles. Membership is open to those who have cycled prior to 1900. The present list of members exceeds 300.

MANY NOW PROMINENT

The list of officers who are serving with Mr. Hall reads like a page from Bradstreets. Bicycling must have been conducive to success in business. On the lists are L. D. Sale, chairman, president Western Wholesale Drug Company; J. Phil Percival, vice-chairman, president Percival Iron Works, Ralph Hamlin, president Ralph Hamlin, Inc.; William A. Tufts, president Tufts-Lyons Arms Company; William W. Weir, credit manager of the May Company; Carl McStay field secretary Automobile Club of Southern California; Frank Barnes and W. W. (Pinto) Jenkins. Leon R. Conklin is custodian of relics.

I. B. Potter of Riverside, for many years national president of the L.A.W., which had hundreds of bicycling clubs under its jurisdiction, will be at the banquet, and with him will be I. S. Logan, formerly County Clerk of Riverside county. Ike Logan has been Riverside representative of the L.A.W. since the Stone Age, according to Furman.

Membership cards in the Wheelmen of the Past Century must be presented at the door to gain admission, according to the banquet committee. Reception committee members will be on hand at 5:30 p.m.

WATER MOVE CALL ISSUED

Colorado Aqueduct Committee Takes Action for Organization Under Metropolitan District Act

The committee of the Colorado River Aqueduct Association, to which has been assigned the preliminary work of organizing the Metropolitan Water District which will take part in the construction of the aqueduct, yesterday issued a call to Southern California cities to participate as sharers of the benefits to be derived from the 260-mile pipe-line to bring Colorado River water to this section of the State.

A number of cities already have declared unofficially their desire to participate in the aqueduct service, and the committee points out in its letter that the time has come to form the district, as provided by the Metropolitan Water District Act. After the district has been formed a friendly suit will be brought in the courts, to test the validity of the act.

The association has arranged to have this suit brought in the name of the city of Pasadena as the friendly plaintiff. It is estimated that the preliminary expense of the formation of the district and preparation and filing of the litigation will cost $15,000, to be contributed by municipalities which are members of the association and are to be included in the water district.

The association desires to complete the test case as soon as possible, so that when the courts have passed on the validity of the Water District Act the matter of the incorporation of the district may be submitted to the voters of each participating city for approval in the fall of next year.

J. H. Howard has been retained by the association as attorney to proceed to prepare the necessary test case and the preliminary organization work, and offices have been opened at Room 702, A. G. Bartlett Building, Seventh and Spring streets, Los Angeles.

Hiram W. Wadsworth of Pasadena is chairman of the association committee, and the members are S. H. Finley of Santa Ana, Samuel E. Andrews of Colton, H. S. Callahan of Long Beach and Shirley C. Ward of Los Angeles.

BRITON LIKES US AND TELLS WHY

mount importance of education is being properly appreciated; the flood-control dams have been greatly imagined and greatly built, and the new City Hall is going to be a worthy home for the government of a great city.

And one realizes, too, that in making any criticism of Los Angeles this rapid growth has always to be taken into account. In certain respects the city falls short of what she will one day become simply because there has not been time to attend to everything. I am sure, for example, that the central districts of the city will be a great deal more beautiful in a few years' time than they are today. And yet I do not know that in some directions a start could not be made even now.

There is a messiness about most of the downtown main streets that could surely be improved upon. The auto parks are great offenders with their glaring and inartistic signs; and indeed signs of all sorts are too numerous and too blatant. Overhead electric car lines do not, of course, beautify a city, and if you do not before long decide (as I rather think you will) that the cars form too large a factor in street congestion to be allowed to remai nat all, the possibility of carrying the current in the downtown districts, by means of a central ground rail, as is the practice in many other countries, might be considered.

UNION STATION URGED

I am perfectly certain, too, that you will come to the conclusion one day soon that transcontinental railroad trains cannot continue to roam about the city streets. A fine central depot, the railroad tracks properly brought into it, is an absolutely necessity for a town of 1,250,000 inhabitants.

When I have said that the vacant lots near the heart of the city—an inevitable result of its rapid expansion—might surely be made a little less unkempt, have made every criticism about Los Angeles that has occurred to me in a month.

There are already in Los Angeles—even in the commercial districts—some noble buildings and beautiful streets. In twenty years' time, there should, and I believe will, be a city here that will be the wonder of the world for beauty as well as enterprise.

SMALL TOWNS CHARM

As for the country towns the charm of such smaller cities as Pasadena, Riverside and Fontana, needs no qualification. Each is a separate jewel, and no man with a spark of feeling could fail to rejoice that so many of his fellow-creatures, are living in such beauty, sanity and health—and seem by their pride in their various communities and by their industry to appreciate their good fortune and to be anxious to do all they can by work and service to show their gratitude for it.

Nor must I forget Hollywood, for the hours I have spent in the studios are among the most interesting in my life. The friendliness of the film-folk I have found as delightful as their enthusiasm; while it has been a fascinating as well as a valuable experience to witness the ceaseless striving after artistic perfection that goes on in such great studios as those of Cecil B. De Mille, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Paramount-Famous-Lasky.

Of the purely open country I have written much from time to time. Its diversity of mountain, plain and sea seems to me its greatest charm; and the superb roads that penetrate every part of it make it a traveler's paradise.

PEOPLE ALL FRIENDLY

Of the chief impression of all those that I am taking away with me from Los Angeles, I feel, from its personal nature, some diffidence in writing, yet I ought to write it, for when all is said and done, the most important thing about any city is its citizens.

Let me, then, say just this. During my month's stay in Los Angeles, I have met, casually and for a minute or two's conversation, some hundreds of dwellers in it and the country around. Of all these people not one has struck me as unfriendly or disagreeable. There is not a single one of them whom I would not take the greatest possible pleasure in meeting again.

As for those members of The Times staff, and many others, with whom I have come into closer contact, their kindness, and helpfulness and anxiety to do all in their power to make this mission of mine a success, exceeds all praise that I can give, as it also renders all thanks inadequate.

In spite of all the joyous adventures that lie ahead of me, I leave Los Angeles with deep regret. But one day I shall return

Dealer in Books Held in Sale of Vile Literature

Following his arrest Friday night in a raid conducted by representatives of the City Prosecutor's office and the police intelligence bureau, Charles F. Lewis, 70-year-old book dealer, yesterday was charged with possessing, selling and distributing obscene literature in a complaint issued by Chief Deputy City Prosecutor Concannon.

Lewis was taken into custody after complaints were made at police headquarters that he was selling suggestive literature and art to high school students. One particularly nauseating volume he is accused of renting out by the day.

Grove T. Vail, chief investigator of the City Prosecutor's office, who with Policeman Graham, arrested Lewis, declares he called at Lewis's place of business, the Bookmart, 5602 Hollywood Boulevard, and informed him of complaints made by parents of students.

Lewis declared everything in his bookstore was "above board" and invited the officers to search his shop, Vail said. This they did, resulting in the discovery of approximately twenty pounds of asserted obscene literature, they reported.

Lewis is at liberty on $250 bail.

MANY ACTORS TO AID FIESTA OF VETERANS

For the Hollywood Fiesta to be conducted in the Hollywood Bowl next Saturday and Sunday afternoons by the Greater Hollywood Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, thirty-five actors and actresses have been obtained to participate.

Eleven who definitely announced their forthcoming appearance to aid the disabled veterans' funds are Laura La Plante, Johnnie Harron and Edmund Breese, Norman Kerry, Hoot Gibson, Lewis Stone, Ruth Roland, godmother of the Post; James A. Marcus, Eddie Gribbon, Buddy Jamison and Lester Bates.

FATAL KISS STORY TO BE DISCLOSED

Coroner's Jury Will Hear of Caress That Resulted in Crash With Train

Details of the kiss that ended in the death of Tom Houston, 52 years of age, when the automobile that Mrs. Genevieve Graves was driving crashed into a freight train at Santa Monica Boulevard and Cherokee street, will be unfolded tomorrow afternoon before a Coroner's jury sitting for the inquest, it was learned yesterday.

The details will be supplied by Mrs. Graves, wife of a Hollywood druggist and recipient of the fatal kiss. Mrs. Graves, who was arrested after the accident and held for some time by the police, was released yesterday on her own recognizance and ordered to appear at the inquest to testify.

Houston nearly was decapitated, when the speeding machine driven by Mrs. Graves crashed into the train. Mrs. Graves was driving the man to his home following a party at her residence. Houston was a close friend of the Graves family, it is said.

According to Mrs. Graves's story, Houston attempted to kiss her just as the automobile crashed into the freight train.

Whether or not a felony complaint will be issued against the woman will be determined at the inquest by Dep. Dist.-Atty. Scheinman, head of the complaint department, who will attend the hearing.

FOUR GIVE BAIL IN AUTO FRAUD CASE

Quintet Charged With Selling Stolen Car Parts to Local Dealers

Four of five defendants indicted by the Los Angeles county grand jury on charges of grand theft and embezzlement of Ford parts from J. Benjamin Fahy, Inc., 827 South Figueroa street, were released from custody on $2500 bond each yesterday.

Those released were Lawrence Daw, F. Oliver and Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Boykin. Tom Williams remained in custody unable to give bond.

The quintet was arrested technically more than a year ago at the inception of the investigation, when they were accused of embezzling more than $30,000 worth of Ford parts and selling them to the Western Auto Supply Company and other firms dealing in Ford parts.

They were released, however, for lack of evidence and the investigation continued until a week ago, when the grand jury returned indictments.

WIRES PLACED UNDERGROUND

The Home Telephone and Telegraph Company of Pasadena has practically completed telephone projects in the Linda Vista area, representing an expenditure exceeding $120,000. The work involved the laying underground of hollow tile conduits and the placing of underground telephone cable along Linda Vista avenue between Lewis street to Inverness Drive and on a few side streets adjacent to Linda Vista avenue.

MOTHER

A Cross, Sick Child is Constipated! Look at Tongue

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Does your daughter attend school regularly?

MANY GIRLS are absent from school for a few days each month because of illness. In many cases this is unnecessary because young girls — as well as older women — can be strengthened by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Girls suffering from run-down condition, sleeplessness, nervousness, and loss of appetite, should gain new strength and vigor from this Vegetable Compound.

The following testimonials show what the Compound has done for other schoolgirls.

NERVOUS AND DIZZY

Charleston, Illinois:—"I gave my fifteen-year-old girl Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She was nervous, weak and dizzy. At last she was so bad off that she was out of school for four months. The Vegetable Compound has improved her in every way and she has gone back to school. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be." Mrs. Alice Louthan, Route 2, Charleston, Illinois.

SICK AND WEAK

Camden, New Jersey:—"When my daughter was twelve years old she was hurt at the play-ground. She was sick and weak for some time after that and was not able to go to school regularly. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped her wonderfully, and she now goes to school every day. She has gained in weight and has a better appetite than she had before taking it." Mrs. Ada McKim, 1044 Linden Street, Camden, New Jersey.

CONSTITUTION

With so many girls dancing their way into fame, fortune and opulent marriages, perhaps the old admonition "use your head" will be changed to "use your feet."

COMPLICATING LIABILITIES

If the owner of a car is liable for the accidents due to the carelessness of the driver, how long will Henry Ford be a millionaire under his new carcleaning scheme?

CAMPAIGN EXPENSES

Abraham Lincoln spent only 75 cents in his first Congressional campaign. In these times a man will spend that much in a day telephoning the wife that he will be late for dinner.

OVER THE LIMIT

The admiral at the filling station declares that cars are now so well made and standardized that any reputable car should be good for 50,000 miles of travel. Seems as if we had seen some speedmaniac who thought they could make this on the first day.

BAD BANKING

Woman who placed $1200 in an old stove for safekeeping is now having a bit of difficulty in collecting from the government on the ashes. This home-banking idea is one of the nine foolish thoughts that find human lodgment.

THE BIG LEAGUE

According to a correspondent there is considerable dissatisfaction with Geneva as the permanent home of the League. There is a feeling that it should be near the sea coast. But all the machinery has been adjusted for a Swiss movement and at Geneva it will remain.

EARTH TROUBLES

This is a big world and it is having eruptions or quakes at some point on its surface every few minutes. While a volcano is erupting in one section of the globe nature may be skimmying in another. Scientists say that there are doubtless more than 50,000 earthquakes every year, but most of them are as harmless as an assault with a feather duster. Actually not a tenth of 1 per cent of all the shocks offer menace to life or property. At times they have taken terrible toll, but they are among the least serious of elemental outbreaks.

TAXING THE TAXES

Many people have had to pay heavy taxes and special assessments on their property for various direct improvements—more or less substantial. They have tried to believe that the cost of this work could be ascribed to the value of their holdings. Sometimes they have backed it on, but often the special assessments have almost amounted to confiscation. But the assessors have taken the increase for granted and valuations have been swollen until thousands of citizens experience the novel but agonizing sensation of paying taxes on their own taxes. It is hard to convince them that their money is never being wasted.

THE DIFFERENCE

Man appeared before a New York magistrate the other day and wanted to have his wife arrested because she would no longer support him. He was very much surprised and disturbed when the judge informed him that the lady didn't have to earn his keep. He threatened to go back to his own country and when he explained that that was Russia the court gave him a pressing invitation to take the first boat. Sometimes a man may be thrown into the poorhouse for failure to find fodder for the fray, but so far no wives are being jailed for refusal to support the husband. We may get around to it later.

VOTE STATISTICS

The vote-distiller problem is presented from a new angle in a study just made by Prof. C. H. Titus of the political science department of the University of California at Los Angeles, who shows that the tendency of qualified electors to absent themselves from the polls is directly proportional to the size of the community in which they live, cities of 100,000 population and over having the poorest record and those of 10,000 and less the best.

Prof. Titus confirms previously published statistics that the vote as related to population is gradually but definitely falling off, the trend since 1910 being at the rate of 32 per 1000. This is a rate very nearly treble the deathrate, yet it rouses little anxiety. Were the death rate to rise to 32 per 1000 of population and remain there for any length of time, it would cause something akin to panic.

To say what this tendency indicates, or even to guess that it will continue, is not possible from the data at hand. It may mean that democracy and universal suffrage are dying, almost unheeded, before our very eyes, and that future generations will have some other method of getting the necessary machinery of government set up and run.

THE FULFILLING OF THE LAW

Advocates of new and startling changes in married relations take themselves too seriously and the issues at stake too lightly. If words mean anything, their suggestions mean nothing. So far, the chief results of this ineffectual discussion have been to afford publicity for two judges, a few preachers and an assorted number of scribes and gharfeens.

The only definite outstanding conclusion is that if the women wish married life to jog along in the way the world is used to, it will so continue to jog. And, judging by the stand taken by women's organizations, there does not seem to be much room for doubt as to where the women stand.

For the rest we might well apply to protagonists and antagonists alike of this attempt to patch an old garment with new cloth Hamlet's satirical comment, "Words, words, words, words." And not particularly well-applied words, at that.

Judge Lindsey has tagged his panacea for the married ills, which if left alone go the way of all flesh, with the vague term "companionate marriage." The word companionate is not in the dictionary, which gives Judge Lindsey considerable latitude in trimming his sails to the blasts of popular disapproval.

The idea of companionship will be found underlying all silver and golden wedding celebrations. Since the feast at Cana of Galilee it has been the strongest fiber in the tie that binds. It is the element in matrimony that "time cannot wither nor custom stale." That Judge Lindsey regards companionate marriage as something new and sensational can only be explained on the ground that he was not quite sure of how to spell the word companionable.

Trial marriage is another instance of jingling and jangling with the vocabulary. Because married life—like every other phase of life—since the beginning has always been a trial. Had it not been a trial it could never have been a success. Indeed the supreme justification of marriage is its power to test the quality of the metal in human nature. That is why fifty years are needed to produce a golden wedding. God and man both intended married life to be a trial—and if they hadn't, woman would have supplied the deficiency.

As for some of the other nostrums, they evidently need the services of a copy reader. Birth control should have been written self-control and time-limit speed-limit. Free love is another instance of turning the two finest words in the language to an ignoble end. For love is free by its very obligations and freedom is lively for the sake of the laws that restrict it. If free love has come to mean something that it couldn't possibly infer it is because the word love has been the most abused in the language. That few people see nothing incongruous in the assertion that love can drive men and women on to murder and suicide proves how badly we need to go back to the one definition of love that covers the whole field:

That definition was written 2000 years ago by the first of all moral teachers in seven concise words—"Love is the fulfilling of the law." Under this definition marriage is free love and beside it there can be none other.

All these would-be reformers start from a wrong premise. Whatever their intentions, all they are actually attempting to do is to justify Nietzsche's epigram, "Marriage is a splendid lie," or Schopenhauer's more horrible stigma of "legalized prostitution." Only by admitting these low motives behind the marriage relation can they justify their steps for rescinding Saint Paul's inspired declaration, "Love is the fulfilling of the law."

AFTER ARMISTICE AGIES

Once wars were fought for the love of it. Selfish victory was the boast of the aggressor. The conqueror was inflated with his success and chronicled it for future generations.

Alexander went because there were no more worlds to conquer. Caesar wrote the annals of his campaigns himself and took irksome pride in slaughter. Napoleon appeared to have no higher purpose than crowning himself Emperor of the world. Spanish adventurers offered no apology for their piracies in invading America and carrying off the gold of the Incas and Aztecs.

The same spirit may have animated the rulers of Europe in the late war; but they have the grace at least to be ashamed to say so. Imperialistic designs may be charged to more than one power; but which one confesses it? All of them offer tearful alibis. Each was angelic. All fought in self-defense. The whole thing was framed up against the other. The old purpose of war may prevail to some extent; but nobody dares to claim the outcast.

Here, at least, is a great advance over olden days. Public sentiment is evidently giving war short shrift. When it is outlawed in mind, it will soon be outlawed in fact.

The heroes of peace are dominant today. The riddles reflect the sentiment. Instead of playing soldier and marching to beat of drums, they are flying miniature airplanes. Scouting for a noble deed each day is more highly regarded than fighting over a toy.

Hypocrisy is the homage vice pays to virtue, says some one. There may be selfish rulers today as ever, but they fear to face it. Destroy the respect of the mass of mankind is a deterrent. The last war to end war has probably not been fought. Armament may yet be essential to defense. But glorifying war for its own sake is a lost art. The barn-yard way of settling disputes is fast becoming passe.

Choosing the biggest and best for self is coming to be regarded as impolite for a nation as for an individual. Common courtesy, if not religion, is prompting thoughtfulness of others. If for no other reason war can not long continue in good society.

LUDOVICI, ANTIFEMINIST

Bitterly attacked because of his strong antifeminist views, particularly those expressed in his book, "Woman," which everybody is said to be reading and no woman enjoying, Anthony M. Ludovici returns to the charge in a magazine article, "Woman's Encroachment on Man's Domain," in which he makes utterances that are bound to stir up his critics anew and add to his peculiar eminence or notoriety.

Mr. Ludovici is intensely British and conservative, and refuses to be borne along on the tide of feminism that has swept into almost every corner of the world. He deplores what he calls "man's loss of respect for woman," which has extended so far that "sitting men do not even shift their eyes from their papers to contemplate the strapphanging girls before them." He says that men have come to despise women who, asserting and assuming equality, open their vanity bags and powder and paint their faces in public. Worst of all, in the Ludovici view of the situation, is "the alarming unfitness of the modern Anglo-Saxon women for maternity."

While doubtless it is true that in cities there are many sitting men and straphanging women, it does not argue any great loss of respect by men for women, but rather an acceptance of their assumption of equality. Most men do not despise women because they paint and powder in public, but merely find this practice rather amusing. As for the modern woman's unfitness for maternity that is debatable, and Mr. Ludovici brings no convincing facts in support of his statement of that unfitness.

There may be, and doubtless are, strong arguments to be made against feminism, but somehow the learned Britisher seems not to have presented them. Perhaps, however, his whole object was to stir up a feminist hornets' nest and attract attention in his direction. This he has done at any rate.

OUR LOW-BROWED ANCESTOR

After nearly a generation of scientists had almost succeeded in explaining away the skeleton in the closet of the human race, Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, most distinguished of American anthropologists, bobs up in London with the assertion that Neanderthal man was, after all, one of our ancestors, and not a distinct species from homo sapiens. His words, delivered with all the authority that goes with the delivery of the Huxley lecture and receipt of the coveted Huxley memorial medal, will not, to be sure, settle the question; instead they will stir it all up again.

Homo Neanderthalensis, as the advocates of the separate species theory prefer to call him, was the original caveman of Europe and was such a low-brow that most of what Dr. Hrdlicka now says are his relatives have been ashamed to own him. He had projecting ridges over his eyes and not much above them, a tremendously powerful jaw, big teeth, no more chin than Andy Gump, so small a throat it is not believed he could utter speech, and he walked in the crouching attitude of Jack Dempsey in the ring. He lived about 50,000 to 25,000 years ago and was supposed to have been killed off by an invasion from Asia of the race known as Aurignacian or Cro-Magnon man, who held the caves and later the river valleys until the new stone age set in.

Dr. Hrdlicka says nothing has been found in Asia to indicate that Aurignacian man ever lived there, and thus attacks the invasion theory at its source. He also says Aurignacian man would have staid in Asia, instead of invading glacier-covered Europe, since man does not move in the direction of an unfavorable climate. And he points out that the so-called characteristics of Neanderthal man are not all found in any one individual. Examination of a large number of Neanderthaloid skeletons is convincing evidence, he declares, of an evolutionary change in the direction of modern man; all exhibit primitive bone formations, but no two the same ones. He concludes that Neanderthal man was not killed off, but was transformed gradually—or mutated suddenly—into the Cro-Magnon type.

Dr. Hrdlicka's theory will be received with respect and doubtless will be considered of equal importance with the recent discovery by Obermaier of a transition stage between old-stone age and new-stone age man. Taken together these link the prehistory of man into a composite whole, instead of dividing it into epochs with unexplainable gaps between.

DEVOTION AND CO-OPERATION

New England has taken up the job of repairing her damaged industries, wrecked highways and ruined homes in a sound, practical, business-like way. That is the New England spirit, inherited from the pioneers who faced storm, wilderness, privation and hostile Indians, who asked odds from no man and expected no favors from providence.

Through their own organizations and with the help of their own citizens Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachusetts are quietly and effectively applying practical measures to the damaged flood districts and marshalling supplies of food and shelter for the homeless victims. In the words of Gov. Weeks of Vermont "a true spirit of devotion and co-operation" animates the citizens of the New England States at this time of trial and misfortune and the bulk of the relief is being taken care of by State societies, civic bodies and private local sources.

This does not imply that New England is too proud to accept relief from the outside, were its citizens unable to cope with the disaster, but rather that the people wish to rely first of all on their own native resourcefulness. The Red Cross is already in the field. The Federal government has tendered the services of the Army where needed. The milk supply of Boston may be so shortened that Vermont will not be able to supply its usual quota. Wherever outside aid is essential, it will be offered and accepted.

At no time does the American spirit so truly reveal itself as at times of major catastrophe and in sudden and dire emergency. It is then that the heart of business takes a stand beside the brain and against the twin powers no calamity can prevail. Nowhere has the combination of a strong brain backed by a sturdy heart taken more solid root than in the soil of New England, whose sons learned self-dependence from ancestors used to daring daily what we today term major disasters.

THE SILVER RAID

When England during the World War was confronted with the necessity of purchasing silver in the United States to supply currency needs in India, the Pittman Act was adopted by the United States to enable the Treasury Department to supply the metal in sufficient quantities. The act was purely an emergency measure and provided that the treasury could melt American dollars for delivery to England in bullion form and that for each ounce delivered to England an ounce of bullion should be purchased from American producers at a dollar an ounce.

Silver today is worth 55¼ cents and American silver producers are asking the courts to force the treasury to make further purchases amounting to approximately $15,000,000, providing virtually a stated bonus of $6,493,530 to the silver trade. Secretary Mellon has declined to continue purchases under the Pittman Act which was followed meticulously during the period of the emergency until purchases in the American silver market amounted to many millions and afforded the producers an estimated bonus, above the current value at time of purchase, totaling $58,000,000.

The Treasury has no need for the bullion the producers are seeking to force upon it through action of the courts based on the emergency Pittman Act. To purchase it and thus afford the silver producers an additional bonus of nearly $6,500,000 would be an imposition upon the taxpayers. The country has been put to tremendous expense in getting out of war-time legislation already and it would seem a travesty on government to permit this further unpatriotic raid on the treasury to secure an unwarranted subsidy for silver miners.

A DEFENSE

An English doctor says that American apple pie is the gastronomic equivalent of an incendiary bomb

By James J. Montague

Oh what heroic stuff was fed
The men of Plymouth Rock?
No common meat, no paltry bread
Could rear that gallant stock.
The food that heartened them to dare,
With stern unflinching eye,
To run the redskin out of there
Was good old apple pie.

Who felled the forest from the land
With unabating zest,
And made the U. S. A. expand
Across the rolling West?
The men who always took along
An adequate supply
Of spirits, sometimes rather strong—
And honest apple pie.

Let Britishers the dish decry
That feeds a mighty brood
And say that noble apple pie
Was never fit for food.
And then remember, ere too late,
The fourth day of July,
Which we should never celebrate
Except for apple pie.

We venerate the mother land
Across the rocking sea,
In friendship now we grasp her hand
For both of us are free.
We recognize her might and worth
But in the days gone by
She might have ruled this rolling earth
If she'd et apple pie!

OUR MERCHANT MARINE

BY IRA A. CAMPBELL,

Admiralty lawyer of New York City, formerly of San Francisco, counsel, United States Shipping Board and special attorney to the United States Attorney-General, 1918-1919.

We have now had sufficient experience to know that we have as economic and successful operation of American ships that the ships cannot be made as effective instruments in the ment of American foreign trade, under government operation as under private.

The Shipping Board has given out statistics showing that in 1920 42.7 per cent of American foreign trade was carried in American ships, whereas the percentage had decreased to 36.3 per cent in 1924, to 34.1 per cent in 1925, and to 32.2 per cent in 1926. Recently Chairman O'Connor has stated that we are now carrying less than 30 per cent, and Senator Copeland says that at the present time less than 25 per cent of our imports and exports are being carried in American ships. Rear-Admiral Gleaves characterizes the situation in the following language:

"The history of our Merchant Marine, its rise and fall in the last century, its revival in 1914, and its subsequent decline to its present deplorable condition, is a romance and a tragedy."

Eminent government authorities thus confess the truth, namely that our participation in the carrying of our own foreign trade is continually declining, or, at least, is not keeping pace with the development of American foreign trade. This is the record of government ownership and operation in the last seven years, during which period the Shipping Board has had the unlimited backing of the United States Treasury, while the losses in operation have run to over $100,000,000. Stronger indictments of the futility of government ownership and operation of shipping could not be had.

This failure to maintain our position in our own trade in no respect reflects the results which have been attained with privately owned and operated ships. It would be most interesting if the Shipping Board would publish a comparative statement of the results of the operations in the essential services before and after the recent sales to private owners. If they did so, it is safe to say that we should hear no more of government ownership, and that Congress would address itself to the task of working out the ways and means of successful private ownership and operation. But the proponents of government ownership will see to it that the comparative figures are not compiled and made public.

The general decline in the carriage of American trade in American ships cannot be attributed to inferiority in the type and condition of the American ships. The decline is due to the inefficiencies necessarily incident to government ownership and operation. While many of the 1500 or more merchant ships with which the government became possessed as a result of the war were not commercially serviceable, a very large number, and certainly enough to carry 50 per cent of American foreign trade, were good ships and the equal of the existing ships of other maritime nations. Indeed, the American ships were deemed so good by the government that for a long period of time it refused to sell them at any price which a private owner could afford to pay.

For the past seven years we have had a trial of governmental ownership and operation on all essential trade routes, with ships which generally have been as good as our competitors', and in some instances better—witness the Munson, Dollar and American Merchant Line fleets. Nor has economy of operation been a material factor in the decline, because the losses of the American ships were paid out of the treasury. On the contrary, the government-owned ships have been operated without the necessity of, and literally without regard to, economy of operation. For example, the operators have been paid on the basis of gross income and not net results. The higher speed of some of the new foreign ships has undoubtedly hurt the American ships. This could have been, and doubtless has been, met by the government reducing freight rates, and paying the increased losses out of the treasury. Speed has not, therefore, been the cause of the great decline in the percentage of American trade carried in American ships.

The prime factor that makes impossible the successful conduct of an overseas shipping business by the government, is the resentment held by nearly every business man, American or foreign, against the government entering a field of business that belongs to private enterprise.

The pretended abhorrence of our foreign competitors at the American government, with all its great and growing wealth and increase in foreign trade, running a shipping business in competition with their private business enterprises, and the animosities which have been engendered in the minds of the shipowners of other nations because they have had to compete, not with American shipowners, but with the American government and its overflowing treasury, have been used effectively in every foreign seaport and trading center, to induce the foreign buyers of American goods to patronize the foreign privately owned ships instead of the American government-owned vessels. Every defect, every little slip or mistake in the operation of the government ships has been seized upon and exaggerated to influence patronage.

But this is not the worst. The cry that the American government, by engaging in the shipping business, is attempting to take business from, and thereby destroy the foreign shipowner, has been used to influence foreign buyers to purchase the goods of other nations instead of American goods. This has been most natural: it has been the cry of the individual against being crushed by a foreign government.

It has been made a patriotic appeal to the people of every foreign country to which our government-owned ships have traded, and it is safe to say that the governments of those foreign countries have not discouraged it.

The irony of it is that we are

"B" is the specially shaped Pad, to be applied in such a way that it tucks up the hernial orifice, and thus anchored tends to prevent the contents of the abdomen from protruding. Within the pad is a reservoir to contain a remedial absorbable emollient-like muscle-tonic called "PLAPAO". When the Plapao is warmed by the heat of the body and becomes soluble, it escapes through the small open leg marked "C" to be absorbed through the pores of the skin to strengthen the weakened muscles, thereby effecting a closure of the opening.

"F" is the long end of the PLAPAO-PAD which clings without straps or springs to the hipbone—purposely to give the necessary mobility and support to the PLAPAO-PAD.

SEAL CAMPAIGN WORK STARTED

Volunteers Checking Names for Tuberculosis Drive

Goal for Year's Plague War Put at $100,000

Task of Mailing Scheduled for Coming Week

Volunteer workers yesterday began the task of checking 150,000 names and addresses of persons to whom Christmas Seals will be offered this year, in the annual campaign against tuberculosis conducted by the Los Angeles Tuberculosis Association, 1008 Transportation Building.

The goal for the coming year is $100,000, and according to Miss Sidney M. Maguire, executive secretary, judging from interest already expressed in the plans of the association, its attainment will not be difficult.

The seals are expected to arrive during the coming week, and the task of counting and inclosing them in letters to prospective supporters of the drive against the white plague then will begin.

MAIL CAMPAIGN

The seals will be sent out in 85 and 62 allotments, and the entire campaign will be conducted by mail, except for the usual "convenience" sales at postoffices and downtown department stores, for shoppers, and at headquarters, for those who for any reason are not included in the mail appeal.

Last year a total of 67,000 individuals supported the work and it is expected that this number will be increased to 75,000 in the 1927 campaign. According to Miss Maguire the most important work confronting the association is to keep pace with the industrial growth of Los Angeles, and to induce large employers of labor to introduce permanent safeguards for the health of their workers.

AIM IN FACTORIES

A concerted effort will be made to triple the number of factories that employ full-time nurses, and conduct periodical physical examinations of employees.

"In view of the fact that mortality records show that tuberculosis causes one death out of every ten in Los Angeles," said Miss Maguire, "and that the great majority of those stricken are in the prime of their lives, it should be apparent to every business man that the community suffers a tremendous economic loss through tuberculosis. The employment of health workers in factories, regular health lectures for workers, and physical examinations without cost to the employee are matters of insurance to the employer against poor work and lost time that will pay for themselves over and over again i nthe course of a year."

Consular Corps Will be Guests Aboard Flagship

Members of the Los Angeles Consular Corps, their wives and friends, will be the guests of Admiral Hugh Wiley aboard his flagship, the battleship Texas, at 4 p.m. today.

At 1 p.m. the corps will be guests of the harbor commissioner at luncheon at the California Yacht Club. Following luncheon the commissioner will take them for a trip to view recent improvements in Los Angeles Harbor, using his official boat for the purpose. The launch which will take them aboard the Texas will meet the party at the Fifth-street landing in San Pedro. Representatives of thirty nations, members of the Consular Corps and Pan-American Consular Corps, will be guests on both occasions.

ADVANCE OF VENEZUELA DESCRIBED

New British Vice-Consul Here from South America Tells of Progress

Venezuela, most progressive of all South American north coast nations, has caught the American spirit of industry and is prospering marvelously thereby, according to H. Bancroft-Livingston, new British vice-consul for Los Angeles, who arrived yesterday from duty at Caracas, Venezuela, aboard the Panama-Pacific liner Finland.

"Oil has in the last ten years brought Venezuela to the forefront among nations," he said. "For the first half of 1927, alone, Venezuela exported 23,000,000 barrels of petroleum.

"American commercial interests have the upper hand in the commercial life of the country, 70 per cent of the imports coming from the United States. American oil companies also are leading in production and pioneering.

"Caracas, a city of 110,000 people, has more than 5000 automobiles and, with a single exception that I know of, they all are American cars."

The new vice-consul relieves H. E. Beard, with whom he has traded posts, as assistant to Godfrey Fisher, Consul.

Others among the 360 cabin passengers arriving from New York, Havana and the Canal aboard the Finland included Edward V. Robertson, owner of the 100,000-acre Hoodoo ranch, near Cody, Wyo., accompanied by Mrs. Robertson; Rev. Father Hugh Crowe, priest of the Roman Catholic Church, here from Ireland for five years of service in Southern California, and W. C. McQuillan, Los Angeles capitalist, who yesterday completed an eighteen months' tour of the world.

The Finland, on this voyage under command of Capt. George V. Richardson, will make one more trip in the intercoastal service of the Panama-Pacific Line before she is replaced in February by the company's new 37,000,000 electrically driven liner California.

LIQUOR-RING CHIEFS GIVEN LONG TERMS

Shouweiler and Aides to Pay Fines Besides Going to Federal Penitentiary

Marvin E. Shouweiler, asserted head of one of the largest rum-smuggling rings on the Pacific Coast, was sentenced to two years in McNeil Island penitentiary and fined $5000 yesterday when he appeared before U. S. District Judge James for sentence.

Thomas J. Murphy, chief aide to Shouweiler, was sentenced to McNeil penitentiary for a period of eighteen months and fined $3000. The other defendants and their sentences are: Isaac Fairbanks, fifteen months in Federal prison; Walter Marion Thompson, fifteen months in Federal prison; Gaylord H. M. Harwood and James Sowter, four months in the County Jail.

The sentence given Shouweiler, who admitted on the witness stand that he is a bootlegger but denied any connection with the conspiracy asserted by the government in its indictment, is one of the heaviest on record in Federal Court here. Under the law a maximum sentence of two years and a fine of $10,000 is the heaviest penalty.

According to Asst. U. S. Atty. Ohannesian, who conducted the prosecution, the conviction of the six defendants breaks up one of the largest liquor-smuggling rings that ever operated on the coast. Testimony at the trial showed that thousands of cases of contraband liquor had been smuggled into Southern California from the "mother" ship of the rum fleet, the Marion Douglas, which anchored off Guadalupe Island.

The specific charge on which the men were convicted was a conspiracy to smuggle thirty-one cases of liquor into San Diego in June, 1926.

The new Santa Maria branch was instituted following the preconvention session here last week at the same time that plans were completed for the establishment of branches in Seattle and the Hawaiian Islands.

PILOT KILLED IN AIR CRASH

Student Flyer Seriously Injured When Plane Goes Into Tailspin Landing in Middle of Street

Thrown into a tailspin 200 feet off the ground a JND-4 plane plunged to earth at Ninety-second street and Harvard Boulevard yesterday afternoon killing instantly Al Proctor, flying instructor for the Aero Corporation of California, and severely but not fatally injuring Elvin C. Baker, 2303 South Rimpau Boulevard, student flyer.

Baker was taken to the California Lutheran Hospital, where attendant physicians said, while there may be injuries internally, that have not been detected, they believe Baker will recover. Proctor's body was removed to the County Morgue.

PILOT CRUSHED

The plane had taken off from the corporation's airport at 9899 South Western avenue only a few minutes before it plunged within two blocks of the field.

Those who witnessed the spectacular crash rushed to the aid of the flyer and found Proctor, who was sitting in the forward cockpit, had been crushed to death by the heavy motor. Baker, who sat behind his instructor, was pinioned in his seat in the splintered fuselage.

Eyewitnesses said the plane had circled the Western-avenue and Manchester-avenue district several times and apparently started to return to the field, making a wide sweep east of Western avenue to make the direct westerly landing. As the plane neared Ninety-second street it apparently stalled and within a few seconds began a plunge to earth.

The ship struck the ground nose first within three feet of the curbstone, and missed several houses by not more than fifty feet. The plane was wrecked.

PROCTOR GOOD FLYER

According to Jack Frye, president of the corporation and himself an expert pilot, Proctor was one of the best flyers at the field and had been in the employ of the company two years.

Georgiana Hardwick, a maid in the home of William Sexton, in front of which the plane crashed, first reached the flyers and aided others in extricating the men from the wreckage.

Proctor was a native of New York State, where his parents reside. He was 27 years of age. Since working here he had made his home in living quarters at the airport.

According to Frye, the Jenny machine was inspected before the take-off and pronounced in good condition.

"This is the first accident we have had in the five years we have been operating," Frye declared, "and during that time we have carried more than 35,000 persons."

Within an hour after the crash Frye took the controls of the new giant Fokker just purchased by his company, and with several passengers, including two women, went on a trip to Inglewood.

WAXMAN'S FIGHT DEAL RECOUNTED

Counsel Tells Lickley of Commissioner's Letter Praising Manager

S. S. Hahn, attorney for Max Waxman, manager of Joe Dundee, and Dundee, who are accused jointly of false advertising in connection with a prize fight with Ace Hudkins, which failed to materialize, conferred yesterday with City Prosecutor Lickley. During the discussion Hahn gave the prosecutor a statement favorable to his side of the case, together with several affidavits.

According to Hahn, the affidavits show that Waxman was guaranteed $60,000 as his fighter's share of the purse, and that he did not advertise the contest or have anything to do with advertising it. They prove, Hahn says, that on the evening of the fight Commissioner Truxing offered his personal check for $10,000 toward the guaranteed amount, and that on the 3rd inst. State Boxing Commissioner Strelinger told Waxman the fight might be restaged if the $60,000 were raised.

On the morning of the 4th inst. Strelinger received all the money deposited for the guarantee, according to Hahn's version of the affidavits, then paid Waxman $1000 for Vincent Dundee's fight, a preliminary, and gave the manager a letter commending him for his honorable dealings in connection with the fight. Strelinger then told Waxman to leave Los Angeles, Hahn asserted, the advice being given in the presence of two police officers, whose names he declined to reveal.

Hopes of staging the Dundee-Hudkins battle in Tia Juana have faded, it was learned, and Dundee and Waxman plan to return to the East immediately. Although charged with false advertising as a result of the Wrigley Field fight fiasco, and scheduled to appear for trial here the early part of next month, City Prosecutor Lickley gave the fighter and his manager permission to leave the State on their lawyer's guarantee to produce them in court when they are wanted.

INJUNCTION BALKS OIL LAND GUARD

General Petroleum Wins Writ Against Gun Squad Blocking Road

The struggle of General Petroleum Corporation to gain access to the oil lands at tidewater eight miles north of Ventura reached United States District Court yesterday when Federal Judge McCormick issued a temporary restraining order preventing Edith H. Hoffman, Al Hobson, Effie S. Hobson and more than a score of John Does, from interferring with the company's plan of drilling.

Guards armed with sawed-off shotguns employed by the defendants are reported to have prevented the corporation from access to the lands, according to the law firm of Faries & Williams. The defendants, it is asserted, have refused corporation trucks the right to cross a twenty-foot stretch which leads from the State highway to tidewater.

The corporation recently was given a permit to drill for oil at tidewater at Seacliffe, by action of the Surveyor-General of the State. The company maintains that the twenty-foot strip over which trucks have been stopped by armed guards is part of a highway system.

The defendants must appear before the court the 21st inst., to show cause why the order should not be permanent.

The services were conducted by Hollywood Masonic Lodge, of which he was a member. Burial took place at Hollywood Cemetery.

Believe This or Not, Girl Turns Down Film Job

Ship news reporters who interviewed Eliz Gergely, prima donna of the "Student Prince" company, aboard the Lasco liner City of Honolulu, yesterday, received their greatest shock of the year when they inquired what that distinguished singer, just returning from a lengthy tour of Australia, proposed to do now that she has returned to the United States.

ELIZ GERGELY.

"Well, one thing is certain," she said, "I don't want to enter motion pictures."

Miss Gergely has never appeared in motion pictures and does not want to appear in them, and, to emphasize this fact tore up a lucrative film contract that her manager once sought to thrust upon her, she said.

The star, who is of French and Hungarian parentage, made her first phonograph records while in the Antipodes, where the "Student Prince" company played for three months. She has also sung for the radio, but that is as close as she proposes to permit her art to be "canned."

are truly somewhat trying—in war times and other times.

War is war, but there is no special reason why we should behave as though it were a ten-cent melodrama.

The meanest thing you could do would be to dig up some of the sermons that were preached in the first spasm of our war excitement.

THE TRAGIC CLOWN

Just why should the suicide of a clown be more pitiful than any other kind of suicide? But somehow the tragic end of Marcelline in New York touches one's heart in an unusual way.

I have known a lot of clowns and it doesn't seem that I can remember any who were especially carefree or merry.

CIRCUS PEOPLE

Although, as a whole, circus folk are not as discontented as most other show people. It has always seemed to me that they lead a life that is hopelessly dull and uneventful—prosaic beyond any other occupation I know; but not hectic like other jobs.

The circus people I can best remember have been members of families who spent the winter rehearsing new aerial acts; and the summer drearily parading one town after another . . . a father, mother, and two or three shy, healthy daughters.

Veteran Faces Fraud Sentence

Found guilty by a jury in United States District Judge McCormick's court on two counts of making false statements to the Veterans' Bureau to obtain compensation, John Taggart Edmondson, World War veteran, will appear tomorrow before Judge McCormick for sentence.

Edmondson, according to Department of Justice agents, was a private in the Signal Corps during the war, seeing several months' service in France. He was wounded in action. When he returned to the United States, he is asserted to have made claim for compensation as a private.

Later, according to government officials, Edmondson is said to have gone to the Veterans' Bureau and made application for compensation, stating that he was a West Point graduate and a captain of the artillery during the war. An investigation made by government agents disclosed there was but one "John Taggart Edmondson" in the Army and that he was a private. The arrest followed.

Arraignment in Bank Case Set for Tomorrow

Elmer J. Young, former president of the Hermosa National Bank, and L. E. Spencer, former cashier, will appear tomorrow before Federal District Judge James for arraignment and plea on charges of misapplication of national bank funds. The two men were indicted by the Federal grand jury last week.

Young and Spencer were arrested several months ago following an auditing of the bank's books by national bank examiners. A shortage of approximately $25,000 is said to have been disclosed.

M. J. Wolfe, former president of the First National Bank of Brea, is scheduled to appear today before Judge McCormick for plea and arraignment on a similar charge growing out of asserted shortages found in the bank's accounts.

FLORAL ART EXHIBITED

An exhibition of 200 specimens of floral art, the work of students of the Frank Wiggins Trade School, Hill street and Venice Boulevard, will be on display on the tenth floor of the school building tomorrow night. The exhibit will be open to the public from 7 to 9 o'clock.

Care of Babies

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good. And it is so pleasant to take. Taste it yourself, and you'll know why "Children Cry for It."

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or when you even suspect the approach of constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. See how quickly all fretfulness or wakefulness will cease!

Only one word of warning: the above advice is true of genuine Castoria.* The kind called Fletcher's, bearing Fletcher's signature is genuine—and does not contain opiates or any other drug that can harm your baby. Other preparations may be just as free from harm; the writer does not know as to that, but does know one family whose children will never make the experiment!

*SPECIAL NOTE: With every bottle of genuine Fletcher's Castoria is wrapped a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies" worth its weight in gold to every mother or prospective mother.

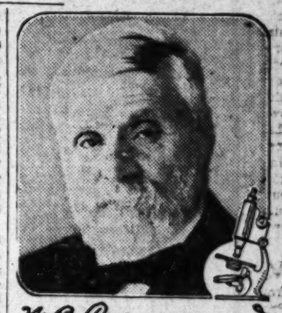
Prescription He Wrote in 1892 is the World's Most Popular Laxative

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.



W. B. Caldwell M.D. AT AGE 83

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

POLITICAL FIGURES TAKING HAND IN RADIO HEARINGS

Senate and House Members Talk for Stations in Home Areas Before Federal Board

BY DR. RALPH L. POWER

The Federal Radio Commission has had a busy week with hearings and political figures were much in evidence. Their presence lent color to a week of unusually drab procedure.

When the KSCJ, Sioux City, Iowa, case was called on the docket there were in the hearing room of the Department of Commerce Building Senators Brookhart of Iowa, Nye of North Dakota and McMaster of South Dakota. They had been mustered by Norman Baker, operator of KTNT, Muscatine, Iowa, who was strenuously opposing the effort of KSCJ to exchange wave lengths with his outfit.

The Sioux City station's efforts collapsed by virtual default, no evidence being presented on its behalf, and the commissioners therefore dismissed the application. This took place before the scheduled arrival of Senator Norris of Nebraska, who also was due to attend the hearing.

During the hearing of WSBT, South Bend, Ind., asking for a shift from 238 to 526 meters, Senator Watson of Indiana appeared to set forth the station's merits, as did Representative Green, also of Indiana, while Senator Robinson sent his secretary, Oliver M. Loomis. Opposition developed from KYW, Chicago, now on the wave length sought.

These cases were taken under advisement as were also a half-dozen others. The commission, however, gave its first decisions of the month in which applications for various changes were refused. The ruling in each case was to the effect that "after careful consideration of the testimony the commission did not find that public interest, convenience or necessity would be served by the granting of the applications."

MELODY MARKS BROADCAST BY KHJ

The broadcast at the KHJ studio last evening was a melodious presentation in every way.

C. S. DeLano, music teacher, presented his string trio which includes Jewel Peterson, playing the guitar; Bonnie B. Edwards, at the mandolin, and C. S. DeLano, with the guitar. There were many group selections as well as solo numbers by Mr. DeLano.

The saw duets by Erie Bradner and Jimmy Morse, accompanied by Florence Thompson, were well rendered and Clint Stevenson's Hawaiian Trio joined the frolic program as usual on Saturday nights.

Thelma Brown, singer of spirituals and blue numbers, again appeared on the program after an absence of a month or more. Her songs always are well received in the radio audience.

Miss Brown's accompanist, Onita Floyd, also gave two or three groups of popular piano numbers.

Isobel Matthews, harp pupil of the Julie Kellar studios gave a fine classical concert including two harp arrangements by Miss Kellar.

The children's hour included Ray Peterson, youthful reader; Paulie Clapp and Marvel Clark, in vocal duet numbers; Nona Clapp in readings, lullabies by Bettiemae Pfefferkorn, "Bobolink;" and tunes by Helen Berta Hanson, "Music Child."

HOLLIWAY WILL MANAGE KHJ

Director of KFRC Placed in Charge of Don Lee's New Station

During the broadcast of KHJ last evening the new manager of the station was introduced to the radio audience. He is Harrison Holliway, manager of San Francisco's KFRC and personal representative of Don Lee.

KHJ hereafter will be owned and operated by Don Lee, California distributor for Cadillac and La Salle motor cars.

The formal opening will be later with an extensive continuous broadcast, the date of which is to be announced during the coming week.

One of the first policies formulated under the new regime is the discontinuance of silent Mondays. The first program to be staged under Mr. Holliway's management will be tomorrow night from 6 to 10 p.m. with a concert orchestra, vocal and instrumental soloists.

Many congratulatory messages from social and civic leaders of the Pacific Coast have poured into Mr. Lee's office. He is not entirely new to radio fields for KFRC has been under his ownership and direction for the past year during which time it emerged from a small, little known fifty-watt station, to a 1000-watt station and de luxe programs of a high order.

Hollywood Player in Radio Audience

Dorothy Mackail

AMONG the new radio receptionists of last week is the name of Dorothy Mackail, First National screen actress, who is partial to the Radiola 30A, which was installed by Fred Christian of the Electric Lighting Supply Company, Los Angeles.

Although she has often listened at the home of friends to various broadcast programs, this is the first set which Miss Mackail has installed in the music salon of her residence.

NEW RADIO OFFICIAL FROM PRESS RANKS

Carl H. Butnam

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. (AP)—Carl H. Butnam, the new secretary of the Federal radio commission, has been identified with the press in Washington for many years. Since 1922 he has been editor of the Washington Radio News Service.

During the war Butnam served with the Committee on Public Information and in 1918 was commissioned a lieutenant in the air service. Later he was connected with the Associated Press and the Wall Street Journal. He is 43 years of age.

Mr. Butnam succeeds Sam Pickard, who becomes a member of the radio commission, representing Middle Western Zone No. 4.

TEST BATTERIES WITH RADIO ON

Faulty Ones Often All Right Except Under Load

Same Rule Applies to Eliminator Units

Instruction Issued in Recent Bulletin

Test dry cell "B" batteries and battery eliminators under load, advises a bulletin issued by Fada Radio service department.

"Most of those in the radio business realize the importance of accurate and reliable instruments in making tests," says the Fada bulletin. "This is especially true of voltmeters, as those of inferior grade will not give the real voltage, as the reading may be inaccurate.

"In testing any battery with a voltmeter it should be connected to a receiver turned on to give an accurate test of the actual voltage being delivered to the set. Occasionally batteries will test O.K. when not connected because the high-grade voltmeters have a very low drain. When the battery is actually connected to the set with the set turned on it may prove defective or of insufficient power.

SONG RIGHTS OBTAINED

Exclusive local distribution of a book entitled, "May I Choose a Song?" by Caroline West and Fay Elledge, has been obtained by the G. Schirmer Music Stores, Inc., it was announced yesterday. The volume contains a collection of thirty-three songs for kindergarten and primary grade classes, with words and music written by the two Pasadena teachers.

LETTERS ON TOWERS

With the call letters for KMIC, Inglewood, perched atop the station towers, more than two-thirds of the Southern California broadcast sets have their call letters emblasoned on the steel towers which can be seen for miles around.

AIR ADVERTISING TOLD

Wesetrn Advertising in its November issue carries a story of "How Advertisers Take Profits Out of the Air," by Oscar Goodwin, which, however, is a nom de plume.

One of the tasks of the average railway mail clerk is remembering the names of 5000 different stations.

NEW RADIO POLICY NOT PROPOSED

Commissioner Bellows Says Board Will Follow Same Old Lines

Rumors that the Federal Radio Commission is about to change its present method of dealing with national broadcasting stations and plans to formulate an entirely new policy was characterized by Commissioner Bellows as the veriest fiction.

"We will hammer away on the old lines harder than ever," he said. "Indications from reports received by us are that the situation is improved and is going to continue to improve. Therefore, we have in mind a very definite policy to follow, the present policy.

"There are sixty stations on the air than there were [illegible] there are almost certain to be a number of license revocations or the failure of stations to renew their wave lengths."

In this connection Mr. Bellows revealed the interesting fact that government inspectors, in the course of their work of checking up on stations to see whether they were on the right wave lengths, they found themselves handicapped due to lack of equipment and because their equipment was not properly adjusted.

New Subscriptions Total Near $100,000

Eleventh Day Brings Figure to $2,061,386

Here are the facts and figures of the eleventh day's efforts in behalf of the Community Chest to support its 150 charitable and welfare institutions during 1928:

Subscriptions to date, $2,061,386.

Subscribed yesterday, $97,876.

Yesterday's subscribers, 30,808.

Total subcribers, 175,967.

Per cent of goal attained, 74.95.

Total amount needed, $2,750,000.

Making the total now in hand $2,061,386, new subscriptions of $97,878 to the Los Angeles Community Chest budget were announced yesterday at the daily report meeting at the Biltmore. The total is 74.95 per cent of the minimum of $2,750,000 required for maintenance of the Chest's agencies during the coming year. Persons who have subscribed to the Chest during the fourth annual appeal now number 175,967.

Yesterday's announcement was said by Chest workers to be disappointing. The total on Thursday stood at $1,969,035, showing an average of only $131,890 a day had been subscribed since then. While Armistice Day had intervened, a great force of solicitors had continued their labors in spite of the general holiday, they stated.

AREA SLOWS COLLECTIONS

"It is inconceivable the budget will not be raised this year," Edwin A. Meserve, campaign chairman, declared. "For three years in succession Los Angeles failed to raise the amount set for proper maintenance of relief and welfare work here. We do not intend to fail a fourth time. We shall go on with soliciting until success is attained. It shall not be said of us as a community that we are unable to provide for those of our number who are in need."

As partial explanation of the slowness in making collections, Meserve pointed out that Los Angeles' 500 square miles of territory is greater than that of any other city and makes the task of the volunteer solicitors a strenuous one. He urged that all persons who so far have not subscribed assist the campaigners in every way possible.

Firms and organizations reporting quotas reached or exceeded by their employees totaled 185 yesterday, when six more reports were received at Chest headquarters, 917 South Grand avenue. New reports were:

Firm	Pct.
The Owl Drug Company	150
Holbrook, Merrill & Stetson	106
Coast Truck Line	103
Hoffman Hardware Company	343
Crown Motor Carraige Co.	103

POLICE, FIREMEN TO PARADE

Smallness of the number of firms reporting was said to be due to the virtually two holidays since Thursday. There was every indication, it was stated, that the response of wage-earners generally to the Chest's plea for at least "one day's pay" was being well maintained.

Tomorrow afternoon police and firemen of the city will give a parade as tribute to the work of the Chest's agencies and as a spur to people to hasten their subscriptions. The parade, which will start at 3 p.m. from Hill and Second streets, will proceed along South Broadway Tenth street. Three members of the fife and drum corps of Victory Post No. 57 of the American Legion will represent "The Spirit of '76" in the line of march.

C. E. Millspaugh, Long Resident in City, Succumbs

C. E. Millspaugh, 1917 North Oxford street, died at 5:30 a.m. yesterday following an illness of several weeks. He leaves a widow and son, Harold.

Mr. Millspaugh was 54 years of age. He came to California twenty-seven years ago and established himself as a broker. For several years he was manager of the California Honey Producers' Association. He was a member of the Los Angeles Athletic Club and Casa Del Mar.

The funeral services will be conducted tomorrow at 2 p.m. in the Dellenbaugh undertaking parlors, 630 Venice Boulevard.

Constable for Belvedere Out

Constable W. B. Seigler of Belvedere was relieved from duty yesterday by W. T. Osterholt, superintendent of constabulary, and Deputy Sheriff Harry Tucker was appointed to fill the vacancy, Sheriff Traeger announced.

According to Osterholt, Seigler failed to make a proper accounting for a $200 cash bond given by Kenneth Milliman, on an attachment. No charges will be brought against the former constable as the money was restored to Milliman.

THEY TRAVEL YOUNG NOWADAYS

Cooing Baby Comes Alone From Hawaii

Leona Flannery and Stewardess Irene Hannon

POSSIBLY the youngest passenger ever to travel the sea alone came in from Honolulu on the liner City of Honolulu yesterday, the diminutive Miss Leona Flannery.

She is only 15 months of age and not very fluent of conversation, though her cooing was eloquent and her ready smiles drew much bandying from passengers for her favor.

Leona's mother recently died at Honolulu, and her father, a chief petty officer in the Navy, sent the baby over to be under the care of Miss Fisher, a relative at Oceanside. The child was under the charge of Miss Irene Hannon, stewardess, on the trip and a mutual attachment developed to the point of tears when the baby left the ship yesterday.

SOUTHLAND ART EXHIBITED

Work of California Artists Becomes Feature of State Building at Exposition Park

A permanent exhibition of Southern California art, including practically every branch, now is a feature of the State Building at Exposition Park. The exhibit is located on the second floor, where it fills the rotunda and two galleries.

In the rotunda are about fifty paintings loaned by the California Art Club, the work of Southern California artists on Southern California subjects. Many pieces of sculpture and several examples of antaglio also are on display.

One gallery contains a collection of 192 California wild flowers. These were collected or painted by W. N. Harris, former manager of the building, and his wife, Mrs. Lena M. In this gallery also are exhibits of handicraft and arts and crafts work by local studios and schools. The other gallery is devoted to a series of colored photographs of the high Sierras. One picture, fifty-five feet long, which represents 100 miles of Sierra peaks, is especially noteworthy.

The exhibit has been arranged by Charles L. Wilson, manager of the State Exhibition Building. It is intended to be a permanent display of the work of Southern California artists. Mr. Wilson says all of the work on display is for sale, but can only be purchased through the artist, as he himself cannot act as selling agent.

The formal opening of the new exhibit will be next Tuesday from 8 to 10 p.m. Artists, practically the entire membership of the California Art Club, Mayor Cryer and other notables are expected to attend the opening, which is free to the public.

DUCK DINNER COMING UP

Four Hundred Lucky Ones Sit in Tuesday Night as Guests of San Bernardino Orange Show

Four hundred persons will be guests of the National Orange Show at San Bernardino Tuesday night at the annual wild duck dinner of that organization. The duck dinner is the opening of the campaign for the annual citrus classic to be held in San Bernardino next February.

A special Pacific Electric train will leave the Pacific Electric station for San Bernardino at 4 p.m. Tuesday, bearing the Los Angeles guests. Approximately 100 will be in the party.

President F. E. Peachey and General Manager R. H. Mack announce a splendid program of music, songs and speakers, more than a score of prominent men being on the program for short talks on the citrus industry and what the National Orange Show means in the advertising and development of that industry.

Announcement from San Bernardino is to the effect that there will be a wild duck along with a lot of the usual trimmings for each and every guest.

Committees of officials of the orange show, headed by President Peachey, and a quartet will help keep the party merry on its trip. Several stunts are being arranged by the Los Angeles delegation as a contribution to the dinner.

The Eighteenth National Orange Show will be the greatest exhibit in all the history of the organization, it is announced by Manager Mack. In order that more room may be given to the feature exhibits an addition is being built to the magnificent permanent building. This will house the packing plant, by-products department and the department of citrus education. The present home of the National Orange Show, though only three years old, is already inadequate, it is announced.

Eight Arrested in Crime Raids

Eight asserted suspicious characters, including at least two reputed hi-jackers, were rounded up in a crusade conducted by Captain of Detectives Cato yesterday.

Five of the suspects were taken from 800 North Broadway. They gave the names of Jacob Schuler, 32 years of age; Rocco Ricotto, 18; Paul Maltone, 28; August Marino, 21, and Vico Botto, 26.

Al C. Gruman, 30, was arrested in the Knickerbocker Hotel, while Willard Ferrier, 30, and Frank Distano, 18, were caught at Ninth street and Grand avenue. The arrests were made by Detective Lieutenants Robinson, Jolin and Brown. All the persons will be held for investigation, the detectives assert, as it is believed they can be identified by victims of numerous hold-ups.

EXTENSION CLASS LIST ENLARGED

University Division Adds Morning Sessions for Many of Courses

The extension division of the University of California yesterday announced formation of a series of morning classes in many courses. Most of them will be conducted in the Hillstreet Building. Among those scheduled are interior decoration, introduction to literature, visual education and practice in correct writing and speaking.

Afternoon classes which augment those of the evening also are included in the work of the division. These include costume design, books and literature for children, use and care of the gasoline automobile, school law, fundamentals of modern geography, French conversation, with a native French teacher in charge, the old and new music, and intermediate Spanish.

Unusual attention has been attracted to the foreign-trade class being conducted by Prof. John R. Riggleman. Help in public speaking will be found in a course in practical speech-making offered Tuesday night in the Sun Finance Building by Wesley Lewis. Miss Elizabeth Keppie has arranged a course in speech and voice production which is of especial interest to salesmen, teachers and lawyers. It will meet tomorrow night in the Sun Finance Building.

NONAGENARIAN GIVES PARTY FOR FRIENDS

Celebrating her ninety-fifth birthday anniversary, Mrs. Elizabeth Raymond entertained a group of friends from Iowa at the home of Mrs. Romeyn Ayres, 4530 Edgewood street, last week. Mrs. Raymond was born in Maine, and when she was 7 years of age her family moved to Michigan. She was married there, later moving to Iowa, where she continued to live until a little over a year ago, when she and her only daughter, Mrs. Nellie Ayres, 75 years of age, came to Long Beach.

PLANES READY TO RACE TODAY

State's Greatest Air Meet to Feature 150 Craft

Army, Navy and Civilians Will Vie for Honors

Events Start at 10:30 a.m.; Thrills Promised

In California's greatest aviation meet, 150 airplanes were being groomed at Clover Field early this morning for a day replete with races and exhibition events. By special authority of the Navy and War departments, nearly 100 naval and military airplanes have been allowed to compete today. The program will be eclipsed only by the national air races to be conducted here late next summer.

Three years ago four army pilots took off from Clover Field for a flight around the world. Today's meet marks the third annual celebration of the successful termination of that event. The meet is being conducted under the auspices of the Southern California chapter of the National Aeronautic Association, the body that awarded next year's national air races to Los Angeles.

Among the participants today are fifty privately-owned airplanes, commercial carriers, racing planes and sport models. The Army is represented by fifteen Consolidated primary training planes, four De Havilands, two Curtiss racing planes and Douglas transports and bombers. Navy airplanes include Douglas torpedo and twin-engine bombers, Boeing fighting planes, Curtiss pursuit planes, Vought observation planes, sixty combat planes from the airplane carrier U.S.S. Langley and the great amphibian carried by the U.S.S. California.

DISPLAY ON GROUND

Civilian airplanes that are entered in the races and in the airplane show include the following makes: Fokker, Ryan, Ford, Bach, Kinner, Fairchild, Prudden, Waco, Travelair, Eaglerock and others. The airplane display on the ground will display, besides airplanes, various makes of engines, auxiliary apparatus and instruments.

The meet will be officially opened at 10:30 a.m., when officials parade over the cross-country course, landing at Inglewood and Van Nuys. At noon army and navy airplanes will fly over the same course in formation. At the same time the giant Fokker in which an attempt is to be made to span the Pacific will take off for San Francisco. Other events on the program, which will last until 4:30 o'clock, include balloon strafing by army and navy airplanes, service race for the Santa Monica American Legion perpetual trophy over the cross-country course, acrobatic maneuvers by navy aircraft, race for two-place low-powered civilian airplanes over the cross-country course, acrobatics by army pursuit planes above Clover Field, maneuvering by army primary training planes, exhibition flights in war-time and obsolete models, and parachute jumping.

MANY AUTOS EXPECTED

Officials who will have charge of the meet include Rear-Admiral J. M. Reeves, Maj. Henry B. Claggett, Maj. M. F. Harmon and D. E. McDaneld, president of the Southern California chapter of the National Aeronautic Association. Lieut. George Norville will be referee and Dudley Steele chief starter.

Arrangements have been made by the Santa Monica American Legion to regulate traffic about the field and provide parking facilities for more than 10,000 automobiles. A small parking charge will be made spectators.

Prizes won in today's races will be awarded at an aviation ball tomorrow night in La Monica Ballroom, Santa Monica. Trophies and cash prizes to be competed for today aggregate a value of more than $1500.

Arrangements for today's meet have been in the hands of the following committee heads of the local chapter of the aeronautic association: D. E. McDaneld, contest committee; Charles P. Wiffard, finance; Lieut. Walter K. Burgess, operations; Robert J. Pritchard, publicity; F. P. Samuels, display; Cliff Henderson, field; H. H. Wetzel, entertainment, and Charles H. Babb, executive committee.

Aliens Helped in Holiday Mailing

Foreigners of many types and varieties with far-away expressions in their faces crowd around a display window filled with parcels ready to be shipped to the far corners of the earth, and a grent chart with information as to just how many days it will take to reach certain places the world over. This is the situation before one of the windows of the Broadway Department Store at Fourth street and Broadway, where a special service has been inaugurated to help foreigners during the Christmas season.

Tables have been prepared which are available in every department of the store which give the maximum time required to reach about sixty countries and their principal cities. From Alaska to Peru or from Herzegovina to Haiti, the time and charges by mail, air mail or express have been computed and there are facilities in the store for preparing parcels for shipment.

BAN ANNOUNCED ON "PINKIES"

National Guard Officers to be Deprived of Joys of Rakish Hats

No more "pinkies!"

Such is the order issued yesterday by Col. Harcourt Hervey, commanding Los Angeles' own regiment, the One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry, California National Guard, in regard to officers of the organization wearing light drab hats.

The type of headgear known as the "pinky" is that worn by British officers during the great war. Since then it has gained in popularity among American Army officers. In issuing the order, Col. Hervey pointed out that the hats are not authorized by regulations at the present time, and cannot be worn by officers until the War Department sees fit to change its orders.

BUILDERS' NEW CODE APPROVED

Retail Lumbermen Offer Support to Plan Backed by Conference Officials

At the close of its three-day convention here yesterday, the California Retail Lumbermen's Association indorsed the uniform building code sponsored by the Pacific Coast Building Officials' Conference. The association also decided to join with the building and loan associations in a movement to encourage thrift through the construction of better homes.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Paul Hallinby, Los Angeles; treasurer, J. E. Neighbor, Oakland; secretary-manager, Mrs. J. E. Frazer, San Francisco; southern district vice-president, Verne Whitson, Santa Ana; northern district vice-president, R. F. Wells; directors, C. G. Bird, Stockton; W. R. Wanderwood, Glendale; Paul Hallinby, Los Angeles; C. W. Pinkerton, Whittier; J. H. Shepard, Sacramento; O. W. Hamilton, San Diego; M. A. Harris, San Francisco; P. Dean Prescott, Fresno, and F. E. Boyd, Santa Barbara.

The new board will decide at a later date on the place for the next convention.

Speakers Named for Institute

Charles E. Martin, dean of the faculty of social science at the University of Washington, is announced as a speaker at the Institute of International Relations to meet for its second annual session at the Mission Inn at Riverside, November 27 to December 3, according to President R. B. Von Kleinsmid of the University of Southern California, chancellor of the institute. "International Debts" will be discussed by Mr. Martin.

Prof. E. D. Thomas of the University of Utah is to speak on "The League of Nations," and Dr. Herbert Priestly, professor of Mexican history at the University of California, Berkeley, on "Mexico and Other Latin-American Countries."

AFRICAN TOUR AGENT NAMED

The D. F. Robertson Travel Bureau has been appointed local agent for the Cape of Cairo Railroad, the world's largest railroad, covering a distance of more than 7000 miles, it was announced yesterday. It is expected the new route will be opened about June, 1928.

LEGION HEAD IN PRAISE OF LOCAL PLAN

Disabled Veterans Here Seeking to Pay Mortgage Lauded for Heroic Work

Work of the Disabled Veterans of the World War, who are to stage an entertainment and ball Thanksgiving night at the Ambassador auditorium to pay a mortgage on their home and service station at 246 South Hill street, has been praised highly in a letter from Edward E. Spafford, national commander of the American Legion.

EDWARD E. SPAFFORD

The letter received yesterday by John R. Quinn, president of the veterans' organization and a past national commander of the American Legion, follows:

"Please be assured of my best wishes for the success of your Thanksgiving ball, and I hope your organization obtains the $20,000 required to pay the mortgage on your building. I am confident the people of Los Angeles will respond whole-heartedly to make the event a big success.

"The people of this country cannot easily forget the heroic deeds of our ex-service men, who made so many sacrifices during and since the great war. I am familiar with the wonderful work your organization is doing.

"Regret I cannot accept your invitation to be with all of you on that night, because my engagements will not permit me to be in Los Angeles until about January 5."

The veterans' home on Hill street is maintained to help needy ex-service men and their families by giving free medical attention, and carrying on an all-year-round program of welfare work through its various departments.

FUGITIVE FROM IONE REFORMATORY TAKEN

Life at the Ione Reformatory was extremely irksome to Edward Herrera, 19 years of age, who was sentenced to the institution early in 1926 for breaking into the home of Municipal Judge Tierney and stealing jewelry valued at approximately $200. Herrera, therefore, resolved to depart at the first opportunity and the opportunity came at last. The youth was not slow to take advantage of it. His gravest faux pas was committed when he returned to Los Angeles, because the police had advance word of his coming. Yesterday Herrera was arrested by Detective Lieutenants Post and Beeson. He was booked at Central station on a charge of suspicion of burglary and probably will be return to the reformatory.

NEW YORK NABS THEFT SUSPECT

County Jail Escaper Caught in Eastern City

Valhalla Promoter Victim of $103,000 Robbery

Harold J. Whittiker, possessor of a half-dozen aliases, who escaped from the Los Angeles County Jail March 8, 1926, while being held for trial for the asserted theft of $103,000 in Liberty Bonds and $800 in cash, is reported to have been arrested in New York City yesterday.

The victim of the asserted theft was John R. Osborne, wealthy promoter of Valhalla Memorial Park, convicted a year ago on the charge of using the mails to defraud in connection with the memorial park project. Whittiker was Osborne's valet at the time the bonds and cash were stolen.

STORY OF ROBBERY

Local police records show that in reporting the loss of the bonds and cash, Osborne declared he left the valuables in his clothes in his room in the Hotel Maryland while he stepped into the bathroom. Whittiker, according to his report, was in the room at the time. When Osborne returned to his room Whittiker, the bonds and cash were gone. The date was November 18, 1925.

Whittiker was arrested in Cleveland Jan. 29, 1926 and returned to Pasadena. He was later placed in the county jail and bail fixed at $125,000. While awaiting trial, and after having gained several continuances, he escaped and had not been heard from until his arrest in New York yesterday. According to police records he is wanted in a half-dozen cities on various charges.

When arrested yesterday he gave the name of George Martin. While he is used the names of Jack and Fred Gordon, George and H. T. Whitney and Harold Whittiker, the latter is believed to be his real name.

HELD FOR HOLDUP

He was placed under arrest by a New York traffic officer, according to dispatches from the East, after Jack Clark, proprietor of a dancing school, pointed him out to policemen as one of the two men who he said held him up in his school last Wednesday.

Whittiker is said to have denied the bond theft and the dancing school holdup. He told the police that he was living in Newark, N. J. However, he is said to have been identified by Detective Thomas Hannigan of the New York police force from a photograph on a police circular sent out from Los Angeles following Whittiker's escape. His fingerprints also are said to tally with those on the police circular.

COMPLAINT ISSUED IN FIXING CASE

Defendant Accused of Accepting Fee to Square Liquor Charge

Facing prosecution on a charge of petty theft growing out of his asserted claims to be able to fix liquor cases in Municipal Court, Bill Bartels, 623 North Avenue 50, yesterday was arrested at Second and Figueroa streetson a complaint issued by Chief Trial Deputy City Prosecutor Eberhard. The complaint was issued by Municipal Judge Sheldon following his conviction by a jury on a possession charge.

Suss was found guilty as charged on the 9th inst., and was fined $400 with an alternative of twenty-five days in jail. He paid the fine and then told Police Officer Gibson, who arrested him, that he had paid Bartels $50 to square the case for him.

Officer Gibson reported Suss's story to Deputy Eberhard and the latter immediately issued a complaint and Bartels was arrested a short time later on a warrant issued by Municipal Judge Wilson. He will be arraigned before Judge Wilson Monday morning.

Mrs. Grayson in New Flight Plan

BERLIN, Nov. 12. (AP)—Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson, who was compelled to abandon an air flight from Orchard Beach, Me., to Copenhagen because of bad weather and motor trouble, has no desire now to make any nonstop flights across the Atlantic.

"No nonstop flights across the ocean for me," she told the Associated Press today upon her arrival in Berlin to confer with Mrs. Mabel Boarder of Copenhagen, her financial backer. "It was my idea from the beginning that we should make stops en route from the United States to Denmark, but my pilot overruled me. Studies of air and ocean currents while I was crossing on the Majestic convinced me more than ever that the development of aviation can only be served by flying over the Atlantic in several hops.

"I am just as determined as ever to fly my airplane, the Dawn, to Copenhagen. Our three attempts provided excellent lessons from which I profited a great deal."

ORANGE TO BUILD LEGION CLUBHOUSE

ORANGE, Nov. 12.—Plans call for the starting of the construction of the proposed American Legion memorial hall within ten days after the conclusion of the public subscription drive, which is confidently expected to raise the necessary $10,000 asked for. The drive is to begin November 20 and continue for four days, according to R. O. Wallace, post commander.

The structure, which will be dedicated to those who fell in the great war, is scheduled to be completed and ready for its occupancy within sixty to seventy-five days, so that it will be possible to hold a public dedication about February 1. The new clubhouse will serve as a civic center where community meetings may be held. The town has long felt the need of such a center. C. E. Morrow, Orange "Y" secretary, has been selected as campaign manager.

BLIND ENTERTAIN FOR THE BLIND

Program Given Under Auspices of City Library

Sightless Audience at Braille Press

A MUSICAL entertainment given by the blind to the blind was presented yesterday afternoon at the Universal Braille Press, 739 North Vermont avenue. More than seventy-five sightless men and women of Los Angeles attended.

The program was arranged by George E. Chase of the Los Angeles Public Library and given by J. Robert Atkinson, blind editor of the Braille Mirror, a monthly magazine published in embossed lettering for the blind.

Mr. Atkinson explained the method of printing raised letters.

An edition of "Beau Geste" is being run and will be presented to the blind of Los Angeles through the courtesy of the Association of the Blind of Ohio in New York City.

Readings for the blind are held every Saturday afternoon at the Public Library, in charge of Mr. Chase.

DIETICIAN FINDS HER IDEAL

Boston Expert Here for Food Clinic Amazed by Standard of Living and Public Interest

All doubt as to the success of the food clinic inaugurated in Los Angeles by State and city associations for fighting tuberculosis and conducted at the California Lutheran Hospital was expunged yesterday when it was announced that attendance at the clinic sessions and conferences was more than double the most sanguine expectations.

Miss Frances Stern, head of the food clinic of the Boston dispensary, first of its kind to be established in the country and who was brought here to try the experiment, expressed herself thus:

"I have been able to accomplish more here in my first week than it was possible to do in Boston in many months, when our first effort began.

FINDS UNDERSTANDING

"It is notable that the public of Los Angeles reads and understands such trite news as that concerning nutritional problems. In the East we have excellent support on the part of the medical fraternity and social workers but the public is hard to interest.

"I am keeping a record of various phases of nutrition work that are peculiar to this climate and the conditions here. Unless my figures are refuted by further observation I expect to be able to say that the cheapest and at the same time the best living in America is to be had in Southern California."

It was announced yesterday by G. W. Olson, chairman of the general committee for the food clinic and superintendent of the California Lutheran Hospital, that to accommodate health workers, parents and others who have not been able to attend the daytime sessions of the clinic another night meeting will be held tomorrow night in the assembly hall, California Lutheran Hospital, 1414 South Hope street.

Dr. Clarence G. Toland, president of the Los Angeles County Medical Association, will preside. Dr. Victor Stork will read a paper on "The Diet of the Growing Child." Dr. Gertrude Laws, head of the department of parental education of the State Department of Education, will speak on "Psychology of Feeding the Child."

CLINICS PROGRAM

For the week beginning tomorrow clinic and conference sessions at the Anita M. Baldwin Food Clinic have been arranged as follows:

Monday, 10 a.m.—Clinic for children, prevention and cure of disease; 2:30 p.m., conference with dietitians.

Tuesday, 2 p.m.—Clinic for sufferers from obesity, nephritis and hypertension; 3:45, conference for social service workers.

Wednesday, 10 a.m.—Children's clinic, all diseases; 2 p.m., clinic for sufferers from gastro-intestinal disorders; 3:45, conference with public health workers and medical social workers.

Thursday, 2 p.m.—Clinic for sufferers from tuberculosis, anaemia and other chronic diseases; 3:45, conference with utilities workers and home economics teachers.

Friday, 2 p.m.—Clinic for diabetic patients; 3:45, conference for individual problems of parents and general discussion.

Whittier Poet Issues New Book

A book of verse consisting of forty-seven compositions written by Edith Elden Robinson of Whittier has just been released by the publisher, it was announced yesterday.

The book has been highly commended by the literary critics of the East and Middle West, who have reviewed it.

Miss Robinson is a regular contributor of verse to magazines and has written two novels. She came to California two years ago from New York for her health and has remained to continue her literary work.

The new book bears the title, "Dew Drops and Pearls." The poems cover a wide variety of subjects. Among the best of the compositions, according to critics, are "Ambitions," "Court-Martial," "Temple of God," "Challenge to Manhood," "Challenge to Womanhood," "To My Baby" and "Christening," the opening verse.

Desmond's Staff in Celebration

Celebrating the sixty-fifth anniversary of the founding of Desmond's, 292 employees and executives last night gathered at a banquet and dance at the Alexandria. Twenty-four employees who have been with the store for a minimum of ten years were presented.

John Steven McGroarty, author of the Mission Play and closely identified with Southern California development for many years, was the guest of honor and principal speaker. He told of the contrast between California at the time of his arrival here and the present. Mr. McGroarty was a close personal friend of the late C. C. Desmond.

DAKOTANS MEET THIS MORNING

Former inhabitants of Casselton, N. D., will meet in Exposition Park this morning for their fifth annual picnic, to which tourists from that city as well as those who now live permanently in California are invited.

FISHERMEN TAKE STRIKE VOTE TODAY

Meeting Will Decide on Protest Action Against State Price Fixing

Four hundred fishermen in the fresh-fish industry will meet at the National Hotel Hall, San Pedro, at 10 a.m. today to vote whether to strike in protest against the action by the State Fish Exchange in setting maximum prices paid for their catches by wholesalers. Already the strike is in part effective, a large number of boats remaining in port. State regulation has been in effect five months.

The 400 man mostly small boats and comprise a minority of all engaged in fishing for the table trade. The majority, manning the larger purse-seine boats, are said to be not in sympathy with the proposal to strike. The great number of fishermen who fish for the canneries are not affected, as no price regulations pertain on fish for packing.

Dissatisfaction first appeared among the San Diego fishermen, and it was following the arrival here of San Diego's delegates four days ago that the local situation became acute.

The fishermen assert their protests are mainly that the exchange is denying them the full price which the wholesalers are willing to pay, and dispute the State's right to any price fixing. Some assert the exchange's action is benefiting larger wholesalers here at the expense of smaller wholesalers, who are unable to buy in such quantities and who lack great refrigeration facilities.

The exchange officials claim that the fish belong to the State and the latter may permit or deny their taking. They also declare the law authorizing the fixing of prices was jointly to protect fishermen in obtaining a fair return, and to stimulate public consumption by stabilizing prices.

TWO BOOKED ON ROBBERY SUSPICION

Andrew Jacobson, 42 years of age, was apprehended by Detective Lieutenants Brown, Jolin and Robinson at 4461 West Fifth street late yesterday. With him, the officers arrested Paul Parker, 28, 928 West Eleventh street, and both were booked at Central Station on suspicion of robbery. The officers had been trailing Jacobson and when they saw him yesterday in a big automobile they followed him to the Fifth-street address where he was taken into custody.

HUNTERS FIND CORPSE

VISALIA, Nov. 12. (AP)—The body of a man who had been dead about four months was found by a party of three jackrabbit hunters today in the Woodville district in the southern part of Tulare county. The man apparently had been about 50 years of age and 140 pounds in weight. The body was found in a pasture, nearly hidden by weeds.

ILLINOISANS TO MEET

Mrs. Reba Terry will contribute vocal solos and Mrs. Helen Herbert Lowney will read at a reunion of the Illinoisans tomorrow evening in Veterans' Hall at 246 South Hill street. H. J. Brubaker will preside and lead the community singing. Mrs. Eustis's orchestra will furnish music. Tourists are welcome.

CLUB TO HONOR JUDGES

Judges Georgia Bullock, Charles M. Fricke and Samuel R. Blake are to be honored guests of the day during the program of the Soroptimist Club Tuesday at noon in the Biltmore. Milton Carlson, examiner of questioned documents, will speak on "Facts Stranger Than Fiction." Margaret Gilmore, Agnes Reupsch and Nellie M. Dougherty will act as the hostesses for the occasion, and President Mayme V. Matthay will preside.

NEW PLANT FOR OCEANSIDE

Construction will begin soon on a new telephone plant in Oceanside by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company to house new central office equipment. The total expenditure will exceed $38,000.

IDAHO-UTAH REUNION

"Happy" MacNeal, Irish tenor soloist will give vocal solos and readings at a reunion of Idaho and Utah folks Thursday evening in Veterans' Hall, 246 South Hill street.

GOV. HUNT IN EULOGY AT FUNERAL

Services for Mrs. McCanne Descendant of Marshall Conducted in This City

Funeral services for Mrs. Virginia Yates McCanne, an indirect descendant of John Marshall and a resident of Los Angeles for the last sixteen years, were conducted Friday afternoon at the undertaking parlors of L. P. Utter, 4254 South Broadway.

Mrs. McCanne, who would have been 85 years of age on the 23rd inst., died at the home of her son, Earle R. McCanne, 714 West Forty-third street, last Wednesday. She was born near Huntsville and Darkville, Mo., and became the wife of W. T. McCanne, who later became Mayor of that city.

Gov. Hunt of Arizona, who is a nephew of Mrs. McCanne, came from his home in the adjoining State to be present for her funeral. In an address he eulogized her and declared she had been his inspiration throughout his life.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Bruce Brown, pastor of the South Park Christian Church. The body will be cremated and the ashes placed in the grave of her husband at Moberly.

Mrs. McCanne leaves two sons, Earle R. McCanne, member of the City Engineer's staff, and Warwick McCanne; a grand-daughter, Mrs. Percy Allyn and two great-grandchildren, John P. Jr., and James Martin Allyn.

Ex-Publisher of Indiana Passes

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Nov. 12.—William J. Hutton, 86 years of age, retired Indiana schoolbook publisher, died here last night from illness induced by old age. He had been a resident of this city for the past six years. He leaves a widow, Martha C. Hutton, and two daughters, Mrs. Elsie B. Taylor of Eagle Rock and Miss Rosemary Hutton of Long Beach.

The funeral service will be conducted at the Patterson and McQuilkin chapel at Fifth street and Locust avenue Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be at Inglewood Cemetery. Rev. Henry Kendall Booth, pastor of the First Congregational Church, of which Mr. Hutton was a member, will officiate at the funeral service.

WATER SURVEY PLANS START IN KERN COUNTY

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Announcement was made today that the State Water Resources Survey Commission, composed entirely of legislators, may start its tour of the San Joaquin Valley, scheduled for the week of December 5, at the south end of the valley instead of in the Delta section of San Joaquin county. It has been tentatively decided to begin the survey in Kern county, inspecting various projects and contemplated developments, while working northward. Public meetings will be held at Bakersfield, Visalia, Fresno, Stockton and Pittsburg.

GORGEOUS DISPLAY AT FLOWER SHOW

TULARE, Nov. 12. — Flower lovers of Tulare are watching the "posies" most carefully in preparation for the annual fall flower show to be held at the Tulare Woman's clubhouse Monday, the 14th inst. A total of twenty-eight awards will be made, flowers featured being chrysanthemums, dahlias, roses, fall blossoms, out-of-season flowers and berries.

Due to favorable weather an exceptionally large number of entries are expected to be made prior to opening of the show. One of the most comprehensive and most beautiful events in the history of the club is anticipated.

COTTON PRICES FIRM IN SOUTH

Federal Estimate Rise Fails to Weaken Holders

Explanation Found in Bank Deposits Growth

Growers' Debts Paid, Crop Marketing Orderly

MEMPHIS (Tenn.) Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—With bad weather impending from the westward over the cotton belt, the markets of the South are exhibiting considerable nervousness, still excited somewhat by the recent break in future prices. Basis, which failed to weaken when the bureau's bearish estimate came this week, seems to have firmed up in a few instances and large dealers here report sales on better basis. The country continues to hold tenaciously to its cotton, with offerings still light in the face of a tremendous short interest among the shippers.

A very brief analysis of the financial condition of the central belt very clearly reveals the reason for such light offerings and such firm basis at this time. At Clarksdale, Miss., in the delta, deposits are $1,500,000 greater than last year; at Corinth, Miss., in the hills, a smaller city, deposits are $800,000 greater.

Combined Mississippi banks in yesterday's semiannual statement show deposits $21,000,000 greater than last year and loans only $1,000,000 greater. Word direct from Arkansas, Tennessee and Mississippi states that mortgages are being paid, farms changing hands at comparatively fancy prices.

Local representatives of one of the biggest cotton houses says current crop was produced at less cost than ever before and with farmers' debts out of the way, the last half of the crop is being marketed very slowly and orderly.

Because of such heavy short interest throughout the belt activity in spot markets has been maintained to a marked degree through the decline in the market, few buyers waiting for prices to strike bottom.

Greatest short interest seems to be in inch and a thirty-second staple cotton, in which more cotton was sold on contract that has been produced. It comes direct to your correspondent that one short shipper here recently being 5000 bales short of this particular type, offered the mill $8 a bale to cancel.

Northward through the belt to within 100 miles of Memphis practically all the cotton has been picked out and gins are operating only one day a week. Delta cotton seems to be practically all out of the fields. Spot demand for this long type of cotton continues to be vital, despite the fact that the available supply is about half of last year's volume. Buyers say that yarn mills are unable to stock up on long staples, in view of depressed conditions in yarn-buying centers and generally are observing a hand-to-mouth policy of buying, with result that activity is small.

Until now the cotton has been exclusively white and strong, but the last day or two has brought a small supply of lower grades into the market, which are being gobbled up as rapidly as they arrive. Grades of middling and lower are in ravenous demand, as shippers have been unable to find such cotton since the season opened.

Local Weather Bureau predicts almost freezing weather for the northern cotton belt before Sunday which should handicap the movement to market. Much colder weather was felt today in Oklahoma and Texas, with a "norther" reported at Oklahoma City and temperature near freezing.

GARDEN GROVE SITE FOR ORPHANS' HOME

GARDEN GROVE, Nov. 12.—Selection of Garden Grove by the State department of the 40 and 8 as the site for a home for orphans of World War veterans, and purchase of a two-acre tract of land belonging to E. H. Darling and located on West Stanford avenue, as a site for this proposed home, already arranged for by the Orange county Board of Supervisors, was announced this week here.

The building and financing of the home will be provided by the State department of the 40 and 8 and its maintenance will be carried on by the Orange county voiture assisted by the various American Legion posts and auxiliaries in the county, it is understood.

There are two other institutions of this kind established in the State of California, one located at Oakland and the other at Burbank.

PAYS HEAVY FINE; GIVES AUTO REST

SANTA ANA, Nov. 12.—Gordon Talbert, 24, son of Tom Talbert, former chairman of the Orange county Board of Supervisors, pleaded guilty to a charge of driving an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, in the Orange county Superior Court today. Floyd James Covert of Huntington Beach died from injuries sustained when the car Talbert was driving crashed into a tree in Huntington Beach last July.

Talbert was fined $500 and sentenced to spend six months in the county jail. The jail sentence was suspended for two years on the provision that Talbert abstain from intoxicating liquor. Talbert's automobile driving license was suspended for one year.

CANADIAN CAUGHT BETWEEN COUNTRIES

CALEXICO, Nov. 12.—J. H. Kennedy, claiming to be a Canadian citizen, found himself in a position of a man without a country today. When he attempted to cross from Mexicali to Calexico American immigration officers turned him back because he had neither passports nor citizenship papers.

Mexican officers refused to allow him to remain in their country. The deadlock between the officials was finally solved when the Americans agreed to lock him up in jail pending an investigation as to his status here.

PAPER HANGERS' BATTER?

On "Pancake Tuesday" a local family were enjoying their customary fare of pancakes, and as the decorators were in the house at the time, dinner was hurriedly consumed. After the meal, however, one lad exclaimed: "They aren't as good today, mother."

"No, they aren't" replied another. "They seem to be short o' summat."

Just then one of the decorators, putting in an appearance, exclaimed: "Hey, missus, hev yo' seen owt o' my paste?"—[London Answers.

PRODUCER PLEASED AT STUDIO OUTLOOK

Carl Laemmle

LAEMMLE ANNOUNCES FILM PLAN

President of Universal Says Studio Will Spend $15,000,000 This Season

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, returned here yesterday after a four months' trip through Europe, and disclosed additional details of the announced expenditure by his company of more than $15,000,000, in producing motion pictures this season.

"The lion's share of this budget will go into the seven super productions planned," Laemmle said. These he listed as "The Man Who Laughs," by Victor Hugo; Edna Ferber's "Show Boat;" "Ivanhoe," by Scott; "The Mating Call," by Rex Beach; "Cohens and Kellys in Jerusalem," and "The Devil" from the mystical German novel by Alfred Neumann.

LHASA CITY OF NO STRANGERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. (AP)—No stranger city exists than Lhasa, capital of Tibet, long the jealously guarded "Forbidden City."

Even now visitors are strenuously discouraged. Under arms, a British diplomatic mission visited the city a decade or more ago. More recently a few Westerners slipped in in disguise, so that the world can now know something of this strange community through the reports of the National Geographic Society.

Lhasa is a sacred city and its name means "Place of the Gods." With the odd, massive architecture of its monastery, built on hill tops against a magnificent background of snow-capped mountains, it well deserved the name.

RED ROBED MONKS

Dominating all else is the Potala, a combined palace, monastery and fortress. It is built up the side and on the top of a steep, rocky ridge. At first sight it seems like a gigantic American apartment-house in exotic style. It has grayish walls and buttresses, terraces and immense flights of outside steps. Up and down the steps flow endless streams of red-robed monks. Above the gray walls rise gilded roofs.

The interior of the Potala is a labyrinth of passages, steps, great halls, temples, shrines and cells. In one corner of the great mass of buildings are the apartments of the Dalai Lama, one of the two chief religious and secular rulers of Tibet.

From the Potala terraces one sees a broad valley spread out below. Here and there rocky ridges rise and in the background are some of the loftiest mountains in the world. The floor of the valley itself is many thousands of feet above sea-level.

Through the valley winds the River of Delight. To the east lies the town of Lhasa, a mass of low, two-storied, solidly built houses, among which rise temples. The so-called "School of Medicine" occupies large buildings, and farther away rises the Monastery of Sera, housing 5000 monks, and the Debung Monastery, with 10,000 inmates.

DEVIL WORSHIPERS

The monks dominate the situation in Lhasa, as they do elsewhere in Tibet. There are probably 30,000 in and around Lhasa, while the lay population is only about half as great. Nearly two-thirds of these are women, for the monasteries absorb a large part of the male population of the country. Most of the work and commerce of Lhasa are carried on by women.

Lhasa's ban against visitors is directed almost entirely against the Western World. Caravans are continually arriving from Mongolia and Eastern Tibet, and the streets are filled with animals whose backs are packed with food supplies from the near-by country.

The Tibetans practice a form of Buddhism. Some of the formal tenets of Buddhism have been retained, but have been grafted on to a local devil worship. The result is a religion full of superstitions, with lesser deities of grotesque and terrible forms. The noble Potala was built in 1645 when the religion was of a character closer to orthodox Buddhism.

CLEAN SPAN BALCONY DECLARED LARGEST

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—An auditorium dome eight stories high, the largest clear-span balcony in the world, roof trusses larger than any previously installed in St. Louis and a refrigeration system of 600 tons capacity are to be some of the features of the new Fox Theater, now under construction on Grand Boulevard near Olive street, here. The theater also is to have the first broadcasting station in a St. Louis theater. Its seating capacity will be 7500.

MEXICAN SOCIAL PARLEY CLOSES

Records Broken at Annual State Conference

Numerous Speakers Discuss Pressing Problems

Republic's Art Work and Music Presented

CLAREMONT, Nov. 12. (Exclusive) Attended by more than 300 delegates from all parts of the State the seventh annual Friends of the Mexicans' Conference closed at Pomona College tonight. The conference broke all records for registration of social scientists, teachers and welfare workers and was featured by the longest and most comprehensive program in its history.

Opening with a brilliant program of native songs and dances entitled, "A Night in Old Mexico," last night, the conference continued throughout today and closed with the address of Prof. Malone Watson Graham, Jr., of the department of political science at the University of California at Los Angeles. The entire program included addresses by prominent students of Mexican problems, committee reports, business sessions, displays of Mexican art work and two programs of Mexican music.

COMMITTEES NAMED

Mrs. Ethel Richards Allen, head of the division of adult education of Los Angeles, presided at the morning session which included the appointment of committees for "the coming year and addresses by Helen A. Montegriffo, H. W. Kearney and Helen Hefferman. James H. Battan, director of the conference, spoke the foreword in the morning. Miss Montegriffo, who is the executive secretary of the Catholic Welfare Board in Southern California, spoke on "Family Welfare Work Among the Mexicans," Mr. Kearney, an officer of the State Commission of Immigration and Housing, spoke on "The Housing and Sanitation Problem." "Edumating Children of Migratory Workers," was the title of Miss Heffernan's address. She is the chief of the rural division of education at Sacramento.

After lunch, Dr. Emory F. Bogardus, director of the school of welfare work at the University of Southern California, spoke on "The Mexican Immigrant." Harry M. Shafer, assistant superintendent of the Los Angeles city schools, addressed the assembly on "The Mexican and American Citizenship," after a short business meeting and a hearing of the committee reports for the year.

STUDENTS SPEAK

Ralph Kuhlman and Loren Hendrickson, exchange students of Pomona College to the National University of Mexico, were introduced and gave short addresses on their experiences in the Mexican center of culture. Other introductions of Dr. George S. Burgess, director of the Pomona College summer school; Willis H. Kerr, chairman of the Pomona College travel committee; Dr. Russell Story, director of the institute of inter-American relations, and Dr. Henry A. Holmes, chairman of the Pomona College Latin-American committee, followed.

The evening program, which was held in the beautiful Mabel Shaw Bridges Hall of Music, was largely musical, including selections by Estelle Heartt-Dreyfuss of Los Angeles, and an organ prelude by Prof. Joseph W. Clokey of Pomona College. An address entitled, "The Land of Poco Tiempo," by Miss Orfa Jean Shonts, formerly of the Jewish Juvenile Court of Los Angeles, and "Greetings from Mexico," by Senor Joel Culmones, Vice-Consul of Mexico, preceded the main address of the evening by Dr. Graham. The conference closed with the singing of the Mexican national anthem.

PRIMATE'S DEATH TIES UP THRONE

Hungary Placed in Strange Position Due to Demise of Official That Crowns King

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. (AP)—The death of John Cardinal Csernoch, Prince Primate of Hungary and Archbishop of Esztergom, leaves the throne of that nation in a peculiarly complicated situation.

Under Hungary's constitution only a prince primate may crown a king. And only a king may appoint a new prince primate. But since the separation of Austria and Hungary after the war the Hungarians have not chosen their King. Although the Vatican is expected to appoint a new Archbishop of Esztergom, with adequate precedent, students of monarchical politics are at a loss to determine how he may be made Prince Primate to officiate at a coronation.

THE OLDEST PENSIONERS

Among Uncle Sam's oldest pensioners Mark Thrash, a Georgia negro, heads the list. Record of the retirement division, Department of Interior, show that he was born in Virginia in 1820 and served his master as a slave for forty years. The three oldest men still receiving annuity on being retired from active government service are Thrash, age 107; Charles F. Metz, 101, and Samuel W. Saxton, 98.—[Pathfinder.

Only eight women had been granted air pilot's licenses in this country before the war.

HAIRLESS CALF HOLDS CROWD

Animal at New Hampshire Fair Has Skin Similar to That of Baby

EAST CONWAY (N. H.) Nov. 12. (Exclusive—"Wonder Boy," a hairless calf which proved a sensation at the Fryeburg Fair recently, is attracting a great deal of attention. The calf is owned by Mrs. George F. Frye of Kennebunkport, Me. The skin of the animal is as fair as a baby's and it apparently does not suffer from lack of hair. Wonder Boy eats grain mixed with milk and refuses to be fooled when water is substituted for the milk.

PLANS TO ADJUST TANGLED AFFAIRS

Virginia Lee Corbin

ACTRESS TO PLEAD FOR GUARDIAN

Trust Fund for Young Film Player Also Planned to Recoup Family Fortune

While her mother is rapidly recovering in Rosemeade Lodge Sanitorium, Virginia Lee Corbin, cinema actress, yesterday was preparing to straighten out her tangled family fortunes.

Tomorrow, is is learned, Miss Corbin will establish a trust fund in a Hollywood bank as her first step toward recuperating asserted financial losses brought about by what are described as maternal extravagances. It is understood the trust fund will be placed in charge of George E. Dodge, cashier of the bank.

This action to be taken by Miss Corbin through her attorney, Nathan O. Freedman, will be followed by an application for appointment of a guardian for the 17-year-old actress. Freedman said the guardian to be proposed is an employee of the Board of Education and a close friend of both Miss Corbin and her mother, Mrs. A. L. Corbin.

This guardianship is expected to be without opposition on the part of the mother. It is also expected the actress will be under supervision of Ruth Michle, her adopted sister.

The two girls have established a new home together, leaving the apartment at 620 South St. Andrews Place.

Appointment of a business manager and custodian of the estate for Miss Corbin will also be asked next week, Freedman said.

The family affairs of the girl are now said to be calm and amiable.

MEXICO SOLD ON HOME PRODUCTS

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Success has marked the first stage of the campaign launched by the Federal government through the Secretariat of Industry, Commerce and Labor in urging the Mexican people to used domestically produced and manufactured goods in preference to those of foreign makes.

It is the belief of the government, which has announced its intention of carrying its propaganda campaign further, that Mexico is a great enough nation not only to raise agriculture produce sufficient for its own consumption, but that manufactured goods and art articles can be supplied in quantities enough for domestic use and for export, also.

There are three factors influencing Mexico's industrial progress, an official statement says. Concerning this, the following explanation is voiced. "Of the three factors which influence industrial progress, the buyer, the producer and the government, which supervises the economic functions, we have two in Mexico, whose activities are well known.

"The government by means of its organized bureau, the Secretariat of Industry, Commerce and Labor, is endeavoring to implant by every possible means, manufacturing and production on a large scale and the people are co-operating with the result that they seek the Mexican trade mark in preference to any other."

Install Beacons for Mail Flyers

RENO (Nev.) Nov. 12. (Exclusive) Acetylene gas beacons are being installed by the Department of Commerce to light the way for air-mail flyers over the lofty Sierra Nevada Mountains at night. The lights are placed at three-mile intervals and are of the intermittent type, as flashes have been found more suitable for aviation use than steady beams.

Similar beacons will be placed later on air routes leading over the mountains from Nevada into Southern California. The beacons are to be under supervision of the Bureau of Lighthouses, and are sufficiently powerful to signal through thick snowstorms.

ODD NUMBERS LUCKY FOR BRITISH WRITER

LONDON, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Combinations of numbers 1 and 8 are George Bernard Shaw's favorite numbers. The author has moved into a new and palatial apartment in Whitehall court and his apartment number is 130 while his telephone number is 3160. His old phone number was 331. However, despite his belief in number 8 he is not living on the third floor, but the fifth. At the Adelphi where he formerly lived he was on the second floor. He declares he wishes to escape the curious so he decided to try three more flights up.

TRIBUTE PAID TO FOREST RANGER

Heroic Service Lauded by Covina Writer

One Man's Exploits Cited as Typical of Body

Article Prepared on Request of Angeles Association

At a recent meeting of the Angeles Forest Protective Association it was agreed that the work of the United States forest rangers is one of the most important in Los Angeles county and that every year they save the taxpayers many thousands of dollars as well as the future loss of water and flood damage. Frank Stokes, Jr., of Covina, at the behest of the association, wrote the following article concerning the service. It was written with particular reference to Ranger Arthur Shay as one who typifies the personnel of the ranger service and because of his prompt action and leadership during the recent San Antonio Canyon fire.

BY FRANK STOKES, JR.

If you ask Col. Greeley, Chief United States Forester, where in the United States is the greatest danger of fire, undoubtedly Col. Greeley will answer, "In Southern California." There are a number of national forests in Southern California. If you should ask Col. Greeley to name the one presenting the greatest fire hazard, he will reply, "the Angeles."

"Why the Angeles?" Because of the dry summer climate and the dense, brushy growth that covers the steep sides of the Sierra Madre Mountains. And because these mountains are in close proximity to the desert on the one side and a cool ocean on the other there are no storms, but stiff winds almost every day during the summer months.

Steep mountains, dense brush, brisk breezes and hot, dry summer days—a worse combination could not be conceived. Add to all this the thousands of campers and picnickers, all of them carrying matches.

SEVERE SCHOOLING

As to the men whose job it is to combat these fires, when one considers the severe schooling they receive their splendid work is not remarkable. It is rather remarkable, however, that the civilian population of Southern California should be so unaware of the highly competent men in charge of their back country. Yet this may be due to the fact that the work these men do never is seen and their exploits seldom appear in print. Even after having lived for years in the towns and cities that almost touch the Angeles National Forest, many citizens never have heard of "Leal" Anderson, "Hap" Mueller, B. L. Coulter, N. E. Peterson, L. H. Dorr, V. P. Vetter, M. H. Davis, "Clint" Keim and others.

Obviously, I cannot go into detail concerning all these men. So of all the rangers within the borders of Southern California I have chosen as my subject the one I know best.

SHAY NATIVE SON

He is Arthur Shay, a native son of the Golden West. His father's father came around the Horn in 1848. His mother's father crossed the plains in 1847. His father's mother arrived in California by the southern route in 1847. Mr. Shay's father and mother were born in California. Mr. Shay was born in San Bernardino.

While other early settlers were developing cities and farms, the Shay family preferred logging camps and cattle ranges.

For more than half a century the name of Shay has been closely associated with the San Bernardino mountains.

Fifteen years ago Shay decided to enter the United States Forest Service. He first became a fire guard and was stationed in one of the most isolated sections of the San Bernardino Mountains. But, being mountain-bred, he did not mind, besides, his bride was with him. She also was mountain-bred, her people being the owners of the "I. S." brand in Big Bear Valley.

Aside from the few remaining cattlemen the Shays—husband and wife—saw only five or six people during all that first summer. It is difficult to realize such a situation when one considers the crowded condition of those same mountains today.

FIRST LONG BATTLE

During that first summer he battled one blaze for thirty-six hours, while his wife brought him water and food and even helped with ax and shovel.

"Luckily," says Shay, "that fire was not the skippy, jumpy kind. Neither was there any wind. Even so it burned 250 acres before we got it under control."

His second season as a fire guard was spent alone. This time his wife remained in San Bernardino, and their first child was born that summer. Owing to the infrequent mail service, Shay had been a father for six weeks before he became aware of the fact.

Since those early days Shay has fought several hundred forest fires. Twenty-five or thirty of these fires have been of the first magnitude and all of them have been in Southern California.

TRAPPED BY BLAZE

On one occasion, in the San Bernardino Mountains, Shay and Jack Sanborn were cutting a "break" ahead of a fire. They had a crew of 100 Mexicans. Suddenly they realized that a back-fire had been started behind them. Soon the two fires would meet—and they were in between. They formed the Mexicans into a row and told them where to go.

The workmen passed in single file between the two ranigers and were counted. There were ninety-nine.

Somewhere in the brush one man had "hidden out," and did not realize his danger. He was found, but not until they had become surrounded by a wall of fire. Several hours later three badly scorched men appeared in camp.

At another time Shay was "cold trailing" with a crew of 125 soldiers from Arcadia. Once more he deemed it necessary to count his men. This time four were missing.

He soon discovered their trail and

VETERAN OF MANY BATTLES WITH FIRE

Ranger Arthur Shay

followed it across the path of the fire; down into a narrow canyon and up a ridge on the other side. From this ridge he saw the four in silhouette against the sky. They were out of danger, but he was not.

"I knew the fire had me," Shay said long after. "So I made a fire of my own, hoping it would burn a circle large enough for me to stand in while the big blaze passed. Before long I realized that I'd not be able to stand the heat. By this time the ashes and smoke had blinded me. But I had to move on. So I felt my way along, down the narrow canyon. The fire was on both sides of this canyon.

SAVED BY POOL

"Suddenly my feet slipped and it seemed to me I'd never stop falling. Then I landed in a waist-deep pool of water. And there I stayed while the fire passed over. I had fallen over a thirty-foot cliff into a pool ten feet wide. There was no other water in that canyon."

Never has a man been lost at a fire over which Shay has had charge. For that matter it is unusual for men to be killed or badly hurt while under the leadership of Federal rangers.

For a number of years Shay was stationed at Camp Baldy in San Antonio Canyon. This canyon represents a summer population of several thousand people. Over all these people the ranger is supreme. He must settle questions of property rights, sanitation, road construction, transportation, police protection, fire prevention; in fact, every question that comes before the various authorities of municipalities comes before the Federal ranger in charge of every district within the Angeles Forest.

The Federal rangers never make arrests if arrests can be avoided. And to teach people what is right and what is wrong in the mountains, to persuade them to obey the laws and to exercise precaution, to fill them with the desire to co-operate—to do all this requires diplomacy.

We read of the Northwest Mounted Police and of the Texas Rangers. Just as brave, as able and as fine are our own United States forest rangers. I have selected Shay as typical of them all.

GROWN-UPS WILL RETURN TO BOYHOOD

Gangs of Men to Cavort Youthfully in Class for Study of Youngsters

Fifty "gangs" of men of every age, each with a "gang leader," will be seen in childish romps and boyish competitions during the ten consecutive nights of a course in "boyology" to be inaugurated tomorrow evening by Joseph D. Becker, national field secretary of the Knights of Columbus, and in which training work numerous local educators and heads of boy organizations will co-operate.

Enrollment for the course, which is free and nonsectarian, has reached 400 men.

The intensive course is not alone aimed to obtain new leaders for boy organizations, but is equally for the father who wants to be in closer intimacy with his son and other boys in the same block. Diplomas will be awarded at a closing dinner on November 23.

During the ten evenings of combined work and play special programs will be handled by Wes Klusman, executive head of the Woodcrafters' League of America, Scout Executive DeGroot, Superintendent of Municipal Playgrounds Hjelte, Dr. P. J. Barone, Catholic Big Brothers, I. Irving Lipsitch, Jewish Big Brothers, and a representative of the American National Red Cross.

Mr. Becker has given the course in ten fo the larger eastern cities. Enrollment may be made at the office of J. D. Minster, Sun Finance Building, or at Knights of Columbus Hall, Boy Scout headquarters or with any boy character-building agency.

Col. Sobieski Obsequies to be Tomorrow

Funeral services for Col. John Sobieski, sixth lineal descendant of King John III, of Poland, and commander of the firing squad that executed Emperor Maximilian of Mexico, will be conducted at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow at the First Baptist Church at Leewaard street and Westmoreland avenue, with Rev. James Francis officiating. The body will be cremated at Forest Lawn immediately following the burial service, it was announced yesterday.

Col. Sobieski, who also was noted as an active foe of capital punishment and an advocate of woman suffrage, died at 3 p.m. Friday at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Gilhousen, 2807 Brighton Boulevard. He had been a resident of the United States since February 22, 1855.

EARLY DAY HOUSE WILL BE MUSEUM

Orange's First Portable Structure, Once School, to Serve New Purpose

LAGUNA BEACH, Nov. 12.—Orange county's first portable house, also the county's first schoolhouse, is destined to become a museum at Laguna Beach. It is owned by Joseph Thurston, pioneer of Laguna Beach, and it is located in Fairy Woods, on the Laguna Beach-Santa Ana highway.

It is reported that the house was built in Boston. It is made of veneering and the sides are so constructed that they hook together, making a portable structure. The building was brought around Cape Horn on the trip from Boston, so the story goes. It was unloaded either at Newport Beach or Anaheim Landing and was set up at Santa Ana, where it was used for school purposes.

Subsequently the house was taken to Laguna Beach, where Joseph Yoch used it as a beach home during the late eighties. Mr. and Mrs. Yoch are said to have occupied it for more than thirty years, finally selling it to a Mexican family for $5. They moved it onto the sand and after several years deserted it.

Thurston learned of the history of the house, purchasing it, moved it to a scenic location in Fairy Woods. Now he plans to convert it into a museum.

MORMONS TO DEDICATE CHURCH SITE

Ceremony Will be This Afternoon With Leaders of Church Attending

Dedication of ground for their new $200,000 tabernacle will be witnessed by more than 3000 Mormons, members of the Church of Latter Day Saints, this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Country Club Drive and Manhattan Place, according to George W. McCune, president of the Hollywood Stake, who will conduct the ceremonies.

McCune said construction will start on the tabernacle just as soon as the plans, now in preparation, are completed, which will be within a few weeks.

Two leaders in the Mormon Church are in Los Angeles to assist in the dedication. They are President Charles W. Nibley, of Salt Lake City, second counselor to President Heber J. Grant, head of the Mormon organization, and Apostle Richard R. Lyman. Mr. Lyman is a grandson of Amasa Lyman, one of the founders of San Bernardino, Mr. McCune said.

BAR LEADER HEADS PLAN FOR REUNION

Kemper Campbell Named by Alumni Association to Promote Trojan Fete

Members of the Alumni Association of the University of Southern California have appointed Kemper Campbell, president of the Los Angeles County Bar Association and a member of the class of 1907, general chairman of home-coming week, to be held on the Trojan campus December 1, 2 and 3. He will be assisted by a Trojan student committee headed by Burdette Henney.

Home-coming this year marks the fourth time that Trojan officials and students will welcome members of the Alumni Association to the scenes of their college days. Social events, golf tournaments, rallies, banquets, parades and a football game with the University of Washington have been announced by Mr. Campbell.

Miss Sarah Stoneham, '22, has been appointed to the chairmanship of social functions, assisted by Helen Kleine and Catherine Colwell, senior coeds. The outstanding feminine social event will be the football banquet, which will be held at the women's residence hall on December 2. Mothers of Trojan football stars and wives of Trojan officials will be honor guests. At the same time the women are holding their football banquet a Trojan stag dinner will be held in the gymnasium. Dr. Harry Van Fleet, '16, and Everett Miller, '28, are in charge of this affair. Coach Bagshaw of the University of Washington and Glenn S. Warner, mentor of the Stanford eleven, will be honor guests.

On the last day of the three days of the "old guard" reunion the parade and football contest will be held. Each sorority and fraternity will enter floats. The winners in the parade will receive loving cups.

Only a few years ago, Blackner was punching cows in Wyoming, his ambition to become a singer being aroused by hearing a makebelieve cowboy singing in a vaudeville show.

ORATORIO SOCIETY'S LEADER TELLS AIMS

The best productions of the Los Angeles Oratorio Society's fifteen years of existence will be presented at the Shrine Auditorium during the coming season, according to Mrs. J. T. Anderson, president of the society. The first presentation will be "The Messiah," on December 11, next, and on February 5, 1928, "Elija" will be presented. John A. Smallman will be conductor for "The Messiah," with A. Cell Marshall, assistant conductor; Lorna Greeg, accompanist, and Dr. Ray Hastings, organist.

CLAY PRODUCTS SHARES LISTED

Exchange Approves Stock of Pacific Company

Will be Called for Trading on Next Thursday

Concern Manufactures Brick and Kindred Products

Shares of the Pacific Clay Products Company have been approved by the board of governors of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange for listing and will be called for trading on the 17th inst., it was announced yesterday by Norman B. Courteney, secretary and manager of the exchange.

Pacific Clay Products, a California corporation, has an authorized capital of 156,250 shares of no-par-value common stock, of which 96,500 shares are outstanding among 225 stockholders. Dividends on this stock are paid monthly at the annual rate of $2.25 a share. The Merchants' National Trust and Savings Bank is registrar for the stock.

Officers of the company are William Lacy, president; Robert Linton, vice-president and general manager, and W. R. Fawcett, secretary and treasurer. Directors include T. W. Banks, W. T. Bishop, W. R. Fawcett, J. D. Fredericks, P. G. Hoffman, William Lacy, Robert Linton, T. A. Morrissey and N. W. Stowell.

The Pacific Clay Products Company manufactures vitrified sewer pipe, electric conduit tile, water pipe, roof tile, face and enamel brick, fire brick, stone ware, drain tile, etc. It owns three plants in Los Angeles and vicinity with an annual capacity of about 80,000 tons of finished products. Extensive clay deposits are owned and held under lease.

Sales of the company in the nine months ended September 30, last, amounted to $1,355,803.31, as compared with $1,258,179.95 in the corresponding period of last year, an increase of $150,623.36, or approximately 8 per cent. September sales totaled $180,340.43, an increase of $44,218.65, or 32 per cent, over sales of $136,121.78 in September, 1926.

Net earnings for the nine months ended September 30, 1926, amounted to $358,322. After all charges, the balance available for dividends was equal to $3.10 a share on the present outstanding capitalization.

Bonded debt of the company has been reduced through sinking-fund operations to approximately $500,000. The securities are of the sinking-fund gold variety and bear 7 per cent interest.

Cactus Rubber Gets Permit to Market Shares

Manufacture of synthetic rubber from the juice of cactus plants is the purpose of the Cactus Rubber Company of America, which has just received a permit from J. M. Friedlander, State Corporation Commissioner, to dispose of a portion of its capital stock.

The rubber will be made under a patented process perfected by Dr. John C. Wichmann of Los Angeles; two patents obtained by him to be transferred to the company in exchange for stock. Dr. Wichmann states that a ton of cactus material will yield about 154 pounds of concentrated juice. Other ingredients are mixed with the juice, including a small quantity of Para rubber and linseed oil and the entire mass boiled and later evaporated.

The company claims to own one of the last fields of spineless cactus in California and plans to plant an additional 500 acres. The company is capitalized at $500,000. It is permitted to issue 20,050 shares, the proceeds of 10,000 shares of which will be used for financing the company's program. Officers include Dr. Wichmann, Ernest T. Craig, John C. Reagan, Erwin P. Werner and W. J. Bagby, Jr.

Prospects on Western Stock Ranges Bright

Live stock on the western ranges is in good condition with a large supply of range and other feed for winter, according to the monthly live stock and range report of the United States Division of Crop and Live-Stock Estimates. Fall feed on these ranges has been very good and the prospects for winter ranges are promising with only a few dry spots with short feed on the desert ranges of South Central Wyoming, Western Utah and Nevada.

Western cattle have gone to market in good flesh, the report states, and the cattle on the winter ranges are in better condition than at this season last year. Sheep are in excellent condition due to good summer and fall range. The bulk of lambs has moved to market and feed lots, with weights a little heavier than in 1926.

On the 1st inst. the condition of California ranges was placed at 81 per cent of normal, the same as a year ago. The condition of cattle was 89 per cent of normal as against 90 per cent last year, and sheep are recorded at 90 per cent of normal, as compared with 91 per cent last year.

PERMIT SOUGHT

Silk Mills Plans Erection of Plant in Los Angeles

Application of the Pacific Silk Mills Corporation for a permit to sell stock to provide for the erection of a plant in Los Angeles at a cost of $350,000 has been granted by J. M. Friedlander, State Corporation Commissioner. The company is capitalized at $1,000,000.

In its application, the company states that at present all silk goods are being shipped to California from eastern mills and that the demand here will be sufficient to take care of its output. The incorporators include Harry Goldinger and Philip Holsberg.

BANK ISSUES RESUME LEAD

Announcement of Citizens' Group Merger and Split-up Plan of National City Spurs Buying

BY FRANK L. GARDNER,
Banks, Huntley & Co.

Bank stocks again assumed the position of dominant leadership during the greatly abbreviated week just closed on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. Announcement of plans for the merging of the Citizens' National Bank with the Citizens' Trust and Savings Bank, and the publication of a proposal to reduce the par and split up the stock of the National City Bank, gave encouragement to the rumors of pending similar action on the part of other local institutions. The theory that amicable consolidations would result in materially reduced operating expenses, and greatly improved efficiency, coupled with the belief that a general reduction in par and market price, would bring about a much wider distribution of ownership, engendered a broad demand throughout the group.

Merchants' National Trust and Savings registered the largest gain in dollars per share to advance 45 points from the previous week's closing bid, to a new record peak at 510. Apparently very little stock was available to supply the demand, and moves of 20 points between sales were the result. California Bank continued to sell at its previously established high of 515. Citizens' National was sought, although there was no change in quotations from the peak bid of 465 attained the preceding week, and no stock came into the market.

Security Trust and Savings moved at 490 and an odd lot of Farmers' and Merchants' National sold at 470. Los Angeles-First National, changing hands in increased volume over that of the last few weeks, reacted from 98½ to 97, but recovered to 97 3-4 finally. Bank of Italy was again very active, ranging from 215½ to a low at 210, ex the subscription rights, and closing Thursday at 215. After giving due effect to the recent stock dividend and the value of the stock rights, this price is approximately equivalent to 276 for the stock held six months ago, and a new record for all time. Bancitaly Corporation sold from 116 3-4 to 118½ and finished at 118 1-8. Again considering recent stock disbursements, the current market gives a value in the neighborhood of 189 to stock held prior to the two recent stock dividends. Bank of Italy rights ranged from 6 to 7, closing at the latter figure.

OILS IRREGULAR

A general feeling of uncertainty regarding the immediate future of the oil industry was evident in the market action of the main body of the oil stocks. A desire to view the future optimistically was held in check by a fear that the recent improvement might be only temporary, and not have a foundation in fact. Easing prices throughout the list were the result. California Petroleum ranged from 23 5-8 to 23 1-8 and closed at 23¼. Standard Oil of California was off 3 points from its recent best price to sell from 56 3-4 to final transactions at 55½. Union Oil of California reacted from 45 1-8 to 44½ and Union Oil Associates lost ½ point to 43½. Richfield Oil provided the exception to the rule, attaining its best level since the slump of last spring, with a range from 21 1-4 to a top at 22 5-8 in the closing session. Shell Union sold at 28 3-4. Rio Grande Oil ranged from 21 3-4 to 22, and Holly Development from 1.42½ to 1.40. Oceanic Oil sold between 55 and 60, Midway Northern at 50, and United States Royalties at 12.

Broad activity without material change in price levels was evident throughout the public utility listings. Los Angeles Gas and Electric preferred sold at 103 1-4, Southern Counties Gas 7 per cent preferred at 107 and Southern California Gas preferred at 25 1-4. Pacific Gas first preferred ranged from 26 3-8 to 26 3-4, and the common sold at 43. San Joaquin Light and Power 7 per cent prior sold at 112 3-4, and the 6 per cent prior at 101 3-4. The Southern California Edison issues were active, the original preferred ranging from 41 5-8 to 41 3-4, the 5 1-2 per cent preferred selling at 24, the 6 per cent preferred at 25 3-4 and the 7 per cent from 29 1-8 to 29. Edison common ranged between 38 7-8 and 39 1-8.

MORTGAGE ISSUE UP

In the miscellaneous division, Mortgage Guarantee was unusually active, advancing 5 points to a close at 150. An active demand for the stock at the higher level appeared to forecast a possible increase in the dividend. Los Angeles Investment sold off 10 cents to a close at 2.85. Globe Grain common ranged from 79 1-8 to 79 1-2, Hal Roach preferred sold at 23 3-4 and 23 7-8, and Pacific National Company moved at 130 1-4. Goodyear Tire and Rubber preferred sold at 100, while Goodyear Textile preferred changed hands at 99 1-4.

Big Jim Mines was active near its recent top, ranging from 48 to 50. Argentina Consolidated sold at 37, and Boundary Cone at 3 1-2. Sunnyside Consolidated ranged from 7 to 7 1-2, and Gold Dust between 7 1-2 and 7.

Broadening interest in the unlisted division resulted in an increased number of active representations. Electrical Products common sold between 83 and 84. Pacific Finance common ranged from 178 to 180 1-2 and Pacific Indemnity sold at 153. Pan American Western Petroleum sold off from 21 1-4 to 20 1-2 and closed at 20 5-8. United Bank and Trust ranged from 185 to 187. Tidewater Associated common sold at 16 7-8 and the preferred changed hands at 88. Zellerbach Paper common moved at 35 1-8, the preferred at 101. Pacific Lighting common at 76 and De Giorgio units at 40.

HOLIDAYS AID STORE STOCKS

Christmas Prospects Draw Speculative Attention to Coast Mercantile Securities

BY EARLE E. CROWE

On the prospect of record-breaking Christmas business, the store and mercantile stocks in the New York market are receiving the close attention of the speculators. Pacific Coast store stocks have not, as yet, attracted a Christmas following, but there is no good reason for these shares to lag during a season of heavy sales. Everything points to another new high in the volume of holiday business on the Coast, or at least the equal of last year's record.

Christmas business is already getting well under way on the Coast, and should be satisfactorily distributed among the principal lines of mercantile activity. In the New York market, particular attention is given to the chain store stocks on the strength of five selling Saturdays in December this year, compared with only three last year. This is a factor that should also affect the department and store stocks as well as the chain systems.

BENEFITS WIDESPREAD

Department store, chain store, chain grocery, home furnishings, and confectionery and restaurant store systems are the chief lines that stand to benefit from Christmas business. On the Pacific Coast this would include such department store stocks as May Department, Schlesinger, Magnin, Hale Brothers, Emporium, Broadway and Bullock's. The first four are chain systems, operating a number of stores in the large cities.

Pig'n Whistle, a confectionery and restaurant chain system; Barker Brothers, home furnishings; Piggly Wiggly and Safeway Stores, two of the largest chain groceries, are other stocks that may win speculative buying on the basis of holiday business.

While the market for the stocks in the foregoing lists is relatively inactive on the coast stock exchanges, the rate at which sales and earnings have been running this year has slowly increased the investment and speculative interest in the group as a whole. Whether existing prices fully discount the year's results in the way of earnings is problematical, but there is a strong possibility that the variable of Christmas sales will bring a new group of buyers into the market on the theory that twelve months' earnings will be beyond expectations.

SALES IMPROVE

Sales of the Broadway Department Store, for example, totaled nearly $18,500,000 last year, or a gain of 9 per cent over the previous year. For the six months ended April 30, last, including the busy months of November, and January, the sales were $10,601,726, up nearly 8 per cent over the corresponding period of the previous year.

Schlesinger sales, reflecting in part the addition of new stores, registered a substantial gain in 1926 over 1925. The increase was from $12,300,000 to $19,046,231. I. Magnin sales jumped from $5,980,564 to $7,225,263, and Hale Brothers, from $17,314,124 to $19,613,572.

Reports from Barker Brothers, the largest home and office furnishings business in the United States, indicate that 1927 will be the best year in the history of the company. Sales and earnings are running about 10 per cent ahead of last year.

RECOVERY OF PRICES FEATURES

Rally of Market in Past Week Wipes Out Portion of Recent Losses

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—Important financial and trade developments followed each other in quick succession this week and left Wall street in a cheerful frame of mind. A further recovery in the stock market wiped out more than half of the ground lost in the recent sharp reaction, and sent scores of individual issues to new peak prices for the year. Cotton broke sharply on the publication of an unexpectedly large government crop estimate, then made partial recovery. Sterling exchange advanced to the highest level since 1914, Dutch guilders the highest since 1919, and Japanese exchange collapsed to a new low level, for the year.

Two of the most significant developments of the week having a bearing on the stock market were the stiffening of steel prices following soon after the surprisingly large increase in the unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation, and the declaration of an extra cash dividend of $2.50 on the new common stock of General Motors Corporation which also was placed on a regular annual basis of $5, equivalent to $10 on the old which paid $8 with occasional extras.

Wall street was of the opinion that consumers of steel would place large orders for future delivery when they became convinced that the recent declining trend of commodity prices had been definitely checked. Likewise the generous cash extra on General Motors was construed as an indication that Ford competition was not feared by other leading manufacturers. Declines in commodity prices were offset by the fact that the aggregate value of leading crops was well above that of last year. Ease of credit conditions was emphasized by the heavy oversubscription of new bond offerings, particularly the Treasury issue.

Cotton Prices Close Higher on Quiet Mart

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—The cotton market had a strong opening on the freezing weather now prevailing over the entire State of Oklahoma today, and also most of Northwest Texas and the northern part of Arkansas. It is expected to continue tomorrow and spread to the Central States and also to the northern part of Alabama, Mississippi and the western section of the Carolinas. This definitely puts to an end any further top crop development.

There was enough local trade buying on it and also some further covering of shorts to advance prices 5 to 8 points for the active trading months from yesterday's closing. At that level representing an extreme recovery of about 65 to 70 points from the lowest range of early Thursday, enough profit taking and fresh southern selling developed to send the market off about 20 to 22 points from the top prices of the morning to about 19 3-4 cents for January in the second hour, and 19.92 cents for March, and 20.07 cents for May before enough new trade buying came in to check the setback.

The fresh support closed the market firm at the top, 10 to 18 points over yesterday's final prices, 19.96 cents to 20.33 cents for December and May.

At Liverpool where the markets closed long before the time of opening here, spot cotton was up 17 points from yesterday's prices to 11.21d for middling. Futures there advanced 20 to 23 points, but later reacted from profit taking and closed with a net advance of 15 to 18 on the day against 18 to 21 that should have been held to have met our closing prices of yesterday.

The census report on American mill consumption for the month of October will be announced here before the opening of the market on Monday. It is expected to be around 600,000 bales against 627,321 for the month of September, and 763,361 for October, last year.

J. A. GRAVES TO ADDRESS GROUP FIVE

Annual Fall Meeting of Bankers' Division Will be Held at Long Beach

Jackson A. Graves, president of the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank of Los Angeles, will be the principal speaker before the annual fall meeting of Group No. 5, California Bankers' Association, to be held next Saturday at Long Beach, according to the announcements mailed yesterday by Ralph C. Long, vice-president of the Hollywood branch of the Security Trust and Savings Bank, and secretary of the group.

The Long Beach Clearinghouse Association will act as host for the occasion, and an extensive program of entertainment is being arranged, Mr. Long stated. Preceding the dinner at the Pacific Coast Club, golf tournaments will be held at the Virginia, and Long Beach Country clubs with no green fees for visiting bankers. The swimming pool of the Pacific Coast Club will also be thrown open to Long Beach's guests.

W. H. Thompson and Arch W. Anderson, vice-presidents of the Los Angeles-First National Trust and Savings Bank, will stage a semi-humorous dialogue, as an entertainment feature of the dinner. They will impersonate a loaning officer and a prospective borrower. Musical numbers and vaudeville skits will complete the program.

Officers of the group are George H. Naegele, cashier of the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank, president; Alfred A. Calkins, assistant vice-president, Security Trust and Savings Bank, vice-president, and Mr. Long, secretary.

PROJECT LICENSED

Sespe Hot Springs Company to Float $615,000 in Stock

For the purpose of obtaining funds with which to acquire and develop hot springs located in Ventura county, the Sespe Development Corporation, with a capitalization of $2,000,000, has applied for and received from J. M. Friedlander, State Corporation Commissioner, a permit to dispose of $615,000 worth of its stock.

The property which the company proposes to develop is known as Sespe Hot Springs, consisting of a number of springs all arising within a radius of a few hundred feet of each other and combining to form Sespe Hot Springs Creek. The water is at a high temperature when it reaches the surface and because of its heat and mineralized content is said by the company's officers to be beneficial in the treatment of various diseases. The price of the property is said to be $85,000, of which a portion has been paid. Officers of the company are Frank Buren, president; Daniel A. Hay, secretary, and P. S. Combs, J. O. Groves and W. E. McCampbell, directors.

San Diego Corporation Plans to Erect Office Building

The San Diego Corporation, organized for the purpose of erecting an office building on the northwest corner of Sixth street and Broadway, San Diego, has received a permit from J. M. Friedlander, State Corporation Commissioner, to sell $1,200,000 bonds. Proceeds will be used to defray building costs.

Construction of the building was commenced some time ago. The ground floor will be occupied by the San Diego Trust and Savings Bank and the remaining space will be for office use. The San Diego Corporation is capitalized at $1,000,000 and a permit previously granted authorized it to dispose of its stock. Its officers are M. T. Gilmore, C. W. Wilson, J. W. Sefton, Jr., Nat Rogan, R. M. Powers, S. M. Bingham, W. M. Crouse, Matt F. Heller and F. W. Stearns.

PERMIT GIVEN NEW INVESTMENT HOUSE

Beverly Hills Investment and Loan Corporation is the latest general finance company to receive a permit from J. M. Friedlander, State Corporation Commissioner, to dispose of stock. The company will take over the business of I. Harry Epstein, who has operated a finance concern at Beverly Hills for some time. With the funds acquired from the sale of stock the company, according to its application, plans to engage in buying and dealing in mortgages, building loans, deeds of trust and other securities and to do a general loan and real-estate financing business. The company is capitalized at $625,000. Its officers are I. Harry Epstein, A. S. Epstein, J. Hugh White and H. A. Finkenstein.

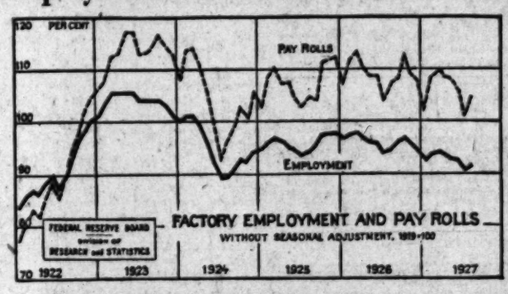
PAY-ROLL INDEX TURNS UP

Employment Volume Shows Gain



Reserve Bank Surveys Field

[By the Associated Press]

Factory employment and pay rolls have taken an upward trend after ruling downward and generally lower than in the past two years.

Basic industries have shown gains in employment of late, increases being chiefly in boot-and-shoe plants, flour mills, granite and marble quarries, railroad train service departments, textile plants, sugar and canning factories and coal mines.

Increases are expected shortly in candy factories and plants catering to the holiday trade and in the automotive industry. Laborers employed in harvesting crops are expected to continue to find jobs on construction work and general farm operations.

Recovery of southern flooded areas has tended to increase employment there. However, there is a surplus of clerical workers throughout the country.

Pay rolls, which showed a rapid increase in the first quarter of 1927, but took a seasonal drop during the summer, are rising again.

The chart, prepared by the Federal Reserve Board's Division of Research and Statistics, illustrates the trends. The index numbers, which represent monthly changes in volume, are weighed averages of similar indexes for thirty-four individual industries.

Practical Ways of Investing in Home Ownership, Savings Accounts, Life Insurance, and Dependable Investment Securities

CXIII.—The Reputable Security Dealer's Profit

About $20,000,000 of new securities are sold, on an average, every day in the United States, including Sundays and holidays. These are the securities known as publicly offered issues. They do not include the fakes or the large amount of honest securities, consisting mainly of small individual mortgages, small stock and bond issues privately sold.

For handling this $20,000,000 a day of new securities, the investment banking houses of the nation receive an average gross profit of 2 or 3 per cent. On some issues they may receive as much as 4 or 5 per cent; on others, less than 1 per cent. Occasionally they may receive more than 5 per cent, but if the security is not very desirable that size profit is not frequent.

From this average of 2 or 3 per cent, which means a gross profit of $2 or $3 on every $100 bond sold, the dealer must pay salaries and commissions to bond salesmen, rent and all other expenses. In fact, expenses are so large, profits so narrow and competition so keen that a majority of the reputable bond houses of the United States made no money in 1926, although in that year they handled the largest volume of business in their history. They made a comfortable living, of course, but that is about all, excepting a comparatively few, chiefly the larger wholesale dealers.

The security dealer can exist on small profits because he keeps his money turning over constantly. There are a few financial geniuses among them who get rich quick, but a majority of the men who handle the $20,000,000 a day of new securities, the country's experts on investments, do not know how to get rich quick. And if they cannot do it, how can the average man expect to do it?

Signal spots on your investment journey

In the life of every investment, signals appear. Changes on financial structures, new industrial alliances, personnel readjustments, developments that forecast a broader marketing field, changing customs that create a greater demand for a commodity or a service—often are signals for a revision of the investor's holdings.

Analysis shows that few are committed to the sound investment course. Yet there is a wise investment program for every individual need, and for every varying condition.

Close, constant study of the investment market, a knowledge of trends, a familiarity with the history of investment securities, are necessary to the successful outlining of the ideal program.

These qualifications are an essential part of the service the Investment Banker is rendering clients who would have recommended to them a sound financial program.

STOCK MARKET CONTINUES UP

General Price Level Boosted by Spirited Buying

Rise Influenced by Bullish Trade Reports

Last Half-Hour of Trading Featured by Rally

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—Speculative buying in the stock market today carried the general level of prices upward. Some week-end profit taking in the last hour of the half-day session checked the advance somewhat, but nevertheless many of the leading issues closed 1 to 5 points or more above yesterday's final figures, some of them at their peaks for the day.

Considerable optimism prevailed among operators for the advance, buying orders came in from many quarters, inspired by such favorable developments as Presidents Green's optimistic forecast of next year's business, Motors earnings, stiffening steel prices and the increase in unfilled orders for the United States Steel Corporation. Easy money continued to be a factor, emphasized by the ready reception given various new issues in the bond field.

STORE STOCKS UP

Prospects of good business were again reflected by buoyancy of mercantile issues, such as Montgomery Ward, Woolworth, Sears Roebuck, Munsing Wear and Arnold Constable, all of which reached their highest prices of the year.

Such leading issues as United States Steel and General Motors were in brisk demand, the former closing at its day's highest, but motors fell back a little in the final dealings. Leadership furnished by steels, common was instrumental in running up several import shares from foreign territory, including International Harvester, which sold as high as 140 before reacting to around 138.

The last half hour was featured by strength of some of the specialties, notably Atchison, and Delaware & Hudson, which attained their highest prices of the day in that period. New York Central advanced more than a point, closing around 164. Rails as a group, however, did not participate in the sharp advances in American Can, American Express and Adams Express, the latter of which sold at their best prices of the year.

Some of the specialties also attracted much interest. American Can, common and preferred, Corn Products, Burroughs Adding Machine, Mathieson Alkali established a new maximum figure and Colorado Fuel, Crucible, Pierce Arrow, preferred, and Shattuck were among the issues which gained 2 or 3 points or more.

NEW YORK BOND PRICES

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—Current easy money conditions and a falling off in the week's total of new offerings to around $106,000,000 provided background for a further advance in bond prices today. Trading was rather light and there was evidences of the usual week-end profit-taking in some of the recently buoyant liens.

Railway issues were the leaders again, such mortgages as Frisco 4s and Canadian Pacific 4½s setting new high records for the year, while Canadian Pacific 4s and Mobile and Ohio 4s were active around their previous peaks. Profit-taking developed in the late dealings and brought fractional declines in New York Central and Hudson River 4s.

Julius Kayser 5½s again featured the industrial group, reaching 105 7-8 the first time this year. There was a little realizing at the top. Other industrials and most of the public utilities were dormant.

Business fell off sharply in the foreign group. The buying of French issues seemed to have tapered off and the prices were close to yesterday's final quotations. German obligations were somewhat firmer but there were few sales.

United States government securities followed a mixed trend. Treasury 3 3-8s sold at one time at their previous record high, but later fell slightly.

The quotations represent sales of bonds (in thousands of dollars) and the high, low and closing prices in the order given. To expedite transmission, the close is omitted when the same as the low, and both low and close when same as the high.

NEW YORK CURB STOCKS

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (AP)—The market on the curb today exhibited the strong tendencies in the various groups that had been evidenced in the last several sessions. Persistent buying in several issues, especially among those that have assumed prominence lately, caused sharp advances to new high records for the year.

Public utility shares obtained early recognition as a result of the vigorous upturn in southeastern power issues, all classes reaching new peak levels. American Gas showed a gain of 2 points, selling to 114 1-2.

Strong features in the industrials were Curtis Publishing, which gained 8 points; Deere & Co. and United States Freight. Newmont Mining scored a high, crossing 110. Bancitaly Corporation opened off 2 1-2 points and then rallied about 2. Celanese Corporation declined a point early.

Tubize Artificial Silk after an easier opening of 3 points to 346 1-2 received spirited buying and rose steadily 14 1-2 points to a new mark at 361. Royal Typewriter moved up 10 1-4 points. Vacuum led a strong upward movement in the oil division. Quotations of that issue rose steadily during the opening period 3 1-4 points to a high at 145 1-4. Prairie Pipe gained 5 points and several others were higher about a point.

Indiana Pipe Line and Prairie Oil established new high quotations, the former lifting 4 points to 87.

To expedite transmission the closing price is omitted when same as the low, and both low and close when same as the high.

Dupont, stimulated by expectation that the company's share of the General Motors extra dividend will be passed on to the shareholders, had an extreme jump of more than 4 points to 320, closing a point below that figure.

CORN UNDER ATTACK

Selling of corn futures following the reopening of the Chicago Board of Trade after the Armistice Day recess featured the commodity markets. The price was forced down almost 3 cents a bushel, but in a smart recovery at the ebb, part of the loss was made up. The early selling was predicted by indications of an increased yield in the government's forecast of Thursday. Wheat advanced almost 2 cents a bushel on bullish construction placed on the Canadian crop estimate. Cotton prices were quoted steady at 4 to 20 points higher, coffee was slightly lower and sugar futures a shade better than the previous closing figures.

Strength of sterling, which reached $4.87 1 -16, the highest since 1914, was the outstanding feature of the foreign exchange market. Dutch guilders, at 40.23 1-2 cents were at the highest level since 1919. Other changes were negligible.

The weekly statement of clearing-house banks and trust companies revealed excess reserve of $6,356,490, a decrease of $2,177,150 from the week before. Actual conditions this day of clearinghouse members showed mixed changes, loans, discounts, investments, etc., decreased $6,718,000, reserve in Federal Reserve Bank of member banks $2,991,000 and net demand deposits $3,629,000.

Reserve in own vaults gained $185,000; reserve in depositaries, $619,000; time deposits, $11,749,000; and cash in own vaults, $1,307,000.

Grain Futures Unsettled on Week-end Mart

CHICAGO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Grain markets were decidedly unsettled, wheat the outside showing 3½c over the finish on Thursday as the result of a bullish construction placed on the Canadian official report, while corn at the inside was off 3c from the previous finish, due to the American estimated crop. Trade was fairly liberal in all grains with wheat at the last 3@3½c higher with December 1.27¾@1.28 and March 1.31¾@1.31½. Corn declined 2¼@2½c, with December 83¾@85½c and March 86¾@88c. Oats closed ⅝@¾c lower and rye 2¾@3½c higher, the latter closing at the top.

Wheat, oats and rye showed a firm undertone the greater part of the week, and at the last wheat was 1½@1¾c higher, oats up ¾@1¼c and rye 4¼@5½c higher as compared with the previous week, while the late break in corn resulted in a close ¾@⅞c lower than a week ago. Lard was 11½@12c higher, with ribs 45c lower and bellies 10@12c lower.

Official estimate in the wheat crop in the three Canadian provinces was materially below the expectations of the trade, and there was aggressive buying by strong commission houses as well as by local operators. Offerings were light early, but later profit-taking and selling against offers became effective and checked the bulge. The market was unsettled and fluctuated with extreme rapidity at times. Winnipeg was strong and 2¾@3½c higher than Thursday, but Minneapolis was inclined to be dull and was up only 1¾@2c.

Liverpool was affected by the Canadian estimate and gained 7½d¼d as compared with Thursday. Buenos Aires closed ⅛c higher, with the forecast for generally fair and warmer weather. Bryant, the Jackson Brothers' crop observer, cabled from Buenos Aires saying that the average yield of the Argentine trade was for a crop of 310,000,000 bushels, while Broomhall placed the prospective crop at 320,000,000 bushels, the latter being slightly less than last year's. Shipments also in all positions were heavy and estimated at 500,000 bushels with a good business in Manitobas from the Pacific Coast.

The unexpected large crop estimate by the government led to a rush of selling in corn, and while there was considerable short covering and also buying by strong local operators the finish was within a fraction of the bottom, with commission houses persistent sellers. Traders who were short wheat and long corn were placed in a very uncomfortable position by the action of the markets. Weather over the belt was much colder and favorable for the handling of the new corn, with around twelve cars received here from Illinois and Iowa, the bulk of the grain grading No. 3S and No. 3. Buenos Aires closed unchanged and Rosario 1c higher, December in the latter market being 7⅞c, or 1c under Buenos Aires. Eastern cash demand was slow. Oats averaged lower in sympathy with corn and on selling by longs, while the Kast was a good buyer. The Northwest bought December and sold May at 2¾c difference. The Canadian report was construed as bullish.

Rye showed independent strength with short covering and investment buying lifting the deferred deliveries to a new high for the season. Offerings were light. The seaboard failed to confirm any export business of consequence.

Active buying of January lard by a leading eastern interest clinched the bulk of sales made by packing interests and made a strong market. Prices had a range of 15c on January and 3c on the near-by deliveries, with the close 2¼@2 7½c higher, March and May leading.

Short ribs were unchanged to 5c higher and bellies 22½@25c higher.

CATTLE—The State of Arizona supplied a little better than one-third of the week's liberal receipts, California was close second while Utah, Idaho and New Mexico were well represented, the total from these sections making up about a third of the total supply. A big percentage of the Arizona and New Mexico cattle were stockers and feeders, some being on through billing. Most inquiry was for the better grades of both steers and the stock, with these kinds moving readily. Liberal offerings of plain and half fat steers and cows were more than the trade could readily handle and price concessions were made. Values generally on all killing classes closed 25@50 cents lower. Bulls and the bolognese grades of cows and steers showed the maximum decline. Stockers and feeders moved readily at generally steady prices.

Sales of "baby beef" during the week included 18 head of 853-pound California steers at 12.00, a load of 853-pound Utah steers at 11.50 and a load of 880-pound Arizona fed "baby beef" heifers at 12.50. The best price for matured steers was 11.50, paid for Egyptian baling; a load of 1052-pound Idaho today (Friday) was the best price for steers was 9.65, with several loads of mixed Arizona, New Mexico, California and northern steers selling from 9.25@9.65. Mixed common and medium steers, largely California, including Imperials, bushed from 8.00@9.00. Bulk of common steers, thin Mexicans from the Imperial Valley and Arizona, went over from 7.25@8.00. Very thin steers in a small way sold down to 6.75, with some on the cutter order as low as 5.00.

A few lots of heifers sold above 9.00, while the best price in load lots was 7.90, paid for two cars of 870-pound Utahs. Two loads of good 1,050-pound Utah cows went over from 7.50@7.75, while the bulk of top medium and low good cows, mostly northerns, went over from 6.75 @7.50. Some cutter cows sold from 5.50@6.00, with the majority of common and medium kinds from 4.75@5.50.

Stockers and feeders were actively sought for, with the bulk selling on a fat-head basis. Several lots of steers for turns in near-by feed lots, weighing under 900 pounds, sold from 7.90 @7.75, with a few on the yearling order up to 8.50, while very thin and plain kinds sold down to 6.00 and below. Two cars of Arizona yearling heifers weighing 685 pounds sold at a packing purpose at 7.50. Other heifers sold down to 6.90, while the majority of cows and plain heifers went over from 4.50@5.50.

CALVES—Demand was fairly broad and the week's supply was cleaned up in good season at generally steady prices. A few lots of weighty sold above 12.50, with the week's top in load lots at 12.00, for good 356-pound Californias. Bulk of 200 to 350-pound Arizona calves cleared from 9.75@10.50, with a few small lots higher, while plain calves and gutrous heavies cashed from 7.50@9.50. Inquiry for 200 to 450-pound Southwestern calves for stocker and feeder purposes from 8.50@9.25.

HOGS—Supplies during the week were only moderate and with quality in demand, prices held up in the face of sharply declining markets at New York points. Values, however, closed around 25 cents lower than the week's high close. This week's top was 12.00, paid Monday for three loads of choice 178 to 210-pound Nebraskas, while comparable kinds brought 11.75 on Thursday. The bulk of butchers for the week, averaging 150 to 260 pounds, sold from 11.50@11.75, while mixed offerings, including light lights and medium weight butchers and local fat trucked in kinds, turned from 11.00@11.40. Other mixed butchers and pigs sold as low as 10.25. The week's top paid close to steady, 9.00 being the popular price for the general run of sows, although rough heavy kinds sold as low as 8.50, with smooth light weight kinds up to 10.00.

SHEEP—The week's supply was cleaned up readily at steady prices. Lamb offerings consisted of two decks of 99-pound Californias at 11.50. Good and choice handy weight lambs were quoted from 12.50@13.50, with culls as low as 9.00. Ewe offerings consisted of $4 head of choice 130-pound Californias, full wooled, at 7.00.

OIL NEWS

BY HOWARD C. KEGLEY

[illegible] Oil Company is plugging [illegible] well in the Alamitos [illegible] in an effort to get rid [illegible] which is coming in [illegible] oil from the deep zone, [illegible] to field reports. The well [illegible] only about 100 barrels [illegible] from 6000 feet, that is [illegible] of a well. Producers [illegible] that the Superintendent while demonstrating [illegible] of another zone, [illegible] also demonstrates [illegible] worth going after. [illegible] got its deep zone at [illegible] feet, where the water [illegible] and found the formation, which was mostly shale with [illegible] streaks of oil sand all the [illegible] feet. But somewhere in [illegible] there is also a water [illegible] it is believed to be near [illegible]. Likewise, there is also [illegible] amount of water sand [illegible] the deep zone and the Wasem [illegible] that it is not practicable to produce the Wasem [illegible] the deep zone simultaneously.

[illegible] Well

[illegible] California Eastern Oil Company decided to have a try for [illegible] sand in the Alamitos [illegible] field, according to unofficial [illegible]. The California Eastern has [illegible] down around 5200 feet, [illegible] either not on production [illegible] or are making only a [illegible] and it is figured that [illegible] improvement in this production [illegible] can be made, it may be [illegible] to drill a few hundred [illegible].

[illegible] Well

[illegible] Oil Company, which made [illegible] start to develop gas or [illegible] the Wasco district about a [illegible] has turned over its Vindi- [illegible] well in that area to a [illegible] syndicate, headed by E. [illegible] according to field reports. The Latham interests are [illegible] to drill the well deeper, it [illegible] present the hole is down [illegible] feet, and has a lot of [illegible] hole, which will have [illegible] sidetracked, before [illegible] can be made. [illegible] Oil Company drilled two [illegible] the Wasco district, one of [illegible] so much gas that it [illegible] and completely wrecked [illegible]. The second well was started [illegible] after, and also got gas [illegible] commercial quantities, [illegible] said by chemists who analyzed [illegible] gas at the time that it [illegible] particularly valuable as [illegible].

[illegible] Drill

[illegible] Whiston, who has drilled [illegible] parts of the Los Angeles [illegible] and lately has been over [illegible] the Kern county fields, [illegible] drill a well in the [illegible] area, north of the [illegible] Development Company's [illegible] according to field reports, [illegible] about 5000 acres under [illegible] district, part of which [illegible] well located. Whiston [illegible] in the Signal Hill field [illegible] field.

[illegible] Development Company, [illegible] had much luck in its [illegible] deep zone east of the [illegible] Hills field, is plugging [illegible] No. 1 well, and is [illegible] according to field [illegible]. The well was drilled to [illegible] feet, and is now back to [illegible] feet. At 2600 feet the [illegible] at the rate of fifty barrels [illegible] for a short time, but [illegible].

[illegible] of the Union-avenue [illegible] which the Pacific Eastern Company is drilling near [illegible] is still fishing, according to reports, but prospects for [illegible] solution of the complicated problem grow fainter. It is considered probable [illegible] the Pacific-Eastern will [illegible] the well and drill a new [illegible] in the light of the [illegible] gained through the previous [illegible] should be a successful [illegible].

RUBBER MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—The outside crude rubber market displayed a firmer tone, with prices closing fractionally better than the previous day. New York spot was actively traded at 36½c, up ¼c, while London cables showed steady, with spot quoted at 17½d, unchanged from the final sale of the previous session. The failure of the British rubber exports under the Stevenson plan, although the price of rubber has been consistently below the "fair" price of 42c, set by the plan, may be taken as an indication that the British restrictions are of lessening effect upon the rubber market, according to their view.

HAWAIIAN TRADE GAINS FORECAST

Local Chamber Excursionists Home from Islands

Field Secretary Reports New Business to Result

Says Nature and Extent Not Ready for Release

That Los Angeles stands assured of vastly greater trade with Hawaii, as a direct result of friendly contacts established by excursionists, was the report of Charles P. Bayer, field secretary for the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, heading a party of fifty members of the chamber's eleventh excursion returning from Hawaii on the liner City of Honolulu yesterday.

Bayer said he is not at liberty to reveal the nature of the new business yet, but that it would boost materially present trade, which has developed from nothing to $11,000,000 yearly. From other sources it is understood the purchase of the freighter West Erral by the Los Angeles Steamship Company, announced five days ago, has a direct bearing on this new trade. The freighter will be extensively reconditioned before entering the run early next year.

Among the local business men accompanying Bayer on this excursion, which he said in many respects was the most successful of the eleven, are John M. Elliott, chairman of the board of directors of the First National Trust and Savings Bank; Albert Olcovich, vice-president of the Western Department Store; Fred M. Seibly, secretary of the Lakeview Oil and Refining Company; Stanley H. Shave, president of the Shave Construction Company; Fred Siemen, president of the Walco Garment Company, and Edwin Bradley, president of the Bradley-Wise Paint Company.

Others among the 120 passengers aboard, not with the excursion, include Miss Eliz Gergely, prima donna of the "Student Prince" company, en route back to New York after an engagement in Australia; Gordon Coutts, Palm Springs artist, who exhibited paintings in Australia; Miss Lucille Hope, an actress of Melbourne, Australia, coming to Hollywood; Capt. Stuart Pearson of the British Indian army, en route to England to organize a polo team, and Mr. and Mrs. William Woods of Los Angeles, returning from their honeymoon.

Bayer said Honolulu is preparing for the convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce in February, to which the Los Angeles chamber will send a record delegation on the Lassco liner City of Los Angeles.

LINER RATE CUT FOR THANKSGIVING VISITS

Folk who wish to tuck their feet under their distant relatives' table on Thanksgiving Day are offered a special inducement to travel by the Los Angeles Steamship Company, which announces special low round trips between here and San Francisco the 22nd to 24th inst., inclusive. The round trip fares will be $22.75.

Two special sailings are offered within those dates, from Los Angeles, the Yale leaving here the 22nd inst., and the Harvard the 24th. The return limit will be the 28th inst.

Far be it from a regular item of foreign trade, but three cases of California cactus will go out for England today on the Royal Mail motorship Lochgoil. They are for the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew, Eng., sent on request to the United States Department of Agriculture from the tropical station at Indio. The latter is to send many other specimens to Kew. The Lochgoil will leave port with a full list of passengers and a record load of Pacific Coast products.

Appointment of George F. Ragatz as district freight agent at Los Angeles for the Panama Mail Steamship Company, was announced yesterday by Clay Hutchison, general agent. Ragatz began his new duties Thursday. He comes to the new line from the post as manager of imports, exports and marine department for the Carmichael Traffic Corporation, although his eight years in Los Angeles include services with the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific lines as well.

More oriental copra is in prospect for Los Angeles, and a girl is being sent to get it. She is Miss M. S. Garrettson, who left early in the week aboard the President Pierce for Kobe, Japan. She represents the San Francisco Milling Company, said to be the largest importers of copra products into Los Angeles.

E. Clem Wilson's power yacht Ripple, put in from Honolulu yesterday after a five months' cruise to the south seas. Wilson and party came home recently by liner, leaving the crew to bring back his yacht. The latter came from Honolulu in twelve days and twenty-three hours, experiencing much heavy weather, during which one engine went dead and they had to chug in on the other.

U.S.S. Eagle No. 34 will leave San Pedro for a day's cruise to Catalina with fifty naval reservists aboard. It is the first of the new winter week-end cruises for local reserves. Lieut. F. W. Bumpus will be in command.

Affairs of the Week
by Juana Neal Levy

Planning many schemes to make its cabaret dinner dance an outstanding event of the season, the Junior League of Pasadena will have many surprises in its many friends who are fast making reservations for themselves and their p ties.

Not of the novelties of the evening will be the programs which are to be unusually attractive and the "Ads" are to be surprisingly effective inasmuch as members of the league are going for the different firms, instead of the mannikins who usually do this work.

One of these "full-page" ads is that of the Llewellyn Iron Works which has for its model Mrs. Earl V. Armstrong, the general chairman of the cabaret dinner-dance and to whose untiring efforts much of the success is to be depended upon.

Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong have recently returned from a visit in San Francisco and the north and Mrs. Armstrong is working untiringly with her many assistants in perfecting the outline for the event.

She was the Junior League's first president and was also chairman of many of the previous "Follies" when the Junior League was known in the Southland as the Junior Aid Society, before being admitted to the Junior League group, which, by the way, has an organization in many of the larger cities of the United States.

The whole program for this event is to be made up of photographs, one full page each and are posed by the members themselves for the shops, giving the advertisement, and promises to be more charming than ever before, as both Los Angeles and Pasadena are aiding in its ensemble.

Another activity which brings many dollars into the coffers of the Pasadena Junior League's treasury is its commission gift shop, which is located at 27 West California street of the Crown City and which has just been reopened.

It is just west of Fair Oaks avenue and aids many early shoppers to select Christmas presents before they have been "picked over."

Among their wares are old prints savoring of curious far-away places, a few pieces here and there of pewter, antique furniture, early American particularly, and novelty boxes and especially noted is the exquisite and practical lingerie, which has helped many a bride-elect to supply her wedding trousseau, as well as linens of unusual values for the dower chest.

Home-made jams, jellies, cakes and pies as well as candies may be ordered for the Sunday dinner and orders are now being taken for the Thanksgiving feast.

Wednesdays are specialty days and the last Friday of each month is "sale" day, when all the profits go to service, the League taking nothing for itself.

Mrs. James Spencer Brown, Jr., is general manager, while Mrs. Margaret Morris is treasurer and Mrs. Otis Buckingham, personnel secretary. Mrs. John Barker has charge of the food department, Mrs. William Norris Bucklin, Mrs. Donald O'Melveny, Mrs. Alvah Kaime and Mrs. Lionel Armstrong are in the gifts, negligee and lingerie section, while Mrs. Lest Bissell presides over the circulating library.

Other members of the shop personnel include Mrs. Howard Munro, Mrs. Chandler Ward, Mrs. Donald Daniels, Mrs. Francis Baer, Mrs. Hallett Maxwell, Mrs. Shirley Hall, Mrs. Hancock Banning, Jr., Mrs. Harlan Cristy, Mrs. Harold McCook, Mrs. Malcolm McNaghten, Mrs. Howard Wright, Mrs. Ned Tilt, Miss Judy Tilt, Miss Katherine Ware, Mrs. Edward Whitehouse, Mrs. Maitland

LONG ISLAND GIRL WEDS HERE
Couple Honeymooning at Balboa

[Murillo for Western Press Service]
Mrs. Alexander E. Robertson

THE home of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Gramm, 6120 Romaine street, Hollywood, was the setting for a prettily appointed wedding recently, when Miss Georgia E. Geissler of Hempstead, Long Island, became the bride of Alexander E. Robertson, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Robertson of Yonkers, N. Y., the ceremony being read by Rev. William Rogers. Mr. Gramm, an old friend of the family, gave the bride in marriage, while Mrs. Ray F. Linderman assisted as matron of honor. Erwin G. Gramm served Mr. Robertson as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Robertson left immediately after the wedding supper for Balboa Island, where the honeymoon will be passed. Upon their return they will make their home in Hollywood.

Affairs of the Week

Bishop, Mrs. Robert Crane, Mrs. Harold Wheeler, Miss Gertrude Macy, Mrs. Ralph Quinlan, Mrs. Stephen Wheeler Royce and Mrs. Parker Tems.

One of the attractive members of the younger set who is active in school affairs is Miss Elizabeth Bell, charming young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alphonso Bell of Bel Air, Brentwood Heights. Miss Bell is a senior at Marlborough School and is one of the most popular members of her class.

Coming back with her mother, Mrs. Edward D. Roberts, from a delightful sojourn abroad, where they have lived in Italy for several years Marchesa Marie Cambiaso will be her mother's house guest for the winter.

Mrs. Roberts has just purchased a house in Pasadena, where she is receiving her many friends of the Southland.

Miss Martha Matthias, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mattias of 1238 South Bonnie Brae street is one of the popular and prominent members of the Eta Delta Chapter of Phi Mu Sorority at University of California at Los Angeles.

Miss Matthias was chairman of the benefit bridge tea which the sorority gave recently at the Friday Morning clubrooms, the funds raised being devoted toward the purchase of the new chapter house in Westwood, the new site of the university.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Aurand, whose wedding was one of the lovely events of last month are returning home Tuesday, after an extended honeymoon motoring through the North.

Mrs. Aurand was formerly Miss Virginia McCoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. McCoy of Santa Monica, the ceremony taking place in the First Presbyterian Church of the seaside city followed by a reception at the family home, 150 Ocean Way, Santa Monica Canyon.

She attended University of California at Los Angeles and is affiliated with the Alpha Xi Delta Sorority.

Miss Margaret Hill was maid of honor at the ceremony, while a group of sorority sisters of the bride, Mrs. Frank Turner, Miss Lorraine Tilden, Miss Ernesta Lopez and Miss Wilberta Ellison, were the other attendants. Arthur Alexander served Mr. Aurand as best man and the ushers were Frank Turner, J. P. Spitzel, Ambrose Maryе and Horace Mickley. Mr. Aurand, the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Aurand of Santa Monica, attended University of California at Los Angeles and is a member of the Alpha Delta Tau Sorority.

Church Ceremony

Of much interest to local society is the announcement of the marriage Friday morning of Miss Aurelia Sandoval, daughter of Aurelio Sandoval of 1011 Oxford Boulevard, to Salvadore De Guerrero Osio, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Salvadore De Guerrero Osio y Sanz, Countess and Countess De Luyando, from one of the oldest Spanish families, who have resided in Mexico City more than two centuries and who have made their home in Los Angeles for the past two years.

The ceremony took place early Friday morning in St. Thomas's Church on West Pico street, followed by a nuptial mass.

The bride given in marriage by her father, was unattended and wore a frock of white crepe de chine and carried an arm bouquet of orange blossoms and lilies of the valley while Mr. Osio was served by his father as best man.

Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's godmother, Mrs. Charles H. Chapman (Conchita Sepulveda) 1593 West Adams street, after which Mr. and Mrs. Osio left for their honeymoon in the southern part of the State and after their return will make their home here.

The bride was graduated from Saint Mary's Academy while Mr. Osio, who has passed most of his life in Paris, France, is an alumnus of Santa Clara College.

Engagement Announced

Formal announcement was made yesterday afternoon at a beautifully appointed bridge-tea given at the Elks' Club, of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Vanderpool Patterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Brown Patterson of 6118 De Longpre avenue, Hollywood, to Byron Drew Williams.

The affair was novel in its appointments and Miss Patterson had invited fifteen of her most intimate friends who, when they gathered at the horseshoe-shaped table found place cards consisting of a little Cupid seated on a ring, holding a sealed paper bearing the legend, "Latest News," thus revealing the secret.

The wedding date is not yet settled but will probably be one of the events of the latter part of February and the ceremony will take place in Stamford Memorial Church, Palo Alto. Mr. Williams is an alumnus of Stanford while Miss Patterson was graduated from University of Minnesota.

The decorations of the tea table were bowls of pink tea roses and lighted by tall pink tapers, while the favors and prizes at the bridge games carried out the rose motif.

Those included were Mrs. James Browne Patterson, Mrs. Andrew Williams (mother of the bridegroom-elect,) Miss Alice Williams, Miss Margaret Williams, Miss Rosita Hoppe, Miss Anne Famechon, Miss Margery Clover, Miss Margaret Gorman, Miss Aileen Craighead, Miss Martha Katz, Mrs. H. N. Lonergan, Mrs. Robert L. Weeks and the hostess.

Mr. Williams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Williams of 1163 South Gremaine avenue and Mr. Patterson, father of the bride-elect, is in Minneapolis where he is closing his connections, planning to make Los Angeles their future home. He will return here in time for the wedding.

Assistance League

Mrs. Hancock Banning, president of the Assistance League, entertained with a tea at her home, 240 West Adams street, for the board of directors and a group of women who are interested in the league, Lady Edgerton, who is known throughout Europe and this country for the very splendid work in organizing groups of women and training them in needlecraft and hand work, being the especial guest of honor. Mrs. Edward-Laughlin outlined interesting plans for both social and business activities while Mrs. R. D. Shepherd accepted the chairmanship of the hostess committee for the year, choosing for her assistants Mrs. Chester Turner Hoag, Mrs. Benjamin F. Bledsoe, Mrs. Harry H. Culver, Mrs. William Dashiell, Mrs. Walter Robey Simons, Mrs. Giles Hall, Miss Virginia Hall, Miss Alice Henry, Mrs. Georgia Keating Kennedy, Mrs. Seward Cole, Mrs. Frank W. Davey, Mrs. William Lee Woollett, Mrs. William Lee Woollett, Jr., Mrs. Sydney Irving Wailes, Miss Eleanor Wailes, Miss Florence Williams, Miss Catherine Coleman, Mrs. Emily O. Webber, Mrs. Isabel D. Coleman, Mrs. Hancock Banning, Mrs. Edwards-Laughlin, Mrs. Evangeline Banning, Mrs. Judson Caudius Rives, Mrs. George Leslie Smith and Mrs. Frank Pixley, while Mrs. Charles Jeffras will be the chairman of the stock committee of the Thrift Shop, assisted by Mrs. R. Wernigh, Mrs. Franklin Booth, Mrs. William Lacy, Mrs. Frank Walsh, Mrs. Harold English, Mrs. Edwin Rufus Collins, Mrs. James Harvey Adams, Mrs. Arthur Wright, Mrs. Kenneth Preuss, Miss Loren Barton, Mrs. Oscar W. Souden, Mrs. Cosmo Morgan, Jr., Mrs. Roland Porter Bishop, Mrs. Robert Heffner, Mrs. Harry Dana Lombard, Mrs. Granville MacGowan, and Mrs. Jaro Von Schmidt.

A Christmas sale is to be held at the Assistance League Shop, adjoining the Women's Athletic Club in South Flower street, beginning tomorrow, Monday, the 14th inst., with Mrs. John E. Maurer in charge, assisted by Mrs. Isaac Hampshur Jones. Different days will be taken by the following: Mrs. Hancock Banning, Mrs. E. Avery McCarthy, Mrs. Edwards-Laughlin, Mrs. Walter Perry Story, Mrs. Henry Lissner, Mrs. R. D. Shepherd, Mrs. Clifford Hunt, Mrs. C. W. Irwin, Mrs. Chester Hoag, Mrs. J. Warren Tatum and many others. Tea will be served daily and antique furniture, imported novelties, toys, etc., will be on sale.

En Route Home

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Murphy, who with their daughter, Miss Bernardine Murphy, and sister, Miss Sue Sinnot, have been in New York since the 1st inst., are expected home within the next fortnight. The Murphys have been abroad for almost a year, and sailed for the United States aboard the Majestic, October 25.

For Bride-elect

In honor of Miss Betty Bettingen and Leonard Harbach, Jr., whose wedding is to be an event of the 23rd inst., Mr. and Mrs. Alfred J. Bayer and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Raymond Fleishman (Leontine Bayer) entertained Friday evening with a supper dance at the lovely new home of the former in Doheny Drive, more than 100 guests having been bidden.

Autumn flowers and foliage were artistically combined in the house and dining-room decorations and the hosts were assisted by Miss Bettingen, Mrs. Myron Etienne (Lucile Bettingen,) Miss Alice Hicks, Miss Dorothy Lillian Wellborn, Miss Genevieve Maier, Miss Margaret Martin, Miss Clare MacDonough of Dallas, Tex., who is the house guest of the Bayers, Mrs. Howard Cunningham and Mrs. Jaspar Blystone.

Miss MacDonough will be for a month's visit and the Bayers and Fleishmans are planning to motor north for the Stanford-California football game, their house guest accompanying them.

Home Again

Miss Marjorie Day has returned from a delightful three-months' trip through Southern California after a short visit in the East and Europe. While in Virginia she was entertained by Rector and Mrs. Carter Gibbs at home, "Montview," near Lynchburg, and while in Europe she was the guest of the Savoy Hotel management in London and the Continental Hotel in Paris.

Miss Day will make her home this winter at the Hotel Huntington in Pasadena where the various social and recreational activities will be under her supervision.

Morning Musicale

Mrs. Walter Robey Simons of 201 South Plymouth Boulevard is planning a most delightful program for her morning musicale with which she is entertaining at the Bel Air Country clubhouse Friday morning, the 18th inst.

Adolph Tandler, with his Little Symphony Orchestra, and Alice Gentle, the internationally well-known prima donna, who, with her husband, Jacob Probstel, has come to Los Angeles to make her future home, will present a delightful program, after which luncheon will be served, the guests being seated at small tables presided over by an assisting hostess.

These charming morning musicales preceding luncheon are quite de rigueur in New York and Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Simons decided to introduce them to her friends here in the Southland, choosing the lovely new Bel Air clubhouse for its setting.

Gay Nineties Affair

At the Gay Ninsties supper bridge to be given the 18th inst., by the Ebell Club, under the direction of Mrs. William J. Chichester many hostesses are entertaining with supper parties. Mrs. William Irving Hollingsworth and Mrs. Alexander Buchanan Barret are having sixteen guests, other hostesses including Mrs. Charles C. Carpenter, Mrs. Frank Pixley, Mrs. James Garfield Warren, Mrs. Oscar Robert Howard, Mrs. Willits J. Hole, Mrs. Sumner P. Hunt, Mrs. Frank W. King, Mrs. George S. Schermerhorn, Mrs. William Warren Orcutt, Mrs. Frederick W. Braun, Mrs. Vernon Campbell Herron, Mrs. Alison Barlow and Mrs. William J. Chichester.

Engagement Announced

From Honolulu comes the announcement of the engagement of Miss Gwendolyn March Currey, daughter of A. R. Currey of the Island City, to Roger T. Williams, also of Honolulu, the news being told to a coterie of close friends gathered recently at the Honolulu home of Miss Laura M. Thompson, close friend of the bride-elect. The wedding will be a quiet affair owing to the recent death of Miss Currey's mother.

Miss Currey attended Pomona College following her graduation from Punahou Academy, Honolulu. She was one of the most popular co-eds at Pomona, holding a number of important student offices, and the announcement of the engagement is of much interest to her many friends here.

Bridge Tea

Mrs. Norman Sprowl entertained Wednesday afternoon, at her home at 845 South Gramercy Drive, with a bridge tea in honor of Mrs. Mary Leitch, who has just returned from a six months' visit in New York, Chicago and Cleveland. Bridge prizes were won by Mrs. Leitch, Mrs. Harland Tucker, Miss Dowie Cross and Miss Arelisle Seaman.

Pledges Honored

Active members of the California Gamma Chapter of Pi Beta Phi honored their new initiates and pledges with an informal dance Friday evening, the 11th inst., at the chapter house, 647 West Twenty-eighth street. The initiates are Misses Maude Ryan, Kathryn Jean and Louisa Von KleinSmid.

New Orleans Girl Married

Miss Dorothy Gibbons of New Orleans, who has been visiting Miss Celeste Perry at the Gaylord Apartments for the last month, was married Wednesday, the 9th inst., in St. Vincent's Church to Joseph Blanchard, also of New Orleans. Miss Perry was Miss Gibbons's only attendant, and Clifford Bourdier served Mr. Blanchard as best man.

The bride wore an afternoon frock of black velvet and lace with a shoulder corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley.

After a honeymoon in the North, Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard will be at the Biltmore for two weeks, and will then motor to Santa Ana, where they will make their home temporarily. Mrs. J. B. Blanchard, mother of the bridegroom, now visiting in Los Angeles, was the only relative present at the wedding.

Series of Parties

An interesting series of bridge-teas is being given by Miss Flora Elaine Sornsen, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. A. Sorensen, at her home at 8244 South Broadway, the first having taken place Saturday afternoon, the 5th inst., when the guest list included the Misses Betty Wilkinson, Billy Walker, Rita Padway, Grace Gilson, Louise Schrynemaker, Ruth Smith, Nina Locke, Helen Ferrell, Princessa Page, Lucille Howell and Mrs. Robert Raede.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Sornsen entertained with the second of her series, those present being the Misses Dorthy Koopman, Mary Horn, Mary Calinich, Ann Calinich, Thelma Benson, Dolores Malin, Mildred St. Peter, Marie Coleman, Grace Mahew, Mae Packer, Myra Miller, Opal Mowder, Betty Wilkinson and Mrs. Leroy Kolb, Mrs. Hazen Wright and Mrs. Lee Tollefson. Miss Howell and Miss Wilkinson are assisting the hostess during the teas.

Last evening Miss Sornsen also entertained with an informal dinner, at which Mr. and Mrs. Lee Tollefson and Frank Flahive were the guests.

Miss Sornsen was graduated in June from the University of Southern California, where she is now taking postgraduate courses. She is a member of the Epsilon Nu Sorority, of Lambda Chapter of Phi Beta, national professional women's fraternity of music and dramatic art, and is an active member of the Touchstone Drama Shop, the little theater group.

Church Wedding

The marriage of Miss Alice Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cook of 1048 South Normandie avenue, to Edgar A. A. Pace, son of Mrs. Mabel Pace of 1606 South Magnolia avenue, was solemnized Saturday, the 5th inst., at 5.30 p.m., in the Little Church of the Flowers at Glendale, with Dr. J. A. V. Pieters of the Centinela Baptist Church in Inglewood officiating.

White satin, with a long tulle veil and headdress of orange blossoms, formed the costume of the lovely bride, who was given in marriage by her father. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and white sweet peas. Mrs. Alec Rennie, her matron of honor, wore a gown of ping georgette trimmed with pink and silver ribbon, and the two bridesmaids, Miss Mollie McMillan and Miss Charlotte Pace, sister of the bridegroom, wore frocks of satin and tulle in pink and blue, respectively, all carrying arm bouquets of roses and sweet peas. Little Dorothy Brand, wearing pink crepe de chine with hat to match, was flower girl.

Mr. Pace chose as his best man Jack Heavey, and the Lohengrin and Mendelssohn marches were played during the ceremony by Helen Walker Hamilton, church organist. A reception followed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rennie, aunt and uncle of the bride, at their home on West Sixty-second street.

Mr. and Mrs. Pace will reside in Los Angeles.

Luncheon-Bridge

Mrs. Frank B. Crissman, 304 North Foothill Road, Beverly Hills, entertained Wednesday afternoon at the Mary Louise Tea Room with a delightful bridge-luncheon in honor of Mrs. George Healey, the former Miss Lucile McNamee of Los Angeles. The luncheon tables were resplendent in decorations of silver and orchid, with bowls of pastel flowers and dainty place cards in corresponding colors. Mrs. Crissman's guests were Mmes. Harold Rhodes, Henry Patterson, Hervert Millea, George Cornes, George Hinton, Cordelia Tuttle, Robert Cromwell, Frank Rouse, Walter Schell, H. S. Walton, Louise Beauchant, Frank Atkinson, Paul Fletcher, Kendricks and Townsend.

Music Sorority Entertains

Sigma Tau Chapter of Sigma Alpho Iota, oldest national professional music sorority, entertained Saturday, the 5th inst., with a beautifully appointed bridge-luncheon at the Gables, the affair being given to honor the pledges, who include the Misses Constance Coe, Ruth Garner, Ruth Merrill, Pauline Graaf and Marjory Thornton.

This afternoon the sorority will

ATTRACTIVE BRIDE OF MONTH

Ceremony Conducted the 1st Inst.

[Murillo the Western Press Service]

Mrs. Robert E. Fulton

ATTRACTIVE in every detail was the wedding which united in marriage Miss Helen Poundstone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Hay Poundstone of Maryland Drive, and Robert Edward Fulton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Fulton of Alhambra. The ceremony was read Thursday evening, the 1st inst., at the Wilshire Presbyterian Church, with Rev. Dr. John Albert Roy officiating.

In the wedding party were Miss Mildred Poundstone, who was her sister's maid of honor; Miss Ruth Carr, Miss Alice Fulton, Miss Elizabeth Hensel, Miss Catherine Colwell, Mrs. John J. Landon and Mrs. J. Barton Hutchins, and little Mary Alice Van Barneveld. George Scofield served Mr. Fulton as best man and Ivan Taggart, Reginald Burroughs, Ralph Plummer, Stanley McAuley, Douglas Fulton and Duncan Poundstone assisted as ushers.

Mr. Moore chose as his best man Thomas Connelly, and William Simmons was the usher. During the

To Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is, pine has a remarkable effect in stopping and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy you can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. This makes a full pint—more than you can buy ready-made for about the money. It is pure, and tastes good.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hard and tight, or may be persistent and loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and hoarseness.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, and is used the world over for its prompt action upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

ceremony a string orchestra played the Lohengrin and Mendelssohn wedding marches.

Among the out-of-town guests who came to be present at the wedding and the home reception which followed were Mr. Lopez's brother, Benjamin L. Lopez of San Francisco; Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Lopez of Santa Barbara, and Mrs. Tanna Ortega and her daughter, also from Santa Barbara. Mr. and Mrs. Moore left immediately after the reception for a honeymoon at Arrowhead Springs, and upon their return will open their new home at 616 North Sweetzer avenue, in Carthay Circle.

Mrs. Moore attended Miss Hamlin's school in San Francisco, while Mr. Moore was graduated from the University of Iowa.

Bride-Elect Honored

One of the most popular of the season's bride-elects is Miss Lillias Mauvia Norton, who is being the honoree of many delightful affairs. Miss Norton, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Norton of 840 South Kenmore avenue, is the fiancee of Lieut. Albert Handly, Jr., now attached to the United States Naval Air Station, and will be married in early winter, although no definite date has yet been chosen.

The first of a long series of showers for Miss Norton was given yesterday by Miss Frances Albert at her home on South Catalina avenue, in the form of a flower shower and bridge-tea, among those present being Mmes. Ray Luce, Grace Cooper, Glenn Barcome, Julian Davis, James Hamm, Malcolm Toone, Anita Yanow and Yvonne Zimmerman, and the Misses Ethel McCormick, Betty Collins, Florence Bailey, Olive Corcoran, Florence Lather, Sylvia Davidson and Lita Dartt.

A lingerie shower will be given the 16th inst. by Mrs. Glenn Barcome and Mrs. Julian Davis at the former's home in North Harvard avenue, and the 19th inst. a miscellaneous shower will be the motif of a bridge-tea to be given by Miss Davidson and Mrs. Yanow at Mrs. Yanow's home in the Kenmore Clinton Apartments. Mrs. Malcolm Toone will entertain many of Miss Norton's intimate friends with a dinner and kitchen shower the 22nd inst., while toward the end of the month Mrs. James Hamm will be the hostess at a bridge-tea and hosiery shower for the young bride-elect.

In Honolulu

Mrs. Frederick O. Johnson of 1065 West Twenty-eighth street, who left two weeks ago for Honolulu, will remain in the islands for an extended visit. During her absence Mr. and Mrs. Milo F. Johnson are occupying the family home.

Montana Club Entertains

The Montana Club of Los Angeles, organized by native daughters of Montana who for many years have resided in Los Angeles, and whose purpose it is to welcome sons and daughters from their native State to Southern California, entertained with the first club luncheon of the season Tuesday afternoon, the 8th inst., at the Mary Louise. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Weirich, who is at present making a tour of the world, Mrs. Matchell, the secretary, presided. The long banquet tables were decorated with autumn flowers and softly shaded candles, with covers laid for 120 members. As this is a purely social club, the members engaged in a renewal of old friendships and a general welcoming home after vacation time.

Sunday Afternoon Tea

Honoring her house-guests, Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Ogilvie McGougan of Winnipeg, Can., and San Francisco, Mrs. John James was hostess at a tea given at her home at 1417 Warnall avenue last Sunday afternoon. Those who were bidden to meet Mr. and Mrs. McGougan were Archbuke Leopold of Austria, Messrs. and Mmes. Norman Pabst, Munroe Montgomery, Jack Walters, Warren Meeker, Herbert Ross, Roland Lee, Edmund Breace, M. B. McNulty, Harvey Rooney, J. Mather, Norman Kennedy, Orville Routt, Robert Edson, Dain Sturges, Tom Sarmio, Harrison Cassell, Mark Kelly, Eyre Powell, Charles Hartwell Smith, Dr. and Mrs. William Barnhart, Col. and Mrs. Hugh Beaton, Lieut. and Mrs. James Bequette, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gallery of Santa Monica, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ewing of La Jolla; Miss Jane Walters, Messrs. Freeman Ford of Pasadena, Frank Partridge, Robert Nelson Lee and Dr. Edwin H. Schneider.

Glendale Wedding

Miss Katherine M. Folger, 320 East Seventeenth street, Long Beach, was married last Sunday, the 6th inst., at 11 o'clock in the Little Church of the Flowers of Glendale, to H. Stanley Moore of 1006 Croft avenue, Hollywood.

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Edward Garrison, wore a frock of flowered organdie with a large picture hat to match, and carried an arm bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Her matron of honor was Mrs. Josephine Edward Garrison, while William D. Moore served his brother as best man.

Following a wedding luncheon at the home of Mrs. Moore's mother, Mrs. Margaret Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Moore left for a honeymoon trip to San Francisco. They will reside in Hollywood upon their return.

Brink-Trenham

Miss Lucile Trenham, daughter of Mrs. Ella Sweet-Trenham, of 2117 South Bronson avenue, was married to Laurence K. Brink, son of Dr. and Mrs. Carl E. Wilson of Woodruff avenue, Westwood, at a simple church service in the West Hollywood Presbyterian Church Wednesday morning. Only relatives and a few intimate friends were bidden to the ceremony.

Miss Lorain Noble assisted as maid of honor, while David McKenzie served Mr. Brink as best man. The wedding party of fifteen repaired to the home of the bride's mother for a delicious luncheon at noon, following which Mr. and Mrs. Brink left for a motor trip to Northern California. They will reside in Los Angeles after December 1.

Dr. J. C. E. Fry, a friend of the bride's family for sixteen years, performed the ceremony. Mrs. Brink was formerly a student at the University of Southern California.

At Chapman Park

Among the recently arrived winter visitors are Mrs. J. MacClurg Hays of Pittsburg, and her daughter, Miss Mary Euston Hayes, who with Mrs. Hays's sister, Miss Sophie Zane Carr of Wheeling, W. Va., are domiciled at the Chapman Park Hotel.

Others who are now at that hotel are Mrs. Robert Barrows and her daughter, Miss Christine, who have given up their home at 629 Rexford Drive, Beverly Hills, and Dr. and Mrs. Moses N. Avery, who recently returned from an extended trip abroad.

From Honolulu

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Sokoll of Los Angeles, who have been visiting their son and daughter at Pearl Harbor, expect to sail for home Sunday. They have been guests at a number of parties at the navy yard and in navy circles in Honolulu.

Mrs. Joseph Horton was the honored guest recently at a small bridge-tea given by Mrs. Henry Bollman, a former Southern Californian. Mrs. Horton was Miss Adele Ward before her marriage here October 7, last. She and her husband have been spending their honeymoon in Hawaii.

Mrs. K. H. W. Griffiss of Long Beach is enjoying several months at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel, Waikiki, in order to be near her son, Lieut. Townsend Griffiss, U.S.A. air corps, who is stationed at Wheeler Field, Schofield Barracks. Lieut. Griffiss has had important duties at Wheeler Field in connection with the preparations for the completion of trans-Pacific flights there.

A delightful luncheon of the past week, which honored Mrs. Page Morris of Pasadena, was that given by Mrs. C. N. Cooke, Sr. Mrs. Cooke, who gave the new Honolulu Academy of Arts, is a member of an old island family and is widely known for her interest in charitable and philanthropic work.

Home from Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Coffman (Lily Tyrer,) have returned from their honeymoon and are now at home at 4061 Monroe street. While on their trip, they visited with relatives and friends in Lincoln, Neb., the former home of the bride, and also stopped over at El Paso, Kansas City, Omaha, Colorado Springs, Salt Lake City and San Francisco en route.

The marriage was solemnized September 29, at the Hollywood Church of the Nazarene, Rev. James Proctor Knott officiating. Members of the bridal party were Misses Violet and Iris Tyrer, the bride's sisters; Mr. and Mrs. William Pratt, John Shober Kimber, Jr., and Arthur Jensen. Little Myrtle Hunter was the flower girl, and Proctor Knott, Jr., ring bearer.

Dinner Musicale

Following a quiet wedding, which took place last week, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Carque were entertained at Mensana Home by Mrs. Clara M. Coleman with a dinner and musical program. Among those present were Dr. and Mrs. Philip Lovell, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Wilke, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Cubbison, Dr. F. E. Malony, Miss Marie Press, Mr. and Mrs. Seiler, Mr. and Mrs. William Reicken, Dr. Charles James, Mrs. Frank Starr, Miss Leybrooke, Mr. James Berlin and Mr. P. Ludwig Conde.

Birthday Anniversary

Wednesday marked the seventh birthday anniversary of the Intercollegiate Club of Los Angeles. The members celebrated the occasion by a lovely banquet at the Hotel Maryland, Pasadena, and thirty-six members and guests were present. The table was beautifully decorated in autumn flowers.

Following the dinner Irwin Deits, president, gave a short birthday greeting. An interesting history of the club was read by Miss Adele Bates. Walter Stopper accompanied by Catherine Williams sang "One Fleeting Hour" and "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia." Some of the past presidents and officers spoke briefly of past years. Miss Adelyn Strother, vice-president, gave a farcical glimpse into the future, entitled "Ten Years Hence," in which she predicted all sorts of preposterous futures for the various members that were present.

Walter Widmayer's orchestra of Los Angeles furnished excellent music.

BRIDE-TO-BE SETS WEDDING DAY

Ceremony Scheduled for 23rd Inst.

[Sergis Alberts Hoover studios]

Evening Bridge

The fifth event in the bridge tournament sponsored by the Los Angeles Opera and Fine Arts Club is to be held Friday evening at the Harriet Cantes studio, 1828 North La Brea avenue.

Interest is steadily growing in this series of bridge parties, which are being given for the benefit of the scholarship loan fund, one of the worthy activities of the club.

Dinner at 6:30 p.m. will precede the bridge and so great has been the demand for tables that the Chinese, Rose, Oak and Flower rooms have been reserved for the occasion.

Mrs. Betty Scharps, chairman of the bridge tournament events, has chosen to assist as hosts and hostesses Mrs. Jennie Helen Keen, Miss Belle Hall, Mrs. Mary De Mund, Mrs. E. K. Holland, Dr. and Mrs. Hubert S. Adair, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Crozier, Dr. and Mrs. A. Russell Jewett, Mrs. Frank De Long, Mrs. Henry P. Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Shuey, Mrs. Frank Peterson, Maj. C. True, Mrs. Lynda Scott, Mrs. Joseph C. Breil, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Gillmore, and Miss Doris Lee Gillmore.

Table reservations may be made through Mrs. Jennie Helen Keen, Miss Ella True or Rose Tapley at GRanite 6766.

Motor Trip North

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Chamberlain of 432 South St. Andrews Place, left Wednesday morning for Del Monte, and after a few days will motor from there to San Francisco, where they will stop at the Mark Hopkins Hotel. Mrs. Chamberlain has many friends in San Francisco and Berkeley, her former home, who are planning to entertain them with many delightful functions during their visit in the Bay district. They will be gone a month.

Musical Tea

An especially interesting social affair of the week was the musical tea given Wednesday by Mrs. Bruce Blackburn and Miss Elizabeth R. Blackburn at their lovely new home, 4791 Cromwell avenue, the guests of honor including Mrs. Paul C. Heydenreich, Miss Alma Dorothy Priester, Mrs. James Henry Ballagh, Mrs. Daisy Bannerman Coats, Mrs. Gertrude Ross and Mrs. Robert H. Green. During the afternoon a program was presented, the artists including Mirtella Clarke, Robert Young, cousin of Miss Blackburn; Dick Pietre, Mildred Beuttler and Mrs. Gertrude Ross, who recently returned with her daughter, Miss Corinne Ross, from a year's stay in Europe, gave a charming informal talk regarding her visit abroad. Each honor guest received an artistic gift, and tea was served in a delightful room overlooking the boulevard.

In addition to the hostesses and honorees, the guest list included Mmes. Manuel Ayulo, Norman Branch, Dana B. Cox, Mattson Morrill, Jennie Helen Keen, Orra Monnette, Frank Edwin De Long, Florence Hart Allen, Clarence Bowman Kerr, Ethel Graham Lynde, William Priester, Lillian Bowles, Henry G. Sanger, Leland Moore, F. A. Blackburn, Frances Sanger, Ethel K. Holland, P. J. Yorba, C. D. Young, William Kirtley Chambers, Florence E. Bartlett, Warren Quick, C. A. Isaacs, Arthur R. Dr. David Bjork and Dr. Frank Klingberg of the history department were the guests of honor at a beautifully appointed dinner Thursday evening by the Gamma Phi Beta coeds. The guest list comprised many actives and alumnae of the sorority.

An artist bridge was the dainty affair with which Theta Upsilon entertained friends Thursday afternoon. Drawings, colorful paintings and sketches adorning the walls, easels and pallets strewn about the corners of the rooms, and vivid smocks and French dolls gave a distinctly Bohemian air. More than thirty guests enjoyed the affair. Theta Upsilons were also hostesses of a football luncheon given at Twin Cedars Saturday previous to the Pomona-U.C.L.A. game when the place cards carried out the football motif, being decorated with football figures.

Betrothal Announced

Announcement has been made by Mr. and Mrs. I. Kafka of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Charlotte Kafka, to Morris Lehrer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel Phillip Lehrer. The bride-to-be, with her parents, will be at home the afternoon of December 4, and has extended invitations to all friends and relatives for a reception from 2 to 5 p.m., at 129 South Kenmore avenue.

Mr. Lehrer was graduated from the University of Southern California. No date has yet been decided upon for the wedding.

At Arrowhead Springs

Mrs. George C. Reiss of Pasadena, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. John Grosse and her small son, George C. Reiss, Jr., is passing several days at Arrowhead Hot Springs.

Mrs. Charles Lyons of 500 Roxbury Drive, Beverly Hills; Mr. and Mrs. J. Lyons and Mrs. Charles Shapiro have been enjoying several days' visit at the hotel also.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Harvey McCarthy motored up for the week-end Saturday.

Among the Angelenos who are at Arrowhead Hot Springs include Mr. and Mrs. George L. Crenshaw, Mrs. Charles H. McFarland, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Wineman and Mrs. Carrie Price; Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Wilson, Mrs. Fred Carroll and daughter, Fay, Robert Laykin, Harrison Dickerman, David Grossman, Dave Miller, Mrs. Emma Kraus and Miss Lillian Kraus, Mr. and Mrs. Leo J. Roth, Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Bohemian Costume Dance

The annual dance given by the students of the School of Speech of the University of Southern California, was held Saturday evening the 5th inst., at Casa Cresta Juanita, the unique Spanish studio of Webb Keedy.

The Old-World air and spacious grandeur of Casa Cresta, with its high-beamed ceilings, Castilian balconies, and open fires made a charmingly realistic background for the Bohemian costumes.

The raised platform at one end of the studio gave a professional atmosphere for the program arranged by Miss Lucile Taylor. Carroll Sandholt and Roy Windbourn sang popular songs, and the Bohemian dance by Miss Bertha Winstel was one of the high lights.

The romantic skit by Frank Egan, entitled "He and She," was the feature. Miss Avalon Dahhest, popular in college dramatic circles, and Art Brearly, who directed the first moving picture to be put on entirely by students in any college in the West, made up the cast.

It is a tradition of the School of Speech student body to have a costume dance each year, and this was voted the outstanding one to date.

Patrons and patronesses for the evening were: Dr. and Mrs. Rufus von KleinSmid, Dean Mary Sinclair Crawford, Dean and Mrs. Ray K. Immell, Miss Elizabeth Yoder, Mrs. Pearl Aiken Smith, Mrs. Georgia Fink, Mrs. Tacie Mae Hanna, Prof. Ray MacDonald, Miss Florence Hubbard, Prof. G. P. Tanquery, Mrs. Sprague and Prof. Allan H. Nichols.

Officers of the student body of the School of Speech are: Doris Crook-Johnson, president; Ethel Bickford, vice-president; Avalon Daggett, secretary-treasurer; Lucille Taylor, program chairman.

Weiss-Boose

The marriage of Miss Helen Weiss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip A. Weiss of Dayton, O., to Samuel Boose, formerly of Dayton, but who is making his home here, was solemnized October 31, last, the ceremony taking place in the chapel of the Little Church of the Flowers, Glendale, with Rev. Willsie Martin officiating.

The dainty bride was charming in her going-away gown of black georgette with rhinestones and hat to match, and she wore a corsage of pink sweet peas and roses.

Miss Minnie Weiss assisted her sister as maid of honor in frock of blue georgette with hat to match and corsage of sweet peas and roses. Clarence Ross served Mr. Boose as best man and only members of the immediate families witnessed the ceremony.

After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Boose will be at home to their friends at 738 South Union avenue.

New Address

Mr. and Mrs. Erward T. Sherer have returned from a trip through the Canadian Rockies, to Winnipeg, and many other eastern points and are domiciled for the winter at the Mayfair, in West Seventh street.

Visiting Here

Mrs. O. W. Thoery, wife of Lieut. Thoery of the Medical Corps stationed in San Diego, was the house guest last week of Miss Geraldine Nusbaum at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Sunderlin, 1065 Cloverdale avenue.

Mrs. Thoery was formerly Miss Barbara Dorothy Shallenberger, daughter of Congressman Ashton C. Shallenberger of Nebraska, and her garden wedding last June in Alma, Neb., was attended by many prominent people from all parts of the state.

After inspecting the proposed Boulder Dam site with a Congressional party, Mr. Shallenberger visited his daughter at her home in San Diego and she accompanied him to Los Angeles, visiting for the rest of the week with Miss Nusbaum, who is an old friend and formerly made her home in Omaha.

Mrs. Thoery is a Pi Beta Phi from Nebraska and Wisconsin universities, and Miss Nusbaum is a Gamma Phi Beta from University of Nebraska, and also attended Smith College.

Miss Grace Shallenberger, sister of Mrs. Thoery visited Miss Nusbaum last summer a year ago, on her return from a trip to Honolulu, Manila and Shanghai, China.

A brother, Col. Martin Shallenberger, was on Gen. Pershing's staff in France and is now assigned to the general staff in Washington, D. C.

Delightful Affair

In honor of Miss Peggy Morgan, whose wedding with Leo Moore was an event of yesterday, Miss Bernice McGrath and Miss Blanche Coyne entertained with an informal tea and shower at 6401 West Fifth street. The house was beautifully decorated with flowers and soft candle light added to the beauty of the color scheme of pink and silver which was carried out in all the appointments. The guests included Miss Morgan, Miss Virginia Benton, Miss Peggy Richmond, Miss Claire Walters, Miss Carolyn Emerick, Miss Mary Donohue, Miss Micky Ann Moore, Miss Dorothy Donohue, Miss Martha Harrey, Miss Gwen Dowsing, Miss Ethel Flannigan, Miss Belle Newton, Mrs. Janet Lockwood, Mrs. W. Lopez, Leo Moors, Charles Watkins, Billy Simmons, Ray Sykes, Ed Zahnle, C. J. Wright, Ed Schneider, Ray Bresse, Eugene Moore, Errol Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Dana Manning, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Home, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Cunningham.

Miss Micky Ann Moore entertained at her home, 7659 Fountain avenue, Hollywood, in honor of her future sister-in-law, with an evening of bridge followed by a supper and personal shower. The color scheme was green and orchid, and was carried out in the favors and decorations of the supper table. Those included were Misses Morgan Bonnie Boone, Marguerite Krueger, Helen Schrank, Peggy Richmond, Carolyn Emerick, Bernice McGrath, Cecelia Ganglon, Blanche Coyne and the hostess.

Attractive Affair

Miss Dacotah Mizener was hostess recently at a beautifully appointed bridge party at her home, 2020 Edgewood Drive, South Pasadena, in honor of Mrs. F. Charles O'Leary of the college of music faculty, University of Southern California, who before her recent marriage was Miss Marguerite Hauber.

Attractive favors in booklet form, made of various colored paper with the monogram "O" in gold, were presented to the guests who included Mmes. J. Charles O'Leary, J. L. Hauber, M. J. O'Leary, Zella Mizener, Dorothy Hunt Sullivan, Patsy Forsythe Inman, Eugene Wolfe, Sarah Hedrick, Marie Bolus, Charles Waite, Edna Vivian Barnes, Ruth Mizener Bradford and Misses Elizabeth Mottern, Lelia Ellis, Ivy Goade, Sadie Sherman, Pearl Alice Macloskey, Florence Macloskey, Marjorie Schoeller, Beulah Leitzell, Buena Mizener and Dorothy Stuthman.

Alumnae Meeting

Miss Aneita Kadock, secretary of the Los Angeles alumnae organization of Alpha Delta Pi, will be hostess at the meeting, Saturday, at her home, 2969 Francis avenue. Officers for the ensuing year will be chosen at the business hour which will precede an afternoon of bridge. Miss Kadock graduated from the University of California, Los Angeles, where she was a member of Alpha Chi chapter of Alpha Delta Pi, is also secretary of the Alpha Chi chapter alumnae organization which was organized recently.

Members of the two active chapters of Alpha Delta Pi in Los Angeles, Alpha Chi at U.C.L.A., and Alpha Psi at Southern California, and of the alumnae organization have been entertaining Mrs. Kinnaird Rowe, national inspector of Louisville, Ky.

The annual Christmas bazaar of Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Chi chapter at the University of California at Los Angeles, will be held at the Mary Louise Tea Room, December 4, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Most of the articles on sale will be handmade, and will be for household and personal use. Margaret Soper, chairman of the bazaar, will be in charge.

Tea will be served, and there will be fortune telling with tea leaves by Ottie MacIntosh.

Announce Engagement

Formal announcement is made this morning by Mr. and Mrs. Gus Marks of Sacramento of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mildred Marks, to Irving Weinstein of San Francisco. The wedding is to be an event in Sacramento of December 26. Mrs. Marks was formerly Miss Celia Mooser, daughter of Abraham Mooser of 699 1-4 Shatto Place.

—o—

Charity Ball

Claiming unusual interest among the social circles of Los Angeles and adjacent cities is the charity ball which Phi Sigma Sigma Sorority is sponsoring to celebrate founder's day Wednesday, the 23rd inst.

The Council House has been chosen as the setting for this gala event. Those who have attended affairs given at this social center have many pleasant memories of its charm and dignified furnishings.

Miss Goldie Wershaw, chairman of the music committee, has obtained an orchestra for the occasion and a dancing cup will be awarded.

Entertainment will be furnished during the course of the evening by some of the city's popular artists.

Prominent women who will act as sponsors at the charity ball are Mrs. Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith and Mrs. Philip Hunt.

Miss Dora Widess, president of the active Zeta chapter of the sorority, and Miss Rebecca Steinberg, president of the Los Angeles alumnae chapter, are heading committees of ticket salesmanship. The entire proceeds will go to charity, part in Los Angeles and the remainder to the national charity fund.

Tickets may be obtained from Miss Jeanette Zeitlin, 322 Griswold street, Glendale, or may be bought at the door the evening of the affair.

—o—

Sorority Affairs

October proved most eventful in the social life of the Kappa Delta Rho Sorority, many delightful affairs having been given throughout the month. One of the most unique was the surprise picnic party given at the Krazy Kat Kabin in the Arroyo Seco Canyon by the newer members, the Misses Edith Bogusch, June Campbell, Marjorie Clarke, Marjorie Bob, Mildred Johnson, Elma Davis and Mis. Janet Barth, who were later entertained with a banquet at the Windsor Tea Room.

The climax of the month came, however, when the Deauville Beach Club was the setting for a delightful dinner-dance given by the sorority Thursday evening, October 27, flowers and taole favors suggesting Hallowe'en adding greatly to the attractions of the affair. Those who attended were the Misses Pearl Anderson, president of the chapter, Doris Sutherland, Muriel Ennor, Evelyn Snavely, Maxine Porter, Marjorie Clarke, Wilma Hershey, June Campbell, Helen Reed, Edith Bogusch, Marjorie Bob, Mildred Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Colf, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Winters, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Barth, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Gainer and Mr. and Mrs. Al Gilbert, Mrs. Elma Davis and Reece Door, Byron Butler, Walter Gillespie, Henry Gutsche, Bud Marsh, Frank Taylor, Burton Stevens, Ed Brewster, Fred Arnesen, Al Heiman, Kenneth Hershey, Joe Carr and Joe Tishner.

Sorority Dinner Dance

The Theta Chapter of Upsilon Alpha, women's national dental sorority, Southern California University, held its first dinner-dance in the dining-room of the Elks' Temple, opposite Westlake Park, last Monday evening.

The table, arranged in the shape of a horseshoe, carried a green and yellow motif, with charming favors for each guest.

Mrs. Ruby Kommers, president of the society, acted as hostess. Guests included the Misses Hetty Cook, Elinor Marks, Elinor Van Volin, Louise Tung, Lillian Van Wost, Alice Corpe, Marcia Sneden, Alice Frey, Bernice Barkelew, Mrs. Clara Carbiner, A. McCouley, John Mauer, A. McDaniel, E. Swanbach, V. Frey, A. M. Morford, C. Jackson, H. Sykes, Drs. C. Corbiner, A. Bramwell and E. Korner.

—o—

Luncheon Bridge

Miss Marjorie Nichols was the guest of honor at a luncheon given for her by her sister, Mrs. Edmund R. Bohrn, at her home, 2315 North Vermont avenue, Los Feliz Heights, Saturday afternoon the 5th inst. Covers were arranged for twenty-eight guests and the afternoon was enjoyed in bridge games. Miss Nichols has recently returned from several months abroad and the affair was in the nature of a "welcome home."

—o—

Bridesmaids Entertain

As a prenuptial courtesy to Miss Pauline Brown, popular bride-elect of the season, at whose wedding they will assist as bridesmaids, Miss Pearl Black, Miss Caroline Craft and Miss Marion Blair entertained with a charmingly arranged miscellaneous shower and bridge at the home of the former, 246 South Irving Boulevard, the guests being sorority sisters of Miss Brown and the hostesses, who are affiliated with Alpha Gamma Delta sorority at University of California at Los Angeles.

Miss Brown has chosen the 18th as the date for her marriage to Burton Chase of Long Beach, the ceremony to take place in Wilshire Boulevard Congregational Church.

—o—

Alumnae Meeting

The Los Angeles Alumnae chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma will have a luncheon-meeting the 19th inst., at the home of Miss Helen Garrett (a member of Nu chapter) 1210 West Fifty-first street, when a book review will be given by two of the members and a program outlined for the year.

—o—

Pledges Honored

Chi Psi Omega Sorority, Beta chapter, entertained Saturday, October 29, with a dance at the home of Miss Ruth Bourell, 1931 Buckingham Road, in honor of its pledges. The home was cleverly decorated in the Hallowe'en motif, and the late hours of the evening were devoted to a treasure hunt, which was followed by a delightful breakfast.

Those present were the Misses Katherine Salle, Helen Salle, Verna Vilas, Isabel Bone, Margaret Ynent, Beatrice Brown, Faith Kjolland, Eileen Brodley, Eleanor Lawrence, Mary Jo Burton, Katherine Barker, Berty Lou Temple, Eloise Shipp, Reva Combs, and Messrs. Bus Cook, Blythe Paul, Harold Nulte, Bob Harasta, Harry Fines, Luke Jordan, Frank Anderson, Elmer De Force, George Staff, Ed Clark, Cecil Hillingsworth, Dick Lane, Jack Bridgeman and Joe Lammers.

Farewell Party

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hull of Santa Monica honored Archduke Leopold of Austria and his secretary, Alfred Neuhart, Saturday evening, the 5th inst., with a farewell party, the home being charmingly decorated in the Hallowe'en colors. A buffet supper was served from 6 p.m. until 2 a.m., and music and dancing were enjoyed by the guests, who included Mr. and Mrs. Albert Nathain, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schader, Mr. and Mrs. Havemeyer Detrick, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Vocke, Dr. and Mrs. William Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Wynn, Mrs. Edith Schader, Mrs. Ester Scherber, Mrs. Peggy Campbell, Miss Katherine McGregor, and Messrs. Frank Davis, Bazil Wrangle, Dick Kilpatrick, Harry Reinhart, Carl Von Haartmann, Col. Drehorny and Mr. Bergesaun.

—o—

Townsend-Wilkes

Tuesday, the 15th inst., is the chosen day for the wedding of Miss Helen Townsend, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Townsend of the Rex Arms, and Peter Fredericks Wilkes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Wilkes of New York, in the Church of the Angels.

Miss Nan Townsend, sister of the bride-elect, will be maid of honor, and Miss Clarice Scudder of Oakland and Miss Octavia Muehlhausen will be the bridesmaids. Mr. Wilkes has chosen Grafton Musser of Alameda as best man, while the ushers will be William Leslie of Beverly Hills, and Hugh Lee Spencer.

The wedding comes as the climax of a long series of affairs given in honor of both Miss Helen Townsend and Miss Nan Townsend since the announcement of their engagements by their mother last summer at a luncheon ostensibly given in honor of Miss Adele Ward, fiancee of Joseph Kurtz Horton, at the Jonathan Club. Miss Nan will marry Willon Allen Henderson of Oakland in the spring. Among those who have entertained recently are Miss Ruth Sully, 117 North Sycamore avenue, Miss Helen Blakeslee of Grattan street, and Mrs. R. L. Horton of Chester Place.

Yesterday Mrs. Harold Ben Rockwell surprised Miss Townsend with a bridge party and kitchen shower at her home in Carthay Center.

Miss Townsend and Mr. Wilkes are keeping secret the destination of their honeymoon, but will reside in Los Angeles upon their return.

—o—

Sorority Affair

Friday evening, the 11th inst., the Kappa Delta Sorority at the University of Southern California, entertained with a dinner-dance at the chapter house, the motif being two-fold, a celebration of Armistice Day and in honor of the new pledges. Miss Virginia Arnold was in charge of the affair.

The week-end of October 28 to 30 the sorority was hostess to twelve girls from Phi chapter of Kappa Delta at the University of California at Berkeley, a football luncheon being given in their honor before the game.

—o—

At Del Monte

Among the Angelenos who were registered at Del Monte during the past week were Dr. and Mrs. E. Kibler, Miss R. V. Collins and F. T. McDonald, Mrs. R. B. Young and Mrs. Mary Young Moore, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brant.

—o—

Navy Day was chosen by Miss Lillian Starring O'Brien of San Francisco as the date for her marriage to Lieutenant William L. Erdmann, U.S.N., in Grace Cathedral of the northern city at 7 p.m. The marriage culminated a romance begun three years ago when Lieutenant Erdmann stopped in San Francisco en route to Australia. After a full military ceremony there was a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jason Gould for intimate friends and members of the family. Lieutenant William Mitchell, a classmate, was his best man, and his ushers were Lieutenant R. B. Waller, Lieutenant B. E. Yoemans, Lieutenant J. A. Lillard, and Ensign William K. Rhodes. After a wedding trip, Lieutenant Erdmann and his bride will join the Long Beach naval colony, while the former is attached to the U.S.S. Tennessee.

Fifteen guests were entertained by Mrs. G. C. Simmons, wife of Lieutenant-Commander Simmons, U.S.S. Arizona, at an informal buffet supper and bridge given at her home in Long Beach recently.

In honor of her mother, Mrs. Robert C. Lewis of New Jersey, who arrived Saturday from the East, Mrs. H. C. Rust, wife of Lieutenant Rust, U. S. S. Procyon, was hostess at an informal tea at her San Pedro home last Sunday.

An outstanding event of the past week in Coronado navy circles was the large tea with which Mrs. P. E. Conradt, wife of Lieutenant Conradt, U.S.M.C. and Mrs. Roland Smoot, wife of Lieutenant Smoot, U.S.N., entertained in the Japanese Tea Gardens of the southern city Monday afternoon for Mrs. Bruce B. Adell, wife of Lieutenant Adell, U.S.N., who formerly made her home in Long Beach, but is now living in Coronado, where Lieutenant Adell was transferred recently from the U.S.S. West Virginia to the destroyer William Jones. More than 100 younger set matrons called to meet the newcomer.

One of the most attractive affairs of the past week in army circles was the bridge-tea given by Mrs. George J. B. Fisher, wife of Capt. Fisher, U.S.A., at her Fort MacArthur quarters Wednesday afternoon, honoring Mrs. Harrington W. Cochrane, wife of Capt. Cochrane, and Mrs. Ewart J. Strickland, wife of Lieutenant Strickland, two popular army matrons who are leaving the post soon. The Stricklands sail for duty in Panama the 26th inst., and Capt. and Mrs. Cochrane leave for their new station in Honolulu December 9. Baskets of rose-shaded chrysanthemums from the gardens of the hostess, with tall tapers were used on the tea table where Mrs. George D. Davidson and Mrs. Albert C. Chesledon poured coffee and tea. Bidden for bridge were Mmes. Willis G. Peace, Reginald Cranfield, Montgomery Phister, Edward Layne of Los Angeles, John Alpine of Los Angeles, John Hincke, E. J. Strickland, Ulmo, Henry Hoeffer, Paxon, N. S. Bowman, Parker, Cameron, A. C. Chesledon, Edwin Callicut, Maurice Conable, G. W. Davidson, Miss Mary Peace and Miss Mary R. Black of Pasadena. Calling later for tea were Mrs. Stanley P. Black of Pasadena, Mrs. Harrington Cochrane, Mrs. Charles Stafford, Mrs. A. D. Pieken, Mrs. J. O. Young of Honolulu, Mrs. E. Kleinman, Mrs. V. E. Miltenberger, Mrs. Mills, Mrs. Sara Reinhart and Miss Santa Oddie of New York.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS OF THE ARMY AND NAVY

Navy set interest of the past week or so has centered about Mrs. C. S. Kraemer, a civilian matron of San Francisco, who arrived early this month to be the house guest for a time of Commander and Mrs. Franklin Van Valkenburgh, U.S.S. Maryland, at their Point Fermin home, and the charming northern visitor now finds her social calendar filled to overflowing with tea, dinner and luncheon engagements. Mrs. Van Valkenburgh started the round of entertaining with a tea at her home Monday, when more than eighty naval officers and their wives called. Wednesday Mrs. Kraemer was a guest at a dinner with which Commander and Mrs. Van Valkenburgh entertained at Hotel Virginia for Capt. John V. Klemann, commanding the U.S.S. Maryland. Baskets of brown and golden-shaded pansies centered the table and later were given as corsages and boutonnieres for the men. Covers were marked for Capt. Klemann, Mrs. Kraemer, Commander and Mrs. Julian Collins, Commodore (retired) and Mrs. Frank W. Bartlett, Commodore (retired) and Mrs. Emil Svarz, Commander and Mrs. C. C. Copp, Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. E. Richard Henning, Dr. and Mrs. Lee, Capt. and Mrs. Shaler Ladd, U.S.M.C.; Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. R. A. Hall, Lieut. and Mrs. James D. Murray, Jr., Miss Marjorie Bartlett, Mrs. J. I. Van Valkenburgh, Lieut. Kelty of the U.S.S. Texas and Commander and Mrs. Van Valkenburgh. Capt. Klemann honored the visitor with a dinner party in his cabin aboard ship Thursday, and included as his other guests Capt. and Mrs. Shaler Ladd, U.S.M.C.; Lieut. and Mrs. Desmond J. Sinnott, Dr. and Mrs. Lee, Lieut. Nelson, Mrs. J. I. Van Valkenburgh and Commander and Mrs. Van Valkenburgh. Mrs. Kraemer shared honors with Mrs. E. Potter Noble of Philadelphia and New York, who is visiting Rear-Admiral and Mrs. William Woodward Phelps, at a smart luncheon given at the picturesque Palos Verdes Country Club Friday afternoon by Mrs. Phelps and Mrs. E. Richard Henning, wife of Lieutenant-Commander Henning, radio aid on Admiral Phelps's staff, aboard the U.S.S. Procyon. Bowls of yellow chrysanthemums marked the entire length of the long table, and covers marked for Mmes. Harris Lanting, Watt Tyler Cluverius, George Loring Porter Stone, Merlyn Grail Cook, Franklin Van Valkenburgh, J. I. Van Valkenburgh, Frank W. Bartlett, James D. Maloney, J. B. McDonald, E. L. Munson, M. C. Bowman, M. C. Partello, R. L. Mitten, Harry Pinkerton, H. C. Rust, H. Avery, Miss Marjorie Bartlett, honor guests and hostesses. Commander and Mrs. Julian D. Collins entertained informally at their home in Long Beach for Mrs. Kraemer Saturday night, having bidden Mrs. Johnston, Capt. Klemann and Commander and Mrs. Van Valkenburgh, and Sunday evening Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. E. Richard Henning were hosts at an informal supper party for Mrs. Kraemer, Capt. Cope, U.S.S. Procyon, and Commander and Mrs. Van Valkburgh. Mrs. Frank W. Bartlett was hostess at a luncheon at the Pacific Coast Club recently for Mrs. Kraemer and Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Shaler Ladd entertained with a bridge and tea at her Point Fermin home for the visitors.

Entertaining with her daughter, Mrs. Frank W. Parsons, wife of Lieut. Parsons, U.S.N., Mrs. G. L. P. Stone, wife of Capt. Stone, commanding the U.S.S. Tennessee, was hostess at an attractively appointed luncheon at La Venta Inn in the Palos Verdes hills Monday, complimenting Mrs. Louis R. de Steiguer, wife of Admiral de Steiguer. Baskets of pastel-shaded chrysanthemums with candles were used on the tables, where covers were marked for Mmes. Louis R. de Steiguer, J. V. Chase, Watt Tyler, Cluverius, Willis G. Peace, Claude L. Bloch, H. L. Pence, Frank Braisted, E. P. Huff, R. C. Alexander, C. S. Kraemer, Franklin Van Valkenburgh, J. I. Van Valkenburgh, Bayliss Poe, Buke, Hennig, J. H. Chadwick, H. F. Pullen, G. W. Allen, Miss Kiezluff, Miss Mary Peace and Miss Martha Cluverius. Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Stone and her daughter, Mrs. Parsons, entertained informally at tea at their lovely Palisades home for Miss Mathilda Scott of Washington, D. C., who is visiting in Los Angeles. Only a group of Miss Scott's most intimate friends were bidden.

Invitations have been issued by the wives of officers of the U.S.S. Tennessee for a luncheon to be given at Club California in Long Beach on Wednesday for Mrs. Stone and Mrs. Parsons.

Rear-Admiral and Mrs. William Benson of Washington, D. C., will arrive on this coast soon via the Panama Canal, having made the trip aboard the new ship Maiolo on her maiden voyage. While here they will visit their sons, Lieutenant-Commander Benson and Commander F. W. Benson and their families for several weeks.

Capt. and Mrs. John T. Walker, U.S.M.C. of the U.S.S. West Virginia, were among those who entertained before the Maryland dance at Hotel Virginia Friday, having as dinner guests Capt. and Mrs. Watt Tyler Cluverius, Capt. and Mrs. A. H. Noble, Capt. and Mrs. Lee H. Brown, Commander and Mrs. L. L. Pratt, Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. Andrew G. Shepard and Lieutenant and Mrs. Earl E. Stone.

Lieutenant H. Avery, flag lieutenant on the staff of Rear-Admiral W. W. Phelps and Mrs. Avery, U.S.S. Procyon, were also dinner hosts before the dance. Covers at their table were marked for Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Phelps, Capt. and Mrs. M. G. Cook, Capt. and Mrs. M. M. Frucht, Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. L. Wood, Lieutenant and Mrs. H. C. Rust, Lieutenant and Mrs. Harry Pinkerton, Mrs. E. Richard Henning, Mrs. E. Potter Noble, Capt. Cope and Lieutenant Shearer.

Glendale

Last Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. E. U. Emery of 1535 Ridgeway Drive, gave a bridge dinner party at the Oakmont Country Club. The dinner table was in the form of a large "E" and was decorated in autumn colors. Large baskets of chrysanthemums were placed at intervals along the table with festoons of smaller button chrysanthemums. The autumn colors were repeated in the candles, bon-bon baskets and small wood nymphs dressed in autumn leaves marked the places for the guests. High scores were made by Mrs. Alfred Johnson, Mrs. R. A. Puffer, Jr., Mrs. Howard Martin, R. A. Puffer, Jr., D. W. Rich and A. E. Overmeyer. There were seventy guests.

Miss Julia Cunningham of South Isabel street, and Harrison John Jacobs were married last Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the Little Church of the Flowers. Dr. Dean Percy T. Magan read the ceremony. Preceding the services James Moore sang "I Love You Truly" and "Because God Gave Me You" with Cecil Burke playing a violin obbligato. Mrs. Walter Anderson presided at the organ. Yellow and white growing flower, decorated the church, and the matron of honor, Mrs. Eula Purvis, and the bridesmaids, Misses Alma Mundall and Winifred Champlain, wore yellow organdy frocks with hats to match. Their bouquets were of orchid and yellow baby chrysanthemums. The bride was gowned in a lace and organdy frock of white, her veil was of tulle and lace and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and baby asters. Barbara Branch was flower girl, she wore a ruffled yellow frock. James T. Slayback was best man, and the ushers were Ralph Beegle and Charles Kelchey. Mrs. Jacobs is the daughter of Mrs. Kathryn Cunningham of Indianapolis, though she has lived in Glendale during the last four years. Mr. Jacobs is also a former resident of Indianapolis. They will be at home at 119 East California street.

Miss Ethel Oliver, who will become the December bride of Edwin Lee Gardner, of Ventura, was the incentive for a miscellaneous shower and bridge party given at the home of Miss Dorothy Houston, 440 West Myrtle street. Miss Houston used the Japanese motif in decorating and appointments, chrysanthemums being used in profusion throughout the rooms. There were seventy guests all sorority sisters of the hostess and honoree. Miss Houston was assisted by her mother, Mrs. C. W. Houston, Mrs. Ethel E. Oliver, Mrs. Charles Temple, Mrs. C. B. Guthrie and Mrs. M. E. Plasterer.

Last Friday evening, Mrs. Fred V. Shuck gave a bridge-supper at the Glendale Athletic Club. Covers for sixteen were placed at a table banked high with autumn flowers. Miss Margaret Cline made high score and the consolation went to Miss Elenore Long.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Smith gave a dinner party last Saturday night at the Oakmont Country Club, the affair was in celebration of the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Smith. Pompon asters and appointments in the fall colors were used. A huge birthday cake centered the dinner table, where there were places for eighteen. After dinner the guests played bridge at the Smith home on Bonnie Brae. Profusion of great shaggy chrysanthemums decorated their home.

Mrs. Frank C. Ayars of 281 Hill Drive gave a luncheon Thursday afternoon at her home. The guests included the members of the executive board of the Tuesday Afternoon Club during the regime of Mrs. Danial Campbell, who was the honor guest. Yellow fall flowers decorated her home and were used on the luncheon table. Covers were placed for Mmes. Campbell, A. H. Montgomery, C. W. Houston, John C. Dunn, M. E. Plasterer, John Robert White, Jr., E. W. W. Hayward, O. E. Von Oven, A. A. Barton, H. E. Bartlett, J. T. Crampton, William Hunter, Lillian Dow, E. B. Sutton, B. O. Holbrook, J. E. Sargent and A. P. Findlay.

Imperial Valley

The Brawley Woman's Community Club met Friday afternoon, marking the first meeting of the month with an informal luncheon held in the dining-room of the Elks' Lodge. Following the luncheon a short business session was called, Mrs. G. L. Marah, president, presiding. Mrs. A. B. Hanson of El Centro, State chairman of child welfare for the California Federated Womens' Clubs, gave the address of the afternoon, choosing as her subject, "Mothercraft." The speaker presented many interesting phases of modern psychology in its relation to parenthood. Another pleasing feature of the program was a group of vocal solos by John C. Ganton, of the El Centro Academy of Music. Four little girls, under the direction of Miss Venola Eaton, were seen in a dance entitled, "The Problem." Participating were Sally Parker, Phyllis Stilgenbaur, Caroline Bostwick and Rosalie Roberson. New members welcomed into the club at the close of the program were Mmes. J. B. Miller, William Anderson, Ralph Stilgenbaur, Bert Bate, O. T. Randolph and S. M. Clugston. Honor guests of the club were Mrs. A. B. Hanson, speaker of the day, Mrs. F. D. Jacobs, vice-president of the southern district, and Mrs. Albert W. Hale, all of El Centro.

Among the enjoyable affairs of the week in Calipatria was the bridge-luncheon with which Mrs. J. J. Farmer entertained on Wednesday afternoon at her home on Delta street. Autumn flowers formed the centerpiece for the luncheon table and corsage bouquets indicated places for Mmes. Cecil Clouse, Glen Cardiff, Joe Bailey, Raymond Bristol, George Gullett, William Young, Henry Fischer, Glen Wirt, Wiley Manning, Herbert Reddy, Ralph Chapman and J. J. Farmer.

Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Horne of El Centro entertained a large group of friends last Monday evening at a "barn dance," the affair being held on the rough boards of the unfinished floors of their new home which is being built at Sixth and Len Kay avenues. Nearly 100 guests assembled for the frolic, all attired in rustic costumes. Old-time dances added to the merriment, the prizes being presented to the following couples: Mrs. Warren Currier and O. J. Bradshaw, Mrs. Howard Meyer and S. E. Allen, Mrs. W. J. Clements and John Stewart Ross, Mrs. George Paulin and Howard Meyer.

Dr. and Mrs. Roy O. Thompson of Calexico entertained with a delightful supper-dance on Saturday evening at the International Golf and Country Club, the affair being planned in compliment to their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Claggett and E. Anagnosti, all of Los Angeles. The auditorium was beautifully decorated with autumn flowers and foliage, the golden tints predominating. Covers were laid for fifty guests.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Baxter of Holtville was the scene of two charming dinner parties last week. Yellow blossoms and greenery adorned the rooms and the table for each affair. Wednesday's guests included Mr. and Mrs. William Meyers, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jardin, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Cravath, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Purcell. On Thursday evening the guests were Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Blanchard, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Fahring, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. John Zenos, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Jones and Mr. and Mrs. Dale Cooper.

Santa Monica

Mrs. Albert Berry Cook, who spent the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Curry Browning, at Falmouth, Ky., was welcomed home this week with a delightfully planned dinner and evening of bridge given in her honor by Mrs. Forrest D. Macomber at her home in Eleventh street. Autumn flowers decorated for the occasion and covers were laid at the prettily appointed tables for Mr. and Mrs. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Myron G. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Davids, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Bush, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Wheeler, Mrs. W. R. Weber, Mrs. Rose B. Parks, and the host and hostess. Prizes for bridge score went to Mmes. Weber, Wheeler and Davids.

Among the Halloween festivities was a lovely children's party given by Mrs. Thurlow T. Taft at her home in Twenty-first street for her children, Billy and Eleanor Taft. The guests arrived in costumes and enjoyed games and music during the afternoon and a dinner of delightful appointments at 6:30 p.m. Decorations carried out the Halloween motif and twenty-six small folks enjoyed the occasion.

The interest of many prominent women centered in the American Legion auxiliary last week when the county council of that organization gave a luncheon and reception at the Edgewater Club in honor of their State president, Mrs. Ethyl Hearst of Los Angeles. Formal installation of officers followed the social hour. There were 240 guests from various parts of Southern California present.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Blackwood entertained at their home in Fourteenth street recently with a charmingly-planned dinner for their son, Cuscaden, who is a student at Harvard. The Harvard colors were carried out in the decorations and appointments while tiny footballs formed the favors. A swimming party at the Edgewater Club preceded the dinner. There were eight guests present.

Van Nuys

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Reed of Montgomery, Ala., are visiting at the home of Mrs. C. M. Gale of Delano street.

Miss Eloise Arnacker was given a birthday party at her home on Sylvan street, with Mrs. A. H. Kinnear as hostess. While the affair was on, the wedding engagement of Miss Jeanette Godwin and Ersell Harwell was announced.

Mrs. Thomas B. Shannon last Wednesday entertained with a bridge-luncheon for several Hollywood and Los Angeles friends. Mrs. Shannon was assisted by Mrs. Paul Dietrich. High honors went to Mrs. Ray Curtis, Mrs. William Gabbs and Mrs. H. L. Hubbell.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl R. Beyer are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Logadon of Denver.

The members of the Neighborhood Club last Thursday met at the home of Mrs. R. L. Sackett on Cedros avenue. Miss Anna Connelly was honor guest.

A birthday party at which five hundred was played was enjoyed last Wednesday by Bryan Colmer, with Mrs. Bertha R. Conrod and A. M. Reed as hosts. About a dozen persons attended the merry affair.

Word has been received from Mr. and Mrs. Leo Hoster, who are spending their honeymoon in Texas. Mrs. Hoster was Miss Anna E. Holland. The couple were married here October 14, last.

Mrs. A. D. Hoffman of Kittridge street was hostess last Tuesday to members of her church circle. Thirty guests responded to invitations.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Graves have returned from their honeymoon at Yosemite and San Francisco. Mrs. Graves was Miss Kathleen Lynch.

Inglewood

The wedding of Miss Olga Herne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Herne of Inglewood, and Mr. John Edward Sterner was solemnized last Saturday evening at a simple but impressive ceremony performed by Rev. S. L. Mitchell in the presence of immediate relatives only. Miss Helen Heckert attended the bride while Mr. Laurence Ingiehart of Culver City acted as best man. In the absence of Mr. Herne the bride was given in marriage by Mr. Fred Letteney, a life-long friend of her parents. Miss Herne was beautifully attired in a gown of turquoise blue taffeta, with panne velvet hat to match. She carried a shower bouquet of pink and white roses. Miss Heckert wore a yellow taffeta creation relieved with silver lace, carrying an arm bouquet of sweet peas and roses. A buffet supper party at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony, at which were present about thirty-five friends of the newly wedded pair. The rooms of the Herne residence were transformed into a floral bower in which roses and chrysanthemums prevailed. A delicious repast was served the guests from the long dining-room table, one end of which was graced by a gorgeous bride's cake, while the groom's cake rested opposite. Mrs. W. F. Heckert and Mrs. Letteney assisted in serving the guests who called through the evening. The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herne and is well known in Inglewood social circles, having made her home in this city for the past four years. Numerous out-of-town guests also were invited. Mr. and Mrs. Sterner will make their home on Holley street in this city upon their return from a brief wedding tour.

Bridge was played by the Omaha friends of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy White at their home on East Spruce street in Inglewood last Saturday evening, there being three tables in play. First honors went to Mr. and Mrs. Albert King.

Mrs. Kenneth S. Clarey was hostess last Tuesday afternoon to a number of her close friends, the afternoon being spent at bridge. A delicious buffet luncheon was served at the close of the game. The guests were Mmes. Charles Benane, Ross O. Porter, E. D. Campbell, Leslie Curtis, Gregory Woodford, Fred Strickler, Effa Bowden and Thad N. Shaw.

Dr. and Mrs. S. L. Winer entertained at a simple but delightful affair last Tuesday evening. Bridge was the diversion of the evening, prizes going to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Beaver. A delicious supper was served late in the evening. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Dixon, H. D. Moseley and Harry Beaver.

Long Beach

Mrs. W. W. Windham of 217 Prospect avenue was the hostess at a beautifully appointed bridge-luncheon on Thursday, the 6th inst., sixty guests being seated about a large horseshoe-shaped table, decorated with tall tapers and chrysanthemums. High scores at bridge afterward were won by Mrs. Marcella Arthur, Mrs. Wade Walker, Mrs. Frank Gray, Mrs. L. C. Brooks, Mrs. G. H. Griffin and Mrs. W. D. Shepard.

A popular autumn bride of the week was Miss Maebelle Satterlee, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Satterlee of Long Beach and Los Angeles, and Mr. Kress Gregg Drew, son of Mrs. Flora Drew of Long Beach, whose marriage took place on Saturday evening, the 5th inst., at the Little Church of the Flowers, Glendale. The Rev. F. Augustus Martyr of All Saints performed the ceremony; the bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. L. Eugene Parker, and was attended by her sister, Anne Satterlee, and a small niece and nephew as flower girl and ring bearer. The bridesmaids were all former schoolmates of Miss Satterlee, now residing in Southern California towns. Upon returning from their honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Drew will be at home at 2317 Cedar avenue, Long Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Cook summoned thirty-six of their friends to a charmingly arranged bridge-dinner at the Club California last week, when fall flowers were used for decorations at dinner and in the card-rooms. Honor scores were made by Mrs. J. E. Pawson and Frederick Watkins.

An informal dancing party was arranged for Saturday evening, the 5th inst., by the members of the S.A.E. fraternity at the Pacific Coast Club, forty couples being in attendance. A number of out-of-town chapters were represented among the college men, who responded to the invitation of the local president, W. M. Longmoor. This was the first of a series of dances for the season.

The marriage of Miss Marjorie Carson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Carson, to Leslie Gregg on Wednesday, the 9th inst., at the Virginia Country Club was an interesting affair of the week at Long Beach. Miss Carson was complimented at a pre-nuptial party on Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wallace Keich of Cheviot Hills, to which a number of Miss Carson's friends in the Southland were bidden. Mrs. Keich was assisted by her sister, Mrs. Day, of San Luis Obispo, during the tea hour.

A large dinner for those persons interested in the Long Beach Symphony Orchestra was given at the California Club on Friday evening, the 11th inst., Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Bixby of Los Alamitos ranch being the hosts. Leonard Walker, conductor of the orchestra the past season, was one of the speakers, and Miss Alice Gentle, mezzo soprano, gave a number of her most popular concert numbers.

San Fernando

Of interest to local society is the announcement of the wedding of Sullivan Burgess to Miss Sylvia McGill of Boston, Mass., on Saturday, October 29. Four hundred guests attended the ceremony which took place at the St. Aloysius Church in Brookline, and was an event of the social season. A reception at the Copley-Plaza followed.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Burgess, and was a graduate of the local high school, afterward attending the University of California and Harvard. Mr. and Mrs. Burgess are spending their honeymoon in Bermuda, after which they will be at home in Cleveland, O., where Mr. Burgess is connected with the Hornblower and Weeks Brokerage Company.

Mrs. H. H. Dace and her daughter, Miss Catherine Egbert, who returned recently after several weeks in Maine, were welcomed home with a dinner given in their honor. Mr. Dace was the host of the affair. Roses filled the house and formed the centerpiece of the dinner-table, where covers were laid for fourteen.

Dr. and Mrs. Harld Peterson entertained several out-of-town guests at a dinner at their home here recently. Guests included Dr. and Mrs. Maxwell Chapman, Miss Mary Ann Frank and Keith Reekie of Ontario; Miss Helen McCullough and Dr. John Potts of Los Angeles; Dr. and Mrs. Dudley Reekie of Fullerton.

Miss Mildred Frazee was the hostess of a clever costume bridge recently for members of her bridge club and other guests. Mrs. Stacey Manst won the prize for the costume which best disguised the wearer. The prize for high score at bridge was awarded to Miss Mary Westlund.

North Hollywood

A wedding of much interest took place last Saturday when Miss Martha Wood and Ellis Shull were married by Rev. J. G. Carmichael, pastor of the Van Nuys Baptist Church. The couple will reside on Victory Boulevard near Pacoima avenue.

Miss Kathleen Sanford last week entertained a group of coeds from Berkeley, former classmates. Among guests were Miss Mabel Covington and Miss Muriel Bigelow.

Mrs. H. P. Lupton of Cahuenga avenue has returned home after a visit of three months in the East.

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Garrett have departed for a motor trip to San Francisco and Portland. They will be absent two weeks.

Mrs. Leon Teft of Bloomfield street has returned from a several months' visit at Pulaski, Tenn.

Mrs. W. F. Niehaus last Wednesday was hostess at a luncheon at her home on Harmony Drive. Among the guests were Mrs. Erwin Newmeyer, Mrs. W. Butler, Mrs. C. Forbes, Mrs. W. F. Mellow and Mrs. B. H. Quast.

Mrs. Barbara Cornwell was honored this week by being elected Worthy Matron of the local Eastern Star chapter.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Collier of Simpson street announce the birth of a daughter.

One of the delightful affairs of the week was the bridge and dance party by Miss Ethel Steele for members of the younger set. Several out-of-town guests were present.

Santa Barbara

Mrs. E. Gardiner Hammond and her first daughter, Miss Frances Hammond, have returned to "Bonnymeda," their Montecito home, after an extended tour of Europe. Miss Elizabeth Hammond gave a surprise party Sunday night honoring her mother and sister. The guests assembled to greet them were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bilas, Dr. and Mrs. Hilmar O. Koefod, Mr. and Mrs. Hampton Thacher, Mr. and Mrs. John Frederick Katemkamp, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Greenough, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson Hyde, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. W. Brownell, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Skehens, Mrs. Frederic S. Gould, Mrs. Frederick Forrest Peabody, Mrs. Charles Hervey Jackson, Miss de

Whittier

One of the outstanding social affairs of the entire school year at Whittier College is the annual entertainment of the two literary societies, the Metaphonian, for girls, and the Palmer for the men. The girls entertain the men, providing cars, tickets to the theater and supper or dinner, as the case may be. The Palmer men likewise entertain their girl friends. The Metaphonians entertained their guests with a theater party at the Hollywood Playhouse, where they witnessed the presentation of the comedy, "Meet the Wife." Later they entertained at supper at the Hollywood Cafe. The Palmer men motored with their girl guests to La Venta Inn on the beautiful Palos Verdes estates, where a formal dinner was served, and an evening of unusual entertainment presented by the college men.

Miss Dorothy Williams entertained at the hospitable home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Williams, at 441 North Painter avenue, Saturday evening, with an attractively appointed bridge party. The near approach of Thanksgiving was suggested in the decorations. Mr. and Mrs. Avery Black were high score winners and Mr. and Mrs. Bewley Allen won second place. Other guests at this interesting party were Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Burdg, Mr. and Mrs. La Verne Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Steere and Mr. Roy Massey of Seattle.

In celebration of the birthday anniversary of her husband, Mrs. E. J. Munger entertained with a smartly appointed dinner at her home, 642 North Washington avenue, Tuesday evening. Pink was the prevailing color motif, and pink candles and favors of the same color were used on the dinner table. Covers were laid for nineteen guests, most of whom were from out of town.

Among the smart luncheons given recently at the William Penn Hotel was that Monday afternoon when the household economics department of the Whittier Woman's Club entertained its own membership and a number of invited guests. Mrs. W. D. Stockdale is chairman of the department and Mrs. Elmer Knox was toastmaster for the occasion. Mrs. R. R. Woodward, president of the club, was one of the luncheon speakers; others were Mrs. Alice Hutchinson, Mrs. R. B. Way and Mrs. A. P. Abbott.

Whittier chapter of the De Molay has issued invitations for a dancing party to be given at the Woman's clubhouse Saturday evening, the 19th inst. Members of the different committees having the affair in charge are the Messrs. Lester Pickup, Dean

Bobbed Hair
Means Ruined Hair

In ten years there will be just as many bald-headed women as men, say Prof. John H. Austin, over forty years a bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist.

Professor Austin says the custom of bobbing does not improve hair; on the contrary, latest observation proves that it retards the growth and makes it coarse.

The most fertile source of spreading diseases of the hair and scalp is the ordinary barber shop or hair dressing establishment, therefore we will have just as many bald-headed women as men in ten years says Professor Austin.

During the past six months hundreds of women who have had their hair bobbed and never before had dandruff or falling hair have called on Professor Austin with bad cases of falling hair and dandruff; thus proving plainly that we will have plenty of bald-headed women in due time.

If your hair is falling out, faded or gray Professor Austin will make a FREE MICROSCOPIC EAMINATION of your hair roots and scalp, and tell you just what to do to put your scalp in a healthy condition.

The use of dandruff cures, mange cures, hair tonics, hot oils, etc., without a proper Microscopic Examination by a Bacteriologist, says Professor Austin, is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure. Hours, 10 to 12 and 2 to 4. Strictly private office, at the Owl Drug Co., Fifth and Broadway. Both men and women invited. Phone Mutual 3232.—[Advertisement.]

COAT SECTION—THIRD FLOOR

Beaded Gowns from France $39.50

CRYSTALLINE beads, silvered beads, metal threads, sequins and colored beads are used on pastel georgette in a very smart way on these delightful Evening Gowns straight from France.

They were imported by J. W. Robinson Co. and ordinarily would be very much higher in price. They impress one immediately as being far above the average Frock at such a low price.

Pastel shades—white and black may be chosen. Some are in straight line style, others are belted into the waistline with fullness in the skirt and with irregular hemlines.

Each one is completed with a matching silk slip, making an altogether attractive and pleasing Frock at very little cost.

These are Gowns which may be worn to dinners and dances and many other festivities of the winter season.

Sizes 14 to 44, priced at $39.50.

THIRD FLOOR

Fox Scarfs $89.50

WHITE and platinum, beige, peach, and Titian dyed Fox Scarfs, full silky skins, soft and fine to touch and equally charming to look at, have the added attraction of a very moderate price.

These skins are nicely mounted and in every respect are worthy to be chosen for Christmas gifts.

Specially priced at $89.50.

THIRD FLOOR

Metal Brocades $8.95

METAL Brocades such as are used for evening gowns and wraps, for the tunic of a two-piece Frock, and for the entire afternoon frock are in small allover designs and wide striped effects.

White, black, red, blue, orchid and light blue are combined with silver. Others have a background of georgette with a stripe of metal threads.

Priced specially at $8.95 a yard.

SECOND FLOOR

French Beaded Handbags $21.75

VERY tiny steel beads in gold, silver and colors have been worked into effective conventional designs in these Bags made in France, especially for J. W. Robinson Co.

Sudden Revival of Interest Here in Poss Reproducing Devices; One Theater E Success With Innovation

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

ALL talking pictures "catching on?" The phra is naturally merely a symbol, signifying fil companiment of mechanically-reproduced so and the Movietone are the two mediums for suc in two. The Vitaphone was tried out some monti too successfully or advantageously, but the Movi introduced within the past few weeks.

At one theater here both types of sound-reproducing apparatus have lately been installed with apparently remarkable results. The Movietone has only been operating for a little over a week, and is said to have increased the attendance 50 to 75 per cent. It happens, however, that the picture, "What Price Glory," on which the accompaniment is being used, is a very big box-office attraction in itself, and is having its first popular run.

IN ANY event, this theater, the Tower, a house of 1000 seats' capacity, has been doing an amazing business. Practically capacity for seven shows a day, and in one or two instances extra shows that ran until 2 a.m., while the doors open in the morning before 9 o'clock.

The theater is still new, and that in itself exerts drawing power, but seemingly the mechanical sound effects have had an extraordinary interest as well.

This would appear to be borne out by the fact that three of the West Coast chain theaters of larger capacity are to install the Vitaphone apparatus at an early date, according to announcement.

There is a fourth theater in Hollywood, the new one being built by Warner Brothers, who sponsor the making of Vitaphone films, that will, when completed, also use the innovation to provide supplementary entertainment.

THE results with Movietone, which is the Fox company's "talking-picture" device, are exceptionally interesting. Without making any actual comparisons it may be said that the synchronization—the timing of the sound to the action—seems surpassingly good.

With this apparatus the sound is recorded on the motion-picture film itself. Particularly interesting is the news reel, with effects. The visit of the American Legion to Paris and the Notre Dame-Navy football game are captured with singular realism, and there is one picture showing a group of youngsters diving into a swimming hole that quite regularly evokes applause, as well as laughter, so curiously natural are their shouts of glee and the splash of the water.

WARNER BROTHERS have demonstrated a persistent faith in the future of Vitaphone, in spite of which skepticism on all hands.

The making of short "sound films" is a regular part of their routine at the studio. These are condensed vaudeville acts and atmospheric prologues generally in two reels. Vitaphone accompaniments are also regularly being provided for their pictures.

Fox is beginning to do the same to a considerable extent with their releases and the Movietone. It looks as if these efforts may now have some additional stimulus from the proposed installing of the equipment in the various theaters here.

In this connection is rather conceded that the Vitaphone has literally "made" the Jolson starring film, "The Jazz Singer," as an entertainment. Al's singing, even more than his performance on the screen, has been the talk of the engagements of the picture in the East.

THERE are many lessons to be learned in the movie show game yet, and perhaps a few rather important ones will be learned right in the next year. There is a demand that is seemingly growing for a greater simplicity both in the character of films themselves, and in their presentation as well. Certainly, it looks as if the limit had been reached in elaborateness, and if that is the case it means a reaction.

There will always be a place for the big show when it is a big show, but the game of piling on tons of additional entertainment to try to save the day for a picture that is a poor expe to run its co exhibition vaudeville and in many ing extent, themselves I note t Artists Thea ing prologu tertainment be the thin cal accompa theaters th type of pic nating the attempting and stage of vogue, o cal device place, but signs of the theater tha a simpler fo generally c and music

Jesse James Wasn't So Bad, All Contrary, Says Star of Stirri

BY MARQUIS BUSBY

In the small towns where supper is something resembling instead of six in the morning, Fred Thomson is a favorite. His pictures, active romance of the more or less outdoor type, the theaters. In the hamlets where sex plays a prominent part, stalwart Fred awakens them when he rides to the rescue, mounted in distress.

The big cities do not see much of the screen stars, but popularity based on small-town audiences is a sure thing. They are loyal and do not soon tire of their favorites. Thomson has no desire to be other than an action star. He says "action" as a distinguishing mark from the more limited "western."

DOWNTOWN BOOKING

For the first time in his career, one of his pictures has been booked into one of the big downtown houses when "Jesse James," a Fred Thomson-Paramount production, is the screen feature at the Metropolitan this week.

Of course, "Jesse James" is not exactly what one would call a western picture. It is an elaborate costume production of this picturesque phase of the post-Civil War days—the days of carpet baggers in Missouri and the man who struck terror to the hearts of Kansas. The picture was made after months of research, delving into history, and talks with descendents of people who had been neighbors to Jesse. Thomson himself did much of the research work.

HERO'S ROBE

A number of people have objected to Thomson's interpretation of Jesse James—saying that he has drawn a hero's robe over one of the worst desperados in American history. All of this merely convinces Thomson that there are a lot of bad history students in the country.

There is a legend that Jesse

TALKING PICTURE DEVELOPMENTS

Sudden Revival of Interest Here in Possibilities of Sound-Reproducing Devices; One Theater Enjoys Amazing Success With Innovations

Are talking pictures "catching on?" The phrase "talking pictures" is naturally merely a symbol, signifying films that have an accompaniment of mechanically-reproduced sound. The Vitaphone and the Movietone are the two mediums for such reproductions now on the screen. The Vitaphone was tried out some months ago here, not any too successfully or advantageously, but the Movietone has only been introduced within the past few weeks.

At one theater here both types of sound-reproducing apparatus have lately been installed with apparently remarkable results. The Movietone has been operating for a little more than a week, and is said to have increased the attendance 50 to 75 per cent. It happens, however, that the picture, "What Price Glory," on which the accompaniment is being used, is a natural big box-office attraction in itself, and is having its first popular run.

IN ANY event, this theater, the Carthay, a house of 1000 seats' capacity, has been doing an amazing business. Practically capacity for seven shows a day, and in one or two instances extra shows that ran until 2 a.m., with the doors open in the morning before 9 o'clock.

The theater is still new, and that in itself exerts a drawing power, but seemingly the musical sound effects have had an extraordinary interest as well.

This would appear to be borne out by the fact that three of the West Coast chain theaters of similar capacity are to install the Vitaphone apparatus at an early date, according to announcement. There is a fourth theater in Hollywood, the new one being built by Warner Brothers, who sponsor the making of Vitaphone films, that will, when completed, be for the innovation to provide supplementary entertain-

THE results with Movietone, which is the Fox company's own "talking-picture" device, are exceptionally interesting. Without making any actual comparison it may be said that the synchronization—the timing of the sound to the action—seems strangely good.

With this apparatus the sound is recorded on the motion-picture film itself. Particularly interesting is the news reel, with shots. The visit of the American Legion to Paris and the Notre Dame-Navy football game are covered with singular realism, and there is one picture showing a group of youngsters diving into a swimming hole that regularly evokes applause, as well as laughter, so curiously do we see their shouts of glee in the splash of the water.

WARNER BROTHERS have also demonstrated a persistent faith in the future of pictures, in spite of which criticism on all hands.

The making of short "sound acts" is a regular part of their work at the studio. These are based on vaudeville acts and generally prologue prologues generally precede the reels. Vitaphone accompaniments are also regularly being provided for their pictures.

This is beginning to do the same to a considerable extent with their releases and the Movietone. It looks as if these efforts may now have some additional stimulus from the presence of installing of the equipment in the various theaters.

In this connection is rather significant that the Vitaphone has already "made" the Jolson starring film, "The Jazz Singer," a feature entertainment. Al's singing, even more than his performance on the screen, has been the talk of the engagements of the show in the East.

THERE are many lessons to be learned in the movie show that has gone yet, and perhaps a few of the important ones will be learned right in the next year. There is a demand that is seemingly growing for a greater simplicity both in the character of the films themselves, and in their presentation as well. Certainly, it would seem as if the limit had been reached in elaborateness, and if that is the case it means a reaction.

There will always be a place for the big show when it is a big show, but the game of piling on of additional entertainment to try to save the day for a picture that is weak in itself is a poor expedient, and likely soon to run its course. Movies in their exhibition have invaded the vaudeville field to an enormous and in many ways a very detracting extent, as far as the films themselves are concerned.

I note that the new United Artists Theater is not incorporating prologues in its scheme of entertainment. The picture is to be the thing, with a good musical accompaniment. Several other theaters that show the better type of pictures are also eliminating the prologue. I am not attempting to say that prologues and stage specialties will go out of vogue, or that some mechanical device is going to take their place, but there are certain signs of the advancement of the theater that makes a feature of a simpler form of entertainment generally consisting of pictures and music alone.

Classics Not as Popular, Director Says

Classical literature is not being read as extensively as in the past, but for any neglect that it has suffered due to modern living, motion pictures have offset the difference, in the belief of Paul Leni, director, who is now wielding the megaphone on "The Man Who Laughs," a picturization of Victor Hugo's well-known story, "L'Homme qui Rit."

"Every grown person will recall the time when it was rather embarrassing not to have read one or more novels or stories of the famous literary masters," says Leni, "when the occasion arose to converse on these topics. Everyone was supposed to know something about Shakespeare's heroes and heroines, the plays of Beaumont and Fletcher, Dryden, Greek tragedies and so on.

"Students of the past were supposed to spend a great deal of their leisure time reading the classics, but the inroads of modern living conditions have made this practice nowadays virtually impossible," Leni continues.

It took the motion pictures "to come to the rescue," the director points out, and thus the public is now conversant with the world's greatest literature of the past not only through the silent dramas, but through newspaper and magazine criticism of these pictures and various news stories relating to activities in the literary departments of the various studios.

Strange Guests Help Observe Her Birthday

Twelve guests whom she had never seen before and whom she may never see again yesterday helped Dorothy Cumming, character actress of the films, celebrate her birthday at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

By a coincidence Miss Cumming was required to stage a birthday party before the camera, in the making of "The Divine Woman," on her real birthday. The guests were extra players and people of the French character type who make their living as professional "bit" men and women.

Throughout the entire day Miss Cumming presided as hostess at a circular banquet table. Real food was served, but two drawbacks developed to mar the festivities of a real birthday dinner. The guests were not permitted to eat except when the cameras were recording the scene and all of them had to partake of a full course dinner six different times until the scene was completed. That meant six full dinners, five of them on a full stomach.

Miss Cumming is playing the role of Rosine in "The Divine Woman," Greta Garbo's new M.-G.-M. starring vehicle. Lars Hanson has the featured male role and the supporting cast includes Polly Moran, Lowell Sherman, Johnny Mack Brown and others. The picture is a filmization of Gladys Unger's "Starlight," in which Doris Kean was starred on the speaking stage.

MULLIGAN AND GARRITY ARE TO BE THERE, TOO

The blundering, bewildered detectives of that corking mystery drama, "The Gorilla," are present in the screen version of the play which opens at the Million Dollar Theater on Thursday. And so are the other members of that play of thrills and chills which was written by Ralph Spence as a travesty upon all the mystery plays ever penned and which turned out to be among the most successful of all of them. Below are sketches from scenes in the picture by Staff Artist A. L. Ewing.

SPENCE TO CONCOCT MORE PLAYS

Dean of Title Writers Plans for Successors to 'Gorilla;' is ex-Newspaper Man

Ralph Spence is a clean-cut, black-haired, alert young man with a Texas drawl which is not a drawl. He has a curiously pleasant, soft way of clipping his words and sentences off distinctly.

He is just 36 years of age, and his annual income from motion pictures approximates $175,000. (That's money paid for services, not interest on investment.)

Spence is not an actor, nor a producer, nor a director, nor a financial expert. He's a writing man.

He's the chap who does those neat little sentences known as subtitles which are flashed on the screen during the showing of a film and serve to explain its action.

Spence titles on a picture cost a producer anywhere from $7500 to $15,000. It takes Ralph Spence from five hours to two weeks to write a set for a picture. But the

VICTOR HUGO NOVEL ON SCREEN PICTURING INCIDENTS OF 1830

"Cosette, run down to the spring and fetch a pail of water," ordered Mme. Thernardier.

That was in 1830, the period of Victor Hugo's novel "Les Miserables," which in a new motion-picture production, is at the Criterion Theater. Almost a century has passed away since the cruel Mme. Thernardier compelled the frail child to do a man's work in Hugo's story. The old town of Montfermiel is about the same as it was then. Most of the houses are still without plumbing. If they want water they have to go out and get it.

The aspect of the town had changed so little in the past century that the film company known as Cineromans of Paris was able to use the exact location indicated by Victor Hugo in his novel. The town council granted the motion-picture makers permission to remove the few visible objects which betrayed the twentieth century. These were supplanted by antiques. With painstaking care, it is said, the minutest details were gone over and the streets gradually transformed until they appeared exactly as they did in 1830. The French film people had plenty of time. They were thorough if they were anything.

A striking example of the unchang-

THRILLING CANOE RACE IS FILMED

Dramatic Episode of "Rose Marie" is Shot at Lake Las Turas

The shrill call of the bugle sounded out over the placid waters of the lovely and miniature Lake Las Turas, forty-odd miles from Los Angeles by way of the Ventura Boulevard.

By prearranged signal, round the point came a fleet of furiously paddled canoes, manned by eager-faced if unshaven, fur-capped and mackinawed individuals, fur traders of the Canadian Northwest, racing to be first arrivals at the landing place of the trading post, now but a few hundred yards distant.

The famous canoe race, one of the most picturesque and colorful incidents of "Rose Marie," being made by Edmund Goulding for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from the musical play of the same name, was on.

Joan Crawford, her head topped by an exotic wig of fiery, copperish red hair, wearing a fresh blue blouse, its tails out at the waist, old brown skirt and moccasins, came racing through high grass, over stones and stumps; Polly Moran, a painted woman of voluminous silks and satins was stumbling to the leeward; Gertrude Astor, also well rouged and mascarared, adorned with the sym-

BOYD IS INCURABLE FILM FAN

He Even Goes to See His Own Pictures and Laughs at Them

BY ALMA WHITAKER

I am afraid William Boyd knows he is a star now. One gets used to it after two years, even if there were six years of unappreciated genius before that.

But . . . well, William was asleep when I kept my date for an interview—and appeared, rubbing his eyes, and wearing a very negligee dressing gown, with sockless legs . . . Before they are stars they sit waiting in their best clothes for an interview. But he had combed his pretty gray hair, that has been gray since he was 19, and looks blond in pictures. And although the negro man-servant, who didn't want to let me in to disturb the master, brought him a cup of strong black coffee, he was soon wide awake enough not to need it.

You see, I insisted upon being told the story of "Dress Parade," the West Point picture to be shown at the Boulevard Theater this week. So William woke up, remembering what a cocky swell-headed fresh young man he was in that—before things happened to transform him into a nice bero who saves his enemy, carries the American flag and weds the girl who once snubbed him—the same being Bessie Love.

"I'm not telling it well," said William, "but really, it's a sweet picture. I mean I like it next best after 'The Volga Boatman' and 'Two Arabian Knights.' There is a corking good fight in it . . ."

Now a corking good fight in a picture means plenty of scope for masculine negligee which Bill, being 30 and, therefore, at the age when the world was made for gentlemen, can afford to reveal.

I discovered that Bill is an incurable picture fan, adores them. When he was telling about his sufferings cooped up on a train on a side-track amongst the coal sheds in Utah for a month, on the last picture, a railroad story, "The Yellow Mail," he said ". . . and think of it, no pictures shows or anything."

He recently went to see himself in "Two Arabian Knights" again, and laughed his head off. "Pon my word, its one of the funniest pictures I ever saw," he says, for all the world as though he had nothing to do with it.

Bill says he isn't an actor—but just himself. And one of the things he offers as evidence of Cecil de Mille's directorial greatness is that his favorite remark is," I am not here to teach you how to act, but only to tell you what not to do." Bill says he has studied Cecil De Mille so ardently that he can get all his thoughts by telepathy.

Presently Elinor Fair came in and I asked her whether he was a good husband. She gave him a very good character. It will be remembered that they married about two years ago, when about eight other couples did it too. The cynical studio people gave them six months . . . but they are the only one of the eight still successfully married. After Elinor went out, Bill confided that he loved his wife better than ever—and it's jolly getting used to the new house that begins to feel like a real home, and he can find things without wandering around. Both he and Elinor are nice, tidy, orderly souls and always put things back in their places.

Bill used to be a country boy, Oklahoma and Arizona. In those days he worked hard to make money to get into the big city. And now . . .

"Ten years from now I expect to have made enough money to buy a big ranch and go back to live in the country," he grinned. Bill is enjoying his prosperity—it didn't come too easily—six years of near starvation first.

One of his pictures, "Steel Preferred," proved such a success, that they are going back to steel in the next, "The Skyscraper."

POLLARD FILM IS PREMIERED

Moderate Run Predicted for "Uncle Tom"

Mary Pickford Acclaimed for New Picture

Critics Call It Masterpiece of Kind

BY NORBERT LUSK

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Because of the absence of sunarcs and ballyhoo, the opening of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the Central Theater last Friday night was a pleasure instead of a strenuous ordeal. It is earnestly hoped by those who attend all openings that other companies will pattern after the progressiveness of Universal.

The picture received surprisingly good reviews in view of the fact that it is not a critic's picture, to put the case in the gentlest terms. The interpretation given it by Harry Pollard is good but in no sense fine and it is doubtful if the picture will be tolerated in the South despite the fact that a subtitle says that Simon Legree, the most brutal villain ever shown on the screen, is a northerner.

SHE CROSSES ICE

The high lights of the film are, of course, Eliza crossing the ice which has been admirably directed and photographed and which evoked a round of sincere applause and the sequence wherein she is separated from her child.

Topsy's scene following the death of Eva, though prolonged by interminable close-ups, also evoked the emotional reaction expected of it but for the rest of it "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is singularly devoid of grip and pull.

Excellent casting is greatly in its favor. "Uncle Tom" is due for a moderate run on Broadway in the opinion of those in the trade, but it will require considerable plugging on the road to put it over in a big way.

Mary Pickford in "My Best Girl" is at the Rialto where it is shown continuously. It is considered one of her best pictures, though the star is regarded by the critics as an institution whose product conforms strictly to specifications. Be that as it may, Miss Pickford has produced a picture with such care and showmanship that it is a masterpiece of its kind.

A FINE PERFORMANCE

Her performance is a marvel of simplicity, sincerity and sheer beauty. There are those of us who consider Mary Pickford as close to real genius as the screen has ever disclosed, even though the word is commonly used as a synonym for mere capability. The long scene in which she tries to disillusion Charles Rogers and Hobart Bosworth is dazzling in its technical display, and emotionally, its play of laughter and tears had the audience in a state of restrained hysterics such as rarely is caused by the much touted big specials.

Charles Rogers does his best work in this and at all times is a perfect foil for Miss Pickford. In its entirety the cast is perfect but naturally must take second place beside such heights of perfection as the star reaches.

Richard Dix in "Shanghai Bound" has fared well at the Paramount, where he is always assured of a warm reception by the audience. His popularity with the critics is equally a sure bet.

TITLES ARE PUNGENT

"Pajamas" at the Roxy, has elicited little enthusiasm except on the strength of the locations but the majority have found it mildly diverting and the more shrewd judges have realized the aid given the picture by the pungent titles of Malcolm Stuart Boylan.

"The College Widow" at the Strand, has likewise fared tepidly though the presence of William Collier, Jr., and Dolores Costello in the same picture

HE CALLS IT "NEW MUSIC"

Borrah Minevitch, Harmonica Player Extraordinary, Tells of Plans for Symphony

Borrah Minevitch doesn't know which has affected him more—the tremendous ovation accorded him and his harmonica boys in the prologue to "The Gaucho," at Grauman's Chinese Theater, or the way his name has been consistently misspelled by almost every one, including the publishers of the program. That something has affected him, however, he is certain.

"Maybe it's your climate," he says: "I love it."

This is Borrah's first trip to the Coast. Three and a half years ago he was a student at the College of the City of New York. His interest was confined mostly to the violin, which he played rather well. Assigned a thesis to write, he chose—for a reason which quite escapes him now—the harmonica, a humble instrument. He had never played one, but he went into the subject exhaustively and for all he was worth. The class before which he read his thesis liked it so much that Minevitch took it to Carl Fischer, the music publisher, and Fischer liked it so much that he published it.

The book established a reputation (with another treating of the ukulele issued at about the same time) as one of the most authoritative texts on a musical instrument in recent years.

Drawn intuitively to the footlights, Borrah took up the harmonica in a serious way. He went into the New Amsterdam Theater, where "Sunny" was running, when Cliff Edwards left the cast. When the play closed he considered the time ripe for the development of a scheme which had long interested him. It was, in short, to bring out the music in boys through the humble harmonica.

The eastern newspapers aided him in his search. Of his boys he demanded honesty, a love of music—primitive intuition, he calls it—and unspoiled charm. Borrah visited the parents of each boy, looked into his life, and—chose carefully.

"They've got to toe the mark," he said. He was changing from the baggy plaid suit he wears in the prologue to his street clothes as he talked, when into his dressing room trooped four of the boys. Two carried harmonicas, the third a ukulele

CINEMATIC FARE

"Where to go" should offer no problem to theatergoers this week with six new motion-pictures at the various houses.

Showing at the Metropolitan is "Jesse James," screen version of the life of the famous outlaw. Fred Thompson is seen in the title role.

At Loew's State is a little bit of Scotland in the form of the drama, "Ladies from Hell," with Lillian Gish and Norman Kerry. The film was produced under the direction of John Robertson.

A lighter vein is reached in the film fare offered at the Boulevard. The picture tells a story of college life and was filmed almost exclusively at West Point. The title is "Dress Parade" and William Boyd shares honors with Bessie Love in the starring roles.

Opening Thursday night as the new attraction at the Million Dollar Theater is "The Gorilla," screen version of the well-known mystery play. Charley Murray is seen in an important role.

Other new films are "One Woman To Another," with Florence Vidor at the Broadway Palace, and "The Coward," opening tomorrow at the Forum.

Hold-over and second-runs include "The Loves of Carmen," Carthay Circle; "The Gaucho," Chinese; "Les Miserables," Criterion; "Body and Soul," Rialto, and "What Price Glory," Tower.

"Dress Parade," a Pathe-De Mille special, starring William Boyd, is the screen attraction at the Boulevard, where Abe Lyman and his Brunswick Orchestra remain a popular stage feature. The picture, directed by Donald Crisp, was made almost in its entirety at West Point. The cast includes Bessie Love, Hugh Allen and Louis Natheaux. The story is of a campus romance of two cadets and a girl.

—o—

Carthay Circle

"The Loves of Carmen," with Dolores Del Rio in the title role, is in the last few weeks of its engagement at the Carthay Circle. Co-starring with Miss Del Rio in the production are Victor McLaglen as Escamillo and Don Alvarado as Don Jose.

Following "Carmen" at the Circle will be the Murnau production "Sunrise," with Janet Gaynor and George O'Brien in the leading roles.

—o—

Chinese

"The Gaucho," Douglas Fairbanks's new starring vehicle, is now well launched at the new Chinese Theater. The story has as its locale the plains of South America, and Fairbanks is seen in the role of a devil-may care Gaucho, leader of a band of outlaws. Lupe Velez and Eve Southern appear in the feminine roles.

An elaborate stage offering, "Argentine Nights" precedes the screen feature.

—o—

Criterion

"Les Miserables," the French screen version of the famous Victor Hugo novel, is now in the second week of showing at the Criterion Theater. Many foreign stars appear in the cast.

Forum

"The Coward," starring Warner Baxter, is the feature screen attraction offered beginning tomorrow at the Forum Theater. "The Coward" is based on the story by Arthur Stringer and was adapted for the screen by Edfrid Bingham and Enid Hibbard. Sharon Lynn appears in the leading feminine role.

On the stage will be the usual five acts of Pantages vaudeville.

—o—

Loew's State

"Ladies from Hell" is the title of the picture now showing at Loew's State Theater. Norman Kerry and Lillian Gish play the principal roles. Other members of the cast include Hobart Bosworth, Creighton Hale, David Torrance, Russell Simpson, Patricia Avery and Joseph Striker. The film tells a romantic story of the eighteenth century.

—o—

Million Dollar

Opening next Thursday at the Million Dollar Theater is the screen version of the mystery drama, "The Gorilla," with Charley Murray. The production is said to have lost none of its original thrills through adaptation to the screen, and the laughs are reported as being long and often.

Alice Day appears in the featured feminine role.

—o—

Metropolitan

"Jesse James," a story of America's most picturesque outlaw, is the attraction at the Metropolitan Theater this week. With it the stage offering is Rube Wolf in Panchon and Marco's "Follyettes," featuring Neil Kelly and Hoey and Walker. The picture, "Jesse James," is said to be an authentic record of this character. Fred Thomson is seen in the title role. Others in the cast are Nora Lane, Montagu Love, Mary Carr, James Pierce, Harry Woods and William Courtwright.

—o—

Rialto

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production, "Body and Soul," adapted from Katherine Newlin Burt's novel, "The Branding Iron," is now playing at the Rialto. Aileen Pringle is featured with Norman Kerry and Lionel Barrymore. T. Roy Barnes is also seen.

—o—

Tower

"What Price Glory," the war epic directed by Raoul Walsh, is playing in its second week with Movietone at the Tower Theater. It is symphonized with an orchestra of 110 pieces in harmony with the picture. The current Movietone newsreel at the Tower is a screen magazine of three subjects opening with the roar of Niagara Falls, the development of the railroad locomotive and the recent Yale-Army game.

JAMES HAS FIRM DEFENDER

James was a hoodlum, a killer of the most ruthless sort," explains Thomson. "This is not borne out in a study of history, or in talking with people who most intimately knew of the man.

"Naturally in filming the story we put in episodes to build up the dramatic structure, but never once did we violate the real character of James. We left out many instances of his kindness merely because we knew they would not be believed. Legends often become very strong, and sometimes people prefer to believe them rather than actually."

Thomson compares the criticisms made of "Jesse James" to the universally acclaimed, "Abraham Lincoln." Not long ago the latter film was entered into the vaults of the Smithsonian Institution as a valuable document in American history. Thomson himself did most of the research for this picture.

HISTORICAL FLAWS

"Abraham Lincoln" fit the legend surrounding the great Emancipator and hence it was accepted. Yet there were any numbers of historical flaws which went undetected. For instance, for the sake of drama, Ann Rutledge died in Lincoln's arms. In reality Lincoln was miles away and did not learn of her death until days later. Again there is a scene of a regiment marching down Pennsylvania avenue in Washington with Lincoln watching from the steps of the White House. In the '40's a government building had been erected which completely obscured the avenue from this section of the Presidential mansion.

Criticism from certain quarters has been directed toward Thomson for making a picture glorifying a bandit.

"Jesse James did a great deal of good in those lawless days after the war," he explained. "Particularly did he fight the grasping carpet baggers who poured into Kansas and Missouri. I believe if Lincoln had lived these things would never have come to pass. If Lincoln had lived it is unbelievable that James would have resorted to outlawry.

STIGMA REMOVED

"The stigma attached to the James family has been removed for a number of years now. Roosevelt received a member of the James family in the White House, and neighbors cherish his memory."

Thomson is a member in good standing of the Hollywood intelligentzia, although he probably would not relish the classification.

However, he is a graduate of Occidental College here in town and of Princeton University. Two collegiate sheepskins are not found in every near-Spanish hacienda in Hollywood.

The story of Fred Thomson's entrance into the films is an interesting one. It was while he was chaplain of the Forty-second Division at Camp Kearny—Fred was a theology student at Princeton, that he met Mary Pickford and Frances Marion, now Mrs. Fred Thomson. He was in a hospital recovering from a broken leg acquired in an army football game when Mary Pickford and her friend came to call. He met Miss Marion in Europe a short time later and they were married. On the return from the war Miss Pickford persuaded him to play the lead in one of her pictures.

PASADENA BOY

Thomson is a Pasadena boy. His father's house stood directly across from the Raymond Hill. He was one of Occidental's greatest athletes, and a star pupil as well. He graduated from college at twenty. For three years he held the world's championship as an all-around athlete. His brother, Harrison Thomson, now a professor at Princeton, also had this same distinction for three years.

Today Thomson still maintains the old rigorous active life. Being a cowboy star means continual training, although Fred admits he never "punched" other than a movie cow in his life. His weight is exactly what it was when he made Yale and Harvard look to their laurels during his Princeton days.

Role Strikes Resonant Note

Again Lucille La Verne has struck a resonant note with her characterisation of "Salt Chunk Mary" now in its sixth week at the Egan Theater.

Miss La Verne, who made a decided hit in the role of the Widow Cagle in "Sun-Up" and who is recognized today in Los Angeles as an artist of great ability, enacts a difficult role with power.

"Salt Chunk Mary" is a slice of life little known hereabouts but nevertheless true to a certain phase of life. As in "Sun-Up" Miss La Verne in the character of the queen of the underworld in Pocatello, Idaho, defied the law always and broke it when possible.

The story is taken from Jack Black's book "You Can't Win" and made into play form by Bessie Beatty. It stands today as one of the best crook plays that has visited hereabouts in many a day.

COMPLETES LEAD ROLE

Madge Bellamy, Fox Films player, has completed the leading feminine role in "Silk Legs." James Hall has the masculine lead.

Screen Writer Also Rancher

Raymond Cannon, who has been responsible for many of the screen's outstanding comedy scripts since he gave up grease paint for the typewriter, has chosen ranching as an avocation and is personally overseeing the planting of a ten-acre orchard at his home in the Burbank hills.

Cannon is now collaborating with Edward Bingham on "Devil May Care," a new Clara Bow story for Paramount.

ANOTHER FOR FOX

Victor Heerman will direct another picture for Fox, following highly favorable reports on his first "Ladies Must Dress." Heerman is now looking a suitable story for his next vehicle.

TITLING FOR FOX

Malcolm Stuart Boylan is now engaged in titling for Fox "The Wizard," which is the new name of the production formerly called "Balaoo." It is a Richard Rosson production.

Beery Termed Bold, Bad Man

The bold bad man of the movies! That is the title Noah Beery has acquired in his many years of screen villainy.

From despicable pirates to highwaymen he has trudged the high seas and high roads of villainy. Many of his confreres have brought vicious characterizations to the screen, but in number Noah Beery outrivals them all when it comes to deep-dyed villain roles.

At present he is doing some of his highest type of "bad-man" stuff in support of Vilma Banky and Ronald Colman. Recently he played a heavy part in "The Dove" and prior to that in "Beau Sabreur" and "Louisiana."

"BLOSSOM TIME" OPENS TUESDAY

...etta of Schubert Life at Biltmore

...ic Master Immortalized in Drama

...hen Alive, Songs Sold for Paltry Sums

Present-day life is more encouraging to artistic aspirants than it used to be. Instead of romantically starving to death, poets deliver their manuscripts nowadays to huge newspaper syndicates and receive large checks in return.

Men who paint pictures purchase villas on the French or Italian Riviera and "run over" to America occasionally to sell their works to millionaires. Even the novelists are able to eat regularly in these times, selling magazine rights, movie rights and book rights all at one fell swoop. They live in Spanish bungalows down Pasadena way or in California.

Today the world honors Franz Schubert as one of the immortals of music, and "Blossom Time" scored Sigmund Romberg from Schubert's stirring songs and other masterpieces has earned vast sums for its producers, the Messrs. Schubert, and has put Dorothy Donnelly, the librettist, as well as Romberg, the musical adaptor well up to, if not safely into the millionaire group.

But in his brief genius-driven lifetime poor Franz went hungry oftener than not. Indeed, his final illness was brought on by a too-protracted period of involuntary fasting. One wonders just what would be the reflections of Franz Schubert today, if he were permitted a glance across from the Elysian Fields into what's doing in Tin Pan Alley.

COMPARISON RIDICULOUS

It would be as ridiculous as impossible to compare the least of the works of Franz Schubert to any that emanate from the music presses today. Yet, the up-to-date song writer who can give the present-day public what it wants can receive in return checks for hundreds and oftentimes thousands of dollars, where poor Franz was rewarded with a few pieces of silver.

One of the modern geniuses of the ages wrote a jingle one night while riding on a railway train going from New York to Patchogue, L. I., his home, and made him over $50,000. Several members of "the old guard" in Tin Pan Alley have done the same thing and once in a while met even larger returns. But the bright young men of this late day have made nearly $250,000 out of the single opus entitled "Yes, We Have No Bananas." Against this, remember that Franz Schubert, who composed immortal melodies, received on an average of from 10 to 20 cents apiece for his songs.

WENT CHEAPLY

Even the famous quintet (Opus 144) which has delighted the world for nearly a hundred years, he received exactly $6.25. His much-played trio (Opus 100) brought him $4.37. At the composer's death several of his masterpieces were lumped together in the official inventory at $2.12 and among these the name of the scripts later rescued and given to the world by Sir Arthur Sullivan and Sir William Grove, who made the journey to Vienna for the special purpose of finding, if possible, some of the lost works of the great composer. In 1828, shortly after Schubert's death, six songs from "Winter-Rise" were sold for ...

The world which was cold to the ... efforts and permitted the sensitive Schubert to endure privations that resulted in his death at the age of 31, now kowtows to the memories of jangling jazz, and ... every line of musical script ... keyboards of the keyboard.

POPULARIZED COMPOSER

"Blossom Time," the charming operetta, has at length popularized Franz Schubert and raised him up among the commercially elect. This opera is said to have earned somewhere over $3,000,000 up to the present time and it is still going strong. But its story, the story of Franz Schubert's life, and its music taken largely from the works of the master, is one thing about "Blossom Time" that in this jazz-torn epoch has brought the wonderful music of Schubert melody to hundreds of thousands of persons who otherwise would not have heard it.

"Blossom Time" will begin a limited "farewell" engagement at the Majestic Theater Tuesday evening.

JOHN CHARLES GILBERT AS "FRANZ SCHUBERT AND GENEVIEVE NAEGELE AS "MITZI."

Dash of Variety to Stage Menu

The new play at the Vine Street is a Jewish comedy, "Relations," by Edward Clark and opening tomorrow. To the Biltmore on Tuesday evening comes the favored musical attraction, "Blossomtime," based on the life of Franz Shubert, while at the El Capitan, opening tomorrow, is the John Golden hit, "Pigs." Above are sketches of the various cast principals as made by Staff Artist Bruce Russell.

NEW PLAY COMES TO BELASCO

"Laugh, Clown, Laugh," With Lionel Barrymore, Arrives in Two Weeks

With "Laugh, Clown, Laugh" as his starring vehicle, Lionel Barrymore returns to the Los Angeles stage in two weeks after an absence of two years.

His characterization of Tito in this David Belasco-Tom Cushing drama in New York, where he played for an entire season, was acclaimed one of the best of his career. The play's premiere will be at the Belasco Theater on Monday night, the 28th inst.

The name Barrymore is probably the best known in the annals of the American stage. Lionel is the eldest of three children of Maurice Barrymore, a celebrity of the American stage, who played in the first American production of Becky Sharp and other notable dramas.

John and Ethel, Lionel's brother and sister, have, like him, risen to the dramatic heights. The late John Drew, called the dean of American actors, was an uncle of the Barrymore children.

Supporting Lionel will be Edward Leiter, now appearing in "The Devil's Plum Tree;" Lolita Lee, Harry T. Shannon, Kitty Barlow, Hardee Kirkland, Bruce Payne and others.

LAUGH, LESSON IN GAY FARCE

Actors in Majestic Play Discuss Moral of It All for Married Folk

"Naughty husbands and neglected wives will get a laugh and a lesson out of 'Cradle Snatchers,'" says Helen Bolton, star of that gay farce now at the Majestic Theater presented by P. E. Blackwell with almost entirely the original cast.

"Which covers a large percentage of the married population of Los Angeles," remarks Billy Eugene, another cast member.

"If you have a husband who pretends to go duck-hunting and then breaks all game and marital laws by spurning the ducks and going after young chickens—use cradle-snatching tactics," he says. "It is the latest indoor sport for lonesome wives. Instead of a cradle they pick their victims from some college campus, provide moonlight and music as a result—give their husbands something to think about."

Miss Bolton, Florence Auer and Grace Travers of the original cast are the gay matrons who go in for rejuvenation. William Eugene, Norman Peck, and James C. Eagle, are the kind-hearted college boys, and Henry Hall, Charles Coleman and George Rand, the erring husbands.

AS SOLOMON LEVY

Jean Hersholt, who was born in Copenhagen, Denmark, has been cast as Solomon Levy in Paramount's production of Anne Nichols's "Abie's Irish Rose." Hersholt plays the father of Charles Rogers, who is to essay the role of Abie. The story is built around the love of Abie Levy and Rosemary Murphy and the differences between their deeply religious parents.

NEW YORK VISIT CONVINCES DIRECTOR OF GOOD WORK HERE

Two and one-half weeks in New York during which he saw twenty-four plays and one motion-picture brought A. Leslie Pearce, stage director at the Hollywood Playhouse, home with the firm convictions that:

Los Angeles dramatic productions are equally as good, if not superior to those of Broadway in every respect except quality of cast.

Mountings, sets, costumes of local shows approach a much higher standard of quality than those of New York. They seem fresher, they indicate a greater outlay of expenditure and taste.

The so-called sex play, instead of declining in popularity, is to be found in New York in greater numbers than ever before, and playwrights and producers hitherto noted for clean dramas, are drawing upon the sex theme to lend spice to their new plays, and finally:

Los Angeles needs more good actors and actresses.

Besides these apparently deeply rooted convictions, Pearce brought home a briefcase full of new plays, manuscripts of productions which he witnessed during his stay and which he likes well enough to recommend to the board of directors of the Playhouse for use here.

STRIDE MADE

"I've been in Los Angeles three and one-half years, the longest period we spent in any city, and I presume I have developed some local pride, but truly I was amazed to realize by comparison with New York what strides have been made in local play production," said Pearce.

"There is no question but what the first-class productions of Los Angeles are on a plane with those of New York, which has ranked as the theatrical center of America. Our mountings, as a general thing, excepting those of such as Flo Ziegfeld's showings, are infinitely superior, more tasteful. I am thoroughly convinced, however, that we need actors and actresses of ability before we can turn out really fine plays. We have a handful of good people, to be sure, and many mediocre or willing and inexperienced folk, but we have not as yet the plentiful number of individuals of fine histrionic ability such as grace New York.

"The sex play on a decline? No, indeed. In my opinion, there are more than ever before and some of them are more forthright in their presentation of the sex theme. However, in order to avoid criticism leveled last season, producers have 'dressed up' their plays with foreign settings and with colorful costumes. They work on the assumption that situations which would be considered shocking if enacted in an American setting, are merely glamorous and remote when taking place in a fascinating foreign center, surrounded by a web of diplomatic intrigue. In reality it's the same old sex stuff, just dressed up in fancy ball costume.

"John Golden who has borne a reputation for years as a writer and producer of nothing but clean plays, falls outside that category, in my estimation with his new drama, 'Four Walls.' Even 'Saturday's Children,' a splendid thing, a delightful play, has been spiced with a small amount of sex.

BEST PLAY

The best play on the New York boards at the present moment and probably the best of any which may yet come forth this season is "Burlesque," Arthur Hopkins production at the Playmouth Theater, in Pearce's opinion.

"There are more tears behind the laughs in that show than anything I've seen, and I've seen many," he said. "The story is of a red-nosed comic who has his first chance to appear on Broadway. It's at once screamingly funny yet endowed with heart-breaking pathos. I wish it were the type of thing to be done at the Playhouse, but unfortunately it is not."

"Revelry," in which is seen Berton Churchill of "Alias the Deacon" reputation in Los Angeles, was a poor sort of thing, he said, and—

"Although Churchill played the role of the president, his role was not a large one. However, what a great part that actor made it! He lifted it with his personality into what was to me, the only impressive thing about the entire play.

If they made more of this role, the play would have been considerably stronger, I think. In its present form, it is not possible of production."

With the Pearce return from the East, rehearsals were launched and are under way now at the Playhouse for "The Second Year," a new play by Fred Kennedy Myton.

At the conclusion of its run, there should be announcement from the board of directors as to their reaction to the Pearce findings with regard to New York plays.

MURNAU AT FOX LOT

F. W. Murnau, German director of "Sunrise," is again settled in his bungalow at Fox Films west coast studios. He is making active preparations for his next Fox production, "The Four Devils," adapted from a novel by Herman Bang, Danish author.

JED HARRIS YOUNG BUT SUCCESSFUL

Producer of 'Broadway' is Twenty-seven; Has Been Writer, Hobo

Jed Harris is the infant prodigy among producers. In his twenty-sixth year he introduced "Broadway" to Broadway and London. Now in his twenty-seventh year, with the New York and London companies still running to capacity houses, he has companies of the play in the highways and byways of the northern continent, in Australia, provincial England and translated versions in Berlin and Vienna.

"Broadway" was Harris's fourth producing venture in New York. His fifth was "Spread Eagle" and the sixth is "Coquette" and in the near offing is "The Royal Family."

Harris was educated in Newark, N. J., and in his early years, his 'teens, he conducted an orchestra in a Jersey resort, wrote stories in the manner of James Huneker, read widely and then went to Yale. The academic route bored him and he left Yale with an avowed purpose to go tramping.

TRAMPED ROAD

He went into the business of being a "hobo" with as much enthusiasm as more conventionally minded young men go in for law or bond selling. Harris speaks with longing of those days, vagrant as they were. He is full of ancedotes of adventures in Grand Rapids, Singapore, Marseilles, or what have you? While his contemporaries were studying for mid-year examinations at Yale, he was achieving the picturesque under far suns. And of his days as a tramp, Harris speaks fondly:

"I was free then," he says. "Now I have to worry about the vintage of a 'prop,' the inflection of an actress in an important scene, the caprices of the booking office. It's no life for a man."

The story of how he came to produce "Broadway" is characteristic of Harris's method of producing plays—a combination of impetuosity and clarity. He met Philip Dunning in Detroit while he, Harris, was "ahead of" a show for Richard Herndon, "Applesauce." Dunning discussed the play with Harris, then an unknown, in a hotel room. Harris had made up his mind at that time he was going to be a producer and although his only office was his hat, he invited Dunning to bring the manuscript to him in New York.

IN TWO YEARS

It was about two years later before Dunning remembered the request. In the meantime Harris had produced three plays, including "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em," which was fairly successful in New York. Dunning found the office of the erstwhile advance agent crowded with celebrities, including George Abbott. Harris began talking of "Broadway" as if he had been over the script the night before. He introduced Dunning to Abbott, and the play was in rehearsal a month later.

DIRECTOR HAS MANY PROBLEMS

Ferdinand Munier Thinks Young Actor to be Vast Responsibility

Upon the shoulders of the stage director of any dramatic production rests not only the responsibility for the performance in its finished form, but the welfare of the young actor.

So declares Ferdinand Munier, in charge of the work of the Norman Sprowl Players, now presenting "Three Wise Fools" at the Figueroa Playhouse.

"A director has an important duty in his dealings with a young and impressionable actor," said Munier. "He can either make a fine actor or a very poor one, for the pliable mind of the youngster retains first impressions the longest and if he is not started correctly he may never do anything well.

"Stage direction should not be arbitrary, however. There is never a part but what may be played better than any interpolation given it by the director. As a matter of fact, usually a good actor makes a poor director, because while the former may know just how he himself would characterize the role, he cannot work out the portrayal to suit another's personality."

Robert Homans, seen in "The Barker" last season, carries the role of the detective in "Three Wise Fools," while Charlotte Treadway, Harland Tucker, Donna Earle, J. Morris Foster, Florence Oberle and Mike Spooner are other members of the cast.

PANTAGES BILLS SIX HEADLINERS

All-Star Program Will Feature New Offering at Vaudeville House

It's an all-star program that comes to the Pantages for a one-week engagement, beginning tomorrow, and featuring, among others, Tamee Kajiyama, Japanese Caligraphist, in a demonstration of multimentalism. In conjunction with Kajiyama, Lady Moonbeam, pianist and pupil of Leschetisky, will appear in a program of popular and classic numbers.

Offering a miniature production of singing, dancing and dialogue will be the Longtin-Kenny company. Their skit is entitled "Let's Pretend."

A group of impersonations will be Al Abbott's contributions to the program. Mr. Abbott's characterizations are mostly of the small-town variety.

Muriel Dae, violinist, and the Emory Manly company conclude the stage offering.

"The High School Hero," a story of campus life, is seen as the feature screen offering. Sally Phipps, Nick Stuart, Charles Paddock and John Darrow are seen in the cast.

Shaw Play is Next Offering of Art Group

George Bernard Shaw's play, "The Great Catherine," with an amusing curtain-raiser by H. L. Mencken will comprise the next offering of the new Los Angeles Community Art Theater starting Tuesday, the 22nd inst.

Hedwig Reicher will portray Catherine, while Reginald Denny will be seen as the English officer. Henry Kolker is the director. In drawing the character of the great empress, Shaw attempted to show her not so much the dignified ruler, the expert in the arts of statecraft and diplomacy, but a woman with all feminine weaknesses and foibles humorously exaggerated.

The Community Art Theater has established headquarters in the former Ebell Clubhouse on Figueroa street.

VETERAN OF OPEN SPACES

The leading woman in "Under the Tonto Rim," Zane Grey's latest Paramount production, is a veteran of the open spaces. For several months Mary Brian rode the ranges in Texas, where her uncle, Scott W. Greene, owns one of the largest ranches in the Lone Star State. The role of Lucy Watson in this Zane Grey western story fits her perfectly, it is said.

New Musical Show Soon to Open at Mayan

BY ALMA WHITAKER

We thought we had every possible kind of girl in Los Angeles, but they couldn't find one that would do to play the chief role in "Sunny" at the Mayan—the role played by Marilynn Miller in New York.

So that is why they imported Helen Paterson from New York. She is a bright piquant brunette and her immediate sorrow is that she must bleach to a blond for this part . . . so, you see, even Helen did not completely fill the bill as she was.

But it is all right, Helen. I think it was Cecil De Mille who once said the best actresses were the "blonds with a brunette soul."

Albeit she looks so young, this Helen has had eight years of stage experience, the last four of them being with Hartley in his vaudeville sketches—a combination broken expressly to fill this engagement. Helen became Mrs. Hartley during the first week of the vaudeville partnership.

BORN IN PHILLIPINES

Helen Paterson has had a traveled varied life. Her father is a naval officer and she was born when he was stationed in the Phillipines. He was transferred to China when she was 10 days old. Then there were soujourns in Japan, San Francisco, Alaska, Boston, Galveston, Alabama—school days beginning in Boston.

When father went to the war, his family stayed in New York and Helen went to a convent, where she learned a great many nice little lady-like ways, including dancing. Before dad came home Helen had broken all the family traditions and secured herself a role with Raymond Hitchcock on tour, in "Follow the Girl." Hopped right into a good part, without any of the usual striving anguish that traditionally precedes success. Her very next part after that was in "Everything" at the New York Hippodrome, to be followed by a season with Harry Carroll, also in New York.

NEXT, SOME VAUDEVILLE

Then came the vaudeville partnership with Mr. Hartley . . . "Which was really all excellent training for musical comedy, so that I was really schooling all the time for this role of 'Sunny,' you know," says Helen, who is quite frankly delighted with her luck.

If only gentlemen did not prefer blonds her satisfaction would be complete, because, "I love it out here. Mother is coming out in January and we are going to take a house and live here."

In the meantime, Helen has been cultivating her voice as well as her toes and we shall hear how well she has progressed in several songs in "Sunny," which follows "Twinkle, Twinkle."

Helen says she is a duffer at doing anything with her hands, but there aren't many things she cannot do with her toes. She would,

What's Doing in NEW YORK

The Musical Complex About "Trilby" Taming the Shrews

BY ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—For reasons which now escape me, your correspondent went so far as to visit Newark one afternoon last week, and, in glancing idly through a program of the Shubert theater in that community, discovered that the current offering was an extravaganza entitled not unlike many another, "The Studio Girl." This, upon closer inspection, turned out to be nothing more nor less than our old friend, "Trilby," taken by the scruff of the neck and turned into a musical comedy.

If, by any chance, you are one of those for whom "Trilby" still trails into your dotage something of the glamor it had for you when it was new you may be interested to learn that some of the numbers intended as song hits in "The Studio Girl" are as follows:

"Posing," "There's No One As Sweet As Trilby," "Trilby O'Farrell's My Name," "Moonlight and Love and All," "In the Bois de Boulogne," "Because I Love You," "Way Down in Barbizon," "You Used to Be My One Love," "Somewhere," "Show Me the Way to Love."

TWO NEW ROLES

To be exact, the program gave the title of one of the above as "In the Bois de Bolognor," but, I assume, perhaps too hastily, that that was a typographical error. I noted, too, that there was one moment in Act I when little Billee, Taffy, the Laird, Zouzou, Dodor, Mortimer, Marie, Rosette, Suzanne, Annette and a chorus democratically lumped as "students" would all join in singing a comical number entitled "We Don't Like Water in the Latin Quarter." And I tried to picture the look of polite surprise on the face of the late Mr. Du Maurier on discovering that his story had acquired two characters that he had never even thought of named Sally Sloane and Personality Jones, and that in a crisis of Act II, Sally Sloane and Personality Jones would startle the Latin quarter with a ditty entitled "On the Erie Canal."

It was the sight of his beloved old "Arizona" transformed the other night into an operetta called "The Love Call" that provoked my neighbor, Percy Hammond, to a moody prophecy that he would yet live to attend a musical comedy made out of "What Price Glory." Ever since then I have been trying to picture what it will be like. It will, I suppose, be called "The Argonne Girl."

A SONG, "LEATHERNECKING"

One scene will show thirty chorus men dressed as United States marines, pausing just before going over the top, for one last dance in the captain's dugout with thirty French peasant girls clad in their usual rustic costume of light pink silk diaphanous stockings and high-heeled shoes. The song hit will, I am sure, be entitled "Leathernecking."

I suppose it is the reference to "Trilby" which brings the name Svengali to mind and a story about him which Ed Wynn told me the other day in Sixth avenue. Wilton Lackaye was hard at work twenty years ago on his own stage version of "Les Miserables." Did he think, Lackaye was asked, that he would be able to find a manager to produce it?

"My great difficulty," he replied, "will be in finding a manager to pronounce it."

Though I never was one of those who seize every opportunity to see Shakespearean performances for whatever melancholy pleasure later to be derived from enumerating in memoirs, it does seem to me, as I inspect my life in pensive retrospect, that an extraordinarily large part of it has been spent in dining hurriedly and going to the theater to see "The Taming of the Shrew."

I have, in my time, watched the unhorsing of all the latter-day Kates

Favored Actress Is Welcomed

Charlotte Treadway

The opening last evening of "Three Wise Fools" at the Los Angeles Playhouse on Figueroa street marked the appearance of Charlotte Treadway, one of the city's favored actresses, in the leading feminine role. With other Norman Sprowl players who have been gracing productions at the Mission Playhouse in San Gabriel, she is to be seen soon in Los Angeles in "The First Year," which follows the current vehicle.

BROADWAY THEATER TO OPEN SOON

New United Artists Edifice Near Completion; Pickford Film First Showing

Completion of the noble Spanish Gothic pile on Broadway, between Ninth and Tenth streets, which will be the home of the screen productions of United Artists is near at hand.

The $3,500,000 theater and office building will be, in a way, United Artists' Christmas gift to Los Angeles, world capital of the motion-picture industry.

The date of the formal opening of the new playhouse, which will be under the management of West Coast Theaters, has not been decided but it will be during the earlier half of December and already preparations are under way to make the day memorable, the night brilliant.

The picture chosen fo the opening is Mary Pickford's "My Best Girl," premiered to the accompaniment of a sixty-piece orchestra.

The small but world-famous group composing the roster of United Artist actors and actresses will be present and in addition stars and ranking players from practically all the other studios likewise will be in attendance.

The theater itself now is so well advanced in construction that all its numerous novel features and unique details of building are in place or in structural evidence.

Four factors identified with the conception, building, ownership and operation of the playhouse are blending their combined energies toward the goal of completion at the earliest possible date. These are, respectively: Walker and Eisen, architects; the Scofield Engineering and Construction Company; United Artists; and West Coast Theaters, Inc.,

The theater is to be a most beautiful one, it is said, from the splendid polyrome dome, scintillating with thousands of prismatic lights to the floor of the foyer, with its huge rug made in Europe especially for the entry-way.

There is a Gothic tower fifty feet in height surmounting the top of the building proper which will blaze with electricity. The stage is one of the largest in Los Angeles, with a depth of about thirty feet, a width of fifty.

The balcony, seats 1000 persons. The mezzanine, is a novelty in Los Angeles theater building and, from its construction, strongly reminiscent of a balcony in a Florentine palace. Purposely, and to secure an atmosphere of intimacy, the seating capacity of the mezzanine will be small—200 chairs.

Within a few days the edifice will be ready for the furnishers, and rugs, carpets, tapestries draperies all in color schemes to harmonize with the effects left by the mural decorators and also with the conception of the architects, will be installed.

Fox Purchases Scenarist's Work

"Soft Living," an original screen story by Grace Mack, fiction writer and scenarist, has been purchased by Fox for an early production.

Miss Mack has also just disposed of the film rights of her magazine story 'Homesick for Broadway" to Gotham Productions.

The writer, who is under contract to First National, came to the coast several months ago as head of that organization's story department. She was previously with First National in New York.

In the FOOTLIGHT REALM

With a group of new and interesting productions billed for opening this week, the coming theater schedule appears to be anything but a dull one.

Tomorrow night will prove especially busy for it marks the premieres of "Pigs," presented by the Henry Duffy Players at the El Capitan, and "Relations," an Irish-Jewish comedy chosen to re-open the Vine Street Theater.

Although Tuesday night has but one opening scheduled, it is an especially important one. At the Biltmore "Blossom Time," that delightful musical success based on the compositions of Franz Schubert, will begin a limited two-week engagement.

Tonight the Belmont offers its usual new play.

Saturday the Norman Sprowl Players will change their program and present the domestic comedy, "The First Year," at the Los Angeles Playhouse.

Other plays that offer diversion include "The Devil's Plum Tree," Belasco; "Salt Chunk Mary," Egan; "Three Wise Fools," Figueroa Playhouse; "Meet the Wife," Hollywood Playhouse; "Cradle Snatchers," Majestic; "Broadway," Mason; "Twinkle, Twinkle," Mayan; "The Night Cap," Morosco.

At the vaudeville houses Al Shean heads the Hillstreet, Ned Wayburn's Varieties, the Orpheum, and the Pantages bills an all-star program.

Belasco

"The Devil's Plum Tree," starring Ruth Chatterton, has entered upon its final two weeks at the Belasco Theater, and will close with the performance of the 26th inst. Lionel Barrymore, in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," the David Belasco-Tom Cushing production from the Italian of Fausto Martini, in which Barrymore played a year in New York, will have a premiere Monday night, the 28th inst., with a cast of notable players.

Biltmore

"Blossom Time," one of the most popular musical productions ever staged, opens Tuesday night for a limited engagement at the Biltmore Theater. With its score taken almost entirely from the compositions of Franz Schubert, the musical show is said to be an unusually lovely one.

During the run matinees will be given Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Egan

"Salt Chunk Mary," with Lucille La Verne in the title role, continues at the Egan Theater. The story, adapted from the book, "You Can't Win," by Jack Black, has its setting in Pocatello, Idaho, and deals with the lives of the country's crooks, who find refuge in the saloon owned by "Salt Chunk Mary." The story was adapted for the stage by Bessie Beattie.

El Capitan

"Pigs," another of the domestic comedies that Henry Duffy has made popular at the El Capitan Theater opens at the Hollywood house tomorrow night. Duffy players appear in the cast.

Figueroa Playhouse

"Three Wise Fools" is the current attraction offered by the Norman Sprowl Players at the Figueroa Playhouse. The cast is headed by Charlotte Treadway and Harland Tucker, and the production is to be given a one-week showing. Following it will come the domestic comedy, "The First Year."

Hollywood Playhouse

At Hollywood Playhouse is "Meet the Wife," a comedy of the domestic tangles.

Frances Underwood is featured, with Phil Tead, Landers Stevens, Thomas R. Mills, Jean Mann, Allen Davis, Burdell Jacobs and Pauline Pollock also appear.

Majestic

"Cradle Snatchers" now is in its second week of a "revival" run at the Majestic Theater. The play is scheduled for a limited engagement and the cast, including Helen Bolton, is made up almost entirely of the original cast players.

Mason

"Broadway," drama of the New York night clubs and cabarets, is still proving popular at the Mason Theater. The play, which is one of the outstanding New York successes, is repeating its triumphs all over the country. An excellent cast appears in the Los Angeles presentation.

Mayan

"Twinkle, Twinkle," starring Joe E. Brown and Nancy Welford, will tonight enter its final week at the Mayan Theater, closing with the midnight performance on Saturday. "Sunny," which broke all long-run records in New York for musical productions with its two-year engagement, will open Tuesday night with Helen Patterson in the name role. The cast includes Ernest Wood, William Valentine, Peggy Hope, Joe Donahue, Nita Martan, Fred C. Holmes, Lillian Mines, Morgan Williams, Wendell Marshall, Gary C. Breckner, Carter Sexton and others. The chorus numbers seventy-five.

Morosco

"The Night Cap," mystery drama by Max Marcin and Guy Bolton, continues to thrill and mystify patrons of the Morosco Theater, where it is now entering the third week of its showing. Kay Hammond and John Litel appear in the principal roles, while other Morosco favorites make up the balance of the cast.

Hillstreet

Al Shean of the team of Gallagher and Shean will head the Hillstreet bill Sunday in a new skit by William K. Wells, entitled "Business is Business," in which he is assisted by Lynn Canter.

Brown and Whitaker are featured in "A Laugh or Two," by Al Boasberg. Harry Waiman and his debutantes offer a musical skit. Marie Vero, vocalist, is featured in a repertoire of popular and classic songs. "A Petite Revue," featuring Carrie and Eddye, Webster Taylor, Harriet Cole and Gloria Lee, and Eileen and Marjorie in an acrobatic novelty completes the bill.

The screen features Anita Loos's story of the stage entitled "Stranded" with a cast including Shirley Mason and William Collier, Jr., Pathe Newsreel, a comedy and Fables conclude.

Orpheum

Ned Wayburn's variety show, an array of unusual talent against a background of special settings, music and a dozen or so of Ned Wayburn proteges, will be the headline attraction at the Orpheum starting today. Miss Isa Kramer, the interpreter of ballads and folk-songs, will remain for a second week offering an entirely new program. Another offering will be Nelson B. Clifford and Marie Marion in an affair entitled "Just Dumb." Al and Fanny Stedman in "Pianocapers," the Four Ortons, Fred Hughes, the Welsh tenor, Mary Horan in "The Cameo Revue" and Charles Irwin all appear in Ned Wayburn's variety show as well as presenting their own offerings. Irwin, who is a Broadway comedian, also acts as master of ceremonies. Another feature of the Wayburn offering will be Ned Wayburn's minstrel misses which will be presented by a company of fifteen people.

Pantages

On the bill beginning tomorrow at the Pantages Theater, another all-headline bill is offered. Among the acts is that of Tameo Kajiyama, Japanese Caligraphist, in a demonstration of mental feats.

Others include Longtin-Kenny company in "Let's Pretend," Al Abbott in impersonations of small-town characters; Muriel Dae, violinist, and Emory Manly company in "Springtime Pastimes."

On the screen is a story of school life, "The High School Hero," with Sally Phipps, Nick Stuart, Charles Paddock and John Darrow in principal roles.

Vine Street

"Relations," a Jewish comedy, has been chosen as the attraction to reopen the Vine-street Theater, and will be given a premiere performance tomorrow night. From now on the Vine-street will present only new plays.

Fanny Brice Signs Contract for Film Work

Fanny Brice, comedienne of the Ziegfeld Follies, has signed a contract with Producers Distributing Corporation to appear in a picture, it was announced yesterday.

Miss Brice will leave New York for the coast in January to begin work on the picture, which will be produced at the Pathe studios.

ORCHESTRA LEADER RECOMMENDS KEEPING SHOW MUSIC SHORT

"Motion-picture producers today give us so many truly great motion pictures and remarkable screen spectacles that we take good pictures for granted—at least, the public does. The real response today comes from a motion picture that has a good story, told by a capable director and portrayed by talent which puts a large degree of sincerity into their work. The next requisite is good music."

This is the opinion of Carli Elinor, director of the Carthay Circle Theater orchestra.

"The motion-picture house," continued Mr. Elinor, "has popularized music. Today one of the most powerful influences we have for raising the standards of appreciation for good music is the picture theater which is well organized and has sufficient patronage to justify the employment of a good organist and an orchestra.

"In writing music for motion pictures I have found the theme plan to be the most successful. By this I mean that one distinctive melody is selected for each of the leading characters, the melody carefully chosen to fit the personality of the particular character, than a careful variation of this melody is used to interpret the varying mood of the characters. This familiar device permits infinite variations. One should always strive to find themes that are simple, beautiful and peculiarly fitting to the characters.

"Among the melodies in 'Loves of Carmen,' the present production at the Carthay Circle Theater, are 'Ostralita' and 'Who'll Buy My Violets?' The first is a sad, sweet and plaintive love song, with [illegible] predominating. It accompanies situations created by [illegible] and Dolores Del Rio in the [illegible] of Jose and Carmen. [illegible] theme used for Rose [illegible] by Victor McLaglen, is 'Buy My Violets?' a very [illegible] melody that makes you [illegible] abandon of the stormy love [illegible] ting between Carmen and [illegible] bullfighter. By varying [illegible] of these melodies to fit the [illegible] in the moods of the [illegible] tire emotional gamut [illegible] the story is vividly [illegible] audience.

"In the years which have [illegible] since writing my first [illegible] for a motion picture," [illegible] continued, "I have discovered [illegible] thing—that it is extremely [illegible] to keep my music simple. [illegible] I mean I choose simple [illegible] melodies rather than [illegible] ficult music which requires [illegible] hearings to be understood, [illegible] must follow the picture and [illegible] and not detract from it. [illegible] choose well-known melodies [illegible] people immediately recognize [illegible] the more successful I am in [illegible] this the more unnecessary [illegible] these melodies blend the [illegible] the audience emotion.

"At present," concluded the [illegible] er, "I am engaged in preparing [illegible] musical setting for the [illegible] production, 'Sunrise.' It is the [illegible] unusual picture I have [illegible] and one that intrigues me [illegible] for it furnishes an extraordinary [illegible] portunity from a musical standpoint [illegible] and I fell certain that I will be able [illegible] to provide it with a score that will [illegible] please the audience." Fred Niblo, Director F. W. Murnau."

she said, make an excellent armless wonder.

Gerhold Davis, lessee of both the Mayan and Belasco Theaters, came in while we were having our interview. This "bright young man of the theatrical world," who was married ten months ago, is getting so plump that he is discarding all his old suits. He confessed with pride that he will soon become a proud father—round about Christmas. He ought to be looking a nervous wreck but Helen and I both agreed that matrimony and theatrical responsibilities must agree with him.

Old-Time Vamps Succeeded by "Menace" Role

Margaret Livingston, who played the vamp in "Sunrise" soon to come to Los Angeles, says there are no vamps today. They are feminine "menaces" now.

"The word vamp was so misused that it died a natural death," according to the actress. "Mr. Marnau who directed me in 'Sunrise' has such a different idea of vamps than most directors have, that a girl unconsciously acts the role as he sees it, not the way we have all pictured vampires.

"The real vampire works mentally—not all dolled up in feathers and furbelows. In "Sunrise" Mr. Marnau chose for me a simple black dress and small black hat, which fitted the face closely. His idea is that the face should express the role, and not the clothes. No arms waving or chest heaving for him."

IN MARY'S FIRST FILM

J. Farrell Macdonald, the Patrick Joseph Murphy of Paramount's screen version og Anne Nichola's "Abie's Irish Rose," appeared in the first Mary Pickford starring picture, "The Violin Maker of Cremona," made by Biograph and directed by David Wark Llewellyn Griffith.

WHAT'S DOING IN NEW YORK

from Ada Rehan and Julia Marlowe to Margaret Anglin and Estelle Winwood. I have seen vast German audiences roar with delight over the very proper authority exercised by Herr Petruchio in "Der Widerspenstigen Zaehmung" and watched the good people of Paris chuckling over the very improper innuendoes of M. Petruchio in "La Megere Alrivoise."

IN MODERN DRESS

"All God's Chillun' Got Shrews." Now, at last, I have seen it played in modern dress—played with great spirit in the highly enjoyable revival of the old farce wherewith Basil Sydney and Mary Ellis have inaugurated their tenancy of the Garrick. As soon as it, too, has been turned into a musical comedy (and it wouldn't make a bad one, by any means,) I shall feel I can devote the brief remainder of my days to graver matters.

This present revival restores the prologue, which had not been seen hereabouts since the curtain fell for the last time on Ada Rehan's Katharine. A program of her first season in that role lies before me on my desk. John Drew was the Petruchio then and the part of the page boy who dresses up as a lady in the induction and keeps tripping up on the skirts was played, I see, by Master William Collier.

MISS REHAN'S KATHARINE

Next to Booth's Hamlet, Miss Rehan's blazing Katharine was, I suppose, the most glamorous of the Shakespearean legends in the American theater in the days when I used to wait in the gallery lines of a Saturday afternoon. One sometimes wonders how much these legends owe to the fond memories of garrulous gaffers such as we all become in time, wonders, that is, whether the famous performances of the past seemed so notable in their own day.

It is interesting now and again to check up by looking back through the contemporary letters and diaries and journals. If you would like food for thought, for instance, look at the New York newspapers for the day after Lincoln's now-famous oration at Gettysburg, which men have come to regard as the greatest speech since the funeral oration of Pericles. It is buried under the avalanche of now-forgotten words from other speakers, tucked away on the second page under some such introduction as "President Lincoln Also Spoke Briefly as Follows:"

ON FIRST PAGE

So one day I looked back through the files of the New York Times for its review of "The Taming of the Shrew" when Daly first revived it with Ada Rehan as Kate. I verified the date by the advertisements of the day before, but searched in vain through the amusement columns for any reference to the actual performance. It was after I had decided that The Times critic must have swooned away from sheer delight and so been unable to pen his judgment that I turned to the front page to see what had been doing the day before in the world at large. And there it was—the review of a great occasion spread at length on Page One.

That premiere was January 18, 1887, which should set at rest once and for all the ugly rumors that I was leading the applause on that occasion. I was not born until the next afternoon, too late even for the first matinee.

Actor Adopts Costumes of Napoleon Era

Conrad Nagel who has donned practically every known type of costume on the screen during his eight years of picture acting, is for the first time appearing in the garb worn at the time of Napoleon.

As Phillip, the brother of Napoleon Bonaparte, he wears dashing clothes that were the height of fashion during that time and which would well have labeled him the Beau Brummel of that period.

Nagel has appeared as an English nobleman of the sixteenth century; a Scotsman of the time of Bruce, a Bulgarian prince of the present time; a French soldier; an American soldier; a naval officer; a pirate; a brigand of France; a boy of the Cumberland mountains, in fact he has portrayed about everything in the category of characterizations.

Now he is given new opportunities in "Glorious Betsy," a Warner picture which is to star Dolores Costello with Nagel playing opposite.

HUGO NOVEL IS ON SCREEN

ing customs in this part of France was furnished during the making of the picture when Gabriel Gabrio, playing the role of Jean Valjean, the convict, was observed by some peasants as he strolled away from the set, wearing his make-up. It is not surprising that these unsuspecting eyes failed to detect the make-up, for Gabrio is conceded to be quite an artist in this line. It would, however, be remarkable if one, were to meet, anywhere in the United States, a man wearing the same clothes that might have been seen a hundred years ago, without suspecting something queer.

On the day following Gabrio's peaceful stroll the French police were much agitated by the receipt of a telegram reading: "Individual of suspicious appearance looking like escaped convict been seen on beach in the neighborhood of Nice. Send expert detective at once."

Two detectives were immediately dispatched to the scene, but on their arrival there found that the mysterious personage had gone without leaving a trace. The residents on the riveride were asked if they could supply an information as to the wanted individual, but they were unable to help. He appeared to have vanished like smoke.

The detective's faces lengthened noticeably from day to day, until one morning they were seen coming out of one of the principal hotels at Nice wearing a slightly ironical smile. Making for the nearest postoffice, one of them wrote the following message back to headquarters: "Sinister individual looking like escaped convict is artist Gabriel Gabrio, who is playing for Universal-Film de France the role of Jean Valjean in 'Les Miserables.'"

IN LEADING ROLES

Wallace MacDonald, directing his second picture for Fox Films, has Marjorie Beebe and Norman Peck in the leading roles. George Marshall is supervising.

HER FIRST SCREEN APPEARANCE WAS NIL TO PICTURE FANS

Following her first appearance on the screen, Clara Bow, Paramount star, received not a single fan letter.

She had a part in which she cried, but her crude make-up ran together in such a smear that the scene was eliminated and she never even appeared to the public.

After her second piece of motion-picture work, the little red-haired flapper's mail brought five fan letters.

Now the actress receives between 18,000 and 20,000 fan letters each month. She holds the high mark at the Paramount studios.

Miss Bow's first real part was in "Down to the Sea in Ships." During the twenty-two weeks the picture was in production, she was thrown about, beaten and subjected to other bits of realistic acting and achieved a personal triumph.

ONLY FIVE LETTERS

But only five motion-picture fans sent her letters. This was mostly because her home address wasn't known.

For several years her fan mail slowly increased from twenty-seven in one month after "Mantime" up into the hundred and finally over the thousand mark.

In 1925 the madcap of the screen came under contract to the Paramount studios. "Dancing Mothers" boosted the mark over 5000. "The Runaway" brought the total for one month to nearly 6500; "Mantrap" put the month's average over 8000, and "Kid Boots" increased her month's mail to more than 13,000 where it remained until "It."

That sensational picture brought more than 16,000 letters to the dynamic little actress in one month. It was her first starring vehicle and since her elevation to the pinnacle of the motion-picture industry, the star's monthly mail has steadily increased.

MORE THAN 17,000

"Children of Divorce" shot the mark over 17,000 and "Rough House Rosie" touched the 19,000 figure. "Hula" has brought the total up to around 20,000 fan letters each month and there it has remained.

Miss Bow feels that "Get Your Man" will be her greatest achievement and that her mail will total more than 20,000 each month because of the universal appeal of the new story.

In "Get Your Man," Clara Bow is supported for the first time by Charles Rogers, Paramount leading man who was featured with her in "Wings," which is scoring a sensational success setting new marks each week for a film road show.

Rogers recently completed work as leading man for Mary Pickford in "My Best Girl" and following "Get Your Man" is to play the part of Abie in the super-production of "Abie's Irish Rose." He is being listed as leading man for Clara Bow in one of her early starring vehicles.

Human Octopus Feat Reported

Speaking of accomplishments, Albert Rogell, film director, offers this one for consideration:

While touring the Ozarks for locations and atmosphere for "The Shepherd of the Hills," a First National Pictures' version of Harold Bell Wright's novel, which he directed, he was introduced to a linotyper in an Arkansas printing shop.

The old fellow was getting out a weekly paper, taking snuff, smoking a pipe, chewing tobacco and drinking corn whisky from a jug.

"Only a human octopus could beat that!" Rogell declares. "He got out the paper, successfully, and got drunk fifteen minutes later, which, I understand, was his regular schedule."

FARCE SKIT TOPS BILL FOR WEEK

Al Shean Associated With Lynn Canter in Act for Hillstreet Theater

Al Shean, the funny little fellow of the "Gallagher and Shean" team, now associated with Miss Lynn Canter, tops the bill at the Hillstreet this week in a farcical skit, entitled, "Business Is Business," which was written for them by William K. Wells. The piece is said to be full of laughs from beginning to end, and in Miss Canter, Mr. Shean has a clever coworker. She is a comedienne of spirited style. She is reported to be pretty, statuesque and swagger.

Miss Canter is new to vaudeville. She is a type that is rare in these slim-jim days of feminine beauty, when to look hungry and hollow-chested is fashionable. Here is a striking brunette healthy, vivacious. Best known as a prima donna in such revues as the "Greenwich Village Follies," Winter Garden extravaganzas and that sort of fare, Miss Canter was popular by right of her own physical and vocal attributes. In her little farce, she is sophisticated and wise to the world and its moods.

Mr. Shean has been in musical comedy, vaudeville and revue for nearly a half-century, even before his name became one-half of a rage, that he needs no introduction to patrons of the theater of this or the last generation. In the idiom of the cartoonist, "He's a wise old bird," and in the lingo of the vegetarian, "he knows his onions." Besides being an outstanding feature of the Ziegfeld's "Follies," he and "Mr. Gallagher" illuminated an edition of the "Greenwich Village Follies" and also appeared with conspicuous success in "The Rose Maid," "Princess Pat," "As You Were," "Flo Flo," "Friendly Enemies" and many others.

HARMONICA IS PRAISED

and the fourth a guitar. They had, it seemed, a new arrangement of "Sam, the Old Accordion Man," and he must listen to it.

Borrah listened gravely, offered a suggestion or two, and the boys departed.

"You saw those fellows? I found each one in a different city: Boston, Indianapolis, New Orleans and Atlantic City. Ernie, the colored boy, (the same who plays a "blues" solo on the stage,) stopped me at 1 o'clock one morning and asked for a lift. I was driving from Philadelphia to Atlantic City, and Atlantic City was Ernie's home. He had been a chicken appraiser, sort or an assessor of market values; but he wanted to go home. 'All right,' I said. He climbed into the rumble seat.

"When I got to Atlantic City I found him slumped down out of the wind, fast asleep.

"Ernie had a natural talent for music. He's been with me ever since.

"The little chap who bears the brunt of my weight every time I keel over in the act worked in a packing-house in Boston. He wanted to join the gang and I gave him a chance."

The instrument Minevitch's boys use is called a Chromonica, made in Germany. It has a range of one complete octave and certain notes of the next higher and the next lower octaves. There are ten vents capable of an infinite number of variations through the inspiration and expiration of the breath, and the use of one small lever. The very manner of cupping the hands about the instrument, and even the shape of the player's mouth and the irregularities of his teeth, have their effect on the music he makes.

"It's the ambition of my life," said Borrah, "to give what I like to call a concert of illegitimate music. I've written a little symphony. Once I gathered eighty boys together and we tried it. Our instruments were harmonicas, ocarinas, jew's-harps and bottles filled to various levels and blown upon! You should have heard us!

"It's great fun and it's fascinating. All the 'harmonic dissonances,' the quarter tones and the eighth-tones that the modernists are seeking, belong to us. I really believe we have a new music."

Boy Misses Circus Picture

You can hardly blame "Big Boy," Educational child star, if he gets real "mad" at his director, Charles Lamont. For, immediately after finishing three pictures in a row together, Lamont sent little Malcolm which is "Big Boy's" real name, away for a month's vacation—and right away starts to work on a circus picture, with animals, and clowns, and a parade. And Malcolm is missing it all. Dorothy Devore is the star of the circus picture, her first since returning from her own vacation in New York, and the first in which Lamont has directed her.

It is expected that Lamont, after a picture or two with other comedians, will again take charge of "Big Boy" for another series. They are getting almost into the "team" class, for Lamont has directed all the "Big Boy" comedies for two seasons, and has developed the little fellow into a real box-office attraction.

Among the Eskimos the men have every freedom while the women have none at all.

can be expected to please the many admirers of both.

"The Harvester," at the Hippodrome has proved to be the sort of release that some of the critics find refreshing while others declare it to be without rhyme or reason, all, however, overlooking the strength of the author's name throughout the country.

POWERFUL PICTURE

"Body and Soul" at the Capitol, is recognized as a powerful and unusual picture superbly directed by Reginald Barker, but too gloomy to appeal to an audience chiefly drawn to the theater by the spectacular vaudeville, ballet and jazz now current at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Theater. Lionel Barrymore's acting has evoked encomiums galore, but the heaviness of the picture is thought to be against it except in houses where incidental entertainment is minus.

Thomas Meighan finally has bought a ticket for California. He leaves next Monday taking with him three film stories, the only possibilities out of 3000 manuscripts considered and hopes to come to a decision on one of them before he reaches Hollywood. He will make the westward trip via Florida where his new winter home is nearing completion and after finishing his picture will return there for a few months.

Actor Adopts Dog Requiring Much Attention

Richard Arlen, leading man in such Paramount productions as "Wings" and "Figures Don't Lie," has a new member in his family.

Arlen has just returned from location, where a company has been engaged in filming Zane Grey's "Under the Tonto Rim." Director Herman Raymaker sent out a rush order for a mother dog and several puppies, and his assistant, George Crook, found them somewhere. He located a 'just dog' and ten pups. Arlen saw them, immediately fell in love with one of the youngsters, and adopted it.

At the hotel where he stopped, the pup, which he named Tonto, decided he didn't like the climate, or something, so, about midnight, he commenced to howl, as most good pups do.

Next morning Arlen announced that he had walked Tonto back and forth in the room until 3 a.m.

BOLAS FEAT AUTHENTIC, IN PICTURE

Lariat and Horsemanship Tricks in "The Gaucho" Not Beyond Veteran Rider

With Douglas Fairbanks performing almost unbelievable feats of horsemanship and tricks with the bolas, the South American cowboy's substitute for the lariat, in "The Gaucho," at Grauman's Chinese Theater, doubters are questioning the authenticity of some of the stunts.

Doug is referring all the incredulous to no less authority on gauchos than Charles Darwin, the original exponent of evolution, for convincing evidence that leaping into the saddle and toeing the stirrups in one jump, as well as capturing a man with a toss of the bolas is not a motion-picture trick beyong the capability of the South American rider.

Darwin, who was fascinated by the life of the gaucho, wrote in his book, "The Voyage of the Beagle," as follows:

"The gauchos are well known to be perfect riders. The idea of being thrown, let the horse do what he likes, never enters their heads. Their criterion of a good rider is a man who can stay on an untamed colt, or who, if his horse falls, alights on his own feet.

"I recollect seeing a gaucho riding a very stubborn horse, which three times successively reared so high as to fall backward with great violence. This man judged with uncommon coolness the proper moment for slipping off, not an instant before or after the right time, and as soon as the horse got up the man leaped on his back, until at last they started at a gallop."

Darwin, curiously, is the only literary man of distinction who visited the pampas of the Argentine during the time the gaucho was in his glory. The gaucho dictator, Juan Manuel de Rossas, was in power from 1835 to 1852.

Fairbanks is credited with scoring a distinct coup in bringing to the millions that compose motion-picture audiences a type of horseman that overshadows the prowess of the Cossacks of the Russian steppes and the vaqueros of Mexico in a romantic drama that appeals to all types of audiences.

German Director Starts Contract

Ludwig Berger, German picture director, who attracted attention first in this country with his production, "The Waltz Dream," arrived here yesterday to begin a long term contract with Fox Films.

Berger, who is noted in Europe as a stage producer and musical genius, was signed by Winfield Sheehan, vice-president of Fox Films, when Mr. Sheehan was abroad last year.

The German director's first picture for Fox Films will be "I Will Not Marry," adapted from a Hungarian story by Bela Szenes. It is a comedy-drama and concerns the experiences of the members of a bachelors' club. Berger's work in pictures has been distinguished for its comedy vein. Lois Moran will have the feminine lead in "I Will Not Marry."

GREAT CANOE RACE FILMED

bols of her dance-hall trade, also romped down the hill as did some 180 extras made up to resemble residents of the post.

James Murray won the race. Why not? He's the hero of that romance of the Northwest, although there were plenty who pushed him well for the honor. Gibson Gowland, villain, shirt open at neck and great hairy chest well exposed, House Peters in rough garb, Lionel Belmore, Creighton Hale, William Orlamond and others were well within range, lending their presence to what the producers hope will be one of the dramatic and big moments of the film.

There were more than 100 canoes of every type and description within the fleet. Including the cast members, slightly more than 250 individuals participated in the scene which was shot simultaneously by five cameras placed at strategic vantage points.

MODERN BEAU BRUMMEL

Arthur Stone, known to vaudeville fans for his "hick" characterizations, leaps to the other extreme, and portrays a modern Beau Brummel in "The Valley of the Giants," a First National picture.

PREMIERE FOR SPANISH WORKS

Pedro Sanjuan of Havana to Conduct Interesting Philharmonic Program of His Own Works and Those of His Compatriots

BY ISABEL MORSE JONES

Los Angeles will more closely identify itself with the new interest in the music and musicians of Spain on next Sunday afternoon when Pedro Sanjuan, conductor of the Havana Symphony Orchestra of Havana, Cuba, will direct the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra in a popular program.

Spanish singers of folk-songs have naturally enough been not uncommon in this city, which belonged to the Spanish long ago and which is still dependent upon Spain and Mexico for whatever fragrance and distinctive charm it has. But a Spanish composer and conductor of note is a new happening in our music life and, it is hoped, prophetic of more.

Spanish opera is not unknown to us although the actual performances have been mostly limited to numerous productions of "Carmen." New York has not done much better, with rare performances of "Goyescas" added to the inevitable "Carmen." Painters have had a better representation in the pictures of Sorolla, Zuloaga and others and singers from Spain, such as Emilio de Gogorza, Andrea de Segurola, (who is making Los Angeles his winter home at present,) and Lucrezia Bori, have increased the popularity of Spanish art in America. Casals must be added to this notable list.

There is a growing interest in music in Spain and some day her composers and artists will again take an important place among other musical nations. Albeniz, Turina and Granados head the list of composers from that country today but perhaps the best known Spanish works are, at least orchestrally speaking, those by Chabrier, Debussy, Rimsky-Korsakoff and Ravel.

This is quite different from the condition of Spanish music in earlier days. During the early part of the sixteenth century nearly all the best composers for the great Roman choirs were Spanish and they founded the school which Palestrina graced. Victoria, was the greatest of these Spaniards and ranks with Palestrina in musical history.

Spanish dances of infinite variety have had a strong influence on art and the Corelli "La Folia" which violinists play with such gratifying results are a set of dances originally accompanied by castanets and songs. Spanish folk-songs are usually related to the dance and should be presented that way.

Sanjuan is a young Spaniard from San Sebastian, a pupil of Turina and a friend of De Falla, who conducted the Madrid Military Band for several years before coming to Cuba. He has conducted the Philharmonic Orchestra of Madrid and will be heard with the New York Philharmonic in December and the Chicago Symphony later. His Havana Symphony contains eighty players of many nationalities.

Two program numbers of Sunday are from his pen. They are tone-poems: "Campesina" and "Castilla," descriptive of the country and his impressions of those regions in Spain. Campesina is a mountainous place in the Basque provinces and the Sanjuan composition is said to express "the vastness of desert, the solitude of plains and silvered forests." Castilla is divided in three movements: Panorama, In the Plain and Threshing Songs.

Sanjuan's teacher, Turina, will be represented on the program with "Orgia," from "Danzas Fantasticas." Other numbers to be conducted by Senor Sanjuan will be the Leonore overture by Beethoven (why not Fidelio? its story in Spanish,) "Kamarinskaya" by Glinka and dances from "Prince Igor" by Borodine.

In the composer-conductor's own description of "Castilla" he denies any concrete program and speaks of having used only one folk-song as a theme. The rest are original. The subject of the work lies in the character of the barren Castillian wilderness and its spiritual grandeur. In the first movement is a Salamanca chant which recurs throughout the series. The second movement is "an evocation of the monotonous plateau in which a melody of the steppes is given out by the contralto saxophone." The last movement is rich with rhythms and popular songs.

PRO-MUSICA BRINGS HUNGARIAN PIANIST

Los Angeles Chapter of National Society to Hear Young Composer

The Pro-Musica Society of Los Angeles will present Imre Weisshaus, composer-pianist of Budapest, on Thursday evening at the Beaux Arts Auditorium. He was recommended to the society by Henry Cowell, whose travel abroad last year was in the nature of a voyage of discovery for new composers. Weisshaus has come to this country to make known the works of the young Hungarian composers. Imre Weisshaus is a pupil of Bela Bartok, Adolf Weissmann of Berlin speaks enthusiastically of his gifts as a pianist and his performance of peasant songs, dances, pieces by Bartok and Kodaly and the new names Szekelyi, Kosa and Kadosa.

He is 23 years of age.

SYMPHONY CLUB TO GIVE TWO CONCERTS

The Los Angeles Symphony Club conducted by Ilya Bronson, is preparing two concerts to be given at the Philharmonic Auditorium this season. They are scheduled for January 7, and April 28.

The club, which is taking a place of honor in the music life of this city affording opportunity and practical experience of great value to orchestral students, gave two successful concerts last year. It has been organized five years and its number averages a hundred players.

The work is a vital one because heretofore only European students have had opportunity to gain the knowledge here offered.

The rehearsals are held in the Music Arts Building every Sunday from nine until twelve in the morning. Interested patrons support the concerts.

OSCAR SEILING PLANS FOR UNIQUE PROGRAM

Due to the success of Oscar Seiling's violin recital for Orline Burrow at Beaux Arts recently, Mr. Seiling, well-known violin instructor, is now busily engaged in preparing another recital wherein the Max Bruch concerto with an orchestra accompaniment will be performed.

This time Laura Berkovits is the pupil to be presented in recital.

Mr. Seiling plans to present an innovation on this program in the form of an orchestra which is to be composed of many of his former pupils in the main positions.

OPERATIC SCHOOL ESTABLISHED HERE

The Pergain School of Opera, headed by A. Michelin Pergain, has opened permanent studios at 111 North Rampart Boulevard.

Mr. Pergain, who has conducted classes both here and in Riverside for the past several seasons, is a native of Nice. His musical training was received from the Italian masters, and he appeared in American opera for fifteen years before entering the United States service.

Mr. Pergain believes the opportunities for an operatic school in Los Angeles to be unlimited.

EISTEDDFOD PLANS CARRY ON FOR 1928

At a meeting of the administration committee of the California Eisteddfod Association, October 28, plans for the 1928 contests in music, drama, dance and allied arts were discussed.

The chairman of the program committee, R. Ernest Tucker of Glendale, reported that the contest material and rules, which are embraced in the year book of the association would soon be ready for distribution.

Plans for the final contests have not as yet been finally made and will be announced at a general meeting to be held in January.

Arthur M. Perry, treasurer, reported regarding the financial status of the association, his report showing all current bills paid and a balance in the treasury.

The administration committee is as follows: Ben F. Pearson, chairman; F. J. Hokin, secretary; Arthur M. Perry, treasurer; R. Ernest Tucker, William J. Kraft, Frances Kendig and Alexander Stewart.

ARENS PUPILS WIN SINGULAR HONORS

Juilliard Scholarships have been awarded to three pupils of the Arens vocal studio. Kitty Short, Doris Whitney and Grove Lindsey were the three chosen. They have, however, reassigned with the Arens Vocal School for further study in voice, with piano, harmony, solfege and languages as auxiliary branches.

MUSIC NOTES

The daughters of Ernest Bloch, international composer who makes his home in San Francisco to that city's everlasting musical fortune, are winning fame also. One, Suzanne, is a composer of 20 years, who has had one of her string quartets accepted by the Flonzaleys and it is to be included in their repertoire for the present season. Another is doing unusual work as a sculptress.

According to reports from New York City, Mae Shumway Enderly is having a most gratifying success with her copyrighted program, "Peasant Brides." Mrs. Enderly who has been appearing before a number of prominent New York clubs, plans to return here soon after the holidays.

A musical followed by a dance will be given at the Gordon School, 1455 Laurel avenue, Hollywood, on Friday evening, November 18, in the school auditorium.

The Smallman A. Cappella Choir has returned from its annual tour of the Pacific Coast and has brought back with it acclamations from all the towns where they sang. Redfern Mason, the noted San Francisco critic, said in part: "John Smallman's A Cappella Choir is a lesson in musical Americanization. It is a living proof of the fact that a choir chosen and trained here in California can do as good work as that done by any of the choirs that come from Europe with historic names. What is remarkable is the ensemble, and here our friends set San Francisco an example which we might well strive to follow."

The choir will be heard here at Occidental College on the 16th inst. and Polytechnic High School on December 19, next.

Rubini Names Heredity as Vital Factor

"There is no doubt that heredity counts, especially in the case of musical families," is the assertion of Jan Rubini, conductor of the orchestra at the Criterion Theater.

His father is doctor of music in the Conservatory of Music in Sweden, and his sisters, of whom there are four, are all musically gifted, one being an accomplished 'cellist, another a pianist, a third playing the flute, and the fourth possessing a well-trained soprano voice. All of them are professional performers.

As a child the elder Rubini taught Jan entire operas, therefore a love for the finest in music has never left him. In all of his scoring efforts he seeks to present an artistic arrangement.

In the new production now showing at the Criterion Theater, Rubini was enabled to put into effect his love of selection and arrangement of the finest in musical gems. For instance, in the score for "Les Miserables," Universal's filmization of Victor Hugo's famous novel, he uses such selections as "Robespierre Overture," by Litoff; "Omnipotence," by Schubert; "Hymne Heroique," from the "Suite Francaise," by Foulds; Arensky's trio number for the violin, 'cello and piano; "Elegie," "Musical Snuff Box," by Laidow; "Dream Pantomime," from "Hansel and Gretel," by Humperdinck, and "On the Wings of Song," by Mendelssohn," all French compositions in keeping with the production.

CASA DEL CANTO TO BE CIMINI'S NEW HOME

Maestro Cimini, the eminent operatic conductor who made such a fine impression during the last Los Angeles grand-opera season, has established himself in new teaching studios at his residence at 620 South Alexandria. He has named the new home Casa del Canto.

Mr. Cimini's record with the Chicago Civic Opera Company in the United States and enviable reputation in opera-conducting in Europe preceded him before he came to this city to make his home. Two seasons as conductor of the Los Angeles and San Francisco opera companies and his success as a teacher of opera singers has made him widely admired. He is respected as an authority who has demonstrated his ability without question. An unfailing modesty and generosity toward those who work with him has further endeared him to the music lovers of this city.

BRONSON TO LEAD PHILHARMONIC

Ilya Bronson, first violoncellist of the Los Angeles Philharmonic, will again take up the baton to direct the orchestra this season. He will direct the school concerts of which three are planned for Los Angeles, two in Santa Monica, one in Riverside, three in Pasadena and three in Santa Barbara.

He conducted a concert at the Hollywood Bowl the first season which brought him immediate recognition and has founded and conducted the Los Angeles Symphony Club for several years.

Mr. Bronson's success as a soloist has been outstanding. He added to his laurels last Sunday by playing the 'cello obligato to Volkman's third serenade in a masterly manner.

JOINT RECITAL BY SINGER AND PIANIST

A program will be given Friday night at the Biltmore music room, when Kurt Mueller, pianist, and Juliet Obach, soprano, will unite in a joint program of classic and modern numbers. Mr. Gerhard Sachse will accompany Miss Obach, Mr. Mueller presiding at the piano.

The program follows:

Fantasy, Op. 17 ..... Robert Schumann
Vieni non tardar (Figaro) ..... Mozart
Rigoletto Vincitor (Aida) ..... Verdi
Etude, Op. 7, No. 4 ..... Stravinsky
Allegretto scherzoso, and Allegro commodo ..... Zoltan Kodaly
Les Messages Dans le Bois ..... Sigtenhorst Meijer
Hopak ..... Moussorgsky
Group of poems by Miss Obach.
Mr. Mueller at the piano.
Scherzo and March ..... Liszt

International Composers in California

The new Music Society of California, founded by Henry Cowell, has been made the official branch of the International Society for Contemporary Music.

The International Society is desirous of new manuscripts, especially of chamber music in the modern vein. The American president is Alfred Human of New York and manuscripts can be sent either to him or to D. Rudhyar of 2156 Alcyona Drive, Hollywood, who represents the society in Los Angeles.

An international music festival is planned for 1929 in this country and it is hoped to gather many representative works for that time.

The last concert of the New Music Society in California was given in San Francisco in October, presenting the works of Schoenberg, Ruggles and Varese for wood-wind instruments, Henry Cowell conducting.

ORGANIST TO GIVE CONCERT LECTURES

Bruce Gordon Kingsley

A unique series of concert lectures is to be given at Bullock's beginning Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, on the eighth floor, by Dr. Bruce G. Kingsley. The purpose of these lectures is to explain the music of the Philharmonic Symphony programs. Dr. Kingsley, who is well known throughout this country, prior to becoming an American citizen, was concert organist at the Alexandra Palace, London, Eng.

The lecture will include Schubert's dramatic masterpiece, "The Unfinished Symphony," Sibelius' stirring E minor symphony, and the Rachmaninoff "Fate."

The succeeding concert lectures will be given every two weeks, on the Saturday preceding the Philharmonic symphony concerts.

Singer Returns From Extensive European Tour

Constance Balfour, well-known vocalist, has returned from a three years' sojourn in Europe, and is now busily engaged in concert work as well as reorganizing her vocal classes. Mme. Balfour spent a year in Milan and Florence, a half-year travelling, and a year and a half in Paris, where she conducted classes for American students. During this time she studied with masters of note, and greatly enlarged her already extensive repertoire.

Upon her recent return Mrs. Balfour found an ambitious program awaiting her, and will start tomorrow by singing for a Community Chest benefit in Santa Monica. On the 18th inst. she and Priscia Peycke will present the first of a series of seven musicales at the Berkeley Hall School, Beverly Hills.

Mrs. Balfour has opened a residence studio at the Bryson Apartments, Wilshire Boulevard.

CIVIC BUREAU INCLUDES MANY ACTIVITIES

The Civic Bureau of Music and Art, indorsed and partially financed by the county and city governments and the Chamber of Commerce, is working to obtain a municipal band and a municipal pipe organ.

Its book on the cultural assets of Los Angeles and numerous articles on this subject in magazines, reaches a wide public, one of which in the person of M. Lyle Spencer, president of the University of Washington, wrote an interesting comment recently.

Mr. Spencer spoke of this Chamber of Commerce exploitation or publicity, as he preferred to call it, as "sincerest and most constructive kind of promotion work, designed to attract the highest type of citizen. What we need most in the West is culture that has wealth with it, rather than mere wealth, and according as we are successful in attracting that type of citizen, we are going to make our greatest progress."

The bureau handles all mail and contacts regarding the cultural subjects which come to the Chamber of Commerce. Music is only one of its departments.

WHISTLING CHORUS IN NOVEL OFFERING

Agnes Woodward, director of the California School of Artistic Whistling, and her American Bird Whistling Chorus of thirty girls will entertain men of the Navy with a concert to be given at the new Y.M.C.A. in San Pedro.

One of the big features of the concert will be "The Old-Fashioned Trio," composed of Helen May Richardson, whistler; Mrs. L. F. Pilcher, accompanist, and Edna Mae Hewitt, soprano. Also to appear on the program will be Ruth Dougherty in her unique Chinese act, accompanied by Pauline Hughes. Other features will be the "Colonial Maiden" and the community sing by the boys, with the assistance of Miss Woodward's girl whistlers.

Elisa Ryan School of Dancing has opened a class for adults in ballroom dancing. Miss Ryan is planning a ball during the Christmas holidays in which her three classes in ballroom dancing will take part.

Young Singer Acclaimed by Voice Critics

Nina Morgan, soprano, who will sing at the Philharmonic Auditorium on Thursday evening, under L. E. Behymer's management, is recognized as one of the most gifted of Gatti-Casazza's younger singers, yet it was only in November, 1920, that she sat trembling in the dressing-room of the famous old house, awaiting the call that would bring her before the great red and gold auditorium for the first time. A debut at the Metropolitan is not an experience to be met calmly, as every artist who has gone through the ordeal will testify. As Gilda in "Rigoletto," she established herself in this great old house, and ranks today as one of the foremost singers at the Metropolitan.

The program follows:

I
Vieno che pel Sereno (From "Semiramide") ..... Gluck
Chi Vuol Innamorarsi ..... Scarlatti
Non so' pi cosa son cosa faccion (From the "Marriage of Figaro") ..... Mozart
II
Cavatina, "Come per me Sereno" ("La Sonnambula") ..... Vincenzo Bellini
III
La Flute Enchantee ..... Maurice Ravel
Guitarres et Mandolines ..... Saint-Saens
Un Verde Praticello ..... Wolf-Ferrari
E L'Uccellino ..... Giacomo Puccini
La Girometta ..... Gabriele Sibella
IV
Song for Lovers ..... Deems Taylor
Ballade of Colleens ..... Alice Vebien
Rose of Mine ..... Gustano Merola
The Windflowers ..... Werner Josten
The Children of the Moon ..... Elinor Remick Warren

Sophie Braslau to Appear Soon at Auditorium

Sophie Braslau, the popular contralto, who will appear at the Philharmonic Auditorium on the 22nd inst., must be regarded as one of fortune's favorites.

A serious student in her art, untiring in her efforts to advance, she has mastered the singing of songs and their interpretation as few singers have at the end of a long career. Then, too, Miss Braslau is fortunate in her personality. A face of glowing, oriental beauty, a stage presence of charm and dignity, she seems to radiate wholesomeness, right thinking and right doing.

CAMPBELL RETURNS TO CONCERT STAGE

Douglas Colin Campbell, pianist, and Revela, danseuse, will appear in joint recital at the New Ebell Club Theater on Friday evening.

The program, will consist of four groups for piano by Douglas Colin Campbell and a suite of four dances by Revela with Mr. Campbell at the piano. A number of very unusual numbers are included in the piano groups such as the Sonata Opus 101 of Besthoven, commonly called "The Sensitive" because of its delicate associations. The modern group will close with A la Chinoise by Ornstein. This composition won a reputation of renown for the composer because of its most extraordinary and distinctive theme. It is descriptive of the wild, spontaneous, colorful, chattering environment of Northern China.

Blanco, art director for Douglas Fairbanks heard Mr. Campbell play "The Mill" by Jensen one evening and it inspired him to produce one of his paintings. Arrangements have been made to have this painting placed on the stage and lighted during the playing of this number. The program will close with the playing of the great Dante Sonata of Liszt. A study of "The Divine Comedy" by Dante led to its conception by the composer.

Revela is the niece of Carl Laemmle. The suite to be given is the quest of a soul for the unattainable.

...to such pictures as cannot be mistaken; and to many of the little landscapes, which are as fresh and vivid and alive as nature itself.

Portrait of Cryer—not so good as some of Westry's portraits of women. "Bacchus in Judea"—glowing in color, rhythmical in line and mass, a jubilant procession descending from the steps of a huge temple. Greeks, Nubians, Arabians, the god of wine in their midst. "The Lady of Flowers." "Japanese Girls." "Nude Woman." "Indian Palmist." "Le Vendredi aux Cause Douces de Constantinople." "Danseuse Japanoise." The titles are a queer mixture of French, Italian and English—but after all, the pictures are there to speak for themselves, and they have much to say in the language of the lover of beauty.

Now let us step down to the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, where the painters of Hollywood, many of whom are old-timers, are holding forth in an emphatic esthetic way. You never suspected that Hollywood had so many makers of pictures outside of the Kleig studios, did you? And they are good painters, too, not a few of them worthy of stardom. Shall we pick out the stars? No! That way danger lies. We'll just mention a few names and a few pictures, and then pass on to Hollywood Woman's Club.

We cannot pass by the Cremeyes, Bert and Meta, for both are brightly, brilliantly modern, the one in a still-life, the other in a study of a girl dressing. Nor may we neglect Edouard Vysekal's exquisitely painted "Young Girl" and Mrs. Edouard's appreciative (but not flattering) portrait of her husband. Edith Truesdell is finely decorative in her "Children Examining Flower." Paul Laurits swings a vigorous and full-charged brush in his landscape, "A Place of Song." Theodore Aulman gives us tender and vibrant color in "Spring." John Coolidge shows admirable simplicity in his treatment of mass and color in "A Glimpse of the Desert."

John Hubbard Rich's ever delightful study of a Mexican boy, "Frederico," is here. There is a magnificent sweep of color and form and feeling in George Otis's "Eucalypti"—a perfect blend. I like this landscape immensely, and so, I think, will you. You will also like Isobelle Wurtell's pointillist "Still Life," Roscoe Shrader's "The Window Seat," Ruth Bennett's little landscape study of hills, and one or more of the few small sculptures displayed, as well as one or two of the larger ones.

"Rovers of the Sea" is the exceedingly attractive title bestowed by the Hollywood Woman's Club on its November show. And the show is as delightfully breezy as its title. Ships and boats of all descriptions, and the blue sea, beating over and around them. Quays and shore lines, too, with flying seagulls and sleeping sunlit sands. Unfortunately, when I strolled in from the hot boulevard to get a breath of sea air and a feast of nautical art, hun-

MAN OF MODEST INCOME MAY ACQUIRE COLLECTION

Few Years and Taste for Works of Art Declared to Be Requirements for Persons in Moderate Circumstances to Obtain Number of Good Examples

Millionaires are not the only collectors. To appreciate is often to possess, even by the man of moderate income. If you have taste you can pick up works of art, small but precious, here, there, everywhere, and if you proceed with caution and without haste, you may have a superb collection in a very few years.

NOTES AND BRIEFS

Beginning the 22nd inst., the Arts and Crafts Society of Southern California will exhibit for a month at the Friday Morning Club. Contemporary decorative design as applied to poster work, wall paper and Christmas cards will be displayed. There will also be an exhibit of furniture designed by Kem Weber.

Harry C. Bentley's private collection of paintings by living artists of Southern California is now on display at the Fine Arts Association, Tucson, Ariz. The handsome brochure and catalog has a foreword by Arthur Millier with biographical sketches from the same pen. There are also photographic counterfeit presentments of the painters represented—Borg, Fries, John Frost, Gilbert, Lauritz, Douglass Parshall, Puthuff, Payne, Reiffel, Otto Schneider, Elliot Torrey, Wendt, Helena, Duplap, Henrietta Shore, Marion Wachtel, Katherine Wagenhals.

The Arts for October contains an exhaustive article by the Duc de Trevise on the work of Gericault, with numerous illustrations. Anita Brenner writes of Orozco, "a Mexican rebel;" John Fletcher Gould, the poet, of Leon Underwood, another rebel, this one an Englishman; Adolph Glassgold, of "Backgrounds in Moving Pictures." As usual, the Arts is progressive, up to date in its point of view.

Nancy Carroll, the recently selected Rosemary to play in Anne Nichols's "Abie's Irish Rose" at the Paramount studios in Hollywood, has appeared before the camera but once. She played the second lead in "Ladies Must Dress," which starred Virginia Vafi.

Madonna,
Wood polychrome, Seville, twelfth century. Sachs collection.

Below you will find the unimpeachable testimony of two such Los Angeles collectors, the one a highly gifted painter of murals, the other an equally gifted man in his own field, the exploitation of opera. Herman Sachs's confidences were carefully noted down, but Merle Armitage tells his own story of adventure.

ART OF BYGONE AGES

Although himself an intensely modern artist in outlook and accomplishment, Herman Sachs, a Los Angeles decorator whose notable work, full of strength and beauty, may be found in various business and public utilities buildings of our town, spends his leisure hours—none too many—in collecting art objects of bygone ages. His interest lies primarily in the earlier and primitive periods—Byzantine, Spanish, East Indian, African—and of each of these he possesses some rare and even esoteric pieces.

Among recent additions to his collection there are thirty or more rugs, of strong primitive colorings in geometric designs. These are in the curious weave of wool known as Alpojara, of Spanish origin, and were garnered by Sachs on a visit to Spain last year. There is an especially striking group in shades of yellow which will make a colorful setting for some room in the owner's new studio home here in Los Angeles.

A fantastic dragon design is outlined on some smaller rug fragments of soft brick coloring, and other wall coverings and drapes prove interesting. Rich and lustrous, laden with embroidery, the dozen or more shawls which belong to this collection charm, intrigue or dazzle, each carrying its own personality and bringing an atmosphere of romance.

Included in the collection are Persian miniatures, Japanese prints, and a group of miniatures of the primitive Christian type, as well as some Pompeiian paintings. For those who understand the art of glass-making, perhaps the most remarkable objects prove the examples of Bohemian and especially of the Moorish glass. The latter, made in Granada in the twelfth century, is exceedingly rare, the process of manufacture having been extinct for centuries, so that this exquisite ceramic art has become a lost secret.

Perhaps the most unusual side of the collection is taken by the statuettes, a number of little figures including more than a score of agelessly immobile Buddhas and various other statues of oriental origin, carved in silver or gold and set with semiprecious stone, each with its story all too often long forgotten.

This collection ranges from the head of a Roman general, which is a good example of the art of that age, through Greek fragments in bronze, African sculptures, and Egyptian statues in the lovely Alexandrian blue, to a group of Madonnas of quaint and appealing simplicity, in ceramic, in metal or in wood polychrome. All these little figurines have a naive and primitive charm which brings us back to other countries and other civilizations.

Hanging Pictures

A private collection of pictures differs radically from what may be called a public one, in that, being the choice of one man instead of three or four or more, it possesses a certain unity of effect not to be found in the other. Indeed, the difficulties that confront the hanging committees of a popular exhibition have never yet met with a satisfactory solution, and they probably never will, though they are often tackled with good judgment and undeniable heroism. Perhaps one should say grappled instead of tackled, for they present the inspiring spectacle—if there are any observers, which, unfortunately, there seldom are—of a hand-to-hand struggle.

Delights of the Needle

A surprising number of painters turn from the brush to the etching needle—sometimes for recreation and a "change," less seldom than you might suppose for a permanent vocation. Men tend to become more intellectual and less emotional as they grow older, and we may therefore infer that the substitution of color for black and white is a perfectly normal development of the artist's nature. The colorist may even seek in sculpture the cold severity of pure form.

Of course there are artists born to the burin, even as there are those born to color's purple patch. These are the etchers by grace, and claim their inheritance early in their artistic career, though in the schools (as generally happens) they may be guided by their teachers toward brush and palette. But they make their escape at the earliest opportunity, never to return to what seems to them the tyranny of color. The sculptor's predilection is decided much earlier in the race, for his daemon will not let him rest until he has found his little lump of pliant clay.

ENJOYMENT OF ART INCREASING

Use of Good Pictures and Color Reproductions Growing as Adornment for American Homes; Educational Groups Offering Study Material and Loan Prints

Enjoyment of pictures is growing in America, as shown in the increasing use of good pictures in the homes of our country. While a few studious ones know the fascination of art study, and still more, the joys to be found in art galleries—the whole world loves a good picture. Everyone appreciates good pictures as his familiarity with them grows.

The beauty of color reproductions of original paintings has brought to all who would possess them the best pictures, in prints which are faithful to their great originals. Thus pictures are being welcomed to the practical scheme of things—to a place in the adornment of the home. Without pictures on its walls, a room lacks warmth and charm. Today we realize that the choice of pictures is an indication of the taste of the home maker.

Even yet it is true, sad to say, that in many homes where good taste is evident in the choice of the other furnishings, the pictures are notably poor—tawdry or dull, in showy or shabbily made frames. This cheapens the whole effect. The right picture, chosen in good taste, adds the final touch of beauty to a room. Its subject is in key with the surroundings; and its colors harmonize with the tones of the other furnishings—or indeed may be the guide by which the draperies, upholstery and other touches of color are selected.

There are many educational groups which offer suggestive study material on the subject of picture selection, including loan exhibits of prints. Among these are art museums and public libraries, some of which lend color prints; the American Federation of Arts, 1741 New York avenue, Washington, D. C. (loan exhibits); home magazines, some of which issue pamphlets on various phases of this subject. The American Art Bureau, 166 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, publishes several booklets on the study and use of pictures, and may be called on for free loan exhibits of color prints.

Excellent reproductions of paintings of all times are available today, thanks to perfection of the processes of fine color printing. These include thousands of beautiful prints, both the more familiar pictures and those less known.

National Picture Week was observed October 10 to 20 throughout the country, in women's clubs, schools, many art museums and in a number of picture shops. Its observance was under the auspices of the American Art Bureau, whose object is to foster appreciation of good pictures. This feast of pictures is celebrated annually in October.

Picture week was pleasantly and attractively observed in Los Angeles in the art shows of Schwabacher-Frey, Little's, Barker Brothers and many other places—though, to be sure, every week in the year is picture week with them, for new reproductions, in black and white and in color, are always to be seen there. If you want expert advice as to what to buy for this room or that, and how to frame it, go to them when in doubt.

LITTLE JOTTINGS

The Smithsonian Institution has prepared six exhibits showing "How Prints are Made," and anyone interested may obtain such a collection for temporary exhibition. Exhibitors pay express charges only. Nothing is for sale. Collections weigh about twenty-seven pounds, and expressage is not high. Address R. P. Tolman, assistant curator, division of graphic arts, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C.

From the Argus, published in San Francisco, we glean this item of interest. (There are many others in the little journal.) Junius Cravens, scenic and technical director of the Players' Guild of San Francisco, is trying out a new experiment. He uses paintings hangings and sculptures by well-known artists in each of his interior scenes, and in each case the artist's name is featured on the program. Paintings by Maynard Dixon, Valere de Marl, Mary Curtis Richardson and Nelson Poole have already been so used, as well as wood sculpture by Jacques Schnier and wrought iron by Ward Montague.

In the county of Los Angeles it is unlawful "during the dry season, to ignite or smoke any cigarette, cigar or pipe in grass or shrub-covered areas, or upon any road or trail traversing such areas." Landscape painters who like to sketch and smoke at one and the same time (and most of them do) must therefore curb one of their insatiable desires when working in the open. But the joy in paint will compensate for the deprivation of tobacco.

STILLWELL COLLECTION

A preliminary announcement has just been made by the Anderson Galleries of the sale at auction of the art collection of Dr. John E. Stillwell of New York. This collection has been forty years in forming and is one of the most famous in Americ... It has, however, been known by name and as a group rather than in detail. For some time past it has been rumored that the collection would be sold and interest and curiosity have been aroused all over the world. In the brochure now sent out a number of pictures is cited as "salient features of the collection." These include a "Mystic Marriage of St. Catherine," given to Raphael, and other works, many of which have been mentioned by leading authorities, by Titian, Murillo, Hals, Erasmus and Rubens.

The sale will be held on the afternoons and evenings of December 1, 2 and 3 and will include, in addition to the pictures, French and Italian marbles, Renaissance bronzes, Swiss and German stained glass and a long series of stoneware. There is also a number of important pieces of early furniture. It is expected that a complete catalog of this sale of the first part of Dr. Stillwell's collection will be issued at an early date.

HEINE'S LIFE RATIONALIZED

Lewis Browne, Author of "This Believing World," Writes an Interesting Study of the Life and Character of the Great Lyric Poet

BY LILLIAN C. FORD

THAT MAN HEINE. A Biography. By Lewis Browne, with the collaboration of Elso Weihl. The Macmillan Company, New York.

This interpretive biography of the great lyric poet and satirist, Heinrich Heine, does two things. First, it gives us the main facts of Heine's life, from the time he was born in 1797 in Duesseldorf, of Jewish parents, to his death as an exile in Paris in 1856. Second, it rationalizes his life for us by making clear the hereditary influences that were his and the difficult environment that kept him always poor and at odds with the world.

His heredity, while it gave him quick intelligence and an ardent spirit, subjected him to slight and slur and insult. For there was in Germany no tolerance for the Jew. This Heine learned when as a small boy he was removed from the Jewish school to one attached to the monastery at Duesseldorf. "Of course," says Lewis Browne, "even had the boy not been a Jew he probably would have been the butt of his schoolmates' humor, for he was undersized, nervous and in a queer way affected. . . . But being to boot a Jew he was doomed beyond all chance of escape."

So he sought refuge in solitude. "He was forever lying back on sofas and letting his imagination run wild." Like his father, he had "an unbounded love of love, a vast longing to sink himself fathoms deep in joy. But he was thwarted. The world, that pathetic little world which sat by the waters of Duesseldorf and slaved, would not receive him."

There lay his problem, which became his tragedy. So his character, whatever it might have been under happier circumstances, became twisted and bad. He may justly be accused of all manner of faults, from meanness and ingratitude to mendacity and dissolute living. And yet this little red-haired renegade, with his red-lidded eyes and cynical lips, was sensitive, imaginative, an ardent lover of beauty and of justice, and a radical who longed to make the world new and better. Somehow, through all the misery and sordidness of his troubled life he was able, as one of his friends said, "to preserve the wistful, love-hungry soul quivering beneath the shell of repellent sarcasm."

It was when he failed to win that insipid cousin upon whom he poured out his youthful ardor in his lyrics that he began to indulge in the pleasures of Hamburg night life and to make himself, as he said, "mad, wild, cynical, utterly repellent."

While Lewis Browne glosses over nothing and conceals nothing, neither does he overemphasize that side of Heine's life that bordered on depravity. There is no itching here for sensation, no desire to shock and so attract attention. The author seeks always to understand Heine and to explain him; he neither condemns nor pardons him for his lapses and he goes into no unnecessary details in regard to the poet's escapades. Lewis Browne has, in short, the detachment of the philosopher, the patient love for truth and understanding that make him a gifted writer.

The biography is in two parts or books. The first is called "The Exile in Germany;" the second, "The Exile in France." Always Heine was an exile, for nowhere did he belong. In Paris he met many of the leading writers and musicians of the day, but he knew few intimately. There, too, he applied for and received a pension from the government fund for exiled liberals, but he still did not belong. This very pension brought calumny on his head from Germany, where he was looked upon as a double traitor. Ill luck followed him to the end, with ill health that made him a martyr to untold suffering for the last half-dozen bedridden years of his life, years in which his mind grew clearer and his pen sharper.

Those who have thought of Heinrich Heine as the great German lyric poet and as that only will have cause to revise their judgment. For this biography lays stress on the satiric and polemic prose that came from Heine, the journalist and radical writer. But the book is primarily not a critical study, but the story of a human soul in conflict with his world, one that makes one of the great tragedies in history.

RECENT BOOKS

TALES OF SWORDFISH AND TUNA. By Zane Grey. Harper & Brothers, New York.

Sportsmen generally and deep-sea fishermen in particular will find this beautiful volume one that will fit into their library of sports lore. Here one gets first-hand thrills from the pen of a man who stands at the head of that hardy crew of sportsmen who love to pit their skill against the herculean strength and ferocious cunning of those monster fish of the deep, the swordfish and the tuna.

The book is profusely illustrated with halftones and drawings. The waters fished include those of the California coast, Nova Scotia, Catalina and Blue Island.

SEASHORE ANIMALS OF THE PACIFIC COAST. By Myrtle Elizabeth Johnson and Henry James Snook. The Macmillan Company, New York.

An attractive volume with its color plates and other illustrations and diagrams is this nontechnical account of the structure and habits of the common seashore animals of the west coast of the United States.

While at first the ordinary reader may fight shy of close acquaintance with the Fisabellina iodinea, of the Chrysaora gilberti and the Amphiporus bimaculatus, it is a fact, as the authors point out in their preface, that when these marine and shore animals are introduced by less difficult names and their appearance and habits made known, they seem less remote and difficult of study.

With the aid of this volume, the amateur collector may feel fully equipped to extend his field to the sands of the sea.

OLD TRAILS AND ROADS IN PENNSYLAND. By John T. Faris. The J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia.

A volume in which the author has followed the different highways of Pensylvania, many of them laid out in colonial times, and has taken note of the natural beauty by the way, of the historic associations and of everything that is odd and interesting on or off the beaten track.

The author finds Pennsylvania full of interest. It is remarkable, he says, for its historic landmarks, for its rivers, for its mountains, its lakes, its bridges and for its improved highways. Such trails as the Lackawanna, the Susquehanna, the Lincoln Highway, and the William Penn Highway, with their arteries, lure the motorist, who finds that by taking any one of them he goes through country that in every way repays the traveler.

The book is especially rich in historic lore, and in its many illustrations.

SOUTH AMERICA. An Economic and Regional Geography With a Historical Chapter. By E. W. Shanahan. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

In this scholarly work the author has given us a geography that examines the whole of South America from a physical point of view, in addition to presenting in readily ascertainable form, a vast amount of information concerning the social, industrial and general economical life of the people.

THE CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK

BY IONE RIDER,
Children's Department, Los Angeles Public Library

The underlying theme of Book Week is always book ownership. "If a child learns to love reading . . . he will inevitably want a library of his own." Here in Los Angeles the schools, libraries, clubs, etc., have interested many boys and girls in saving or earning money for a well-loved book, in as fine an edition as they can afford. The "earn-a-book" idea has been taken up from its Los Angeles beginning and adopted for national use by the Federation of Women's Clubs in their two-year program. Every year efforts are focused toward helping children and young people to appreciate good books as friends. The love of reading and the ownership of good books go together.

Book Week this year is November 13-19. Several separate activities are afoot in Los Angeles. "World Friendliness Through Books" is being emphasized in the reading of children, through libraries and schools, through activities of the Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Girl Reserves, etc. Book ownership is being urged, and stimulated through a bookplate plan in which rewards are offered for essays upon the bookplate and for personal designs submitted by Los Angeles boys and girls. The Los Angeles Public Library is publishing a suggestive list for parents who are interested in "starting the child's own library." Comparative information is offered about books, editions and prices to any interested in the purchase of books. Exhibits are being featured in children's rooms of libraries in various parts of the city. An exhibit of bookplates from various parts of the world is featured in the exhibit room of the Central Library. Original pictures from Upjohn's new book, "Friends in Strange Garments," are shown in the children's room through the courtesy of the Junior Red Cross.

Book Week is our opportunity to present to all readers news of the better books of the year for boys and girls.

The following books are recommended by the library staff.

THE LOST MERRABY. By Margaret Baker, with pictures by Mary Baker. Duffield.

To the younger children belongs this book, with its delicate silhouette illustrations of sea life and its equally delicate story of the merbaby who was found and cared for by a fisherman and his wife.

THE LITTLE BLACK AND WHITE LAMB. By Inez Hogan. MacRae Smith.

An easy book telling of the unhappy lamb who was white on one side and black on the other. The author's own pictures complete a most attractive book.

FRIENDS IN STRANGE GARMENTS. By Anna Milo Upjohn. Illustrated by the author. Houghton.

"We are fortunate this year in having a few books of decided merit contributing to the cultivation of international friendship." These are stories of European countries. Original drawings used as illustrations are on exhibition in the children's room of the Central Public Library.

SATURDAY'S CHILDREN. By Helen Coale Crew. Little, Brown.

"Saturday's child must work for his living," and in these stories are shown the everyday workaday lives of boys and girls of various European countries. Each story takes a different people, and gives the "feel" of its national life. This is a good book to read aloud.

ITALIAN PEEPSHOW AND OTHER TALES. By Eleanor Farjeon. Illustrated by Rosalind Thornycroft. Stokes.

A handsome and well-made book full of humor, color, delight. Folk-fairy tales of old Italy are followed by original stories in the Italian spirit. Pictures both in color and in black-and-white.

Miss Farjeon is the author of "Martin Pippin in the Apple Orchard," that whimsical weaving of many tales into one.

DOWNRIGHT DENCEY. By Caroline Dale Snedeker. Illustrations and decorations by Maginel Wright Barney. Doubleday.

Ardent Dencey, daughter of strict but gentle Quakers of old Nantucket, gets herself into trouble on the way to school when she throws a stone after poor Sammy Jetsam. Both girls and boys will find new friends by reading this book.

THE WONDER-SMITH AND HIS SON. A tale from the Golden Childhood of the World. By Ella Young. With illustrations by Boris Artzybasheff. Longmans, Green.

A strong book, of Irish folk lore told in vigorous and beautiful English by a true story-teller. The bold black-and-white decorations make it one of the handsomest of children's books.

NADITA (Little Nothing.) By Grace Moon. Illustrated by Carl Moon. Doubleday.

Nadita might very easily be Chi-Wee herself, caught up from her skyey Pueblo Indian mesa and dropped by the public square in a Mexican village. Mr. and Mrs. Moon live in Pasadena.

CHILDREN OF THE MOUNTAIN EAGLE. By Elizabeth Cleveland Miller. Illustrated by Maud and Miska Petersham. Doubleday.

The hardihood, bravery and loyalty of the people of the mountain fastnesses of Albania are emphasized in this fine story of Bor and Marash, children who herd sheep and love the simple life that is their heritage. The book is well-written, handsomely made, and adequately illustrated.

NIMBLE-LEGS. A STORY FOR BOYS. By Luigi Capuana. Translated from the Italian by Frederic Taber Cooper. Introduction by Faith E. Smith. Illustrated by I. B. Hazelton. Longmans, Green.

A story already loved by Italian boys is now made available to American children. It concerns a 12-year-old Sicilian lad who runs so swiftly that he is entrusted with

AS THE BOOK STORE SEES THEM

With Children's Book Week creating the demand the book stores are well prepared to assist the wide-awake boy or girl in making that desirable addition to the treasured books in the home. A round-up of the shops disclosed unanimity in recommending two of the new juveniles. These are Milne's "Now We Are Six," and Meigs's "The Trade Winds." The first of these is the lineal descendant of "When We Were Very Young." The jingles and illustrations in this newest Milne are as gay and inconsequent as ever and, at least some of them, as full of fancy: "Trade Winds," by Cornelia Meigs, is the Beacon Book Shelf prize story. It is reviewed in this section today.

At Robinson's half a dozen other books received special mention. They are "The Boy's Life of Lawrence," by Lowell Thomas; the new Scribner edition of "Michael Strogoff," by Jules Verne, and Holland's "Historic Railroads." These are for the boy or girl of 10 and over. For little people they are showing Lange's "Fairy Books," five of them, attractively boxed and illustrated, and a pair of books, one devoted to the cat and the other to the dog, with pictures on the cover in which pussy and Fido are shown with eyes that really roll. A book that they are especially glad to push is "Mickey and the Monkey," by Victorine Kirk, who, was at one time a member of Robinson's book department. This is a book to make the small person happy.

Miss Cleveland of Bullock's is banking on "David Goes to Baffin Land," by David Putnam, and "Nadita," by Grace Moon, with its companion volume called "The Flaming Arrow," by Carl Moon. Of course, the two sure-fire juveniles, "Now We Are Six" and "Trade Winds," are being given special attention here, as is also Lofting's book, "Doctor Dolittle's Garden." No set of readers is as loyal as those under 16, so an author of juveniles is certain, once he has his audience, of a warm welcome for each succeeding volume.

Mr. Parker is playing no favorites among the season's juveniles, though all that are worth while are there available. Since Grace and Carl Moon are local authors and since their books have the authentic Arizona Indian life in them they are given a good showing. So is "Long Leg, the Heron," the new Burgess book that many a small person has been awaiting. Of the handsomely illustrated editions of the old favorites one's attention is called at Parker's to the new "Treasure Island," with illustrations by Edmund Dulac, and to John Buchan's "Prester John," as well as to the new "Michael Strogoff," with the Wyeth illustrations.

At the Broadway Department Store special plans have been made for Children's Book Week. The books selected as among the season's best are "The Shadow on the Dial," by Augusta Huiil Seamon, known to girls far and wide as the author of the best mystery stories being written today; "Adventures of Chichi," by Paula Lombroso-Carraro, a translation from the Italian of the story of the adventures of Chichi and Nino and Mini, three Italian children, who promise to become great favorites with American boys and girls, and "The Lion-Hearted Kitten," by Peggy Bacon. In addition, this list includes "The Trade Wind" and "Doctor Dolittle's Garden," two books that every book store expects to sell like hot cakes on a cold morning.

LITERARY GOSSIP

Paul Jordan Smith, author of "Cables of Cobweb," "The Nomad," and "On Strange Altars," has a new book out, entitled, "A Key to the Ulysses of James Joyce." The work, which is published by Pascal Covici, Chicago, will be found invaluable to those who wish to read carefully and fully comprehend that much discussed book, "Ulysses," which contains over 750 pages, and, in part at least, has been found incomprehensible by a great many readers. Mr. Smith's book will be reviewed on this page next week.

A valuable contribution to the literature of the old West is made in "A Pioneer of 1850," the diary of George Willis Read, edited by his daughter, Georgia Willis Read, which Little, Brown & Co. publish. George Willis Read, a young physician, was one of thirty men who formed a company to cross the continent just after the gold rush of 1849 and his diary gives a faithful picture of the dangers and difficulties that befell the pioneers. A series of letters written ten years later describing a trip from New York to California via the Isthmus of Panama and capture by a Confederate raider is also included in the volume.

Louise Jordan Miln, author of the well-known "Mr. Wu" (Stokes) which was recently enacted on the screen by Lon Chaney, has another Chinese novel, published by Stokes Company. "In a Yun-nan Courtyard" is the story of So Wing—soldier, trader, lover, musician, bandit. The scene is laid in Yun-nan, one of the loveliest of Chinese provinces and one that is strictly individual in character. Mrs. Miln, from long familiarity with this strange and fascinating land, has pictured the peculiar internal strife and the conflict between East and West which, together, have brought about the present conflict in China.

Dr. William E. Barton's latest addition to Lincolniana is an unusual book entitled "The Women Lincoln Loved" (Bobbs Merrill.) It is the story of Lincoln against a background of the women, his mother, aunts, sweethearts, etc., who played a part in his destiny. Included also in the book are letters and speeches of Lincoln never before published.

J. A. Spender, prominent English journalist, is in the United States, where he will confer with American

MYSTERY AND ADVENTURE

In "Thicker Than Water," W. C. Tuttle Gives Us a Mystery; in "They Also Serve" Peter B. Kyne Writes Amusingly of the World War

BY THOMAS F. FORD

THICKER THAN WATER. By W. C. Tuttle. Houghton, Mifflin Company, Boston.

This is an amusing and at the same time thrilling story of the old range. Hashknife Hartley and his boon companion Sleepy Stevens, two wandering cowboys, suddenly appear in the town of Red Arrow. Their advent follows closely the robbery of the Wells Fargo messenger of the sum of $132,000. The town is in a ferment of excitement and so the coming of the two somewhat carefree cowboys creates little or no comment.

But the reader who is familiar with the formula of this class of story will have little difficulty in determining just what Hashknife and his companion are after. We soon find them investigating the robbery and while one finger of evidence points strongly at Old Rance McCoy, there are others fingers pointing in other directions that help to heighten the suspense, which element is essential in all stories depending on mystery for a large amout of their interest.

There is a romance thrown in to sweeten the pot. Lila McCoy, daughter of Rance, or as has been generally believed his adopted daughter, is being pestered by Angel McCoy, her foster brother. Angel is in love with Lila, but his affection is not returned. He is determined to marry her come what will. He quarrels with his father and then tells Lila that she is not Rance's daughter, but the daughter of a man named Stevens who, he says, was killed by Rance in a quarrel. This enrages Lila so she leaves Rance's home.

Then the evidence implicating Rance in the Wells Fargo robbery begins to pile up. He is finally arrested but is later kidnaped from the jail by the real robbers who hope thus to fasten the crime on Rance and then do away with him.

GOOD BOOKS

SUNDAY MORNING.

The Starlit Trail

by KING PHILLIPS
Author of "Wild Paradise," etc.

A ragged giant of an Indian strode into the sheriff's office. He wanted Plunk Reverdy. It was either Plunk—or the tomtoms would beat.

It's a story chock-full of startling situations. Here's a new type of Indian, using machine guns but retaining the old lust of torture. You won't forget John Powderhorn soon.

WESTWARD TO PARADISE

by W·D·Hoffman
Author of "Gun Gospel" "Knights of the Desert," etc.

Here is an unforgettable picture of a period which for lawless brutality has no equal in American history—the period when helpless emigrants, "sooners," and rascally promoters swarmed into the cattle lands, little knowing the dangers ahead of them. W. D. Hoffman makes the reader a breathless eye-witness of the life-and-death struggle, in a fast-moving story of intense episodes.

RECENT DOINGS AMONG WRITERS

editors on international affairs and lecture under the auspices of the Walter Hines Page Foundation. Mr. Spender has just written his reminiscences, "Life, Journalism and Politics," which will be brought out by Frederick A. Stokes Company.

"Beyond question Napoleon was not free from weaknesses and faults," writes Gertrude Aretz in "Napoleon and His Women Friends" (Lippincott.) "He had mistresses; he was faithless to his own marriage bond; he failed to respect the marriage of others; he plucked a good many flowers and then threw them away unheeding. But there is a wide difference between faults and weaknesses, on the one hand, and vices and excesses, on the other. His disposition made these latter uncongenial to him, and in his confidential intercourse with women he was backward rather than aggressive. He regarded chastity as women's supreme virtue. 'In women,' he said, 'chastity is what courage is in men; I despise a coward just as much as I despise a loose woman.'"

With the publication of "The Crimson Hankerchief" by Comte de Gobineau, Harper and Brothers is reviving the Odd Number Series started almost thirty years ago.

This newest volume contains two stories besides the one from which the book takes its title. They are "The Daughter of Prism" and "The Caribou Hunt." The translation from the French is by Henry Lengan Stuart and the preface by Ernest Boyd.

"When Comte de Gobineau died in 1882, at the age of 66," says Mr. Boyd, "he was known to the world of fashion and diplomacy as a brilliant talker who had achieved a distinguished diplomatic career. He never spoke of either his imaginative or scholarly writings in the Paris salons, and Anatole France, who met him at the Princess Mathilde's ralon a few years before he died, never suspected that he was in the presence of one of the most original figures in modern French literature."

Lowell Thomas, author of "With Lawrence in Arabia," has written a new book entitled "The Boy's Life of Col. Lawrence" which The Century Company will publish shortly. The publishers state that it is a complete and vivid story of Lawrence's career. Mr. Thomas was intimately associated with Col. Lawrence in his Arabian adventures. "With Lawrence in Arabia" is now in its twelfth large printing and its popularity continues to grow with the constantly increasing public interest in the incredible exploits of "The Uncrowned King of Arabia."

Gerald W. Johnson, whose "Andrew Jackson, An Epic in Homespun," was published on October 7 by Minton Balch & Co., has an especial right to choose Jackson for the subject of a modern biography since he explains, he comes "not merely from North Carolina, but from that very Scot-infested southeastern corner of the State where Jackson was born. But he was Scotch-Irish whereas I am a Hielandmon of Clan Campbell, the crowd that is perpetually comin' from bonnie Loch Lomond."

Sir James Barrie's play "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals" has been selected for performance at the Theater Francais in Paris, the first time in the history of the French Theater that the work of a living British dramatist has been selected for performance on this classic stage. The play is published in America by Charles Scribner's Sons in a volume of short Barrie plays called "Echoes of the War."

Will Durant wrote "Transition, A Mental Autobiography" before "The Story of Philosophy" was published. He did it on amore as a recreation from more ponderous subjects. In the author's own words "Transition" tries to show the effect, upon one mind, of the great changes which have come upon the religious faith of the western world. In a lesser way it tries also to show the political experiments and disillusionment of our time, and to trace the evolution of a fairly typical rebel from Utopian aspiration through a general despondency to some measure of reconciliation and content.

Pope Leo X was so charmed by the wit and brilliance of Machiavelli's comedy, "Mandragola," that he ordered a theater to be erected to enable the Roman populace to enjoy the hilarious satire. Three and a half centuries later "Mandragola" was produced in Milan, and the ladies in the audience had to wear masks! The first English translation of the famous play has been made by Stark Young, and is announced by the Macaulay Company.

Messrs. Boni and Liveright announce for immediate publication "The Autobiography of Isadora Duncan." This work was completed shortly before her tragic death in France. The work is being rushed through and it is planned to have the book on the market within a few weeks.

The manuscript was presented to the publishers early this year. The final passages came to their offices in June.

FROM THE JUVENILE TREE

New Books by Alfred Kreymborg, Rose Fyleman, A. A. Milne, Hugh Lofting and Others Make the Season One of Joy for Boys and Girls

FUNNYBONE ALLEY. By Alfred Kreymborg. The Macauley Company, New York.

One the face of it this gay volume is a story book for children, one that in a light and airy way tells of a certain queer section in New York called Ballyboo and of the "mainly ungainly, light-hearted people" who live there. But in it one may read between the lines the poet's philosophy of life, a philosophy that yearns for simplicity and leisurely ways.

Ballyboo, we are told, "lies somewhere under the sun by day, somewhere in the moonlight at night and somewhere between the Battery and the Bronx, with a river for a necklace, a lake for a bracelet and a pond around the middle finger." With these clear directions there is no reason why the imaginative child should not be able to find it.

After learning of the honest shopkeepers who lived in the crooked lane called Funnybone Alley, and how they could never go to bed when they were sleepy because the children "would not go to sleep until they could," we are given the lullaby invented by a woman who was young and wise, lovely and simple, a lullaby that put the children to sleep willy nilly.

Then we are whisked to Funnybone Alley and to the old couple who run the delicatessen shop at No. 13. It is their nephew Sam and his most unusual adventures that the rest of the chapters are more or less concerned with. Each episode is told in prose, with the point, that is sometimes a "moral," gayly expressed in a poem that rounds out each chapter.

It is all very gay and whimsical and, for the right child or the wrong grown-up, very fascinating.

THE KATY KRUSE DOLLY BOOK. With Verses by Rose Fyleman. The George H. Doran Company, New York.

Here is a perfectly delightful book for little girls. It has oodles of pictures, including eleven colored plates in which we see sturdy dolls all busily engaged in their household tasks and social activities. They are really the most appealing little folk I have ever seen within the covers of a book.

A thin thread of story in prose is interspersed with poems composed on the moment's inspiration by Mrs. Dolly, who resembles Silas Wegg in her poetic proclivities.

It's all as jolly as can be and is sure to bring delight to the fortunate small person who acquires the book, which is equivalent in itself to a whole family of dolls.

If you have a small daughter be sure not to expose her to this $2 book unless you intend to buy it.

NOW WE ARE SIX. By A. A. Milne. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

The author of "When We Were Very Young" seems to have an inexhaustible supply of verses for young people, all inspired by his small son, known to the world as Christopher Robin. In this new volume, with its decorations by Ernest H. Shepard, Christopher is 6 years of age, but we are told that the name of the book doesn't mean that "this is us being 6 all the time, but that it is about as far as we have got at present." Some of it is, in fact, "simply threeish."

There are all sorts of jingles here; one about King John, who was so bad that no one loved him enough to give him a single Christmas present; one about the engineer (who is really Christopher Robin,) and another about that unseen Binker who is the little boy's alter ego, and many others in happy variety.

"Busy" is one that is too good for mere words to describe. It begins thus:

"I think I am a Muffin Man, I haven't got a bell,
I haven't got the muffin things that muffin people sell.

Perhaps I am a Postman. No, I think I am a Tram.
I'm feeling rather funny and I don't know what I am."

DOCTOR DOLITTLE'S GARDEN. By Hugh Lofting. The Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.

In this new "Doctor Dolittle" book we become better acquainted with the residents of the famous doctor's garden, in which various animals thrive. In the first part of the volume everything else is suspended while we listen to the story of his life as narrated by Quetch, the Aberdeen, who is curator of the Dogs' Museum.

Insects play an important part in the story, with a giant moth from another world creating amazement. Taken all in all, there is no reason why any child who adds this volume to his collection need fear disappointment.

TALES WORTH TELLING. By Charles J. Finger. The Century Company, New York.

Tales of Java and South America, of Hungary and Turkey, Arabia and Ireland and of other lands have been collected by the author, who has thought them out carefully and set them down in this fine big book.

Magicians and fairies, genii and giants, eerie creatures of all sorts play their part in the tales, which embody the superstitions and the folklore of many countries.

They are told with an air of authenticity that makes them doubly pleasing. The volume is one of genuine value for its folklore. It is well illustrated by Paul Honore.

WONDER TALES FROM PIRATE ISLES. Chiefly translated from the Dutch. By Frances Jenkins Olcott. Longmans, Green & Co., New York.

The East Indies, with their atmosphere of mystery and magic, have furnished these tales, which Miss Olcott has made exciting by seasoning them well with pirate doings.

She explans in her foreword that East Indian tales resemble a tropic jungle with their profusion of Brahman, Hindu and Mohammedan legends, their Malay tales and those that are half Portuguese and half native. Into this jungle she has dipped for her material and has so shaped the folklore and legend that she has selected as to make the book one that many a child will enjoy.

liam Leonard. The Century Company, New York.

Those who have read "Two Lives," the strange and moving narrative written as a sonnet sequence in which William Ellery Leonard told of his tragic marriage with a lovely girl shadowed by insanity and of her suicide, which wrought such havoc in his life, know with what searching intensity, with what shattering introspective analysis he has tried to probe into the cause of the tragedy that shattered him.

Even the purgation of the confessional has been unable to free Leonard of the blight of that experience, as will be clear to all who read "The Locomotive God." It is an autobiographical study, original, strange, at times appearing almost ridiculous to our standardized minds, but stimulating to all who appreciate genius in any form it chooses to express itself.

Dr. Leonard has for years suffered from certain phobias. The worst of these is that one which makes it impossible for him to go more than a half-mile or so from his own home without suffering absurd and seemingly irrational fear, so great as to cause panic.

It is his purpose in this book to trace back over his life and discover the causes of this fear which has rendered him a prisoner within a restricted radius. It is his unconscious mind that he must probe and this he has done with the aid of hypnotism, psychoanalysis and any other assistance that has been available. This long and arduous course of probing has convinced him that the beginning of his fear complex was in a fright he had when he was a child 2½ years of age. This alone would not have caused the trouble; it took other nervous shocks added to this to do it.

No discussion can present Dr. Leonard's argument; only the reader who is ready to follow him in his remarkable book can hope to get any idea of it.

Fortunately there is much else of absorbing interest, such as the illuminating study of his adolesence and the account of his life in Madison, where as a member of the faculty of the University of Wisconsin he has enjoyed much and endured more.

Gasoline of the future will come from "cracking" petroleum, coal tar, shale oil and wood tar, says an expert.

A GROUP OF RECENT BOOKS

sity student use, the book is ideally arranged for those who are desirous of making a reasoned study of the continent of South America, either for purposes of travel or with a view to understanding the problems of these people, who are daily becoming more important to the world of trade and politics.

There is a good index and some fifty maps and diagrams that add materially to the book's value.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF CZECHO-SLOVAKIA

Surrounded by affairs of state in his palace at Prague, weighed with responsibilities which involve a nation, an extremely busy man—one Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, first President of the new republic of Czecho-Slovakia and just re-elected—has yet found time to give to the world a survey of every aspect of national and international life in this century. "The Making of a State: Memories and Observations: 1914-1918," published by Stokes, is a contribution to public knowledge of the World War. As Henry Wickham Steed says, "It is the work of a philosopher-historian whom Fate made a constructive seatesman. His broad learning and sense of history run through it. His analyses of pan-Germanism, of Communism and of Bolshevism are masterly."

In discussing Dr Benes, able Czecho-Slovakian Foreign Minister, Anne Hard of the New York Herald-Tribune cannot resist deviating a little to say: "Prague . . . In the palace that cool, serene, wise man whose statue confronts the newcomer in the railroad station, whose name is equally on the lip of Czech and Slovak—professor, not too theoretical; statesman, not too exigent—Thomas Masaryk."

SELLING BY MAIL. Principles and Practice. By Verncur Edmuen Pratt. McGraw Hill Book Company, New York.

A practical book on the subject of mail order business, beginning with the underlying principles and proceeding to the most successful practices, with copious examples.

The technique of the business has a chapter, followed by such topics as catalogs, mail-order literature, sales letters, follow-up, credits and collections, advertising, securing agents by mail, etc.

LIBRARY'S LIST OF JUVENILES

secret messages for the great Gen. Garibaldi.

The writer of the introduction has recently returned to Los Angeles as principal of the new philosophy and religion department of the Central Public Library.

SKIPPING VILLAGE. A town of not so very long ago. Written and illustrated by Lois Lenski. Stokes.

Besides giving delight to children with its many lively pictures, this book will make more than one grown person homesick for a childhood in a small village where everybody knew everybody else, where there was no Ford service station, no smart drug store, and where life moved more gently and sweetly.

NOW WE ARE SIX. By A. A. Milne. Illustrated by E. H. Shepherd. Dutton.

Has there ever been a book of gay verse to equal "When We Were Very Young?" If that be possible, here it is. Christopher Robin, who skipped through the first book, and romped in and out among the stories in "Winnie-The-Pooh," now reappears to add to the pleasure of young and old.

YESTERDAY AND TODAY. A collection of verse. Arranged and selected by Louis Untermeyer. Illustrated by Edna Reindal. Harcourt, Brace.

A most delectable serving up of poetry for the young of any age.

SINGING YOUTH. Edited by Mabel Mountaier. Harper.

Here is proof that children of today are experiencing and expressing beauty, as youth always has done. Even the decorations of this shining volume were made by children. However, both poems and decorations are interesting first as pure art, not as the work of immaturity.

FINDER OF FIRE. By Francis Rolt-Wheeler. Appleton.

In this story of Neanderthal life one feels one's self part of the primitive scheme of things. Many boys will enjoy it.

FLAMING ARROW. By Carl Moon. Stokes.

Che-loo, Pangua Indian youth, is sent to the mesa village of the Paulantees ostensibly as a trader, but really to get and to give information that will straighten out a tangle caused by the sudden disappearance of the tribal leader or cacique of the Paulantees. The adventurous action is swift and continuous, and will be followed with relish by boys and girls.

SEVEN CITIES OF CIBOLA. By Aileen Nusbaum. Putnam.

Legends of the Zuni Indians, beautifully told and illustrated. Mrs. Nusbaum is the wife of the Superintendent of the Mesa Verde National Park. The striking and authentic decorations are the work of the museum assistant there. This book is a worthy addition to folk lore.

THE TRADE WIND. By Cornelia Meigs. Illustrations in color by Henry Pitz. Little, Brown.

A sea-going adventure story of American shipping just before the Revolution. Among some 400 manuscripts this one was recently chosen to receive the $2000 prize as the best adventure story to add to the Beacon Hill Bookshelf.

WE. By Col. Charles Lindbergh. Putnam.

A simple straightforward narrative of the life of Col. Lindbergh, written by himself. Every word of it is full of interest to young America. Although written here and there in the midst of excitements attending receptions in Paris and elsewhere, through it all shows the steady courage and modesty of the "lone eagle."

ADVENTURES OF A TRAFALGAR LAD. By John Lesterman. Harcourt, Brace.

John Purdie, young English boy, falls into the clutches of the dread pirate Estramier, and so starts out perforce on a career of adventure.

HORSES NOW AND LONG AGO. By Lucy Sprague Mitchell, with maps and drawings by the author, and many photographs. Harcourt Brace.

Stories of horses of different times in history, bringing in the life and atmosphere of the age. This is a good book for parents to read to children beginning to be interested in history. It is written by a prominent educator.

TOM CRINGLE'S LOG. By Michael Scott. Dodd, Mead.

Swashbuckling adventure in the British navy during the American Revolution. This was written early in the last century by a Scotch merchant, and now appears in a handsome edition illustrated by Mead Schaefer.

SPREADING STAIN. By Charles J. Finger. Frontispiece by Paul Honore. Doubleday.

Some boys of 17 or thereabouts will find a "kinsprit" in the youth who tells this imaginative story woven around the modern subject of chemical invention.

SIBERIAN GOLD. By Theodore Acland Harper and Winifred Harper. Doubleday.

Better-than-ordinary adventure awaits any reader of this book. Stephen Wyld, an intrepid young American mining engineer, is sent by his chief into the dangerous fastnesses of Siberia, where he encounters obstacles of expected and unexpected kinds. Grown readers as well as young people will enjoy it.

HEROES OF MODERN ADVENTURE. By T. C. Bridges and H. Hessell Tiltman. Little, Brown.

Fascinating account of explorative and other ventures, including the exploits of Charles Lindbergh and of "T. E. Lawrence." A book of general interest.

CHILDREN TO VIE FOR FILM JOBS

Benefit Affair Planned to Give Youngsters Chance in Motion Pictures

Los Angeles' gifted youngsters are to have an opportunity to try for honors in the films through a competition planned in connection with the film church fiesta to be staged as a benefit affair by St. Mary of the Angels Church in Hollywood on December 30, at the Tiffany-Stahl studios, according to an announcement made by Rev. Neal Dodd, the rector. The funds raised through the fair will be used to pay off the mortgage on the church edifice.

Los Angeles' three most popular kiddies, as winners of the contest, each will receive salaried employment in studios, in addition to handsome loving cups. The winner of the first prize will be given a month's engagement in a studio; the second prize winner, two weeks work, and the third, a week's employment. Other special prizes are to be announced later.

The competition is open to children between the ages of 2 and 10 years without regard to nationality, and all entrants will be photographed. Parents may enter kiddies by applying to the general chairman, Kiddies' Screen Opportunity Committee, Paramount Theater Building, Santa Monica, near Western avenue, the headquarters of the fiesta.

Under the supervision of Rev. Dodd, the rector, St. Mary of the Angels Church has for many years been active in charitable work among members of the film colony, particularly those who suffer through failure to obtain continuous employment in the films.

Actor Cited as British Major in China Service

Victor McLaglen, the brawny Briton whose performances as Capt. Flagg in the motion picture, "What Price Glory," now playing with Movietone at the Tower Theater, was offered a commission as a major in the British expeditionary force for service in China.

McLaglen's old regiment, the Cheshire Rifles in which he held the rank of captain during its campaigns in the Near East in the great war, was ordered to hold itself in readiness for service at Shanghai. McLaglen, who is still a member of the reserve, received notice that if he reported at Hongkong he will be given the rank of major on joining the troops. He did not accept.

"What Price Glory" was directed by Raoul Walsh from the story by Maxwell Anderson and Laurence Stallings. Dolores Del Rio, Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe are featured in the great war epic.

The war picture is accompanied throughout by a symphony orchestra of 110 pieces. Critics are of the unanimous opinion that it is perfect synchronization. This is done through Movietone.

Movietone with the William Fox News Weekly enables theatergoers, it is said, to see and hear world-famous notables and celebrities as plainly as though they were speaking from the stage.

VACATION AT CATALINA

Joseph Franklin Poland, Universal's feature comedy supervisor, is spending a week's vacation at Catalina Island, accompanied by Director William Beaudine and other members of the staff working on Laura La Plante's next picture, "Home, James."

BOOKS LURE CHRISTMAS GIFT BUYERS

Everything from Modern Offerings to Hand-Tooled Volumes on Display

With everything from hand tooled volumes to modern offerings that scorn the use of capital letters on their paper jackets, Christmas books are luring many an early Christmas shopper to the book sections of the big department stores. According to buyers, the world of books offers a bewildering choice, and book lovers can be beautifully remembered this year whether their preference is for religious study, biography, travel or the latest fiction.

There are very beautiful books to be obtained as gifts for those who consider old volumes as great treasures, or for those who care greatly about bindings, and some of these rare volumes are to be found in almost every line of reading.

Many favorite fiction authors have brought out new books for the Christmas trade.

WAXWORKS SCENE

One of the most striking tableaux used in "Get Your Man," Clara Bow's latest starring picture at Paramount, represents a waxworks group of Paul Poiret, Parisian designer, draping five models. More than 200 yards of gorgeous silks were used for this effect.

JACK HOLT'S NEXT

Jack Holt will start work on his next picture for Columbia Pictures within the next week. George Seitz will direct the production. Holt recently finished work on "The Tigress," a Columbia picture, which also was directed by Seitz.

Reducing Your Weight

By Dr. Theodore Beck

Science recognizes truly the extreme embarrassment, the constant annoyance and the real danger of becoming too fleshy. Particularly is the condition most pitiable during hot weather. If, therefore, this condition can be overcome, as it unquestionably can in a vast number of cases, I am truly glad to point the way.

It appears to be an established fact that obesity is often due to a partial failure of the thyroid gland to secrete and disperse through the blood an iodine gland substance which nature intended as a regulator of the fat absorption from the food consumed. Science, through myriads of experiments, discovered that the simple administration of the dessicated thyroid gland substance supplies to a degree nature's need for the control of fatty accumulation.

For many years I have recommended Arbolone tablets as a reliable, non-secret home remedy, as it contains one grain of thyroid gland, with other approved ingredients, that have a tendency to aid in reducing the superfluous fatty tissues and to regulate the perverted craving for wrong foods. Taken as per directions, I have never known them to be harmful; on the contrary, many have gratefully written the facts of their success. Leading pharmacies dispense Arbolone Tablets.

Registered Nurse Reduced With Arbolone

"I have benefited after using for about three months when all other prescriptions did me no good at all. Arbolone certainly has done for me and another member of my family what nothing else could do though I had tried for years, etc." (Signed) N. Mc St. C——, R. N., New York City.

Reduced 15 Pounds First Month

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Mrs. L. V——, —— Detroit Ave., Suite 4, writes: "I have been taking Arbolone so far, for one month, and lost 15 pounds. I feel better and know I look much better, too. Thanking you, etc."

Lost 15 Pounds In Two Weeks

NEW YORK CITY, John D., S—— E. 125th St., writes: "I used Arbolone Tablets two weeks and lost 15 pounds. Weighed 170 before and now 155. I am 55 years old, a baker and work every day. It is a great relief for me, so thank you."

Used Arbolone Successfully

RENOVA, PA., Mrs. H. A. F—— Erie Ave., writes: "I took the Arbolone tablets and must say they have done me a lot of good. I weighed 180 pounds. After taking a few days I did not have that stuffy feeling so I kept on and now I weigh 160 pounds. Thanks to you for the good they have done. I am telling my over-stout friends, because I know they have never done me any harm. Thanking you again, etc."

Arbolone tablets are sold and recommended by good druggists everywhere.—[Advertisement.

Acid Scalp

How many carefully coiffured heads can stand the test of eyes only inches away, and reveal not a speck of dandruff? How many women can warm to the dance, and know their hair will have no taint for the partner who holds them close?

No one can be sure who has acid scalp.

If you even suspect this acid condition of the scalp, it is time for Danderine. This scientific preparation will neutralize any acidity; and dissolve all dandruff if there is any. And it always gives the hair itself a lovely softness and sheen. It will wave better, hold a wave longer, and behave better all the time if you just occasionally apply a few drops of Danderine. Try it! Every drugstore has this perfect conditioner of the scalp and hair, and a thirty-five cent bottle lasts for weeks.

MONTE BLUE FILM PLANNED AS TRIBUTE TO ALL AIRMEN

Lindbergh, Byrd, Chamberlin and the others who risked their lives and won, and also those who risked their lives and lost, are being immortalized daily via the newspapers and magazines.

Warner Brothers are making a motion-picture, "Across the Atlantic," starring Monte Blue, dedicated to those who risked their lives that aviation might go forward. It is a thrilling tale of a trans-Atlantic flight, and the events in a man's life which brought him to the test, as well as the stirring events following it.

Monte Blue, the star, returned from New York last week to begin work in this picture. His journey to New York was for the purpose of visiting Curtiss Field. He prolonged his stay as long as possible for Monte became an enthusiastic aviation fan.

Lindbergh according to Blue, proved the actuality of long distance flying, and Chamberlin's flight from this country to Berlin left no doubt as to the possibilities of the airplane in peace or wartime.

Blue believes that the time is not far distant when airplanes will be in commercial passenger use between every principal city in the country. Airplane development is now being worked out on a basis of greater safety rather than speed, according to the Warner Brothers' star, who has made several short trips via passenger planes.

In "Across the Atlantic" a document is being woven to show the hardships and the thrills of a trans-oceanic hop, a vehicle which will visually demonstrate the feats that newspaper columns have described these past months. Edna Murphy has the leading feminine role opposite Monte Blue. Darryl Zanuck, after an intensive study of aviation conditions, wrote the story of "Across the Atlantic." Harvey Gates adapted it for the screen.

TERPSICHORE

The Ernest E. Ryan School of Dancing announces the opening of a beginning class for high school students in ballroom dancing Friday evening. The beginners class meets every Friday evening at 7 o'clock and the advanced every Friday evening at 8 o'clock, followed by an hour and a half of practice and social dancing. These classes are exclusively for young people registered in a high school and references are required for admittance into the classes.

Marshall Hall, founder of the Dancecraft Studios, states that strenuous but systematic exercise, with hot and cold showers following, will do much toward keeping healthy the person whose work is more or less confining. For this reason the garden pavilion of the Dancecraft Studios is especially popular. Among recent enrollments for this type of work are a group of prominent motion-picture celebrities.

Those interested in the pantomimic art had an opportunity on last Sunday afternoon and evening to witness the pupils of Carter Weaver perform a program of personality numbers and poems. A general reception was held after the children's performance in the evening, in which various visiting artists participated.

The latest vaudeville team to avail themselves of the dance service Earle Wallace is able to give professional dancers was Pepita Granados and Harry Holbrook, who were recently seen at the Orpheum in "Spanish Serenade." They are trying out the new dance numbers and routine at the Orpheum in San Francisco this week, and it is expected that they will be seen at the Hillstreet in the near future.

NEW DEPARTMENT FOR BELCHER SCHOOL

Is Los Angeles long heralded a center of ballet dancing also to become a center for step dancing?

Ernest Belcher thinks so!

He advances reasons for this fact that New York producers are asking for well-trained step dancers as well as those qualified in ballet work. Step dancing is the present rage on Broadway and clever artists can command their own salaries, according to Belcher.

To meet the demand for this type of entertainment Belcher has put in his school a separate department for step dancing. This is the dancing master's first departure from the classics since he established the school here nine years ago. Belcher pointed out that step dancing with its variations will never supplant or even interfere with ballet work. Both are necessary he says, and both take years of training to reach the peak of the profession.

OPERATIC BARITONE HERE FOR CONCERT

Giulio Ronconi, operatic baritone, will be presented in concert in Los Angeles, at Philharmonic Auditorium, December 12, under the auspices of the Los Angeles chapter of Hadassah. Featured prominently as soloist upon the program, will be Calmon Luboviski, popular violinist, with Claire Mellinino at the piano. The concert is under the management of France Goldwater.

Giulio Ronconi has just arrived in America from the Orient, where he concertized extensively, appearing in Japan, China, Java, Sumatra, and India. Previous to this, he made numerous tours in both concert and opera, and was the leading baritone of the Moscow Imperial Opera for five years preceding the revolution.

ANNUAL PROGRAM IS PRESENTED BY CLUB

The Los Angeles Flute Club is giving its annual concert at the Polytechnic Auditorium on Friday evening. This organization is composed of professional and nonprofessional flutists who aim to further the cause of the flute.

There will be songs with flute obligati, flute solos with piano accompaniment by Jay Plowe, William Hullinger, Mrs. Helen Mead Little and Arthur Wade. A novelty never before programmed in the West will be the Sibelius "Suite Mignon," for two flutes and string quintet. Artists from the Philharmonic Orchestra will assist, as well as the delightful Il Novvello Trio of flute, viola and harp.

OATMAN PUPILS PLAN AMBITIOUS SCHEDULE

The Marta Oatman Players are opening the children's Sunday matinee theater with A. A. Milne's "Make Believe" on the eleventh floor at Barker Brothers, on Seventh street between Flower and Figueroa.

They have recently completed the production of "Smilin' Through" and are working now are now working double-time rehearsals for their forthcoming production, "Fata Morgana," which is scheduled for an early opening date.

Katherine Kavanaugh is now conducting a short practical course in scenario writing at the Marta Oatman School in Los Angeles. She has appeared on the screen many times as the author of original photoplays and adaptations.

Mrs. J. J. Carter, founder of the Hollywood Bowl, is to be initiated as an honorary member of Pi Kappa Lambda, national honorary music sorority at the college of music, University of Southern California, at their first meeting of the year tomorrow evening at the home of Miss Alice Frazier, 675 South Kingsley Drive.

Soloists of the evening will be Miss Olga Steeb, head of the Olga Steeb School of Music, and Mrs. Annie Mottram Craig Batten, faculty member of the college of music, University of Southern California.

SPENCE PLANS FOR NEW PLAYS

producers grin satisfiedly with their bargain. They learned long ago that a set of Spence titles so enhanced the enjoyment value of a film that it was apt to gross up to $500,000 more than if "un-Spencetitled."

In between times, Spence concocts plays. In three nights he did "The Gorilla," a corking mystery drama, from which was made the picture of the same name which opens at the Million Dollar Theater on Thursday. An act a night. The play was produced just as written with practically no changes in lines or construction, and from it the author has already netted $250,000.

From all of which, it may be seen that Spence does not strive to emulate the starving poets of old whom tradition has wasting away in garrets for lack of appreciation.

He is an ex-newspaper man. Started on the Houston Chronicle as cub reporter when he was 14. Later worked in the press room, the composing room, the advertising department, the editorial department. Went to the Mergenthaler Linotype school finally and learned how to take a linotype machine apart in its 3000 pieces and get them all back into place again.

"What did you want to know all that for?" he was asked.

"Oh, I kind of figured I'd have a paper of my own some day," he said.

And he was general manager of a daily in Texas when he was 21. At the time of the Mexican rebellion in 1915, he was a special correspondent with the troops and developed into quite an authority on army and border affairs.

NO JOB FOR HIM

After the Mexican melee was at an end, he came up to Hollywood intending to write publicity. But nobody had a publicity job for him, and finally he went to work for Mack Sennett in the scenario department. Later, he went to Fox, and it was while with that organization, just about ten years ago, that he conceived the idea of making picture-titles really mean something of themselves.

Thus, he was the "daddy" of title writers of whom there is a large and earnest flock these days.

Fox, in giving him a chance to try out his ideas, paid him $50 a week.

"I certainly worked hard those days," he grinned reminiscently. "Night and day. I tried everything. I titled 'em this way and that, there were long ones, short ones, I used many titles and few in one picture, developed several humorous points and just one point to a sentence.

"But finally, I got the angle I liked. Explain it? That's difficult. A title writer is like a newspaper reporter. One chap senses news and the other can't see it unless it hits him. He hasn't the news angle. Well, there's a title angle and it's based on timing, continuity, where the punch comes and several other things." Above all, there must be a feeling of continuity to a set of titles, just as in any composition."

Title writing is the most difficult kind of writing of all. Spence thinks. It's the hardest work for him.

I believe I can write two plays to one set of titles and not be as tired," he said. "And I intend to write nothing but plays sooner or later, leaving the titles to the young fellows. I have a contract now for four as soon as they can be written.

"I may do some more newspaper writing. When I was in New York this last time, I talked with Jack Wheeler of the Bell Syndicate about a daily article series. Remember Mr. Garrity and Mr. Mulligan of 'The Gorilla.' Well they'll do the talking, like the Mr. Dooley series, you know."

PROMINENT ORGANIST GIVES RECITAL HERE

Organists throughout Southern California are showing marked interest in the recital to be given by Palmer Christian of the University of Michigan Tuesday evening at the First Baptist Church in Los Angeles. Mr. Christian is universally recognized as among the leading concert organists of America and his appearance in Los Angeles is, therefore, a major event of the musical season. Mr. Christian's appearance here is made possible by the joint endeavor of the American Guild of Organists, Los Angeles chapter, and the First Baptist Church, music department. The recital is open to the public without admission charge.

Many pupils of Guido Caselotti, Los Angeles voice teacher and opera coach, filled important engagements during the past week. Louise Caselotti, at Carthay Circle, together with Thomas Ames, Stephen Gombos, Ruth Fisher, Gail Hodgson and Carlos Villar, appearing with Jack Laughlin's prologue, were heard at the Elks' Club Monday night, at the Biltmore Tuesday noon and at the Breakfast Club on Saturday morning. Leah Pemberton was heard in a song recital in Oklahoma City, while Madeline Baker was the soloist at the Breakfast Club and Gerald Barbeau at the Pacific Coast Club at Long Beach.

An important engagement has been signed up for Maria Caselotti, wife and star pupil of Maestro Caselotti, which will call her to Havana, Cuba, to sing in La Traviata, Rigoletto, Lucia, Barbiere di Siviglia, La Boheme and other operas beginning January 7.

STORES AND HOMES

HELPFUL IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS

By Olive Gray

Hate's Taboo

If the world came forth at the word of God, there is another word which can destroy obliterate it utterly—in so far as humanity is concerned and that is the word "war." If that word could be cast out from the vocabulary of the nations and from the thoughts of all individuals, we would have gone a long way toward making homes safe. Despite the new social revelations and resolutions, nothing is of such consequence to women as the home and children; and how they seems all civic protection thrown around these treasures when war is even a remote possibility. If women would throw around that word "war" a taboo strong as the jungle evil, excluding it from speech and thought, world peace would immediately be in effect, and for all time.

Flowers

Next best must be the fingers of Italian workers who fashion those lovely like the ones produced by Truly, I paused beside a big jar of mignonette in that store where Italian art objects abound, and quickly fancied that I smelled that alluring fragrance—a subtle odor of pressed in a beloved book of verse? Mignonette hidden in a tangled garden, where old-fashioned flowers bloom.

Plant Stands

Plant stands with carved and painted Italian heads and faces atop them are very gifty. Made in Los Angeles, the Italian faces smiling at you as you hang down your hat—they should speed you forth to a happy day of work or play.

Dishes in Italy

When we are in Italy—or that section of the store where things Italian abound—I must call attention to those quaint trays, so ancient looking, so gilded and painted antiquely. They look like heirlooms, and are as well as beautiful; for they are light weight trays of Chinese straw, strong enough to uphold an entire tea set or luncheon service.

Individual Tabling

There is a fad for individual table service, each differing from the other—bread plate, cup, saucer, bread plate all in one pattern, his in another, still different. Thus is favored the innate desire for individualism—which manifests with the first beginnings of childhood—a desire which continues to a more or less marked degree, throughout life. Among the wise choice in these table service sets will be toward a uniformity in coloring and pattern, so in design, so that the table will not be "patchy" in appearance.

Christmas Gifts

Gifts-always as Christmas gifts, there is a California kind in everything from postcards to furniture. We are so proud of our California that we wish to share it with our many friends (to compensate them for fat-awayness from California) and I would not say but that the pleasure in gifting those dear ones in the Californianess of it all. This season, such articles as Californian, are many and interesting. There are silks made right here, forms of objects artistic and useful, and quite appropos as gifts for the new regime, there are bath towels with scenes suggestive of our coast, woven in the borders. And, of course, there always are the fruit baskets of our fruits, superb as eastern going gifts.

Color Goes Blue

Blue, insistent in its vogue for the past for such accessories of dress as shoes, hand bags and sport hats, has taken to blue as a favorite color. This blue is the bright, unstintingly bright shade which goes under several names, and expresses itself especially well in leather. Many of the girls like to have in a coat of blue leather, shoes and hand bag in the same shade, and if the hat is of different material, such as felt or velvet, it is said to match in tone the blue of the other articles.

Bags and Scintillants

Small bags in black velvet with jewels by way of ornament are a feature of the hour. Usually, the brilliants are in the form of monograms of the owner, although sometimes more intricate designs are chosen. For use with tailleurs or frocks or ensembles in black velvet, these bags are modish. The flat bag is most popular, although occasionally the pouch is seen.

Fashion Carrying

The choice of carry-alls for portfolios the Christmas shopping is to be decided upon early, especially in our city, where holiday buying begins so early. Time was when many of these conveniences were to we did of travel-lugs. It was then considered au fait to possess worn, travel-marked bags and cases; but how the reverse is as true in travel-things as in Christmas gifts.

The Mood of the Mode

Velveteen is widely used for sports wear. The fur-trimmed cloth coat is most popular. Evening gowns are cut very low in the back. The fur-lined coat is very smart this winter. The tunic frock which ends in a point is new. Shoes with jeweled straps and buckles are new. The strap slipper is enhanced by the addition of suede and kid are favored for evening wear. Bracelets are conspicuous among the latest novelties. Evening gowns show a touch of fur or some color. Fur, in fact is a feature of many evening finishes. Fur is a favorite evening accessory is the fur muff. The pouch muff will be a feature of the fur evening mode.

SCHOLARSHIP ACTION TAKEN

World Cruise Luncheon to Aid Movement Scheduled

International Aspect to be Given Event, 23rd Inst.

University Women's Club to Officiate as Hostesses

A "Round the World Cruise Luncheon," aboard the steamship "Scholarship," is announced for Wednesday the 23rd inst., by the Women's Club of the University of Southern California, of which Mrs. R. B. Von Kleinsmid is president. "Sailing" at 1 o'clock, with the "Pier of Debarkation" at the women's residence hall, 666 West Thirty-sixth street, the world tour party will have the gratification of realizing not only a delightful diversion, but also of having rendered a personal and philanthropic service by booking for the collegiate cruise.

The "Staterooms De Luxe" will have attached to them the privilege of endowing a $500 scholarship at the University of Southern California, carrying the founder's name, such as the Rector scholarship at DePauw University. Accommodations on the de luxe deck may also be procured for $250, and this delightful stateroom will insure the establishment of a part-scholarship, which, combined with another similar one, or with a number of lesser amounts totaling the same sum, will also provide a student scholarship on the Trojan campus.

One obtains a general first-class passage for the intriguing international luncheon to be served aboard the S.S. Scholarship at the pseudo-nautical affair. Bookings are being made at WAshington 4366 and UNIversity 6812 by the cadets of the good ship. The menu itself is international in scope, with such foreign dishes included as pilaf, gouiash and chop suey.

Costumed in the garb of their native countries, foreign students at the local university will serve the international meal, and the program following the luncheon will also be of a universal character. Music and narratives of many nations, talks on the student life of various countries, and entertaining numbers will be included.

The scholarships which will be announced at the world cruise luncheon will not only aid the American girls going to college at Southern California, but will also encourage and assist the foreign students.

The Women's Club of the University of Southern California, organized for service, is to act as hostess for this globe-encircling scholarship.

COMPLETES SEVENTH

Cornelius Keefe completed work this week in his seventh production since his arrival here in February from New York City, the juvenile lead in "Come to My House," which Al Green directed for Fox.

BEN LYON AT WORK

Ben Lyon this week began his co-starring role with Greta Nissen in "Hell's Angels," which Luther Reed is directing for United Artists.

WELL-BALANCED CAST LIKENED TO BASEBALL TEAM PLAY

Frank Urson feels that in "Chicago" he has an all-star cast worthy of the phrase—a well-balanced organization that is comparable to a pennant-winning baseball combination.

This unique parallel, Urson explains thusly:

"On a great diamond team the mixture of experience with youthful verve and freshness is a much-to-be-desired essential.

"A cast made up of veterans may not give the director everything he requires in a subject of the magnitude and importance of Maurine Watkins's 'Chicago.' Neither would a group of beginners begin to approximate, even under most skillful direction, a cast performance that would convincingly reflect the script, such as I have received from Lenore Coffee. But the ideal combination I have found in my 'Chicago' star list,

"I can compare Phyllis Haver, playing Roxie Hart, and Victor Varconi, with a great baseball battery, pitcher and catcher. They are the vital propelling cogs of my drama. No better cinematic infield could be assembled for my purposes than Julia Faye, a well-tried and scintillating performer; Virginia Bradford, a young star of great promise and considerable attainment to date; Robert Edeson, that veteran of many Cecil B. De Mille hits, and May Robson, star of stage and screen.

"For a hard-hitting, true-throwing outfield there are T. Roy Barnes, who plays the serio-satiric reporter; Warner Richmond and Clarence Burton with a great utility line-up in Otto Lederer, Eugene Pallette and Sidney D'Albrook.

"The director is comparable to the manager and the photographers are the umpires and arbiters whose last words are law. In Peverell Marley I have probably the greatest camera chief available. He photographed Mr. De Mille's 'The King of Kings' and other great works."

Urson has almost reached the halfway mark in production of "Chicago."

PLAY AT MAYAN ON LAST WEEK

Rehearsals for "Sunny" Now Under Way to Opening of Show 23rd Inst.

"Twinkle, Twinkle," starring Joe E. Brown and Nancy Welford, enters tonight upon its final week at the Mayan Theater and will close with the midnight performance Saturday.

In the meantime rehearsals are progressing for the forthcoming production, "Sunny," which opens Tuesday night, the 23rd inst.

"Sunny," has been called the most magnificent musical show ever produced, and in New York, where it played for two solid years to sold-out houses, it established the American record for long runs among musical shows.

Helen Paterson will play the name role of Sunny and the cast will include such notables as Ernest Wood, William Valentine, Peggy Hope, Joe Donahue, Nita Martan, Fred C. Holmes, Lillian Mines, Morgan Williams, Wendell Marshall, Gary C. Breckner, Carter Sexton and others. The story is that of a bareback rider, Sally, who was a favorite of the A.E.F. in France during the war. Former doughboys traveling in Africa after the war recognize her as the queen of a traveling circus and the reunion is a happy one, followed, however, by complications that give moments of comedy, drama and love.

The premiere of this mammoth production promises to be a notable event in Los Angeles theatrical history.

WILL WRITE TITLES

Anne Nichols is to write the titles for Paramount's production of "Abie's Irish Rose;" she herself wrote and produced the stage play.

MOST INERT CHEMICAL NOW AIDING IN MOTION PICTURES

Just as impoverished nobility comes to Hollywood and goes to work in pictures—so the nobility of the chemical world has also been put to hard labor in the making of photoplays. In fact, the very quintessence of chemical nobility is now helping to produce the light by which film stars are photographed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

In chemical parlance, an element which can not join with or be affected by any other chemical or element is known as a "noble" element. Among these are several gases, hellium, neon and argon.

And argon, the most inert of the list, has been put to work. It is used to fill the new glass incandescent bulbs which are replacing the studio arc lights. These lights were first used in filming Lillian Gish in "The Wind," and extensive experiments are now being made to develop their use at the studios.

HUGE LIGHTS

The bulbs are huge, incandescent lights which, instead of being contained in a vacuum are contained in tubes of argon, whith is tasteless, colorless, and is not affected by heat, cold or any chemical. Since its discovery it has been a mystery to science. The new lights are the first instance of its being turned to practical use.

John Arnold, the cameraman, who first discovered the use of argon lights in motion pictures, holds that they give far better results than the older arc lamps, and other studios are taking up their use. The General Electric Company is now experimenting on a light to be designed to gain the ultimate efficiency in picture work.

Argon, the mysterious gas which makes these lamps possible, is contained in the air, in the proportion of .94 of 1 per cent. It is obtained by distilling liquid air, formed under compression, the nitrogen passing off first in the still, which is maintained at 300 deg. below zero; next the argon passes off to be caught in a trap, whence it is drawn and purified.

DISCOVERY OF GAS

The gas was first discovered by Raleigh and Ramsay in 1894. It is named from the word argos, or light, and is the commonest of the five noble gases.

In manufacturing the lamps, tungsten filaments are inserted in glass bulbs, the air pumped from these and the argon substituted, after which they are hermetically sealed. The gas gives less heat loss than a vacuum bulb, thus permitting use of a larger filament or coil of incandescent tungsten wire, thereby attaining the candlepower necessary in film work.

PLAY'S FIVE-YEAR HISTORY COVERS IMPORTANT PERIOD

On May 28, 1922, Anne Nichols's "Abie's Irish Rose" opened in New York at the Fulton Theater. Then it moved to the Republic, where it remained for five years.

During these five years, virtually everything of importance to the modern world has happened.

When New York's dramatic reviewers on that memorable morn of May 24 staged their memorable mistake, Warren G. Harding was President of the United States.

The Washington naval conference had but recently adjourned, and Mayor Hylan was beginning his second term in office.

Mussolini had not yet been heard of outside of his country.

Henry Ford's Dearborn Independent was just getting into its stride.

Free verse was still in bloom.

The fact that Ford was planning a new type of car hadn't been brought out.

Russia was descending into the shadow of famine and plague.

The age upon which "Abie" dawned was before Helen Wills, Gertrude Ederle or Rene La Coste.

The Wild Bull of the Pampas had yet to sock the Manassa Mauler over the ropes into the arms of the newspaper men in the press box.

Tex Rickard had four years to go before realizing his life's ambition of a $2,000,000 gate.

Before Dayton, Tenn., was, "Abie" was.

William Jennings Bryan was in the limelight daily.

"Abie's Irish Rose" comes before the Dawes plan and is only a few months younger than the Irish Free State.

Now "Abie" has gone into the movies, and Anne Nichols is in Hollywood making ready for the screen adaptation in the Paramount studios. Victor Fleming will direct, and Charles Rogers is to play Abie.

What will happen before the celluloid used in this picture is junked?

Five Previews Acclaim Film His Greatest

Richard Wallace has scored the greatest triumph in his directorial career with his latest opus, "The Texas Steer," judging from the popular response of five different previews of his picture held in a like number of widely separated sections in Los Angeles and its environs.

The enthusiastic reaction of the cinema fans was not only in the form of sustained applause at the various playhouses, but was further expressed through hundreds of cards distributed to the patrons and returned with their comments, each evincing that the young director has surpassed all previous efforts with his megaphone.

Wallace has further benefited by the approach of election time in imparting some deft original humorous touches to Charles Hoyt's famous old stage play. Moreover, he recently seized time by the forelock in filming atmospheric scenes at the national capital, as a law was then pending, it is claimed, to forbid any future public photographing of the Capitol grounds.

"The Texas Steer," revolving around the adventures of a prospective Congressman, differs widely from any of Wallace's previous directorial efforts and has given him wide latitude for the spontaneity of humor that characterizes each of his pictures.

Film Material Not Exhausted, Writer Avers

Is the source of motion-picture material being exhausted, with no further room for exploitation except through the revamping of hackneyed dramatic situations?

"No," answers Raymond L. Schrock, but the problem must be solved by the rising generation of new writers who are unhampered in their imaginations by time-honored literary conventions and dogmatic formulas, he insists.

"Nobody disputes the fact that there is but a limited number of plots or situations, but they are so general as to admit of endless development," says the well-known motion-picture executive, who is the author of a large number of successful original screen stories.

"I have in mind a certain modern dramatist who defied all the warning of pedagogues," says Schrock. "They told him it was impossible to center a play around one character, whose personal emotions were great enough to sustain the dramatic interest alone on the stage for several acts. But this young man refused to believe, and the play is one of the greatest of the day."

Kerry Combines Film Work and Dog Breeding

Norman Kerry, screen actor, is also a dog fancier. At his home in Beverly Hills, Kerry maintains kennels that are said to be known throughout the world among lovers of aristocratic dogs.

When he appears in a film production wherein dogs are used he is always the most popular member of the cast with the canine actors.

The dogs instinctively know that Kerry loves and appreciates them. He spends most of his time between scenes playing with the animals or feeding them. Familiar with most every breed of dog raised in America, Kerry had his first experience with St. Bernards during the filming of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Body and Soul" which is now showing at the Rialto.

There were five St. Bernards in "Body and Soul" including a litter of twelve pups born en route to America. In "Body and Soul" Kerry plays the romantic male lead opposite Aileen Pringle. Lionel Barrymore plays the role of a derelict English doctor married to a beautiful Swiss peasant girl. Reginald Barker directed.

Novel Stage Act is Seen at Loew's Theater

Fanchon and Marco and West Coast Theaters, have a novel act at Loew's State Theater this week as an added attraction to the photoplay—"Ladies From Hell," starring Lillian Gish with Norman Kerry.

Buddy Doyle, former comedian at the New York Winter Garden under Ziegfeld's management, provides fun and entertainment. Doyle is a dancer and singer.

Another feature of the stage entertainment is the Los Angeles Police Quartet. The four members of this organization have become very popular in Southern California and it is reported that their appearance at Loew's State Theater will be followed by engagements in New York and Chicago, provided they can be released from their police duties. It is doubtful, however, if the police department will release them.

Their act at Loew's State bring them great applause. The quartet is composed of R. P. Goerler, bass; J. F. O'Malley, baritone, J. D. Meehan, lead and T. N. Stewart, tenor; at police headquarters they call the quartet "One Solid Top of Harmony." All of the members are six footers and their weights range from 200 to 230.

Male patrons of Loew's State will get a real optical treat when they view the Hollywood beauties, a group of girls which Fanchon and Marco have hand-picked from the ten or twelve choruses which they have traveling around California.

Fanchon and Marco plan to make these Hollywood Beauties the organization of talented young ladies from which their future acts will be selected.

This week, Jack Haley, whose theater billing is "That Joyboy of Joyland," enters upon his fifth week as leader of the Loew's State Band.

Actor Expected to Be Perfect in Productions

In the eyes of motion-picture fans, the hero of the silent drama must be the nearest approach to human perfection, and is expected to exhibit complete poise at all times, in the belief of Edmund Burns, young thespian who recently returned from Sydney, Australia, where he was costarred in an English picture, "An Adorable Outcast."

"The hero must be a sort of superman," says Burns, "and being the cynosure of all eyes, whether or not as an individual he is popular, is constrained to be meticulous in his manners and above the human level in controlling his emotions.

"It has often been said that motion-picture stories must be true to life in order to convince the public," Burns continues, "but if the hero exhibits any of the weaknesses which practically every living person displays at some time or another, he immediately loses his prestige in the eyes of the cinema spectators.

"Even the gangster, though he must pay in the end for his notorious misdeeds, is expected to show some admirable traits once in a while, thus elevating the standard of conduct which must be measured up to by the hero," says Burns.

She Laughs Off All Her Make-up

Fritzi Ridgeway is thriving on comedy. But, says the vivacious actress, the team work of that notable pair, Charlie Murray and George Sidney with whom she plays feminine lead in "Aces Up" which Mervyn Le Roy is directing for First National, makes her laugh her make-up off.

The old adage about "laugh and grow fat" is reversed in Fritzi's case, for she says laughter has made her lose weight. Miss Ridgeway, according to Mr. Le Roy, is a delightful comedienne and is doing great work in the production. She has initiated a lot of clever business for her role of the widow and supplied some novel accessories in her costume that are sure fire laughs.

CHILDREN'S MATINEES SCHEDULED

Latest Innovation in Theatrical World to Open at Barker Bros. Saturday

Marta Oatman's children's matinees, the latest innovation in the theatrical world of Los Angeles, start on Saturday, at 2 p.m. in Barker Bros. Auditorium, eleventh floor, with Milne's "Make Believe," a fantasy of kings and queens and pirates on a desert island.

A series of plays of just as charming character will follow each Saturday. Miss Oatman is giving to each child the privilege of naming the plays they would like to see produced during the coming season. Many requests have already been received from out-of-town schools, making reservations for the matinees. Tickets may be procured in the children's department at Barker Bros.

The Children's Theater, as established by Miss Oatman, will feature the beloved plays of childhood that have been forced out of the commercial theater because of the prohibitive cost of production. There will be revivals of such classics as "Peter Pan," "A Kiss for Cinderella," "Treasure Island," "Don Quixote," "Snow White" and others.

The story of "Make Believe" is as follows: The nine children of the Hubbard family decide to write a play for Christmas. After a great deal of wrangling and in desperation as to where to lay the scene, the question solves itself, for they suddenly find themselves on a lonely island where rice-pudding trees grow everywhere and one drinks from wells of lemon ade. Complications arise when they become involved with desperate pirate crews. Thence the scene changes to a forest glade where, with her fairies and elves, reigns a beautiful princess who falls in love with a handsome woodcutter. "Little Bo-Peep," "Topsy and Eva," "Jack and Jill," "Little Red Riding Hood," "Little Boy Blue" and all the children from the land of "Make Believe" will be at the Saturday matinee performances at Barker Bros.

Yorke Coplen, who is the romantic wood-cutter, is a popular radio violinst and screen actor. He has appeared with Milton Sills, Monte Blue and Louise Fazenda. With the Marta Oatman players he will play some of the leading roles in the children's Saturday matinees. The three princesses are played by Doris Remp, Jene Reno and Jeanette Sorrodthor.

Thereon, who is playing the king, is a well-known artist and is turning the stage into a fairyland with his brushes and paints.

The queen, Dolly Green, played the lead in the Pasadena Community Theater in "The Dover Road." Others in the cast are: Genelle Bagley, Kenneth Marstella, Geneva Thurman, Eugene Renard, Wanda Graser and Dorrance Gould. There are fifty people in the cast. Fifteen are Marta Oatman players.

Chorus Girls Featured in Burbank Show

The Burbank Theater this week will attempt to inaugurate a new era in Main-street theatricals, by glorifying the Los Angeles chorus girl, in a show entitled "Chorus Ladies."

Ladies of the ensemble are giving leading parts in the combination of burlesque, satire and specialty numbers of the program.

Ruby Darby, George Clark, Mack Mahon, Ribu Darby, Laura Martin, Gene Darby, Fern Emmett and Lee (Bud) Harrison are all in the cast.

Among the Eskimos of Northern Canada each man has as many wives as he can support.

...the home of Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Templeton this week Mrs. Templeton and Mrs. G. F. Rinehart entertained nineteen members of the Tuesday Afternoon Bridge Club at dinner and cards. The high scores were held by Mrs. R. M. Douglas, and Mrs. E. R. Elliott, while the consolation prizes went to Mrs. Ben Millikan and Mrs. F. J. Cline.

Mrs. Bernard Allen of Charter Oak avenue gave the last of a series of very pleasant bridge luncheons on Wednesday, when she had as her guests twenty-four friends from Azusa, Glendora and Covina. She was hostess to a similar number of ladies on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week.

Visalia

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Tanner of Fresno, formerly residents of Visalia, were honor guests Friday evening when Dr. and Mrs. O. L. Jamison entertained at their home on West Acequia street. Bowls of autumn blossoms were used as decorations in the living room. Refreshments were served at a late hour. Guests were Messrs. and Mmes. M. E. Petterson, J. Harry Keener, O. R. Harriman and A. R. Tanner.

Card tables arranged in the living rooms which were artistically decorated with large baskets of chrysanthemums, greeted the eyes of members of the newly organized Entre Nous Bridge Club when Miss Evelyn Edwards acted as hostess. Refreshments were served in conclusion from table trays, centered with small bowls of chrysanthemums in tones of yellow. Members of the newly organized club are Misses Pauline Houghsam, Sara Rooney, Helen Landram, Dean Sibley, Miriam Emrick and the hostess, Miss Edwards.

Varicolored baby chrysanthemums were used by Mrs. Frank Kellenberg, Saturday when she entertained members of the Saturday Bridge Club at her home on East Mineral King avenue. Bridge was enjoyed during the afternoon, Mrs. Albert Bryant being awarded high score. Mrs. Bush of San Francisco, Mrs. Earl Switzer and Mrs. Marc H. Iseman played as substitutes. Club members present were Mmes. W. S. Tyler of Fresno; Clarence Fraser, Dinuba; L. L. Richard, Nathan Levy, George E. Gibson, Hyman Mitchell, H. P. Perkins, Jr., W. H. Tipton, Ed L. Scott, N. F. Bradley, Decatur Higgins and Miss Genevieve Bradley and Mrs. Gilbert Bryant.

Huntington Park

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Lester, residing at 8514 Long Beach Boulevard, South Gate, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Geraldeane, to Mr. Roy L. Hodges of Bell. The marriage will be solemnized during the Thanksgiving holidays. A number of social affairs in honor of the bride-elect have been given, and others are being planned by Miss Lester's friends. The attendants for the approaching marriage are announced as Della Nause, maid of honor; Mrs. Hazel Fessler, matron of honor; Glen Fessler and Leo Jensen, ushers.

"Series" parties during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holiday seasons have been planned by local ladies, the first of a series of three being given by Mrs. John Tarr of Seville street, when she entertained several days ago at her home, having sixteen guests present at a luncheon, and an afternoon at cards. The rooms on this occasion were in Thanksgiving colors, chrysanthemums being used in large baskets throughout the house, while holly and greenery also added a holiday scheme in the decoration. The guest list of this occasion consisted of Mmes. Harry Rothwell, J. P. Nichols, C. D. Hubbard, Minnie Mattoon, C. D. Crocker, W. L. Stuckey, H. E. Moorman, C. L. Runyon, Roy Klinker, P. E. Moode, Sam Moch, Frederick McClung, William Moldt, Philip Baker, James Baker and Miss Effie Poage. Mrs. Tarr entertained sixteen guests the latter part of this week, and another party is to be given about Thanksgiving time. Another hostess who has also the "series" idea of entertaining, is O. W. Leonard, who entertained a company of friends Monday night and another party is to be given this month, and the third in December.

Alhambra

An impressive wedding was celebrated on Wednesday when Miss Birdie J. Connealy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Connealy of Galway, Ireland, became the bride of Ralph J. Jostin, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Jostin of Monterey Park. St. Stephen's Church was the setting for the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Michael J. Connealy, uncle of the bride. The bride came to California four years ago and has since made her home in Monterey Park. She was graduated from St. Anne's Convent, Castleres, Ireland, and is a prominent member and officer of the Young Ladies' Sodality of St. Stephen's Church. Following a reception and wedding breakfast, the young couple left by boat for a trip to the north. Upon their return they will make their home in Baltimore avenue, Monterey Park.

Mrs. Harry Pressler of San Gabriel was the guest of honor on Tuesday evening at a special dinner-dance given by the San Gabriel Country Club in appreciation of her triumph in the western women's open golfing championships, as well as her successful showing in the national championship. Mrs. E. D. Trabue, president of the women's auxiliary of the Southern California Golf Association, on behalf of the club, presented Mrs. Pressler with a diamond-set watch and a bouquet of American beauty roses. A large number of guests were present, including golf notables and well-known newspaper writers.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wilkinson, formally announced the engagement of their daughter, Ruth Helen Batey, to Claude Hughes, at a card party held at their home Saturday evening.

Tulare

Red dahlias centered the table and place cards carried out the same autumn decorative scheme, when members of the Wednesday Bridge Club were entertained by Mrs. J. L. Sweeney. A four-course Italian dinner was served at 1 o'clock. At the card games which followed, Mrs. Harold McCourt won prize for high score. Guests of the afternoon included Mmes. Harold McCourt, Oliver Hinkle and J. H. Pippig. Members included Mmes. Sam Burgen, J. L. Sweeney, George Gill, Howard Clark, Ed Weidman, Harry Crowe, Jack Farrar, C. E. Rey, Otto Lutheke, C. E. Sweeney of Visalia; Al Nicklausen also of Visalia, and Grover Bowman.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Fountain were hosts to a number of friends Wednesday evening, entertaining with several progressions of bridge. Prizes went to Mrs. W. Sunkle and Arthur Rose. Delicious refreshments were served. The guests included Messrs. and Mmes. Howard Clark, Walter Sunkle, Jack Farrar, Ernest Altaffer, Arthur Rose, E. Shirley and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Fountain.

Mrs. H. A. Charters received members of the Friday Bridge Club at a bridge-luncheon, Friday afternoon at her country home on the Lindsay highway. Covers were laid for twelve at a daintily appointed table, centered with varicolored dahlias. Bridge was enjoyed during the afternoon hours, prize being awarded to Mrs. Frank Newcity. Guests other than club members were Mrs. Percy Whiteside and Mrs. Frank Hess. Members included Mmes. F. E. Anderson, C. C. Burnett, M. C. Zumwalt, H. A. Charters, George Gill, E. C. Mayers, F. Newcity, C. A. Paulden, S. H. Rosenthal, E. E. Scranton, George Williams, R. J. Young and George Linder.

Porterville

R. Lance Blatt of Johannesburg, South Africa, and Frank Lawton, also of South Africa, were the incentive for two delightful dinner parties over the week-end. Miss Martha Louise Baker was hostess on Saturday evening in honor of the two world travelers, who are making a study of citrus in California and collecting material for newspaper and magazine articles. She was assisted by her mother, Mrs. Cora Lee Baker, a Spanish dinner being served. Guests were Mrs. Vera Eastwood-Mack, Miss Mary Ellen Eastwood, R. Lance Blatt and Frank Lawton. On Sunday evening Mrs. Mack and Miss Eastwood entertained for the young men, decorations being in keeping with the Armistice season. The British Union Jack was prominently displayed with the Stars and Stripes in compliment to the young men, South Africa being one of the British colony.

"Social customs in Spanish California," was the topic for an interesting address delivered Monday afternoon at the Porterville Woman's Club by Prof. Charles E. Chapman of the university extension department. The regular monthly luncheon and business session of the club was held at noon.

Lindsay

Mr. and Mrs. George Capsin entertained a number of friends with a costume dancing party at their home, last Saturday evening. Supper was served at a late hour. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Buchanan, Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Brant, Mr. and Mrs. E. Givan, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Upton, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wilder, Mr. and Mrs. James McClellan, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Yandell, Mr. and Mrs. Capsin.

The Daughters of the American Revolution were entertained at the home of Mrs. Charles Burr on Saturday. The new regent, Mrs. Owen, presided. A shower for a Christmas box for Angel Island was planned and will be conducted at the meeting this month. Miss Elizabeth Noyes of Selma read a most interesting paper on Italy, Mussolini and the Fascist movement. Mrs. Burr was assisted by Mmes. Frisbee, Ward and Miss Marguerite Ward.

Dr. and Mrs. W. P. Bowen and Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Skadan entertained at an evening of bridge at the Skadan home last Thursday night. Members of the Los Amigas Club and their husbands were guests, with Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Hersey included in the courtesy. Mrs. George Hanks received high score honors. Those present were Messrs. and Mmes. John Griffin, F. F. Pollock, George Hanks, H. J. Ferry, James Palmer, E. A. McGregor, M. R. Hersey, C. A. Nelson, Dr. and Mrs. Chris Weber, Dr. and Mrs. Horace G. Campbell and the host and hostess.

Exeter

Announcements have been received here of the marriage of Miss Susan Priscilla Thew to Harold Ernest Parks of San Francisco. The marriage took place in San Francisco on Tuesday, October 25. Miss Thew is the sister of Mrs. J. R. Fauver of Exeter and is well known in this city, where she made her home for many years prior to taking up her residence in San Francisco.

Mrs. Mab Copeland Lineman of Los Angeles, State chairman of the new department of law, business and insurance, spoke on "Know the Law of Common Things" before members of the Exeter Woman's Club on Tuesday afternoon, at the clubhouse. Mrs. Lineman is a member of the lecture staff of the University of California. The lecture was open to the public. The study section of the club met on Monday afternoon.

A large attendance marked the recent reception in the parlors of the Methodist Church, honoring Rev. and Mrs. David C. Williams, who were returned to the local pastorate when the annual conference convened in San Jose a few weeks ago. The address of welcome was given by Home Tyler. Rev. W. M. McClearen led in prayer. Miss Otta Nelson welcomed the returning pastor in behalf of the Epworth League. Rev. J. M. Parker spoke for the church in general. Rev. Piepenburg of the Presbyterian Church and Rev. A. T. Douglass of the Baptistt Church delivered brief addresses. Mrs. D. E. Brown appeared in vocal solos. Mrs. E. J. Fly, Mrs. M. N. Pruner and Ted Evans appeared in a group of songs. Rev. and Mrs. Williams responded with expressions of appreciation.

Dinuba

Mrs. W. W. Goodrich, president of the San Joaquin Valley Federation of Women's Clubs, with Mrs. John H. Merrill of Oakland, State chairman of music, met with the Dinuba Woman's Club, Friday afternoon. Mrs. Goodrich gave a brief speech of greeting and asked for observance of appreciation week by clubs of the valley. Mrs. Merrill opened her program with a group of songs, then gave a talk on music as related to home and club life and outlined many ways in which music may enter into club and community life. The Dinuba Musical Club was represented by a number of members. Mrs. Merrill closed with a second group of songs, being accompanied by Miss Dorothy Randall. Mrs. Goodrich and Mrs. Merrill were luncheon guests of Mrs. E. C. W. Scruggs, president of the Dinuba Woman's Club.

The marriage of Ray Halsey, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Halsey of Dinuba, and Miss Catherine Sedgwick of Dixon, was solemnized at 4 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, October 29, at the home of the bride's parents. Only relatives and close friends were present, the groom being attended by Reginald Clotfelter of Dinuba. Mr. and Mrs. Halsey will reside in the bay district, both being graduates of the University of California.

Ocean Park

An announcement party of much interest to the society of the bay district was that given recently by Mrs. E. J. Vawter, Sr., at her home in Pier avenue for her daughter, Miss Idebelle Baird Vawter, whose engagement to Everett York of Glendale was made known at the time. The happy secret was hidden in the lovely centerpiece of fall flowers at the beautifully appointed luncheon table. The afternoon was devoted to cards. The guests were Dr. Margaret M. York, the groom-elect's mother and his sister, Miss Cynthia York of Glendale, Mmes. Hazel Simons, Douglas McNeill, Donald Clark, Douglas Wright, Davidson of Valley Center, Willard York of Long Beach, Peter Montane, Walter Cage, Arthur Frese, Donald Knox of Long Beach, Dorothy Smith of Los Angeles, Misses Helen Maidrum, Dorothy Risk, Gertrude Zahniser, Kathleen Hacker, Lucille and Arline Jones, Margaret Washburn.

Society this week interested itself in the bazaar given on Thursday evening by the Wimodasis Club of the Ocean Park chapter of the O. E. S., of which Mrs. Sadie Zerboni is the president. There were the usual booths replete with many potential Christmas gifts while interesting entertainment features occupied part of the afternoon and evening with bridge and five hundred for those who wished to play and a dinner served at 6:30 p.m. Chairman of committees

ARTISTS LURED TO HOLLYWOOD

dreds of ladies were playing bride in the room. Charming, of course, but nature, not art. So I turned sadly away, after distant glimpses of the gay walls, for I dared not encounter the scrutiny and battery of so many bright eyes. Furs and purses hung over chair backs, and I felt that not a few of the ladies regarded me with suspicion. Sneak thieves and art critics look very much alike, no doubt.

However, I can give you the names of the artists represented, since a list was handed me, and you may judge from them that the show is excellent. Here they are: Alson Clark, Edgar Payne, Barse Miller, Duncan Gleason, George Otis, Roscoe Shrader, Arthur Dodge, Paul Lauritz, Louise Everett and Donna Shuster.

The opening exhibition at the Roosevelt Hotel is both large and interesting. Many well-known men are represented. I said something about it last week. But the Roosevelt offered me no catalogue—it had none—so all I can do about it is to urge you to go and enjoy the pictures, which are hung, with fine effect, on the very extensive mezzanine floor. As the exhibition will continue for many weeks, your opportunity of seeing it need not slip by. Yet I urge you not to procrastinate, for the show is worth more than one visit.

Many exhibitions are now on or are scheduled for an immediate date at the Los Angeles Museum, which I visited on the afternoon following the afternoon in Hollywood. The eighteenth annual exhibition of the California Art Club opens with a reception next Thursday evening, as you perhaps already know, and Friday is the lucky day for the public—Friday and thirty days to follow. We have the right to expect great things from this show, for the California's membership is composed of most of our best painters and sculptors.

Modern French and American painters were being hung — not hanged! — last Wednesday at the museum, and when you get there they will all be on the walls. Many paintings, more sketches and prints. This will be an illuminating show to some of us, and one that Arthur Millier will treat with gusto—as, indeed, it should be treated, for its vitality is amazing. I saw a few beautiful canvases that I was able to identify as to authorship—a magnificent nude by Arthur B. Davies, wonderful things by Rockwell Kent, a lovely water color by Boardman Robinson, pictures by Flens, Maurice Sterne and Maurer, a portrait of Renoir that makes him look like a vandyked Dante, five sculptures by Maillol. Doesn't this skeleton of the feast whet your appetite?

Downstairs, in the print room, Helen Forbes of San Francisco has a fine show of paintings, with two drawings. The drawings are exquisite, "Hillside, Guanajuato" and "Market Place, Tangier." I coveted them. Miss Forbes draws remarkably well, and she is past-mistress of an assured style in brushwork. All the paintings, however, are not done in one manner. A full brush was used in the two somber canvases, "Before the First Rain" and "After the First Rain," the atmospheric differences suggested by the titles being subtly indicated. The delightful street scenes from Mexico are a little dryer in color, but not too dry, and their angularity in design makes them alluringly restful to the eye and the spirit. After all, we owe a lot to the modernists for rediscovering the beauty of mathematical forms and lines in art.

I wish I had space to dwell fully on the work that Mrs. M. E. L. Allen is doing for artists in the State Building at Exposition Park. But on Tuesday evening you will be able to discover it for yourselves, as that is the date set for the opening of the show of fine arts and arts-crafts that she has assembled with painstaking care. This is to be a permanent exhibition, and it will be unique. The paintings and sculptures and arts-crafts objects are all for sale—that is, Mrs. Allen will direct those interested to the studios of the artists, where the business may be transacted direct. The painters and sculptors represented are all members of the California Art Club. The craft workers have studios throughout the city. The great idea of this gallery is to facilitate sales, to get the public interested in collecting good objects of art.

The painters now exhibiting are Theodore Modra, Elmer Thurston, John Rich, Calthea Vivian, Alice Bryant, Donna Schuster, Mary Everett, Edith Truesdell, Ruth Peabody, Ruth Bennett, John Coolidge, Blanche Whelan, Barse Miller, George Otis, Leland Curtis, Roscoe Shrader, Nell Walker Warner, Orrin White, Frans Bischoff, Carl Borg, W. L. Judson, D. Campbell, Kathryn Leighton, Esther Crawford, Ernest B. Smith, John Cotton. The sculptors are Martha Ayres, Ella Buchanan, Roger Burnham, Andrew Bjurman, Gladys Brown, Tolles Chamberlain, David Edstrom, Merrell Gage, Edna Keily, Harry Lion, Marcelite Lockhart, Beatrice Rosenhouse, L. P. Prescott, Katherine Beecher Stetson, Julia Bracken Wendt, Jessie Sherwood Smith, Melba Wilson, Frank Wamsley and Marco Zim.

The All-American Photographic Salon at the Los Angeles Public Library continues to attract an increasingly large number of visitors. The salon closes on the 20th inst., and no doubt as many as 15,000 persons will visit it before that date. That's what Fred Dapprich, director of the show, will assure you—and he ought to know.

This is the annual exhibition sponsored by the Los Angeles Camera Club, which has always aimed to bring to our town the leading pictorialists of the United States and Canada. There are 277 prints by 137 workers. California dominates the salon with forty-eight exhibits, thirty-six being from Los Angeles alone. The exhibitors have chosen their subjects from everyday life, and the show includes landscape, genre, portraiture, still lifes, marines, subjects in industry, architecture—a complete picture of American life today.

The pictorialists have used printing mediums as wide and varied as the subjects. It's a splendid photographic show by men and women truly artistic in outlook and feeling —and in technique.

HERE AND THERE

William Wendt, N. A., has just returned from Europe, and on Monday or Tuesday of the coming week—the day to be set by Billy's wife, Julia Bracken Wendt—the inhabitants of Laguna Beach will turn out en masse to give him the glad hand of welcome home. At 1 o'clock there will be a reception in the art gallery, at 7 o'clock there will be a banquet at the White House. Well, Billy is worth it all—and more, for he is a prince among painters and a tried-blue pal among friends.

Gordon K. Carter, a young employee of The Times proof room and a student at the Chouinard School of Art, has won the distinction of having two of his water colors accepted for the twenty-fifth annual water-color show held by the Pennsylvania Academy, which opened on the 6th inst. The titles of young Carter's two pictures are "After the Rain" and "Brickyard." Carter, who has been with The Times a year, recently won a scholarship at the Chouinard.

Open forum will be conducted by Henri De Kruif at the California Art Club, Olive Hill. The subjects for discussion on the 14th are, "What Are Artists Aiming For?" and "What is it All About?" For the 21st, "Are Artists an Encumbrance or a Necessity?" "Why?" For the 28th, "Vitality in Art; What is it, Where is it, and How Can We Achieve it?"

This afternoon, at 3 o'clock, the Burnham Players, pantomime and dance, will be seen in an adaptation of the play, "The Poet's Walk," by Alice C. B. Riley. Motion pictures will be taken for the Pathe News Reel. Accompaniment by the Harmony Trio of the Pasadena Community Playhouse. Dance production by Miss Jo Reve.

AVERAGE MAN MAY HAVE ART

prints, and pride of ownership, are two sides of a triangle of delightful experience which my modest collection has brought me." says Merle Armitage. "The third side is the sport of discovery; better still, the contact with a world rich in interest.

"My collection numbers less than twenty prints, yet they represent hours of print-hunting, hours of reveling in stacks of matted etchings; excursions to out of the way shops and out of the way streets, in cities from coast to coast.

"To be specific, my Goya etching comes from Spain indirectly to Vancouver, B. C., where I was fortunate enough to discover it in a basketful of junk in an obscure second-hand shop. I admired the frame which surrounded the grotesque figure of a Spanish peasant woman and purchased on that basis. It had been the property of an English family, who decided to remain in England while there on a visit, and had ordered their entire household effects sold by cable. They probably knew no more of the value of the Goya than did the second-hand man, who was delighted to sell the frame.

"My Seymour Haden comes from a firm both old and true, Goodspeeds, on Beacon Hill, in Boston. Goodspeeds catalogue contains books old and rare, and etchings, also engravings and block prints. Their clientele is the world at large, they have orders from everywhere. Not to have visited the 'back room' at Goodspeeds in Boston, where the prints are kept, is to have missed a quaint and amusing experience.

"In Toledo, I found the Roth etching of Assisi, a decorative etching of great charm, one of the finest examples of the work of one of the best Americans.

"The Print Rooms, formerly in San Francisco, now in Hollywood, have furnished three fine etchings for my collections, a Lee Hankey, a Zorn and a rare thing, an etching by Zuloaga, perhaps the only one in America by this great Spanish painter. The print rooms have a national reputation, for here can be found the etched works of most of the masters and the moderns. Another Lee Hankey comes from an interesting old shop of true foreign atmosphere in Toronto.

"Louisville, Ky., was the scene of my first encounter with a Rembrandt, from which I emerged victorious. While there with Mary Garden I discovered several etchings hanging in the window of a modest home. On entering I discovered a family who had been driven from Paris by the war, had brought back several Rembrandts and who were glad to sell them. I emerged with the 'Three Heads.'

"From the Keppel Galleries, in New York I obtained my one Augustus John, a superb print by that English master, and my Lepers represents another pilgrimage to the same shop, in another year.

"My three lithographs, one by Whistler and two by Bellows, represent pleasant encounters with dealers and owners in New Orleans and New York, and two small oils, by John Carlsen and George Elmer Browne, recall visits to Provincetown on Cape Cod, and the Woodstock colony in Upper New York State.

"But my latest acquisition, Rembrandt's 'Villard a Grande Barbe,' is from a Los Angeles shop, the print rooms at Cannell and Chaffin's.

"And the whole collection was bought with money usually devoted to the movies—the quarters, the half dollars and the dollars which we spend here and there without purpose and without result."

CARNEGIE PRIZES

An earthquake in New England would have astounded us less than last week's announcement of the Carnegie International awards. There are certain facts in the world of art which we have come to accept as immovable, unchangeable and eternal. One of these was the opulent mediocrity of the International. Each year we raised our voice in protest, but more on principle than in hope. It appeared that the Carnegie show would go on, world without end, massive, meaningless and mediocre.

Last week's announcement was preceded by no symptoms of a spiritual rebirth, by no fanfares of advance publicity. The academy, before its invitation to the modernists, spilled much ink and went through many gestures of liberality. Not so the Carnegie. This year's announcements were made just as matter-of-factly as usual. Yet that the first prize should go to a still-life by Matisse and at least three of the other awards to painters of undoubted significance was nothing short of a spiritual somersault for the dignified institute. Last year's exhibition, as an editorial in The Art News pointed out, seemed bent on proving that there was no first-class contemporary painting. This year's awards prove quite as conclusively that at last the international exhibition is attempting to live up to its potentialities as one of the important artistic events of the year.

We have no knowledge, aside from the prize announcements, of the general level of paintings in the present show. It may conceivably be that there is much of mediocrity in the bulk of the exhibition. But even if this is the case (and somehow we are optimistic) the selection of awards is a magnificent advance in the right direction. Whatever the general trend of the exhibition, it is the prize-winning pictures, published throughout this country and Europe, that establish standards of excellence in the provinces and smaller cities. The previous selections have undoubtedly set a premium on competent mediocrity. This year's, though they may scruise much bitterness in purely academic circles, are dictated by thoughtful and conscientious standards.

We have vigorously denounced the meretriciousness of Carnegie awards in the past. Quite as vigorously, we congratulate the present jury upon its vision, its bold and sudden break from precedents that had practically crystallized into traditions. That the names of several of the artists on the jury have scarcely been associated with the most liberal standards in art is but another of the surprises in this spiritual rebirth.—[Editorial in The Art News.

A charming affair having the Hallowe'en motif for its inspiration was given by Mrs. L. Burger recently. Bridge was the diversion of the evening, followed by refreshments served at a late hour. Those who enjoyed Mrs. Burger's hospitality were Mmes. Charles H. Peckham, W. B. Wentworth, Charles Beagle, Samuel Kirk, Walter Carlson, Ruth Hunter, Emma Yeager, Charles Stillman, Lillian Tapecott, Ella Slauson Brown, Fausett, P. J. Knickerbocker and Fred Fuller.

Mrs. A. L. Bischoff entertained the members of the home garden section of the Venice Women's City Club at her home in Superba avenue recently. A business meeting with an interesting talk by George Kirkman was followed by refreshments and enjoyment of bridge. Those present included Mmes. Alfred Testar, Fred Hines, Josephine Tingstead, Ida McLaughlin, Ellen Foote, W. H. Brown, T. H. Jones, H. Z. Merritt, James B. Roscoe, Julius Slingsby, Fred Dietrich, Fred Winslow, Elizabeth Rodene and Miss Foulds.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Simons have gone to San Francisco with the intention of being away about ten days and visiting in several northern cities. During their absence the Silver home is being occupied by Mrs. Ida Webster.

One of the lovely recent affairs was a bridge luncheon given by Mrs. Fred E. Hines at her home in Venice Place for the members of the Ebell Thursday Tarde Club, made up of former Venetians. A Hallowe'en motif was carried out in the decorations of lovely fall blossoms. The guests were Mmes. Dan Daniles, R. K. Wilson, George Cleveland, A. A. Genereaux, E. W. Clark, Harry Middleton, C. W. Ontario

An event of the week was the wedding of Miss Esther Lou Boulton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Boulton, 406 Euclid avenue, Upland, to Douglas Robertson Black, son of Mr. and Mrs James Black of Upland. The father of the bride read the service. The bridal party stood before a formal setting of banked orange blossoms, while baskets of amber-hued chrysanthemums and tall yellow candles were used in the rooms, making an attractive setting for the ceremony. The intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana" was played softly on the violin during the ceremony by Miss Marion Short, Miss Ione Hallock accompanying on the piano. Miss Betty Boulton, a sister of the bride, attended Miss Esther, and Arthur Wells of Pasadena attended the groom. Mrs. Black was graduated from the University of Arizona and is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority, and Theta Sigma Phi honorary journalistic sorority. She was also graduated from the school of journalism, Columbia University and was editor of a fashion magazine published in New York. Mr. Black graduated from Oregon Agricultural College and is a member of Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity. Both attended Chaffey High School and Junior College. They will be at home at 313 Palm Drive, Beverly Hills. Mr. Black is a landscape artist.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen R. Webber, 746 Willow street, were hosts at a charmingly appointed breakfast at their home for a group of guests. Following breakfast the party motored to the mountains for an outing. Those in the group were Mr. and Mrs. Glen Webber, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Young, and Mr. and Mrs Waldo Scott.

Red Hill Country Club social season opened this week with a dinner-dance attended by 200 guests. Dinner was served at 7:30 o'clock. Tables were attractive in their appointments, the autumn shades of gold and bronze predominating in the flowers used, while tall tapers on the tables added a cheery note. The committee in charge of the opening affair numbered Mrs. W. M. Kincaid of Cucamonga; Mrs. Leigh Thompson of Upland, and Walter V. Comis of Ontario.

East Whittier

Yucaipa was the destination of a motor party Thursday, the day being one of much interest and pleasure to the members who were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Milhous, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Milhous, Jr., and son Billy, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Milhous and children and Mrs. Jesse Milhous.

Mrs. Frank Nixon and son Harold are spending some time at Acton where they are the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Haworth.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Parker of Owensmouth were visiting friends in the East Whittier and Lowell district last week, among their hosts being Mrs. Lydia Jessup and Mrs. Leora Parker.

To celebrate their sixth wedding anniversary Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barnett entertained a number of friends Tuesday evening. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Barnett and Miss RAoda Barnett of Whittier; Rev. and Mrs. George Deahler and daughter, Miss Catherine of Yorba Linda; Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Healton and daughter, Miss Annice, of La Habra, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sullivan and daughters, the Misses Mildred and Frances Sullivan.

A community party, sponsored by the women of the East Whittier Friends Church, was attended by some 140 interested friends Friday evening, the affair being held in the social rooms of the new church. Among those having part in the program were Rev. Harley Moore, Rev. Carl Miller, pastor of the Friends Church at Bell; Griffith Milhous, Mrs. Cora Milhous, Leora Parker, and the Misses Eleanor Otis, Wilma Hedges, Evelyn Moore, Agnes Smith, Leora Lee Hedges, Felecia Otis, Sarah Rose Milhous, Maurine Montgomery, Katherine Suelke, Constance Cole, Ruth Hollingsworth and Mrs. Gladys Healton.

Covina

The Thanksgiving motif was carried out in the decorations and appointments of the first luncheon of the season given Monday by the home economics section of the Covina Women's Club at the clubhouse and attended by thirty-six members. The dainty meal was served under the direction of Mrs. Bertha Philleo, chairman, who had as her assistants for the day, Mrs. A. E. Dwelle, Mrs. S. S. Aschenbrenner, Mrs. Ronald Taylor, Mrs. E. G. Hotchkiss, Mrs. Carl Shirley, Mrs. Barnett, Mrs. George Leonardy, Mrs. A. R. Bryan, Mrs. T. E. Woster and Miss Augusta Sanders. The speakers in the afternoon were: Mrs. Estelle Adams, who had as her topic, "Dieting to Keep Fit," and Mrs. Conroy of San Francisco, who demonstrated salad dressing and fruit salads.

The officers of La Paloma Chapter, O.E.S. on last Friday gave a pleasant luncheon at the Masonic Temple in honor of the Worthy Matron, Mrs. Jennie Montgomery of San Dimas. Eighteen were present.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Devendorf were hosts to twenty-four friends on Thursday night, when they entertained with a bridge-dinner at their home at Irwindale.

Mrs. Alice Burpee, who has for twenty years been treasurer of Covina Rebecca Lodge, No. 285, and who has served as Marshal of the State Assembly, was honored Tuesday evening, when the lodge gave a dinner at her home on Rowland avenue in observance of her birthday. Covers were laid for forty-two and at the close of the evening Mrs. Burpee was presented with a handsome rug as a memento from the lodge.

Baldwin Park

One of the largest and most novel social gatherings of the autumn months was the elaborate bridge party given Saturday by Mrs. F. O. Frazier and Mrs. C. T. Booth of Covina at the handsome new home of Mrs. Frazier, 308 Covina Boulevard, Baldwin Park. Owing to the unfinished state of the Frazier residence the afternoon was called "An Unfinished Party" and the appointments all carried out the idea of the incomplete home. The table numbers were upon blocks of wood, and the tally cards were on bits of wall paper. Fifty-two friends of the hostesses from this place and Covina were the guests. The first prizes were won by Mrs. R. M. Douglas, Mrs. W. A. Viney, Mrs. H. E. Milliken and Mrs. S. Fisher.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Yarnell had the following relatives as their guests at dinner on Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Munn and daughter, Thelma; Mr. and Mrs. Homer Nelson of Redlands, Mr. and Mrs R. W. Scott of Ontario and Mrs. Jack Gregory of Altadena.

The Baldwin Park Women's Club at its regular bimonthly luncheon meeting last Friday honored its new members. The afternoon was devoted to a talk on "New Facts on Nutrition" by Miss Helen Boxren, dietitian of Los Angeles.

Miss Mildred Alexander, who is a student at Redlands, passed the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Alexander.

MUSICAL NEW-YORK

BY PIERRE V. R. KEY

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Once an opera devotee, one rarely recovers. An opening night will carry much of the allure which prevailed in the early days. It was precisely that a few evenings ago when "Turandot" opened the Metropolitan's current season.

ORGANIZATION TELLS

Those of us who have followed the fortunes of the Metropolitan for the last twenty years appreciate what organization has done for this institution. Without a beautifully co-ordinating machine, no such performance as this one could have been possible. We may—as indeed we do—rail at some of the things the Metropolitan does and does not do, yet in the end it is necessary to recognize how unique the machine is.

Physically one of the most difficult of all operas to give, "Turandot" had a brilliant presentation and was equally appealing to the ears. Mme. Jeritza sings the music of the title role superbly; it is for me her finest vocal effort. Giacomo Lauri-Volpi, too, is gratefully placed as the Prince. With admirable coprincipals, a chorus which is singing this season with wealth of tone and precision, and an orchestra which ranks with the foremost anywhere, there was little for the critical to find fault over.

Maestro Serafin conducted with the poise and certainty which seem to be invariably his.

HAPPY CHILDREN

More and more do we discover the children leading the way for many of their elders. Whenever I drop in at a children's orchestra concert, this fact is driven home. It was so the other morning when Walter Damrosch began his 1927-28 series with the New York Symphony Orchestra. Carnegie Hall had no vacant seats; the youngsters were out in full force.

FINE TOP NOTES

A clarion top note generally will do the business for any singer capable of delivering it. Take the case of Beniamino Gigli. A favorite Metropolitan opera tenor, he essays once every so often to stray into concert paths. He did so a few afternoons ago at the Century Theater. And there his admirers gathered, and applauded and "bravoed" until they had their fill.

Dusolina Giannini, who has done her opera singing in Germany, but sticks to recital and concert appearances in this country, also is successful with her high notes. Hers is a luscious dramatic soprano, and she has the artistic sense. Therefore, her appearance the other day was an event.

Quite different, and of necessity, were the endeavors of that splendid group known as the English Singers. Not an outstanding voice among the five members of this organization, there attend, nevertheless, accomplishments which delight equally the connoisseur and the lay-listener. If there exists more exquisite ensemble work where human voices are concerned I have yet to hear it.

A CONQUEROR RETURNS

Satisfaction of a genuine order must have been Richard Crooks's on the evening of his return to New York in his first recital of this season. Crooks is young, and a tenor. Less than six weeks ago he triumphed in opera before critical audiences in Berlin and Hanover; the Germans like this fine young artist.

One day I expect to see him a member of the Metropolitan, but until that moment arrives we must content ourselves with hearing him in an occasional recital, or when he figures importantly in the presentation of an oratorio.

His singing in Carnegie Hall a few evenings ago revealed a maturer artist than when he sang there only a few months ago; evidently his foreign experience was of benefit. Few American tenors possess voices as rich or as flexible as Crooks's. He ought to go far.

THE BIG PARADE

Watching the worth-while individuals and organizations who pass us in a sort of music review, suggests the "big parade." And it is that. I was moved to such a conclusion the other evening while listening to Albert Spalding play the Brahms Concerto in D for Violin, with the New York Symphony. It was intensified later on, during the season's introductory concert by the Beethoven Association when the Hart House String Quartet played admirably (on the same program in which Dusolina Giannini participated.) Beethoven's F Minor and the Schumann E-major quartets.

Later on, I was moved still more to "the big parade" conclusion, for following one another (and for the most part giving excellent artistic values,) came Francis Macmillen, playing the violin; Felix Salmond, in a program of compositions for 'cello; Curtis Harrower and Dyla Josetti, pianists; Walter Kirchhoff, tenor, and Bruce Simonds, pianist; Doris Niles in one of her charming dance recitals; Socrate Barozzi, with his fiddle; a new ensemble in the Manhattan Octet, with Collette Vining, soprano, appearing as assisting artist; Jean Knowlton, soprano, in a program all her own, and the splendid Russian Symphonic Choir. Here in New York one can hear and see every type of musical performance and musician. The all-prevailing difficulty is being able to hear and see all. But one thing appears more and more evident: the public is becoming steadily more discriminating in the choice of concerts and opera performances, and in the bestowing of applause.

Actor Reared in Rhythmic School

George Fawcett, who was reared in what he terms the "rhythmic" school of acting, when inflections and nuances were brought out in the reading of lines, finds that declamation is practically no more.

"There was a mock sonorousness that produced articiality in acting. But a deft handling of pace and applying color so that it came second nature, did produce fine results, and, coupled with naturalness, elevated acting to an art," says the actor.

Fawcett was a pioneer in using naturalness in acting and is always mentioned in the matter of history of the American stage in association with Minnie Maddern Fiske and James Herne as one of the first realists.

FOR MOUNTAIN REST

Vera Reynolds has gone to the mountains to rest, awaiting the decision of studio officials as to her next C. B. De Mille picture.

Beginning of Football Held Start of Era

According to David Butler, Fox Films director, the first game of football played in America marked the beginning of a new era. "Men used to fight duels," said Butler, "but when the guardians of the law decided this was a trifle too heathenish, they set about to find a satisfactory substitute. Thereupon, some genius invented football and the first game was played in Connecticut in 1880. Frequently we found a town supporting two colleges and 10,000 grudges. The only thing to do was to organize husky football squads and 'go to it!' Thus we settled the grudges of all concerned without resorting to duelling pistols and gleaming swords.

"Seriously, however, I think football is the most thrilling sport in the world. When Fox executives asked me whether I would like to do a football story, I simply jumped at the opportunity. It is a different type of story, too, one of those excellent things into which we can weave comedy, drama and endless thrills. This gives us wonderful opportunities and I am going to make the most of the chance."

BEARD CAUGHT FIRE

Raymond Hatton's first part in motion pictures came near to being his last. The false beard he was wearing became ignited from a flare and Hatton went to the hospital. Now Ray always lets his comedy team-mate, Wallace Beery, wear what whiskers are required in their Paramount pictures and he goes clean-shaven.

WILL WRITE SUBTITLES

Julian Johnson, film and title editor, has assigned Herman J. Mankiewicz to write the subtitles of Richard Dix's new Paramount starring picture "The Gay Defender." It was announced today by B. P. Schulberg, associate producer, in executive charge of the studio.

SUGAR AND SPICE

BY ALMA WHITAKER

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Poor matrimony stands stripped and shivering in the spotlight these days. It is the style to discuss it very frankly. One "Discussion Club" that meets every month to debate topical questions undertook to discuss "The Future of Matrimony" last Thursday.

Now, this club is made up almost entirely of nice married couples—people who have made a success of matrimony as it is. There are several physicians and their wives, lawyers, judges, writers. But the men, except when I butt in, do most of the talking. Nearly all the other wives are the nice quiet sit-back-and-let-the-gentlemen-expound kind.

And oh, dear, you should have heard some prophecies on the future of matrimony. Scarce a one agreed that it will stay put. Nearly all these bright male minds foresaw vast changes—and lots more "freedom" ahead.

Once upon a time matrimony was considered the "refuge" of women. After all I have been hearing lately I can see where it will one day become the "refuge" of men. Future novels may well describe nice, heroic ladies who marry gentlemen to "make honest men of them." In those days, perchance, the gentlemen will wear the ring through their noses.

Paul Jordan Smith is obviously no nonentity. He is, you know, an author, lecturer, college professor and, recently, a modern art hoaxer. His latest labor is the translation from the Latin of Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy." So he gave the first of a series of lectures on this subject on Tuesday evening. I couldn't get there. But oh, my telephone began getting busy on Wednesday morning.

The first voice assured me that he was a "dangerous man," that his lecture was most improper, that it was an insult to his listeners . . . The next voice assured me he was "absolutely wonderful, that he held his audience enthralled, that everyone was delighted" . . . The next voice found him "too highbrow, right over my head, very boring" . . . and another wanted details of his past life and considered him very "provocative," and "caviar, my dear, not food for the ordinary palate." I shall have to go to the next and find out which part of his audience I belong in.

Oh, well, it was all the fortunes of war—and art. And anyway, it was a fine test of their grit. You know, when the brand new Los Angeles Community Players produced their "Pretty Sabine Women," after weeks of ardent rehearsing—all sorts of people in all sorts of walks of life, so fervent for this avenue of dramatic expression, so anxious to further the community theater idea. And then the "million dollar rain" chose that night to arrive and keep audiences at home. But a couple of critics went . . . and nothing went quite right that night. And the critics said so . . . and heartaches were rampant.

But they were good troupers, all the same, and gave the show again the next night—with never a critic to see how good they were and how marvelously they had redeemed thetr morale. But anyway all the pretty Sabine women and their two sets of husbands, and the Roman soldiers and the Sabine men can rejoice that they justified themselves, retrieved their faith in themselves, in their play, in their community theater. Anyway, the critics were all there for the second play, "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room"—and in a happily approving mood.

Queen Mary of England is reputed to detest the "smart set." She has no sympathy with their artificial ways. She isn't given much to speech-making, but about four years ago she said this to an audience of business girls:

"Life is made up of loyalty—loyalty to your friends, loyalty to things beautiful and good, loyalty to the country in which you live, and above all these loyalties, loyalty to God."

When Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith could not give her program at the Ebell Club on Monday, Senator Belle Kearney of Mississippi stepped into the breach most successfully. She is a white-haired lady, the aunt of Mrs. Grantland S. Long, and an ardent suffragette—Democrat. Her subject was the march of the republican idea as opposed to monarchy and the political progress of women within their realms, which she managed to make very interesting.

* * *

That Ebell auditorium in the new clubhouse is so rich, gracious, distinguished a setting that it is going to be painful if they ever have a president who fails to fit into the picture as well as Mrs. William Read does. Ebell must forever choose future presidents with an eye to that setting . . .

No doubt about the Friday Morning Club still being interested in love and marriage—all kinds. Mrs. Franklin White packed the auditorium in the morning with her uniform marriage-and-divorce law campaign, and they could have sold out the banquet hall three times over for Judge Ben Lindsey and "companionate."

It was noteworthy that the judge was surrounded by distinguished women in club life, and one of the most persistent applauders was dear old "Grandma" Wakeman, who often clapped all by herself when the judge became particularly frank.

Mrs. Turner, the president, looked a trifle uneasy at times . . . We noticed that she retained her high fur collar during Mrs. White's oration, but had to remove it during Judge Lindsey's! Uniform laws is a cooler subject than companionate marriage.

Bert Levy Has Role in Drama as Cartoonist

When is an actor not an actor? When he plays himself!

Bert Levy has long been noted as a cartoonist, but he had his first chance to impersonate one recently as a personal favor to Cecil B. De Mille in the production of "Chicago," from the famous stage play of the same name.

Mr. Levy donned screen make-up for the first time when a newspaper cartoonist was needed for the courtroom scenes of "Chicago," nobody else being available for this particular duty. It happened that Mr. Levy was at the studio at the time on one of his sketching trips for the Los Angeles Times Preview, so he did his sketching of Phyllis Haver, who plays Roxie Hart in the picture, while cameras recorded it as part of the scene.

Mr. Levy has appeared in a sketching act in 2200 theaters during the twenty-seven years of his vaudeville career. His impressions of film stars and their activities provide one of the features of the Sunday Preview.

Christmas at BULLOCK'S

Smartest Fall Woolen---Georgette---$2.95

The story of woolen fabrics for frocks this season has been an entirely new one. Sheer woolens—soft, supple woolens—feather weight in texture. The Paris openings showed a very decided penchant for these fabrics. Until this time Bullock's has offered them at only the more or less standard pricings.

Now—Monday—Wool Georgette—the favorite among these sheer woolens is available at Bullock's at the extremely low price of $2.95 a yard. It comes in a wide selection of 24 of the smartest shades and black. This is a fabric that may be worn the year round in California. 54 inches wide. A rare value.

The high light among social functions for the Catholic Woman's Club for the season will be the bridge tea to be given the 30th inst., in the clubhouse on Menlo avenue. The affair is a benefit one, the proceeds going to the hospital relief fund.

Abbe Ernest Dimnet will lecture on "The Art of Thinking" at the meeting Wednesday. The speaker is a renowned French author, a writer for French, English and American periodicals, and is the only living Frenchman excepting ex-Ambassador Jusserand, who has attained literary distinction by his writings in English.

DRAMA COMMITTEE WILL MEET TUESDAY

Mrs. Frederic Bagley Close, chairman, assisted by Mrs. Thomas A. Rice, vice-chairman, will conduct the regular monthly meeting of the drama committee of the Friday Morning Club Tuesday at 12 m. "The Growth and Influence of the Drama" will be discussed by Lucille La Verne.

The board of directors of the Friday Morning Club will be at home to the members of the club Friday from 3 to 5 p.m.

OUR NEEDLEWORK GUILDERS

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Thursday was a proud day for the local branch of the Needlework Guild of America, with Mrs. Florence Kreider, president, radiating triumph.

I am dizzy with statistics, for I saw 27,609 brand-new garments for every age human tied up into thousands of sacks, all labeled with the name of some deserving charity which is to have the supreme joy of distributing to needy families. I saw twelve ardent women working like Trojans and carrying these loaded sacks to the men of the Los Angeles Transfer Company, who in turn loaded them onto huge trucks—a service this company performs for love every year. It is the thirty-second year of the Needlework Guild's usefulness—and they are going stronger than ever, in spite of Community Chests and the gogue for impersonal charity.

The women who were working down there on Thursday are all prominent in our city's life—Mrs. Kreider herself, and Mmes. J. B. Lippincott, Guy Van Buskirk, S. M. Griffith, W. J. Callender, Ross Bennett, Herbert Broughman, C. Howland, J. S. Woolacott, Paul Lowenthal, T. Robertson and W. Downs.

The members of the guild number thousands and each presents two new garments for this annual charity. It was noticeable that the garments ran strong on infants' things, dainty lovely baby clothes fit for fairy princes. Little girls came off next best, then women, then boys, and the men last of all. Less men's things than any. It is plain the guild does not believe that Judge Lindsay's companionate marriage-birth-control scheme is in full operation yet.

Time was when all these garments would have been made by the members themselves, though. Now the vast majority of them are shop bought. But that is good for trade, too. However, Mrs. Griffith's contingent made sixty women's dresses their very own selves—and made a pretty good job of it, too.

Those 27,609 garments represent at least $15,000 worth of clothing, for few garments cost less than $1 and many were worth as much as $10. There is a vast amount of bookkeeping and checking necessary to fill the requisitions from the various agencies—and all of this work is a labor of love, too. It made Christmas seem very near, to see all that bubbling activity as the great trucks drove off with their precious burdens.

State Leader to be Honored at Event Here

Complimenting Mrs. Lovering Moore, State president of the Daughters of 1812, Mrs. E. H. Botsford will be hostess at a bridge - luncheon Wednesday at Casa Del Mar, Santa Monica. Other honor guests will be: Mrs. E. W. W. Hayward, Mrs. G. C. Dennis, Mrs. A. M. Johnson, Mrs. R. C. Rhodes, Mrs. J. P. Gibson, Mrs. C. H. Coward, Mrs. E. R. Odell, Mrs. T. D. Brigden and Mrs. W. S. Peckler.

Mrs. Levering Moore

It is expected that more than 100 guests will enjoy the occasion. Assisting Mrs. Botsford will be Mrs. R. W. Meeker, Mrs. H. E. Bartlett and Mrs. Nathan Cole, Jr.

Clubs Urged to Help Tree Bill

Mrs. W. B. Love, chairman of conservation for the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs, is urging every club in the district to indorse Assembly Bill 189 which reads as follows:

"Any person, firm or corporation who shall wilfully or negligently mutilate, cut or destroy any Toyon or Christmas red berry (Hetermeles Arbutifolia) or cut any Christmas tree or trees growing on public lands or land not his own, without a written permit from the owner of the land signed by such owner, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500, and all trees wilfully cut or possessed shall be subject to confiscation by the State Forestry, deputy or assistant State foresters, State Forest ranger, State Fire Warden or peace officer. The term 'Christmas tree' as used herein shall include any evergreen trees or part thereof cut and removed from the place where grown, without foliage having been removed."

Judge Cruzan to be Speaker

The luncheon speaker for the council meeting of the Daughters of the American Revolution Tuesday at the Alexandria will be Judge Harold I. Cruzan of Eagle Rock. "Conservation" will be the subject, one that he has presented to more than 200 associations, service clubs, women's organizations, and over the radio. Judge Cuzan is legislation chairman of conservation of Southern California and vice-chairman of the forestry committee of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

The council will be conducted at 11 a.m., with Mrs. Jesse Shreve of San Diego, State regent, presiding. Luncheon will be served at 1 p.m.

SCHOOLS EXECUTIVE TO ADDRESS LEAGUE

"Education and Politics" will be the subject presented by Bruce A. Findlay, assistant Superintendent of Schools, before the Women's Political League at the regular luncheon on Thursday. Mrs. Dora A. Stearns will preside, and the luncheon will be given in the Windsor Tea Rooms of the Brack-Shops.

DAYS OF "GAY NINETIES" WILL BE FEATURED AT AFFAIR

Charter Members of Ebell Club Will Turn Back Hand of Time in Fashion Show

Mrs. Sherman W. Higgins as Bride of Nineties

DO YOU remember when—the World's Fair at Chicago was still the principal topic of conversation? and the family stereoscope was worked overtime to show views of it? And do you remember when a lady of fashion wore leg-o'-mutton sleeves and petticoats and would not dream of venturing out without her bustle? Those were the good old days! the days of the "Gay Nineties!"

On Tuesday, the charter members of Ebell, who thirty-three years ago, in 1894, met together at the home of the Misses Emmie and Alice Parsons and organized Ebell, will turn back the hand of time and show what was really the "dernier cri" of those days.

The affair will be staged at the new Ebell Clubhouse in both the afternoon and the evening. A "Gay Nineties Fashion Show" will be the feature of the party. For the afternoon there will be a luncheon at 12:30 p.m. followed by the fashion show and after that bridge. In the evening the fashion show will be repeated at 8:15 p.m. followed by dancing.

FUNDS GO FOR DOORS

Funds derived from this affair, will be used to complete the purchase of the magnificent wrought iron doors to adorn the main entrance of the club.

Mrs. William J. Chichester is general chairman of the charter members committee for the party and Miss Emmie Parsons is secretary and treasurer. Miss Florence Riley and Mrs. Sherman W. Wiggins, both charter members, are chairmen respectively of music and tickets, and the other members of the committee, all of whom are charter members, are Mmes. W. S. Bartlett, John E. Coffin, Josiah Evans Cowles, Charles N. Flint, Cummins B. Jones, Lanier Bartlett, Frank W. King, Sumner P. Hunt, Kate Slauson Vosburg, Dean Mason, Robert J. Burdette and the Misses Abby Adair, Elizabeth Gibson, Agnes Knight, Alice K. Parsons.

MERCHANTS LEND AID

Many of the leading merchants of the city are lending their gowns, hats, wraps, shoes, negligees and even jewels for the fashion parade of the modern day. Included in this group are Bullock's, Myer Siegel, Brock's, The Bootery, Dyas's and Switzer's. Two elaborate stage sets, a ladies boudoir and a drawing-room, are being contributed by Barker Brothers.

The modes of the present will be preceded by a showing of those styles which were the mode in the "Gay Nineties," clothes for this being contributed by members of Ebell. Acting as models in the show are a number of prominent young maids and matrons of Ebell including, Mmes. Warren Bradley Bovard, Loren Babcock, Raymond Tremaine, Edmund Jackson, Richard Letts, Albert Niblo, William Dellamore, George H. Robertson, Charles Stavnow, Joel B. Gwynne, Oscar Trippet, Joe Crail, Bertram Green, James French, Lanier Bartlett and E. A. Coons, the Misses Mary Elizabeth Wheat, Louise Ley, Edna Louise Ruwe and Grace Inman.

CHILDREN TAKE PART

Children of Ebell members will also model and these will include little Misses Meents, Shults, French, Katherine Dennis, Kathleen Grace and Claire Carpenter and Masters Richard Jackson, Howard Rogers and Marcius Smith.

The charter members, because of their small number, have asked other members of the club to assist them on various committees and these include, Mrs. Grantland S. Long, chairman of hostesses assisted by Mrs. Charles Wellborn, Mrs. Hot Johnson assisting Miss Parsons on the program; Mrs. Charles Van Vorst, cards; Mrs. A. B. Griffith, pictures, Mrs. John D. Fredericks, chairman of models assisted by Mrs. James T. Fitzgerald; Mrs. R. H. Miller and Miss Margaret Ross, assistants to Mrs. Chichester; Mrs. Jack Ruwe, costumes; Mrs. T. L. Fletcher, wardrobe; Mrs. Charles Howe, decorations; Mrs. Elwood Bratton, tickets; Mrs. C. H. Montgomery, checking; Mrs. Frank Brown Wheat, ushers; Mrs. Frank Keach, guides.

Mrs. Gabriel Duque as Modern Bride

Society of Cinemaland

by Myra Nye

The first two days of last week saw two beautiful weddings in the Little Church of the Flowers. Both of them are of interest in Cinemaland society. Sunday morning a week ago, Miss Katherine M. Fogler of Long Beach became the bride of H. Stanley Moore of Hollywood.

Sunday morning a week ago, Miss Katherine M. Folger of Long Beach became the bride of H. Stanley Moore of Hollywood.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Edward Garrison, who is a member of the Hollywood colony, the bride was attended by Mrs. Josephine Edward Garrison as matron of honor. The bride was lovely in a flowered organdie frock and she wore a large picture hat to correspond. She carried an arm bouquet of butterfly roses and lilies of the valley.

Mr. Moore was attended by his brother, William D. Moore, as best man. The clergyman was Rev. W. D. Davis.

Following the ceremony a wedding luncheon was served for the bridal party at the home of the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Margaret Moore.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore are now in San Francisco for their honeymoon and upon their return to the Southland they will make their home in Hollywood.

Stirling-Haskins Nuptials

Monday was the wedding day for Virginia Haskins, who at 8 p.m. became the bride of Robert Stirling in the Little Church of the Flowers. She wore an ivory satin gown fashioned in colonial style, with long skirt and a riffled tulle veil caught by an orange blossom headdress. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Stirling is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Haskins of this city and Mr. Stirling is also a resident here.

The maid of honor was Miss Dorothy Hill, who carried a shower bouquet of Russell roses and pink sweet peas. Her gown was of pale-pink taffeta, bouffant in the skirt with a large bow of the taffeta.

Bridesmaids were Miss Libby Heitmuller, Miss Cecyl Jones and Miss Marjorie Morgan, all of whom were in pink, and the pink wedding motif was further carried out in the church decorations. Great fluffy chrysanthemums, all of the pink hue, made the church a bower.

Harold Humblock was best man, and the ushers were Harold Mueller and Fred Barnhill. Rev. Thomas Holden performed the ceremony and William Shuss, organist, played the Lohengrin processional and the Mendelssohn recessional.

The bride was given in marriage by her father.

After the ceremony a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents on West Sixth street. After a honeymoon at Lake Arrowhead, Mr. and Mrs. Haskins will reside in this city. Mr. Stirling is a camera man at the Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer studio.

Honoring Miss Nichols

Mrs. Otto Meek, Los Angeles society matron, entertained Saturday afternoon at her home on North Kingsley Drive in honor of Miss Evelyn Nichols, sister of Anne Nichols, with a bridge party. Among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. Raphael S. Olsen, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Farr, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Vatcher, Mrs. Ruth Shonehouse, Miss Katherine Turbeyville, Felix Hughes, Elmer L. Ralph and Mountjoy Cloud.

Gay Party Series

Representatives of Cinemaland's younger set who entertained during the past week were Ethlyn Gibson, Julia Myatt, Norma Du Bois, Evelyn Eldridge, Amber Norman and Mary Emery. Miss Emery's party was a "kids' picnic," all of the guests being in rompers or little dresses, with a large variety of gay hair ribbons and sashes on display. Hide-and-go-seek, ducking for apples, and other beloved childhood games amused the guests until it was time for the refreshments, which consisted of all-day suckers, ice-cream cones, cake and lemonade.

Farewell for Blues Singer

Sophie Tucker was the guest of honor at a farewell luncheon party given by William A. Jacobson in the Arbor Room of the Victor Hugo last Tuesday. The table was beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums, and a special luncheon was served to almost a score of guests, including Mr. and Mrs. Richard Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. William Bearman, Miss Blanche Upright, Miss Rosa Roma, Miss Anna Abusa, Miss Nellie V. Nichols, Bert Tucker and Sol Zemansky.

Enter Mr. Rinty

The first token of goodwill sent to Lina Basquette when she moved into her new home on Courtney Drive, Hollywood, was the surprise gift of Lee Duncan, in the form of a very junior offspring of Rin-Tin-Tin. His name is Rinty, and he has promised to be a good guardian and protector. Mr. Duncan is Rin-Tin-Tin's master.

General is Honored

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Thalberg (Norma Shearer,) entertained Gen. Wilhelme Heye and party one evening last week. A private dining-room in the new Hotel Roosevelt was used for the occasion, and many celebrities of the screen were present, among them being Mr. and Mrs. Ernst Lubitsch, Mr. and Mrs. Lothar Mendes (Dorothy Mackaill,) Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rapf, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt Stromberg, Miss Sylvia Thalberg, the German Consul, S. C. Hagen, Hans Kraly, Paul Bern, Dr. Frank Barham and Dr. Locke.

To Welcome Orchestra

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Mix have been chosen to head the reception committee which will welcome Vincent Rose, Jackie Taylor and their dance orchestra back to the Montmartre next week after an absence of two years. This orchestra aided in the opening of the Montmartre five years ago, and lately has been a feature at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in New York.

Vincent Rose is also well known as a song writer, having composed such dance numbers as "Love Tales," "Linger Awhile," "Helen Gone," "Rose of Los Angeles" and "String Bean." On his opening night the orchestra will play many of his best known compositions, in addition to all of the big New York song hits of this season.

A large reception committee, entirely composed of cinemalites, will welcome the musicians, while many others will entertain at the Montmartre that evening, the return of the orchestra serving as a motif for a large celebration.

Incidentals and Accidentals

Sally Blane was thrown from an automobile Saturday night a week ago when the door opened suddenly as she and her companion turned the corner. Miss Blane suffered a sadly bruised hip and minor cuts.

Virginia Lee Corbin has decided that her mother has come to herself. She says further that her mother has been coming to herself for many months past, to take her pay check. Her mother makes no reply—publicly.

Edmund Lowe and his wife, Lilyan Tashman, have returned from a trip to San Francisco and Del Monte, and Virginia Valli has returned from New York, while Montagu Love has left for a much-needed rest.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wallace are on their way to New York.

Julia Faye sailed Wednesday from New York for Europe, where she will spend her first vacation in three years. She plans to visit London, Paris, Berlin, Rome and Vienna.

Alice Day had a birthday Wednesday, and among the presents that arrived at her apartment at the Los Altos were a nice new contract and a string of pearls, the latter from her mother, Mrs. Irene Day, and sister, Marcelline.

Bridge-Luncheon

Mrs. Ona Wilson Brown gave a delightful bridge-luncheon yesterday afternoon at the Roosevelt Hotel, with Mrs. Tom Mix, Mrs. Jack Ford, Mrs. Finis Fox, Mrs. Roscoe Arbuckle and Mrs. Milton Cohen assisting her in the receiving line. The guests included Mmes. Edwin Carewe, Monte Blue, Tod Browning, Carey Wilson, Maurice DeMond, William Thalberg, Doris Ford, Ward Cohen (Jackie Saunders) and Victor Hertzinger, and the Misses Anita Stewart, Dorothy Dwan, Ruth Collyer, Dorothy Manners and Billie Dove.

Miss Lloyd Entertains

Greeting her guests in a murderous-looking pirate costume, Miss Mildred Gloria Lloyd, the young lady daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lloyd, was hostess Tuesday afternoon to a dozen young neighbors in and around the Wilshire district. Those who tried to outdo each other in bizarre costumes were Marjorie Wild, Betty Ann Welsh, Amy Jarvis, June Millard, Natalie Day, Buddy Jarvis, Lloyd Payne, Hays Busch, Jr., Buster Cartan, Ann Pilsen, Edna Rosenthal, Nancy Payne and Gaylord Harold Lloyd.

Luncheon Hostess

Martha Mattox entertained Mary Arnold and Jessie Wadsworth at a beautifully planned luncheon at the Montmartre Wednesday.

Welcome Home

Rube Wolf, who leads the stage presentations at the Metropolitan Theater, has returned from a three weeks' vacation. Wolf has been appearing at five shows daily at the Metropolitan. Multiply this by the days in the year and you have him leading the Panchon and Marco acts at 1825 shows each year. It has been estimated that he covers at least three miles, dancing and skipping about on the stage. This gives him a running average of fifteen miles a day, or 5475 miles per year.

Wolf is a delightful character, thoroughly wrapped up in his home life. He has a charming wife and baby, Rube, Jr., both of whom participated in Rube's vacation. First they went to Arrowhead, then to Del Monte and next to San Francisco, where they have many friends. Returning to Los Angeles, they gave parties for and were entertained by Sol Lesser, M. Gore, A. Gore, Hobart Bosworth, Ralph Grunauer, B. P. Schulberg, Harold B. Franklin, John Mansfield and Frank L. Newman. Panchon entertained them at her Beverly Hills farm and Marco at his palatial home. Rube golfed at El Rancho and also at Girard.

At the Roosevelt

With headquarters at the Roosevelt Hotel, the actors' division of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences met Tuesday evening, Conrad Nagel presiding. Members who dined at the hotel preceding the meeting were Miss Blanche Sweet, Miss Lois Wilson, Miss May McAvoy, Richard Dix and Richard Barthelmess.

Norman Kerry and Richard Dix were two of the dinner hosts in the Spanish Room on Sunday evening, last.

Wednesday evening Col. Hugh Beaton, managing director of the hotel, gave a stag party in the Madrid Grill Room to a group of cinemalites. Among his guests were Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and Sid Grauman.

The Ever-Present Love Interest

From Broadway comes a serial packed with wedding bells and joy, a shock followed by sighs and tears, and finally relief and happiness—the story of the wedding of Miss Dorothy McCarthy and William (Buster) Collier, Jr.

The recital begins where most love stories end—at the altar. But it was not until after the ceremony that the newly made benedict thought to phone his mother. When that lady (known to the stage as Paula Marr) was told the news, she promptly fell in a faint, and it was broadcast that she had died from a heart attack. Willie Collier, Sr., playing billiards at his club, learned of his supposed bereavement by phone, and for a while it was thought that he would follow his wife's example. In fact, had the first reports been accurate, the curtain would have been rung down and the audience would have slipped out to Chopin's "Marche Funebre."

But, no—there is an epilogue. News that the swoon was only a deep faint soon followed. Mr. Collier, too, recovered.

Reports received at this writing make it uncertain whether Miss McCarthy is really Mrs. Collier or not, the wedding having been further complicated by parental objections based upon Miss McCarthy's failure to show the license clerk a birth certificate.

A more auspicious beginning was awarded the married life of Miss Alice Lawrence and Harold P. Dodds, both of Hollywood, who were married Wednesday at 11:30 a.m. in St. Mary's of the Angels' Church, with Rev. Neal Dodds officiating, the bride being given in marriage by her father. Mr. and Mrs. Dodds are now on a honeymoon trip to San Francisco and other northern cities, and will return to make their home in Hollywood.

Edna Murphy, upon her return from New York, where she has passed several weeks, announced that on December 15 she would be married to Mervyn LeRoy.

And Cupid once more took the count when it was announced Wednesday that Jason Robards had been granted a divorce from Hope Maxine Robards. They had been married since 1914.

New Club Formed

One of the most unique of recent luncheons was that given Wednesday in the French Room of the Montmartre by the "Vagabond Girls," composed of a group of the younger film actresses. The rules of the club compel members to pay their own checks, and no member can be another's guest. Included in the party were Collette Mazzaletti, the presiding genius; Dorothy Strong, Dorothy Gee, Dorothy Gowan, Virginia Whiting, Virginia Shelby, Bernice Reid, Peggy Harbegger, Lucille McNanees, Alice Caruthers, Anita Barnes, Collette Merton, Betty Graves, Betty Caldwell, Betty Evans and Bobs Hoaglan.

Cinemaland Travelers

Anna Q. Nilsson passed the week at her Malibu beach home, with little Mickey McBan as her guest. She had just returned from a ten-days' motor trip to San Francisco and Yosemite, accompanied by a party of friends.

Aileen Pringle is in New York for the first time in many months, and in order to make up lost time is indulging in a delightful orgy of shopping.

Dorothy Gish sailed from New York on the Berengaria at midnight of the 2nd inst., for England, where she will star in a historical picture for British National.

Louis B. Mayer, with Mrs. Mayer and their two daughters, and Pete Smith, left New York the 3rd inst. for the Coast.

Visitors at Arrowhead

Mrs. J. E. McCormick (Colleen Moore) has been at Arrowhead Springs for the last few days, accompanied by her friend, Mrs. M. McKean of Florida, who is making her first visit to California, and her mother, Mrs. Charles Morrison.

Others who have been at the Springs recently are Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Lowe, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Unger, Jane Winton, Jed Prouty and Ned A. Sparks.

Seen on the Boulevard

Anna May Wong, last Monday evening, a captivating picture in bright yellow, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hazelhurst, Julanne Johnston, Cedric Belfridge of London, and Stephen Whitmore.

Claire Windsor, hostess to a small party during the week-end matinee dansant Saturday, in a riding habit of tan breeches, soft hat and blue shirt, smiling across the table at Billie Dove, and Shirley Dorman.

Noontime bachelors, Tom Moore, Johnnie Walker, Danny O'Shea, Reed Howes, Edward Earl, Harvey Priester, Larry Kent, Harry D'Arrast, Ned Sparks, Bob Tribby and Danny Dowling, ignoring the entertainment to think up their own fun.

At the "Gaucho" premiere, Mrs. Robert Edeson in a Vinrot model of green satin and tulle, with a peach-colored velvet wrap trimmed in peach-colored fox; Mrs. Edmund Breese in a gown of gold sequins, with red velvet silver fox trimmed wrap; Mrs. William Beaudine wearing nude velvet, in the basque style, with a large rhinestone buckle at the waist, and a wrap of black velvet trimmed in tan fox, and Mrs. Joe Rock in a black chiffon gown studded with sequins and brilliants, with a cloak of seal and mink.

A group of collegians discussing the arrival of Frank Cahill to Hollywood, as a possible addition to the intelligensia. Since Cahill, who goes to First National west coast studios at Burbank, is a New Yorker by birth, received his B. A. degree at Columbia University, took postgraduate courses and finally became an instructor in economics there, he probably will be.

Fred Thomson wondering audibly what the new Ford will be like, while Noah Beery near by tries to sell memberships to his trout club.

VAUDEVILLE MAN ADDED

William Burt, vaudevillist, who is now in pictures after thirty years of footlights, has been added to the cast of "The Leopard Lady," starring Jacqueline Logan, under the direction of Rupert Julian for C. B. De Mille.

Russian Roles Most Difficult, She Declares

...lyn Brent, who has played practically every type of role on the screen, believes that a Russian characterization is the most difficult of all to portray.

At present Miss Brent is playing the leading lead opposite Emil Jannings in "The Road to Glory" in which she is first seen as an anarchist in Moscow, later coming to America. The ... speech and thought of the Russian is the reason, she believes, for the difficulty in bringing such a character to the screen.

...sian Roles ...ost Difficult, She Declares

...Brent, who has played practically every type of role on the screen, that a Russian character is the most difficult of all to...

...Miss Brent is playing the lead opposite Emil Jannings in "Road to Glory" in which she plays an anarchist in Moscow coming to America. The speech and thought of the Russian is the reason, she believes, for difficulty in bringing such a character to the screen.

Sills to Enact Role in Jack London Novel

With the completion of Peter B. Kyne's "Valley of the Giants," Milton Sills's latest First National production, preparations are under way for the screen version of Jack London's "Burning Daylight," in which Sills and Doris Kenyon will be costarred.

Studios executives, enthusiastic over production results in the filming of the Peter B. Kyne story, have again assigned Charles Brabin to direct, with Wid Gunning supervising. Louis Stevens, protegee of Jack London, is now working on the screen adaptation of "Burning Daylight," which is scheduled for production some time next week.

Glowing studio reports on "Valley of the Giants" intimate the film version bids fair to be one of the greatest outdoor melodramas yet screened. Photographed in the heart of California's giant Redwood forests, with the world's largest lumber camps and mills for a background, melodramatic thrill upon thrill abounds, climaxed by the actual wrecking of a lumber train bearing over 300 tons of logs, plunging headlong over mountainside to 1800 feet below.

Sills is highly elated with the association of the trio again in his forthcoming production and with Miss Kenyon's return to the screen as his leading lady. Charles Brabin has long been known for his directorial efforts of merit, while Wid Gunning, production supervisor, ranks as one of the outstanding production executives of today. Years of journalistic experience, together with long association with the business of the industry, has more than fit him for his work.

Danish Actor Pioneered Here for Scandinavia

Otto Matiesen, who is soon to be seen on the Criterion screen in the Warner production, "Old San Francisco," pioneered Hollywood for Scandinavia.

Coming to America long before the northern wave hit the studios, the Danish player found that he had set himself as difficult a task as any that had confronted his countrymen on the plains of Minnesota and the Dakotas.

"No one in Hollywood knew me, although I had thought that my European work would have counted for something," said Matiesen recently. "For a long time I was less considered than the more familiar extras at the casting-office windows. They weren't importing us at that time. When I was finally given an opportunity by Rex Ingram, it was not to play the Scandinavian or Teuton whom I knew so well, but the Frenchman, Phillippe, in 'Scaramouche.' And although now we have with us many Scandinavian players who are interpreting our race for America, I am, for some reason, still portraying Latins and orientals. I have never yet characterized a Dane, Norwegian or Swede."

Matiesen plays Pasquez, the last member of an old California family, in "Old San Francisco."

Picture Made at Altitude of 10,000 Feet

Movie-making at an altitude of 10,000 feet—that was the problem that confronted the Edwin Carewe company during the filming of sheep-shearing episodes of "Ramona" in Southern Utah.

The task of transporting trucks, cameras and other equipment to the high altitudes, not to mention the dangers and discomforts endured by the players and technical staff, is one of the highlights of picture-making.

Daily for more than two weeks, Dolores Del Rio, star of "Ramona," Warner Baxter and Roland Drew, her leading men, and other principals as well as many extras, climbed the hazardous heights in automobile, on horseback and afoot, to get the proper atmosphere and background for the dramatic film.

"We could film many of these scenes in the studios with artificial sets, but we were after the realism," declared Carewe. "We have discovered some of the greatest scenic spots that the country affords—ideal natural backgrounds for a film spectacle like 'Ramona.'"

"Ramona" is the Helen Hunt Jackson novel of early California romance. The screen version is being produced jointly by Inspiration Pictures, Inc., and Edwin Carewe, for United Artists release, and under personal direction of Carewe. Those in the cast include Vera Lewis, character actress, and Michael Visaroff, Russian character star.

Dog Named Chico for He's a Most Remarkable One

Estelle Taylor, motion-picture star, never comes home from a trip without an addition to her kennels. Last week, returning from a holiday trip East, she was accompanied by a bull terrier named Chico, "because," Miss Taylor explains, "he is a most remarkable dog."

But upon reaching home she discovered that other events had transpired during her absence. Patsy, her favorite, and two other Pekinese dogs had retained their decorum and are still ladylike widows. On the other hand, a perfectly strange Maltese cat had wandered into the yard and presented her with five kittens. Her rabbits had increased by twelve, while the parrot had remained an old maid.

The menagerie now contains four dogs, seven cats, one parrot and fourteen rabbits, so the count stands today at twenty-six animals. "But you can't depend on rabbits," said Estelle. "They have no regard for the census."

DOG AMERICAN BORN

...b, the dog beautiful, who will ...starred by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer ...in "The Dog of War," is American born but is a son of Arno Von der Grosscopple, dog trained by the Hamburg police department and later brought to America. Flash is valued at $100,000 and the owner has refused two offers of $50,000 each for the highly trained and intelligent animal.

SHOOTING AT CATALINA

Frank Borzage and his Fox Films company making "Lady Cristilinda," with Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor in the leading romantic roles, have gone to Catalina for a week's shooting of exteriors.

OUR HISTORY IN PICTURES 871 Buffalo Bill, Scout of Scouts—Part XII. Billy's Exploit.

by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

FLEEING ALONG THE SHORE OF PLUM CREEK TOWARD OLD FORT KEARNY WITH A PARTY OF HERDERS WHO HAD BEEN ATTACKED AND ROBBED OF THEIR CATTLE BY A BAND OF HOSTILE INDIANS, BILLY CODY WAS STARTLED TO SEE AN INDIAN CROUCHING ON THE BANK ABOVE HIM. THE WARRIOR, THINKING HIMSELF UNSEEN, PREPARED TO LEAP DOWN AND KNIFE THE LAD.

THE RED MAN WAS QUICK IN HIS MOVEMENTS, BUT BILLY WAS QUICKER. AS HIS ENEMY SPRANG FROM THE BANK, THE BOY BROUGHT HIS RIFLE TO HIS SHOULDER AND PULLED THE TRIGGER. THE BULLET SPED TRUE TO ITS MARK AND THE INDIAN SPRAWLED LIFELESS AT HIS INTENDED VICTIM'S FEET.

BILLY'S COMRADES HEARD THE SHOT AND CAME RUNNING BACK TO JOIN HIM. WHEN THEY SAW THE DEAD INDIAN, WHO PROVED TO BE A CHIEF AND THE LEADER OF THEIR PURSUERS, THEY WERE LOUD IN THEIR PRAISE OF THE BOY'S MARKMANSHIP AND PLUCK.

DISCOURAGED BY THE DEATH OF THEIR CHIEF, THE REDSKINS GAVE UP THE CHASE, AND THE FUGITIVES REACHED FORT KEARNY (NEB.) IN SAFETY. BILLY'S SHOT HAD SAVED THE DAY. THE REPORT OF HIS EXPLOIT QUICKLY SPREAD AROUND THE FORT AND THE BOY FOUND HIMSELF THE CENTER OF A CIRCLE OF ADMIRING SOLDIERS AND PLAINSMEN.

CONTINUED MONDAY.

SCREEN AIDS EVOLUTION OF ENGLISH LANGUAGE

Language is a process of evolution, and a check of motion-picture titles indicates that the screen is helping to bring certain phrases into everyday use.

A number of years ago, the term "sheik" was rampant through the nation as the result of Rudolph Valentino's picture of that name; the echo has not died away.

"It" has become an off-hand definition of that something great and pleasing personalities have. Clara Bow's work in Elinor Glyn's story by Paramount put this word on American lips. "Flaming Youth" is the result of another photoplay.

Following the success of "The Miracle Man," every successful person was given that label. A certain type of woman became known as a "Dulcy" after one picture's showing. "Gigolo" had some popularity which was lessened by the general unfamiliarity with the pronunciation. "Babbitt" is another such phrase furthered by the screen play from the Sinclair Lewis book.

"Manhandled," "The Restless Sex," "Adam's Rib," "Grumpy," "Song and Dance Man," "Butter and Egg Man," "Copperhead," "Man Trap," and "Enemies of Women" have come into usage through the same channels. A football team was named after the screen play, "The Thundering Herd."

Such phrases as "For Heaven's Sake," "Go-Getter," "To the Ladies," "You Never Can Tell," "Sick Abed," "Nice People," "So Big," "Tin Gods," and "Kick In" became popular through screen plays. "The Big Brother" started a movement. "Excuse My Dust" went on the back of many cars. "So's Your Old Man," "You'd Be Surprised" and "Cat's Pajamas" grew into common language through pictures.

And now comes a new word, "Honky-Tonk," a picture starring George Bancroft. It means a cheap, waterfront saloon, one in which music is played for dancing. Hence it is expected that the Paramount production will cause "Honky Tonk" to come into popular use as an uncomplimentary term.

College Screen Star Now in Costello Film

Lucian Self, one of the collegiate group recently brought to Hollywood by First National in the nation-wide campaign for screen material but at present cast for "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" at the San Gabriel Mission Playhouse, has just completed a congenial role in "The College Widow," at Warner Brothers studio, with Dolores Costello and "Buster" Collier.

Since coming to Hollywood, after his graduation at University of California last June, young Self has appeared with Dick Barthelmess in "The Drop Kick," and with Billie Dove in "American Beauty," at First National; with Mary Pickford in "My Best Girl;" in several Brap comedies; with Bebe Daniels in "Swim Girl Swim" at Lasky's; with Warner Baxter in "The Coward," at F.B.O.; with Monte Blue in "One Round Hogan" and "The College Widow," at Warners', in "Sally in Our Alley," at Columbia; and several other short engagements in lesser studios hereabouts. He has encountered, also, the experience of so many young newcomers to studioland, that of being starred in the first of a series of twelve one-reel comedies by an independent producer whose enterprise went on the rocks for lack of funds. The experiment, however, demonstrated his superior screen possibilities.

His appearance with "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" is not a departure, Mr. Self having headed the college theater staff at Berkeley as director previous to his graduation and having served in stock under Frank Darien in Oakland, as a professional.

HIS EIGHTIETH PICTURE

With the completion of "Come to My House," a Fox production featuring Olive Borden, Antonio Moreno finishes his eightieth performance as a motion-picture player.

ENTERS SECOND WEEK

Tyler Brooke, Fox Films comedian, has entered the second week of production on "Hot House Hazel" at the west coast studios. Orville O. Dull is directing the picture, a Van Bibber story.

The Sunday School Lesson

FOR NOVEMBER 20, 1927

BEDROCK RELIGION SHOWN BY SLOGAN OF ANCIENT SEER

The International Sunday-school lesson for November 20 is, "Micah Champions the Oppressed"—Micah ii:1-3; vi:1-13.

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS

Jerusalem's famous World Conference on Faith and Order last summer was not a sensational success. It is possible that if the common Christian laymen of the world, who are still on the sunrise side of fifty, were to get together in a representative conference they would do better; for they would surely stress the practical aspects of Christianity, rather than crystal subscriptions or churchly forms. Doubtless they would lay down, as the first common definition of religion, that which is the Prophet Micah's message, the Golden Text of the present lesson:

"What doth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

This ancient summary of God's law, and of the way of the good life, they would supplement with the later and better version of the same truth, as expressed by Jesus Christ: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbor as thyself."

Reduced to stark simplicity by ringing definition, there we have the whole duty of man. It is a social gospel, an ethical gospel, a spiritual gospel that is implied by a walk with God and by love for Him. The Good News goes further, of course—clear up to Calvary's crest, and through the open grave to a life lived with Christ—but before it is anything else, religion is as Micah and Jesus defined it. Upon that platform all Christendom can stand. And once it consciously and loyally stands there, must that is wrong with the world will be made right.

Real Ideas of the Greatest Duty

In these words we read, in all its sweep and clearness, the fundamental faithfulness to God and man. Most of us, though, are not content with anything so simple. We have enmeshed religion with the millinery of genuflections and observances. Last summer a man, given to religious excesses, said to me, "They want me to join the tiddlers, but I told them they could have to show me first where the Bible commanded it." At the moment, I did not catch the import of his word "tiddlers;" he explained that it's a new sect which refuses to wear clothes!

In such absurdities does fill-balmed zeal often run. Whole denominations have been built upon trifling details, like the merits of hooks and eyes over buttons. Fashions of dress, forms of amusement, and nonessentials in matters of conduct, have been baked into articles of faith, in direct contradiction of the whole spirit of scripture. Rules and rites have complicated and demeaned religion.

What a deliverance would come to human spirits, and what an increase of righteousness and benevolence would ensue, were the whole body of Christians, the world around, for an entire year to repeat aloud, each to himself, upon arising every morning, "What doth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly, to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

A RELIGION THAT WORKS

Inserting this profound phrase of Micah's, we perceive that God is that sort of God Whose will "do justly" and "love kindness" (or "mercy," as the old version has it,) and "walk humbly" is fulfilling the whole law. It is true to the character of the prophets. God cares more for justice, as the Bible makes clear over and over again, than He does for ritual or priestly or professional piety. Failure to "do justly" nullifies all the outward forms of religion. God discerns the conscious doer of injustice. No heresy in creed can be so heinous as his heresy in deed. Nobody can be ethically crooked and religiously straight. The very nature of God forbids it.

True religion consists of more than "just the art of being kind," as the poem puts it: but without that art there can be no religion. The person who does not "love kindness" does not love God. If brotherly conduct is absent—if active love is supplanted by empty formulas—then "faith without works is dead." As the gentle apostle who lived closest to the heart of Jesus sternly declared, "If a man say, I love God, and hatheth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, can not love God whom he hath not seen." Jesus Himself amplified Micah's teaching in the masterwords, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto to Me."

Micah and the Master join hands across the centuries to plant faith's feet squarely on the earth in loving ministry. Jesus practiced what the prophet preached. So also, by and large, has His Church. The truest exemplars of justice and kindness on earth today are the disciples of the compassionate Christ.

A COUNTRYMAN'S CALL

Like Amos, whom he followed, Micah was a countryman. He came from the rural districts. His home town was a village amidst the low hills southeast of Jerusalem, where the highlands break down into the Plain of Philistia. It was familiarity with the wrongs which his neighbors suffered that made him a prophet. Landlords' oppressions, usurer's exactions, office-holders' tyranny, from which the farmer is usually the first and worst sufferer, wrung the soul of this man, who became a voice to his generation because his sense of God was clear and compelling. Somewhere, somehow, the Lord always raises up advocates of the poor. It was this sort of social message that Jesus quoted when he stood up in the synagogue of Nazareth to announce His mission. The cause of the underprivileged is forever and everywhere the cause of God.

A FARMER'S FIGURE PEACE

There is such a thing as a common consciousness of right, to which every prophet must appeal, as did Micah. Why was not this wandering countryman suppressed by the magnates of his day? For the same reason that the ecclesiastics hesitated to arrest Jesus: they feared the people. Every man who utters timely truths of social justice and of human right finds that he has behind him the public mind, and humanity's innate sense of what is fair and reasonable. He is "in league with the stones of the field."

All the far-reaching import of his utterance seems to have been understood by Micah. He it was who gave mankind the most familiar figure of world peace, in terms of the farmer:

"They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig-tree; and none shall make them afraid, for the mouth of Jehovah of hosts hath spoken it."

Thus we see that Micah, the teacher of fundamental religion, was also the prophet of peace. He went on to predict that "Thou, Bethelhem Ephratah . . . out of thee shall One come forth . . . ." A few lines further on occurs a significant sentence which is seldom preached upon: "And this Man shall be our peace."

Micah had clear foregleams of the Messiah; and that truth enhances the significance of his definition of bedrock religion—"To do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God."

FRATERNAL AFFAIRS

Barry D. Pop Howell, president of the Hollywood Shrine Club, is rehearsing a large cast of entertainers at the Masonic Temple on Hollywood Boulevard for the annual operatic musical extravaganza to be given on the evening of December 2 at the Hollywood High School Memorial Auditorium. The entertainment will be free to all Shriners and their families. The show will include all kinds of "stunts," instrumental and vocal music by many of the noted musical performers of the Southland, and will be concluded with a real old minstrel entertainment embracing Darktown midsummer court scenes held on the lawn of a southern mansion, where the court will arraign the culprits with satire and ridicule in comical fashion on the usual court cases, recessing with a real old-time all-day plantation dinner, during which more specialties and group numbers will be introduced.

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF FORESTERS

The dance given by Court E. G. No. 1 last Tuesday evening was the largest in point of attendance in recent years. This court will conduct a class initiation next Tuesday evening.

Companion Court E. S. No. 34, entertained with cards after a short business meeting Tuesday evening. Companion Court Morris Vinyard will conduct its annual bazaar next Saturday. There will be a luncheon and then the products of the Busy Thimble Club will be offered for sale, the proceeds to go to the Forestry relief department.

CANADIAN SOCIETIES

The official welcomes to be given Canadian tourists by Los Angeles and Long Beach will be notable affairs, according to reports from tourists' headquarters.

The first welcome extended will be that of the Canadian Club, of which Dr. D. McCall is chairman, and the Canadian Old Boys' and Girls' Association, with Dr. H. J. Coventry, in charge of ceremonies. This welcome function will take place Friday evening at Canadian headquarters, (formerly United States Societies' clubhouse,) 1000 South Hope street.

Following the two above societies in arranging a reception to visiting Canadians and their local friends, will be the Canadian Ladies' Reunion committee, of which Mrs. K. Houlgate is chairman, and the Canadian Club of Los Angeles County, of which Ernest E. McIlroy has been elected president, with Mrs. Jessie Purvis Bowers secretary and hostess. They will join in the reception, and dancing.

The First Methodist Episcopal church will be the scene of a welcome on Sunday evening, December 4, when a special Canadian program of vocal and instrumental music will be put on.

President John Hooper, head of the Canadian and American Tourists' Association, received word yesterday that the brass band of the Union Pacific Railroad may be brought in for the occasion.

The Canadian Ice Skating Club will meet each Wednesday evening at the Winter Garden Ice Palace, 615 North Van Ness avenue. Miss N. Hercules, convenor, GRanite 1521, and Mrs. L. C. Hooper, MEtropolitan 0687, will be in charge.

STATE SOCIETIES

President M. R. Parmelee of the Michigan Association announces that the social reunions are changed both as to date and place of meeting. They will be the third Monday evening of each month, commencing the 21st inst., at Symphony Hall. All Michigan folk will be welcomed and may enjoy the program, roll call and dancing.

The Illinoisans have obtained fine talent for their program tomorrow at the Veterans' Hall. President H. J. Brubaker is announcing baritone solos by C. E. Moss and readings by Mrs. Mary Willis Huston, noted dialect entertainer. Mr. Brubaker will lead community singing and there will be roll call, awarding of prizes and dancing.

The Arkansas contingent, under the leadership of President R. M. Smith, will rally Friday evening, next, at Roosevelt Hall, 730 South Grand avenue. This meeting, in addition to program and dancing, will include a box supper. The women are all asked to carry box suppers, which will be sold at auction. The society will supply hot coffee. All Arkansas people are invited.

Oklahoma folk will conduct another frolic at the Veterans' Hall next Wednesday evening. President D. C. Hendricks will offer a program and dancing will follow.

The Idaho and Utah frolic with program, dancing, community singing, roll call and awarding of prizes will be given next Thursday evening at the Veterans' Hall. President H. G. Redwine will welcome all from both States. Dancing will close the evening.

Nebraskans are invited by their new president, Col. R. W. Richardson, to meet him at their open fall rally next Friday evening at the Music Art Hall. A high-class program is assured and dancing will follow.

Missourians in California, resident or visiting, are said to be missing something if they do not go to the monthly socials engineered by President James A. Lang. He has obtained the help of the John W. Taylor studios in staging a rare program next Tuesday evening at 1024 South Grand avenue. Dancing and refreshments will follow the program, which will include prizes for the oldest Missourian and for the latest Missourian to arrive in Los Angeles.

ORIENTAL RUGS

in BARKER BROS. NOVEMBER EVENTS

THRILLING FEATURE of the November celebration! Over half a million dollars' worth of Oriental Rugs enter the events at specially reduced prices! Every rug is priced at least 15% less and certain clearance prices carry even greater reductions! Literally thousands of rugs — every one a bargain!

FOR THESE EVENTS Barker Bros.' usual large Oriental Rug stock has been tremendously enlarged. For months huge special purchases have been arranged. Now the mammoth stocks are complete! More than half a million dollars' worth—Oriental Rugs from Persia, Turkey, India, China—superb hand-tufted rugs from Morocco, Greece, Czecho Slovakia, Germany, Spain, France—every one authentic—every one promising lifetime service and every one reduced at least fifteen percent.

MOST UNUSUAL VARIETY—all sizes from 1.6x1.6 to 15x30 priced from $4 to $10,000 each! Time honored weaves from Persia — all worthy grades of Chinese rugs—European hand-made rugs — treasures from India, Morocco, from every center of this ancient art. And at November Event Reductions.

HUNDREDS of ROOM-SIZE RUGS—the large, room-size rugs are here in gorgeous variety. The sizes for which, until now, have been sought in vain here in Los Angeles. And at November Event Reductions.

RUNNERS IN PAIRS—another rarity now supplied by Barker Bros. Choicé pieces ranging in size from 12 to 19 feet. And at November Event Reductions.

SUPERB ANTIQUES—collector's pieces of note. Semi-antiques (Persian) averaging 5x9 in size—these wanted rugs that have been scarce, now presented in good variety. And at November Event Reductions.

AUTHENTIC RUGS—every rug in this vastly enriched department at Barker Bros. is of dependable quality—hand made and capable of a life-time's service. Because unscrupulous dealers are now offering machine-made imitations, Barker Bros. stress the dependability of every one of their rugs. And at November Event Reductions.

WIDE RANGE OF PRICES—not only is there astounding variety in patterns and weaves but there is a price range to meet every budget. Starting as low as $4—to $10,000.

You are cordially invited to visit this enriched department of Oriental Rugs—Barker Bros.' convenient credit terms are gladly extended

750 Printed Satins! Ombre Dresses

$15.00

Two High-lights of the Winter Vogue at One Low Pricing!

As regards Ombre: This modernistic color theme is exploited in a group of stunning new arrivals. Tones of rose, green, violet, red and orange shade from the intense to the subdued . . . from vivid high shades to exquisite pastels. The frocks are styled with a modish simplicity which does not detract from the beauty of fabric.

Printed Satins Are New: And extremely smart. One finds among them, new geometric designs and conventionalized floral and fruit motifs done in the modern, impressionistic manner. The draped silhouette is markedly favored in this group, with particular emphasis on the tight hip line.

Sizes 16 to 44—$15

CONVERT $100 INTO WEALTH

One good investment is worth a life time of labor and it is not necessary that the investment be a very big one. An investment of $100 in the original capital stock of many American inventions (monopolies) has proved to be better than a lifetime of labor. $100, we are told, of the original stock of some of them, has a market value of $10,000 to $50,000 and has paid that much back in dividends.

He who has reached mature years without acquiring wealth usually gives as the excuse for his condition that he has been handicapped by a lack of opportunity. Don't become a fossil and think that everything worth while is of the past. A genuine opportunity is before you now.

One of the most promising enterprises since Henry Ford's automobiles

MEN AND WOMEN SUNDAY AND MONDAY NIGHTS

Money for You!

Here's an Amazing Opportunity

Here is the Key to a Goor Position. An Extra Pay Check Every Week. Whether Employed or Unemployed. Read Carefully and Investigate. You Can't Afford to Pass Up the Greatest Opportunity in Los Angeles Today.

This Opportunity Will Not Last Long

$75 WEEKLY

Don't "grope in the dark;" dreaming of extra money. You don't have to "pound the pavements" or go off on a "wild-goose chase." Every ambitious person in the City of Los Angeles would be amazed and glad to avail himself of this opportunity if he only knew the facts.

YOU DON'T NEED EXPERIENCE AND YOU WON'T BE ASKED TO SELL ANYTHING. Briefly, an entirely new department has created an opportunity unparalleled for people desiring EXTRA WEEKLY INCOME. WORK WILL NOT CONFLICT WITH PRESENT EMPLOYMENT. NO SELLING. No Schooling. No Red Tape.

These positions can be filled during the spare hours (during day or evening) of mechanics, tradesmen, clerks, professional men and business men; full-time position can be arranged for those desiring permanent work.

ABSOLUTELY NO EXPERIENCE REQUIRED. CO-OPERATION GIVEN from the start. You should earn NOT LESS THAN $75 PER WEEK from the day your name is placed upon the company's pay rolls. Of the workers recently employed very few earn less than $100 per week and are working but one hour per day. Positions (part time or permanent) are EXTREMELY SIMPLE, in pleasant surroundings and most congenial atmosphere.

YOU WILL NOT BE ASKED TO SELL ANYTHING AND YOU CAN EARN FROM THE DAY YOU START.

This is REAL. This is EARNEST. This is NOT AN IDLE DREAM. This is GENUINE.

Here is an opportunity to earn a REAL BANK ACCOUNT during your spare time. The work is extremely simple and can be done by anyone of ordinary intelligence, and we will make you understand and know you can do the work before we ask you to start.

You must understand this is an unusual opportunity. Come and get the facts, and be your own judge. We require white applicants over 25 years of age. MEN AND WOMEN will be given utmost consideration.

Make up your mind NOW to answer on time. NO APPLICANTS RECEIVED AT ANY OTHER HOUR

APPLY
Sunday and Monday Nights
7:30 O'CLOCK AT
1701 S. Grand Ave.

NOTICE!

Remember, this is an entirely new departure and here is your opportunity to get a position in it. (Scores of new applicants have been given employment during the evenings, or after business hours; many employees who are employed otherwise during the daytime have bought new cars and have opened new bank accounts as a result of this wonderful extra income opportunity.)

You simply can't afford to miss it. Knowing how and why means EXTRA MONEY. Now, if you really desire to open a REAL BANK ACCOUNT, DON'T MISS THIS. Do not answer this ad unless you are really sincere and anxious to earn an extra income. REGARDLESS OF PRESENT EMPLOYMENT EVERY ONE WILL BE GIVEN FULLEST CONSIDERATION AT ABOVE TIME, and REMEMBER THE PLACE. Husbands bring their wives and wives bring their husbands.

APPLY SUNDAY AND MONDAY NIGHTS AT 7:30 O'CLOCK. 1701 S. GRAND AVE.

SALESMEN

"This beats working in a store," says M. Reis, formerly a retail clothing salesman.

"At no time would I earn over $60 a week while employed in a store, but since January, 1922, I have averaged $85 a week. I am thankful that you gave me this opportunity."

If you are a 1st-class man, able to stand squarely on your own feet and willing to work 7 hours a day without ringing a time clock, come and talk the matter over with our manager.

We are the largest manufacturing tailors and have a tried and tested plan that enables an industrious man to build a profitable permanent business selling a product that every man must wear.

Young Men Only

Corporation that has paid almost fifty million dollars to family clients during past thirty years, and whose scope of operation covers practically two nations in North American Continent wants to employ nineteen young men between the ages of 21 and 30.

Applicants should have High School diploma and be able to convince salesmanagers that they have personality, integrity, ability and ambition. If these gifts lurk within you, and you can pass a physical test, we will enroll you in a class of student salesmen (at no cost to you.) You will be given an intensive training for a well-paid position with our organization.

Our requirements are rigid and exacting. We sell a financial protective service that directly affects the average American family. We operate under a charter granted by one of the richest States in the Union and have over 2500 local centers of activity in the United States. Our assets, inspected and approved by State authorities, amount to $12,500,000.

IF YOU sincerely believe you can be taught, and helped to become a successful salesman; if you believe time clocks are merely informative ornaments rather than stars of destiny; if you believe you can JUSTIFY our making a financial investment in you as we guide and counsel you along the road to sales and financial success—write and tell us so—write as much or as little as you deem this advertisement warrants—and ample opportunity will be given for an interview. In reply, address communications to

of 45,246 Instruments Recorded in October

Half-Million Deals for Current Year

BUILDING TOTAL EXCEEDS 1926

Nine Days in November Record $12,990,784 as Year Hits $11,925,193 Figure

Piling up one of the highest nine-day totals in the history of the city, the first nine days of November recorded $12,990,784 in city building permit valuations. By virtue of the spurt, Los Angeles' current year in building reached $111,923,193, as compared to $107,938,012 for the same period in 1926.

Three permits for county structures totaling $10,000,000 were responsible for the increase which places 1927 ahead of 1926. It is generally conceded that if the city can maintain its construction at such a pace for November and December that last year will be far surpassed.

Report of the city building department fo rthe last nine days and comparative data follow:

	Permits	Valuation
Nov., 1927..	1,252	$ 12,990,784
Nov., 1926..	1,003	3,609,923
To date 1927	83,852	111,923,193
To date 1926	32,860	107,838,012

FACT AND COMMENT

From San Francisco comes the story of plans for construction of a new medico-dental building, twenty-six stories in height, to cost $5,000,000. Of more than passing interest in this connection is the fact that S. W. Straus & Co., national building and investment authorities, have underwritten the structure to the extent of $2,550,000.

This recalls a statement made by President Straus of the finance company January 20, last. At that time he declared, "The saturation point in building construction has been reached" and New York and other large cities of the United States "would do well to stop construction of office buildings, hotels, apartment-houses and apartment-hotels for a period of from six months to a year."

The re-entry of the Straus company into Pacific Coast building loans might well be considered, in view of the above statement, as indicative of optimism for the immediate building future in California.

Further Cause for Optimism

Further evidence that the building industry is on a substantial basis is to be found in the Los Angeles building permit figures issued last week.

The year 1926 has generally been regarded as an outstanding year by the industry here and permit valuations for 1927 suffered more or less by comparison.

Last week the relative standing of the two years were reversed and building permits for the first time for 1927 show a lead over figures to date for 1926. The gain is more than $4,000,000.

Granted the three permits taken out by the county the 1st inst., were largely instrumental for 1927's overnight jump into leading position. It will be remembered the new City Hall, a $5,000,000 structure, had been the decisive factor since the middle of the year in comparisons of this and last year's new building valuations.

Preventing Business Depressions

Prevention of business depressions by industry's constant attention to supply and demand is proposed by the United States Chamber of Commerce in a movement started recently.

There is much logic to the plan. By keeping a weather eye to vital data concerning the market for the

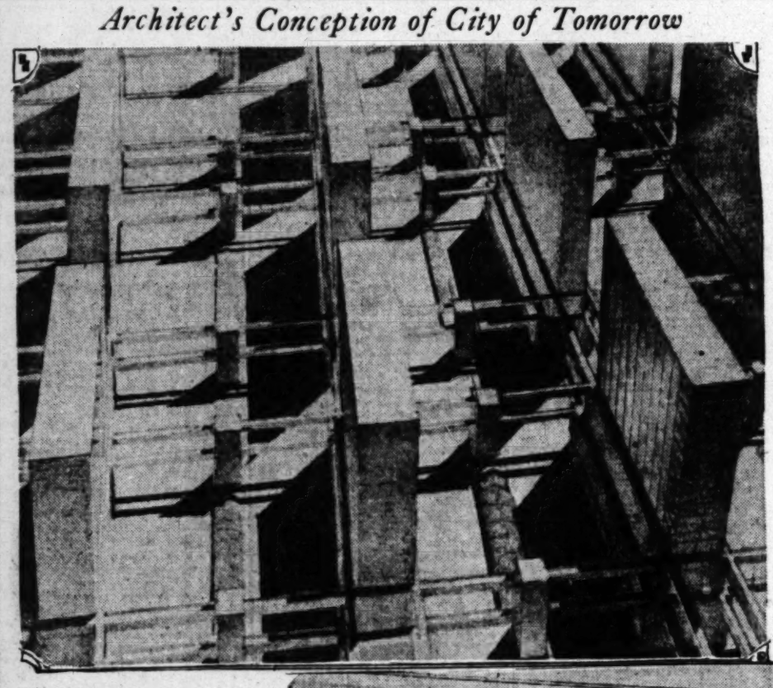
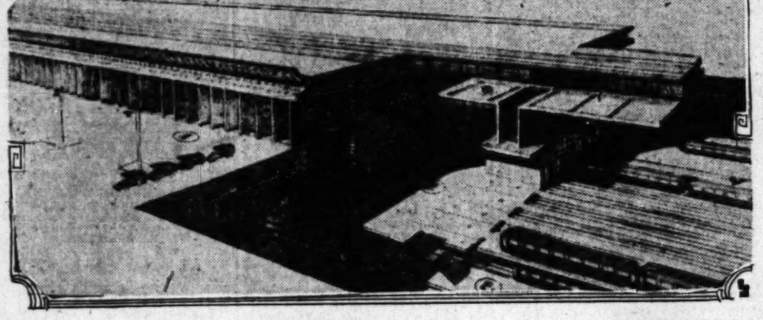
Architect's Conception of City of Tomorrow





Futuristic View of Buildings (Above) and Railroad-Airplane Station Below

Pedestrianless streets, height-limit buildings only fifty feet wide and a block long, and underground railroad stations with airplane landing fields atop the above-ground portion of the stations are included in architectural plans for the city of tomorrow as pictured by Richard J. Neutra, local architect. The top picture gives an idea of how the streets would look, while the lower view shows Neutra's dream of the combination railroad station and airport.

RIVERSIDE BUILDING INCREASES

Total to Date $811,793 in Excess of Same Period of 1926, Figures Show

RIVERSIDE, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Building-permit business valuations of Riverside reveal that 1927 to date has registered a construction total of $811,793 in excess of the figure for the same ten months of 1926. Total of building costs to date this year is $2,526,195, according to City Engineer Campbell, as compared to $1,714,402 last year.

With only a third of November passed and the permits totaling $64,700 today, there is promise that last year's total of $109,150 for November will be exceeded by a comfortable figure. The heaviest single month of building was in August, this year, when an office building at $74,000 and a school building at $318,384 brought that month to $511,529.

Among the major constructions for Riverside that have been completed or are under way are the Municipal Memorial Auditorium, $250,000; Learner Office Building, $25,000; Stebler Parker Hotel building, $74,000; a general school building program of $1,500,000, and construction of dwellings ranging in value from $5000 to $20,000. Riverside's major building activity continues to be in dwellings, with forty permits already this month having been issued for that purpose.

PLANT CONSIDERS NEWPORT

NEWPORT BEACH, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Decision of the H. P. Rising Paper Company to erect a pulp mill and paper factory at Newport Bay hinges upon their securing a five-acre site free, it was stated in a letter received by the Newport Harbor Chamber of Commerce last week. Other matters taken up in the letter were the consideration of railway transportation, water transportation, and a water supply. The communication was referred to the industrial committee of the chamber, headed by K. I. Fulton.

STATE HAILS DECISION ON LICENSE ACT

Real Estate Men See in Supreme Court Ruling Mark of Confidence

Action of the Supreme Court at Washington in upholding the California State Real Estate Act was hailed by real estate men in this State as an extremely high mark of confidence in the stability of the law, which was inaugurated some time ago by the California Real Estate Association.

The case was brought by H. C. Haas against L. Greenwald in San Francisco to recover a commission. The State and Supreme Courts held that because A. M. Johnson, lawyer in the case, as well as principal, was not a licensed real estate broker, the commission could not be paid. Gen. William Nathan MacShesney, general counsel of the national association, aided in representing interests of the license law.

HOLLYWOOD SHOP PLANS NEW SPACE

Addition to Magnin Store to Cost $100,000 Including 100-Car Garage

Announcement was made yesterday by I. Magnin & Co., ladies-wear establishment at 6340 Hollywood Boulevard, of plans for a $100,000 addition to the present store.

A 100-car garage in the basement for the use of shoppers is provided in the plans. The addition will measure 100 x 60 feet. It will be of steel frame construction and two stories in height.

Interior beauty is one of the chief aims of Architects Myron Hunt and H. C. Chambers. The first floor will be paneled in oak to the ceiling. An inclosed garden patio, open to the sky, will be another feature. The architectural design conforms with that of the main building on Hollywood Boulevard. Herbert M. Baruch Corporation, the builders, have promised to have the building completed by March 1, 1928.

Boulevard Site Leased by Cafe

Emphasizing the growth of Pico Boulevard south of Beverly Hills in industrial importance, the leasing of a commanding location on the thoroughfare as the site for a unique cafe was revealed this week.

The ten-year lease and option to buy involves 115 feet frontage on Pico Boulevard and 110 feet on Beverwill Drive, summit of a lofty knoll.

Charles H. Wolfe, proprietor of the Wolfe School of Costume Design, the owner, and Howard Altemus and Walter James, as the lessees, signed the lease.

Construction is well under way on a one-story stucco building of octagonal design to be operated as a novel restaurant under the name of Chicken Heaven, specializing in southern chicken dinners.

TRAFFIC SOLUTION DEVISED

Pedestrianless Streets With Height-Limit Units Thirty Feet Wide Suggested by Architect

America's skyscrapers are doomed; there will be no pedestrian traffic in the streets of "the city of tomorrow;" buildings a block long, thirteen stories high and not more than fifty feet wide will replace the present imposing structures; sidewalks will be high in air, shop windows will be three floors above the streets, and the canyons of traffic, down on the ground level, will lose their gloom and be bathed in bright sunlight.

This is the dream and the revolutionary plan of Richard J. Neutra, European architect, now a resident of Los Angeles and member of the local Architectural Group for Industry and Commerce, whose book, "What About America," is being reviewed by architectural societies throughout the nation.

Incorporation of certain of Neutra's ideas in buildings in course of construction here, notably the $1,050,000 "out-of-door" apartment-house rising at the northwest corner of Franklin and Argyle avenues, Hollywood, has created considerable interest among builders.

SAYS LOGICAL SOLUTION

Commenting upon Neutra's futuristic plans, Gilbert H. Beesemeyer, secretary-manager of the Guaranty Building and Loan Association, declared that the architect's ideas offered a logical solution for the traffic congestion problem which at present has every city in America puzzled.

"Sentralization of the business districts in cities like New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, etc., with maintenance of the present method of accommodating pedestrians and vehicular traffic, is nearing a climax," the executive asserted. "Our streets, as they are laid out at present, can only carry so many passengers, afoot and in cars. In some cities, and especially at certain intersections like Seventh and Broadway, here, the saturation point is near. Parking is a problem that has everybody guessing, and even the automobile manufacturers are now making a study of the situation, realizing that the continued growth of their industry depends upon finding a solution of it."

Neutra, in his study of the situation, here, in Chicago and in New York, points out that when a certain peak in business zone traffic is reached, a decline in property values in those zones is bound to follow. Instead of continuing to yield greater revenues, incomes from the property will decline, due to the fact that buyers will seek less congested areas in which to do their shopping.

PRESENT CONDITION CITED

At present, as downtown property climbs in value, owners erect higher buildings upon it, spurred by the economic necessities of making it produce an equivalent revenue. More workers, more buyers are accomodated, adding, during the peak hours,

El Monte Sites Bring $143,200 From Angelenos

EL MONTE, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Los Angeles investors have recently purchased three business blocks for a total of $143,200 on Main street here.

The Needham block was purchased by D. Simon of Los Angeles for $62,200. L. Roy Slater of Los Angeles bought a business block erected five years ago by Thurman & Thurman for $62,000 and a building owned by Corpe Brothers was sold to Mrs. Otto Hansen, 202 South Normandie, Los Angeles. All of the property fronts on Main street which is part of the Valley Boulevard and the principal business street of El Monte.

Bank Opened at Inglewood

INGLEWOOD, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Emphasizing the growth of Southland commercial and financial institutions, by comparing the appearance of Market street, this city, when he came here a few years ago, with its present aspect, Mayor Hugh B. Lawrence was one of the chief speakers at the formal opening Saturday evening of the new $125,000 Bank of Inglewood Building at the northeast corner of Market and Queen streets.

The bank building is of Spanish colonial architecture.

A CORRECTION

In last Sunday's Times appeared a telegraphic compilation of building-permit valuations from seventy-three Coast and Southland sities. Totals appearing at the bottom of the columns of figures were for Southern California only. San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Oakland, Sacramento, Stockton and Berkeley were tabulated to show their relative standing with Southland cities, but were not added with the other sixty-six cities, though, through a typographical error, they appeared to have been so added.

NEW HOME EVERY TWO HOURS

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—North Hollywood, formerly Lankershim, is one of the fastest growing communities in the Southland, building figures are showing. During last month, four and a third new houses were built each day. According to the records a new home was completed each two hours of the working day and builders spent $714 each sixty minutes. Building permits in the North Hollywood district to date this year total $1,678,891. In the entire San Fernando Valley annexation district, $401,519 represented the building-permit total in October. Permits issued this month show no abatement in the general building program.

SOUTH GATE PUBLIC JOBS SET RECORD

Civic Improvements to Reach $757,628, Asserts City Engineer Report

SOUTH GATE, Nov. 12. (Exclusive) The coming year will prove one of the greatest in the history of South Gate, in the way of public improvements, the city planning the installation of a sewer system and new water mains and fire hydrants, at a cost which is estimated at $757,623, the cost as submitted by the City Engineer.

This official has estimated the cost of the work, such as the digging of trenches, refilling, resurfacing of the streets, buying of pipe and hydrants, at 6686,912, while the incidental expenses have been placed at $57,813.54, such as engineering, attorneys' work, publication and posting.

It is stated the sewer system will consist of fifty-nine miles of pipes, and that sewage from the entire city will flow into two trunk lines built by the county sanitation district No. 1, which is part of the metropolitan sewer system plan.

The water mains will be laid over fifty-four miles of streets, and will be of cast-iron pipe, replacing the system now in use, which was installed several years ago, and which is of the "stovepipe" material. The city purchased this plant two years ago from the South Gate Gardens Water Company.

HEIGHT-LIMIT BANK PLANNED

California National to Build in Beverly Hills

Corner Site Under Lease on Wilshire Boulevard

Only Tentative Announcement of Project Made

Although final plans have not been drawn, tentative announcement that the California National Bank will construct a height-limit bank and office building at the northeast corner of Beverly Drive and Wilshire Boulevard was made yesterday by A. E. Huntington, president of the California National Bank.

Affiliated with California Bank interests, the Beverly Hills institution has for the last several months been operating in temporary quarters at Wilshire Boulevard and Canyon Drive.

The site for the height-limit unit was leased in January, last, through George Wright, broker, who represented A. F. Shattuck and Clare Shattuck.

In a statement yesterday, Mr. Huntington said in part:

"We have not definitely decided on plans for this edifice which will embrace suitable quarters for our bank and stores on the ground floor with office space on upper floors; but tentative plans have been prepared looking forward to a building in keeping with the high-class architecture of Beverly Hills."

HOLLYWOOD HOTEL UNIT PURCHASED

Firm Acquires Hostelry for $250,000 Consideration; Other Deals

C. A. Gaines Company has just acquired the Wilcox Hotel, a five-story Class A building located at the southwest corner of Wilcox and Selma avenues in Hollywood. This building contains eighty rooms and eight stores, on a lot 45x148. The consideration stated is $250,000. The Wilcox Hotel was built by Thomas B. Morrison in July, 1926, for Dr. A. E. Shaw.

The sale was handled by D. E. Lane, manager of the C. A. Gaines Company, which has opened offices at 6512 Selma avenue in the hotel building.

Lane also reports the sale of a business lot 85x150 feet on Highland avenue near the intersection of Franklin avenue; the sale of a ten-apartment building at 1640 North Normandie avenue for $55,000 and the sale of 1801 North Normandie avenue, a lot 60x160 feet, improved with flat buildings, for $50,000.

Contracts Let for New Spans

Contracts have just been awarded for the fabrication of two new steel bridges, both contracts being placed with the Union Iron Works of California.

One of these bridges is being erected for Santa Barbara county and will span the Santa Agueda Creek. This bridge will contain about twenty tons of structural steel. The second steel bridge is for the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation and will have a span of fifty feet.

CITY TO COVER FOUR COUNTIES

Federal Bureau to Consider Los Angeles Plan

Metropolitan Area to Have 48 Towns and Cities

Increase of 500,000 People Foreseen in Proposal

Four great Southern California counties will comprise the new Los Angeles metropolitan area, plans for which will shortly be submitted to the United States Census Bureau.

Forty-eight thriving cities and towns and an increase in population of approximately 500,000, are included, according to a preliminary survey prepared for Gilbert H. Beesemyer, secretary-manager of the Guaranty Building and Loan Association, based upon information from the industrial department, Chamber of Commerce.

The report, released yesterday, declared that the new business unit will be ten times as great as the present area, which does not even include all of Los Angeles county, stopping at the town of Monrovia on the east and the township line on the north. Greater Los Angeles, from a business standpoint, in the 1930 census will include such cities as San Bernardino, Riverside, Orange, Santa Ana, Anaheim, and the entire string of Foothill Boulevard towns not included in the present boundaries.

AREA DEFINED 10 YEARS AGO

The present Los Angeles metropolitan area was defined ten years ago, prior to the announcement of the 1920 census. During the past decade Los Angeles business has extended far beyond the limits as fixed in 1920, until now the sphere of business influence extends to San Bernardino and beyond and to the extreme lines of Riverside and Orange counties. Reasons given in the survey for this expansion include the tremendous business growth of the city itself, coupled with increased transportation facilities and the shortening of distances by means of telephone, telegraph and radio, which make such cities as San Bernardino near neighbors.

The business census for 1930 will include but sixty-four metropolitan areas in the entire United States, forty-six of which have already been defined and submitted to the bureau. In the formation of the new industrial and business units, Beesemyer declared, city and county lines have been ignored, the New York City metropolitan area, for example, extending into three States.

Recharting the country by metropolitan or business areas, it was asserted, will present a much more accurate and graphic picture of economic development, which has long since been spilled over arbitrarily fixed city limits.

ACCURATE DATA SUPPLIED

Accurate information to big business enterprises will be in the hands of the government when the new metropolitan area becomes an official fact, according to the guaranty report. Concerns planning extensive sales or advertising campaigns, it was declared, will realize that the Los Angeles market extends not only to the township line on the north and Monrovia on the east, but into the four extremely wealthy citrus counties of the California Southland.

California will have three metropolitan areas, those of Los Angeles, San Francisco and San Diego. No city may claim such a business unit for its own without a population of at least 50,000.

Probably even more than Los Angeles, the smaller cities of the four counties will reap great benefits by reason of the enlarged boundaries, it was predicted. Property values will have a tendency to increase, business firms will find added markets and many other benefits will appear when the Greater Los Angeles metropolitan area becomes of official record on the books of the United States Census Bureau.

REDLANDS GYMNASIUM RISING

Rush Work on $200,000 University Unit

To Be Completed for Basketball Season

WORK on the new University of Redlands gymnasium is being rushed in order that the main portion of the structure will be ready for basketball this spring. This is the latest addition to the University of Redlands group and will house physical education activities for both men and women.

Included in the departments are two gymnasium floors each 60 x 90 feet separated by a folding partition. The swimming pool is of tile and is 40 x 100 feet standard intercollegiate size.

Corrective rooms, handball courts, tumbling room, with shower and locker facilities for students, faculty and visiting teams will be included. A laundry and complete heating and filtering plant is being installed, and it is intended that this gymnasium shall include the latest ideas in this type of building. The cost will be about $300,000. The building is a Class A reinforced concrete structure. Norman F. Marsh & Co., are the architects.

LEASE BRINGS HIGH PRICE

Brokers Obtain Property in Alhambra Ninety-nine Years for Total of $660,000

ALHAMBRA, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—One of the most important realty deals reported in recent months is the lease for ninety-nine years of the John B. Stanton property with 125 feet frontage on East Main street, near Stoneman avenue, to Stanford & Stanford, local real estate developers. The total consideration was announced at $660,000.

Announcement of the transaction was accompanied by the start of construction of a $30,000 market building on the site for E. W. McDaniels & Co., chain store operators, who already have eight establishments in this territory. The new structure will be ready for occupancy in December. D. R. Stanford is the contractor.

The property has a depth of 138 feet. The building will occupy the entire frontage and 108 feet of the depth. The remaining portion at the rear will be used for parking space, to which access will be obtained through a twenty-five-foot covered driveway. The market building will be of brick and will be constructed so as to permit the addition of a second-story at a later date. The front will be finished in white enamel brick with black tile trimmings. Colored flood lights will illuminate the front. The building was designed by John Walker Smart, local architect.

The lease of E. W. McDaniels & Co. is for twenty-five years, and in addition to the food market there will be a floral department, drug store and restaurant.

The lease of the Stanton property was completed by H. H. Montgomery of John Seaser Company, brokers.

FACT AND COMMENT

commodity which a given manufacturer produces, each industry would become a cog in the great American industrial machine—a perfect functioning, constant and sturdy mechanism. Manufacturers have long needed some unifying force, an organization that will work in the interests of all. They have needed an impartial source of information concerning markets, to prevent overproduction.

And now, it is presumed, the United States Chamber of Commerce has undertaken to supply manufacturers with data on markets for various goods. It is a commendable movement. There is no reason why the country should suffer depressions, causing labor tie-ups and nation-wide business paralysis. It is a relic of industry's "dark ages" just as surely as wars will eventually be regarded as a ghost of long ago. Helter-skelter production with no regard to demand is not sound business. The manufacturer realizes that and now he wants a reliable market barometer. If the United States Chamber of Commerce cannot itself supply the data, it can aid greatly by showing the manufacturers how to figure it out.

This Home-Owning Talk

Determination of the amount that he can advisedly expend in a home is a perplexing problem to Mr. Average Man. Can he afford an $5000, $10,000 or $12,000 dwelling?

A review of general practice is the best source of information on home-ownership. Past transactions and experience have taught that one can afford to build a home that costs about twice his annual income. Some find that three times the annual income does not impose too heavy a burden, but that relation is generally too high unless increased wages or salary is in prospect.

Take careful note of interest charges, insurance, taxes, upkeep and estimate what proportion of your income will be spent on those items. These are comparable to rent. If a building and loan plan of financing has been used, the difference between the monthly payment and the interest on the unpaid balance of the loan is a saving and should be considered a saving on budget plans.

To get a modest home first is the best policy. The experience of owning the small home will give the owner a better understanding of his needs, and when a more pretentious home is contemplated, his choice will be a wiser one.

SOLUTION FOR TRAFFIC URGED

more congestion to an already-congested zone.

The architect and town-planner's proposals would change all this. In the first place the business-section blocks would be laid out and orientated about east-west, so that, even with the sun in the most unfavorable position, 60 per cent of the street area would remain exposed to its rays. The streets would be very wide, the blocks very narrow, about fifty feet, of uniform design and not more than thirteen-stories high. The total of all the downtown groundfloor area would be used for parking, or added to the public traffic space, the front of the buildings being supported on columns.

Pedestrian traffic and the store fronts would be elevated to the second, possibly the third story. Down the middle of each street, on the ground level, would be a narrow tunnel of trees, giving access at each street intersection to a concrete tower. Elevators in these towers would carry pedestrians to the overhead sidewalks, which would run along in front of the elevated shop windows.

Neutra differs radically from other town planners in his contention that the deconcentrated city leads to greater traffic congestion in the downtown areas, instead of reducing it. He maintains that a shopping public will always make for the shops and that spreading of the residential district out over a wide area merely leads to more vehicular traffic in the favored buying centers. Provision must be made for this psychological trait, he claims, by providing means of communication sufficient to carry the loads.

His proposals also offer a solution of the vexing problem of joint railroad terminal stations in large cities, plus provision of a municipally owned airplane landing field. The terminal would go several stories into the earth and only about two stories above, the immense flat roof being used as an airport. A height-limit hotel with balcony gardens would form the facade of the structure. Three hundred and fifty trains daily could be handled, with suburban and street-car lines so arranged that the transfer from long-distance to city lines of 30,000 passengers per hour, peak load, could be handled without confusion.

Westwood Hills Anniversary to Be Celebrated

Westwood Hills will next week celebrate the fifth anniversary of its founding.

Less than sixty months ago Westwood Hills was a grain field. Thirty-five hundred acres in extent, it was the connecting link between the outskirts of greater western Los Angeles and the eastern portion of the Santa Monica Bay district. The only improvement on the entire property was the old Wolfskill ranch house.

First establishing itself as a home center, its scope of development was enlarged to include the University of California, which gave it additional impetus as a community through a plan to build the ideal university community.

The opening of the university is scheduled by regents for next September. In addition to the University of California project, which Gov. Young recently predicted will equal or surpass the Berkeley institution in student enrollment, two grammar schools have been erected in the project and an intermediate as well as a high school adjoining. Sites have been selected for private schools also.

PARK TENNIS COURTS URGED

At their recent meeting, the Southwest Branch, Los Angeles Realty Board adopted a resolution recommending the establishment of tennis courts in Exposition Park, according to advices from the office of Secretary J. A. Westrom. The resolutions were adopted following receipt of inquiries from Councilmen L. R. Rice-Wray and Howard W. Davis, who are also members of the branch board, it was said.

STATE PLAYS LEADING ROLE

California Ranked Highest in Five Different Points by Real Estate Association

Undisputed position of first place in the National Association of Real Estate Boards is held by California in five different points, according to Harry B. Allen, president of the California Real Estate Association.

These points are: Largest number of active real estate boards; largest number of realtors; largest combined total of realtors and associate members, who are property owners; largest membership of salesmen and largest increase in national strength, this State having increased 15 per cent over a year ago.

Only eight States in the Union have a national strength of more than 1000 members, these States being California, Florida, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

TWO COURTS FOR SOUTH GATE

SOUTH GATE, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Two building permits have been issued here for large bungalow courts, under the provision of the city's new zoning ordinance, which has created a court and apartment-house zone. A. V. Geldart has secured a permit for the erection of a ten-unit structure to be erected on Beechwood avenue, to cost $12,000. L. H. Stover has taken out a building permit for the erection of a six-unit court on Chestnut street to cost $9000.

SENNETT STUDIO CONTRACT GIVEN

Austin Company Will Start Building Tomorrow

Production Plant to Be 100 Days in Construction

Twenty-two Units Included in $800,000 Job

Austin Company of California was yesterday awarded the contract for the construction of the Mack Sennett production plant at Studio City, North Hollywood, according to an announcement made by John A. Waldron, general manager of Mack Sennett, Inc. The statement was confirmed by Sennett. An investment of approximately $800,000 is involved in land, building and equipment.

R. E. Ward, general manager of the Austin Company, following Waldron's statement, declared that construction work would start tomorrow and that the motion-picture production studio would be completed within 100 days. The Austin Company constructed the First National plant in eighty days.

Fronting on Radford avenue, a short distance from Ventura Boulevard, the Sennett studio and its outdoor sets will cover twenty acres of ground. It will be the most modern motion-picture plant of its kind in existence, it was asserted.

REVISED PLANS TOLD

Revised plans call for twenty-two buildings. The Spanish - Mexican motif will be followed. The gate entrance will be of stone and tile, stuccoed. There will be a gate lodge of stucco with tile roof. The administration building will be two stories high. It will have three balconies and follow the Spanish-Mexican style with Mexican white stucco and glyph.

Some idea of the size of the Sennett studio may be gained from the fact that approximately 1,000,000 board feet of rough lumber with a total of fifty railroad carloads of wood and steel sash, and 100,000 square feet of composition tile will be required. It is estimated that sixty carloads of concrete materials will be used. The interior and exterior plastering amounts to 30,000 yards.

FOUR STAGES PLANNED

Four stages scheduled for construction will provide 88,000 square feet of floor space for the taking of interior scenes. These buildings will be of stucco with bowstring trusses, 200x100 feet in dimension.

One of the novel features of the studio will be a swimming pool on the interior of one of the stages, which will be in addition to the large outdoor pool. A section of the floor will be on rollers so that when the pool is not in use it may be covered and the space available for sets.

Dressing-rooms will be connected with the stages. The passage will be 50x100 feet; a mill building, 60x130 feet, will provide ample room for the extensive planing and woodworking machinery to be installed. The storage shed will be 50x100 feet and the generator room, 30x70 feet. Among other buildings will be a wardrobe and prop room, 53x100 feet. Plans for the swimming pool call for cement tank, 40x75 feet.

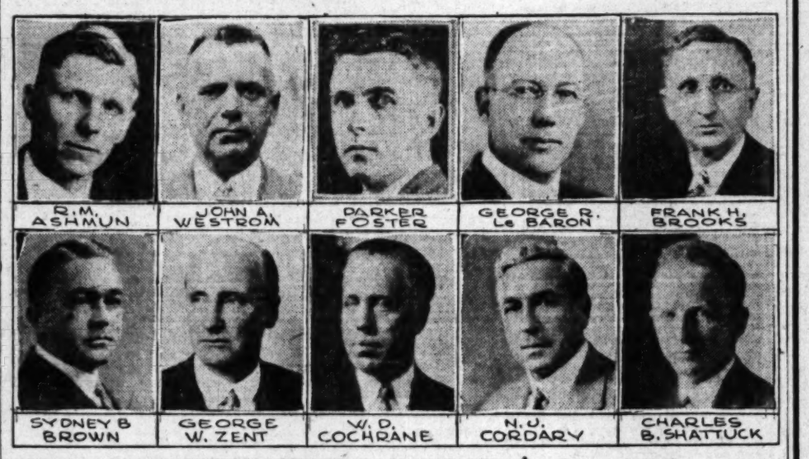
Branch Elects New Officers

The annual election of officers of the Hollywood branch of the Los Angeles Realty Board was held Wednesday at the midweek luncheon meeting at the Hollywood Athletic Club.

Ayers J. Du Bois was unanimously elected chairman of the Hollywood branch and a director of the Los Angeles Realty Board, and D. E. Lane was unanimously elected vice-chairman of the Hollywood branch.

REALTY BOARD ELECTS NEW DIRECTORS

Ten Named in Addition to Two-Year Term Officers



ELECTION of directors for 1927 for the Los Angeles Realty Board held last week resulted in the selection of R. M. Ashmun, Frank H. Brooks, Sydney B. Brown, W. D. Cochrane, N. J. Cordary, Parker Foster, George Le Baron, Charles B. Shattuck, John A. Westrom and George W. Zent.

Eleven members of the present body were elected last year for a two-year term, and will serve with the new members for the coming year. The hold-over directors include Mason Case, C. R. L. Crenshaw, Harry H. Culver, W. E. Dimmick, Harold G. Ferguson, C. W. Grant, Clem S. Glass, E. Avery McCarthy, Bernard Rosenthal, Guy M. Rush and Clarence Urban.

In addition to the directors chosen by the membership, each of the four branches of the board select a member from their division to represent them on the governing body. Ayres du Bois has been chosen by the Hollywood branch, while the Southwest, Wilmington and Eagle Rock representatives have not as yet been named.

BOULEVARD WORK PUSHED

Improvement of Jefferson-Exposition Artery in Various Stages of Completion

Sections of Greater Jefferson-Exposition Boulevard, extending from the heart of Los Angeles to the ocean, are in various stages of completion.

On the 1st inst., widening was started on the section between Orchard avenue and Vermont avenue, and proceedings are now under way to widen Jefferson from Vermont to Arlington. This will create a uniform width of eighty-two and one-half feet for a distance of one mile.

The section from Arlington avenue to Cochran avenue is now complete and the stretch from Cochran to Ballona Creek, at Culver City limits, has proceedings now ready to start. That section from Ballona Creek to Washington Boulevard, connecting with the National Boulevard direct route to Santa Monica, is covered by condemnation proceedings which are practically complete. The proceedings on Jefferson Boulevard from Moynier Lane to Duquesne street, in Culver City, connecting the six and one-half mile strip that is now paved and completed with Palisades Del Rey, Venice, have been initiated and passed by the Board of Supervisors.

The section from Main street to Angeleus Mesa Drive on Exposition Boulevard is now under condemnation proceedings.

With the completion of these two boulevards in the near future Los Angeles will have gained one of its most valuable traffic arteries, connecting up with the coast route to San Francisco and the easterly route to San Diego according to the Greater Jefferson-Exposition Boulevard Association.

CONTRACT ON TRACT WORK LET

Improvements Will Cost More Than $500,000 for First Two Units

Improvements totaling in excess of $500,000, to be installed in the first two units of Glen Oaks, a Guy M. Rush subdivision in the San Rafael Hills, were authorized last week in a contract awarded to James E. Haddock, according to George A. Orloff, secretary of the owning corporation.

Work on this contract covering the installation of water, gas, electricity, curbs, gutters, sanitary sewers, paved streets and ornamental electroliers, will be started immediately, Orloff stated, grading operations on the residential drives having been recently completed by a crew operating continuously during the past few months.

Unusual success has attended the marketing of this new property, it is declared, because of advantages said to be rarely found in property of this price class, such as natural wooded beauty, adequate protective restrictions and a location readily accessible from the metropolitan area.

Plans for Golf Course Rushed

Plans for the eighteen-hole golf course of the recently incorporated Rancho Santa Fe Country Club are progressing. The announcement of the projected course has brought much favorable comment from golf experts and sports enthusiasts because of the excellent terrain on which it is proposed to build the course.

Following acceptance of the incorporation papers by the Secretary of State at Sacramento, election of officers has taken place and the organization is functioning under their guidance. Barton Millard is president, Ellis Bishop, vice-president, and D. M. Richards, secretary and treasurer. These men, with Ronald MacDonald, comprise the board of directors.

LIMITATIONS IN REALTY DISCUSSED

Tract Restrictions Held Not Void by Speaker in Institute at University

Speaking before the Los Angeles Building and Loan Institute at the University of California at Los Angeles, Earl Johnson, assistant title officer of Title Insurance and Trust Company, discussed the subject of conditions and restrictions.

In considering the problem of whether conditions can be limited in extent of time, Mr. Johnson brought out the point that conditions imposed on tracts, making no mention of the time they are to run, are apparently not void, although a contrary idea is prevalent. According to Mr. Johnson, a great number of restricted subdivisions in this county have no provision as to time limitations, and the question naturally arises as to when the conditions expire, if at all. The answer is found in the attitude of courts of equity, which have refused to enforce conditions if the character of the neighborhood is changed, and the rule would appear to be that the conditions would continue until the character of the neighborhood had changed.

If a tract were restricted to first-class private residences and in the course of years flats and apartment-houses were built all through the tract, a person owning a lot in the tract would probably be safe in commencing the erection of a flat or apartment-house on his lot, if the right of forfeiture had been waived by the original subdivider. If the original subdivider or any other lot owner in the tract sought to enjoin him, he could plead as his defense that the character of the neighborhood had changed and the court might rule with him. It is a peculiar rule of equity, however, that the owner cannot bring an action to quiet his title against the obsolete conditions. He can only defend actions brought against him.

Poultry Tract Sites Reserved

F. H. Oliphant, president of the Associated Poultrymen, Inc., announces that although only taken over a few days ago, preopening sales have been made in Virginia Park and building will start at once.

All sales have been made under the associated plan and call for a complete poultry plant consisting of two acres, a five-room modern stucco bungalow, double garage, a 2000 capacity poultry unit constructed as per their standard plan and 2000 laying hens.

Los Angeles offices have been established in both the Merritt Building and the National City Bank Building.

STUDIO INSTALLS NEW DIAL SYSTEM

The new private branch exchange dial telephone system recently installed by the Southern California Telephone Company at the Paramount-Famous-Lasky studio is now in service. Several months of engineering and traffic work has been required for the project and approximately $21,290 has been expended on the work.

FIFTY BUILDERS MOVE EXHIBIT

Materials Display to Shift to Architects' Unit

Basement, First Floor and Mezzanine Engaged

Various Divisions Now Will be Classified

Tuesday the exhibit of building materials, which for the last fourteen years has occupied the entire sixth floor of the Metropolitan Building, will take possession of its new home, comprising the entire ground floor, mezzanine and basement of the Architects' Building, now nearing completion at the corner of Fifth and Figueroa streets.

In its new location the exhibit will be known as the Architects' Building Material Exhibit, and the increased floor space to be occupied by the exhibit will permit larger and more complete showing of all types of modern building materials and accessories. All of the present exhibitors, numbering more than fifty, will be represented in the new location with elaborate exhibits showing the materials which they represent and their application in modern construction.

One of the outstanding features of the new exhibit will be the classification and arrangement of the various types of exhibit. The ground floor space will be divided into streets of attractively designed miniature buildings exemplifying plaster, concrete, wood, brick and tile construction. A series of exhibits will be housed on the mezzanine floor, and the basement will be devoted to special exhibits and to a large hall, which can be devoted to special meetings and to exhibits of architectural drawings.

Among the exhibitors will be the Albatross Steel Furniture Company, W. B. Bastian Manufacturing Company, water heaters; California Stucco Products Company, stucco; California Redwood Association; Claycraft Potteries, tiles; Earle Hardward Manufacturing Company; W. P. Fuller Company, paint; Hardwood Dealers' Association, Judson Studios, art glass; Los Angeles Cut Stone Company, natural stone; Monarch Metal Weatherstrip Company, weatherstrip and waterproofing; Metz Products Company, built-in refrigerators; Simons Brick Company, brick, roofing and floor tile; Terra Company, steam heating by electricity; Solar Lighting Fixture Company and others.

New Classes Will Reach High Number

With a total of 393 students already registered in the real estate courses sponsored by the California Real Estate Association and the University of Southern California, and classes being organized in North Hollywood, Van Nuys, Berkeley, Glendale, Santa Monica, Santa Ana, Santa Cruz and Culver City, the registration of this season is expected to reach a new high figure, according to Frank Coolidge, field representative of the university.

Cities already taking the classes and the number of students enrolled are: Alhambra, seven; Bakersfield, nineteen; Beverly Hills, twenty-five; Fresno, four; Long Beach, seventy-five; Los Angeles, Southwest Branch, sixty-two; Oakland, twenty-three; Orange, eighteen; Pasadena, twelve; Richmond, four; Riverside, fourteen; San Francisco, eighty-six, San Diego, forty-two, and Vallejo, fourteen.

New Filtration Unit Pushed at Beverly Hills

BEVERLY HILLS, Nov. 12.—Construction work has started here on the new aeration and filtration plant which the contractors, Carpenter Brothers, and the Better Home Cooperative Association, propose to have well under way before the rainy season sets in. The concrete foundation piles already have been installed, according to George W. Given, president of the co-operative association, and construction work on the superstructure will advance rapidly.

Contract for the project was let for $147,700 and the contract for the equipment was awarded to the California Filter Company for $44,950. Following the signing of the contract for the construction of the filtration plant, the park superintendent was ordered to estimate the cost for landscaping and beautifying the north side of the new 5,000,000-gallon reservoir used in connection with the water plant. It is proposed to eventually turn the site into a park.

WEST HOLLYWOOD MARKET ACTIVE

An indication of the active real estate market in West Hollywood, especially in the neighborhood of Gardner Junction on Sunset Boulevard, is reported by O. L. Montgomery, broker, that his sales and exchanges for the last month amounted to $100,000.

The deals include a one-story brick garage building on the southwest corner of Sunset Boulevard and Vista street, seven-room house at 1540 North Sierra Bonita avenue, a four-unit stucco court at 9022 Lloyd Place, a six-room house at 6607 De Longpre avenue, and a residence lot on the corner of Hollywood Boulevard and Laurel Canyon Road. He also placed a Piggly Wiggly store and market at 7558-8 Sunset Boulevard, on a ten-year lease.

ELABORATE HOME COMPLETED

Private Theater and Ballroom Included

Friends Plant Gardens

OCCUPYING a two-acre site being landscaped by C. H. Ellison, the home shown above has been completed for Carlin G. Smith in Brand Park Estates, Glendale. Designed by Harry Whiteley, the residence contains on the lower floor a billiard and smoking room, a private theater and a ballroom.

On the first floor are the living room with its three-way exposure, the reception hall, the dining-room, breakfast-room, guest suite, kitchen and servants' quarters. The second floor houses the master suite consisting of sleeping porch, bedroom, dressing-room, bath and veranda sitting-room. Besides this there are three other sleeping rooms and two other baths in the second floor.

The spacious grounds contain swimming pool, tennis court, a three-car garage and the friendship gardens. These gardens have been laid out to meet with the approval of Mr. Smith's friends who have asked the privilege of planting a "friendship shrub," a "friendship tree" or a "friendship bush" and so assist in beautifying the grounds and at the same time leave a lasting tribute of friendship.

The friendship gardens are now being platted and each plant in the garden will be named for the donor and shown on the plat which will be framed and hung under glass in the garden. In after years, by referring to athis map, the visitor to the garden will be able to note the growth of the plant for which he was responsible and its exact location.

LARGEST WATER LINE SEEN

Fontana System Now Totals 400 Miles; All Open Irrigation Ditches Being Eliminated

FONTANA, Nov. 12.—With the completion of the job of laying one and five-eighths miles of thirty-inch pipe, the last short lengths of open irrigation ditches will be eliminated and the entire irrigation system of this community will be underground, it was revealed here today by Maj. P. B. Hasbrouck, engineer for the Fontana Farms Company.

Maj. Hasbrouck announced that the two water companies here, many new pipe lines and connections will be necessary and the engineering department is now making a study of the needs. The merger of the two companies gives this section an ample supply of water at all times, said Engineer Hasbrouck, with a total maximum supply of 5785 inches and a total minimum, reached only in the dryest years of 2945 inches. Those figures translated into gallons, would give the capacity of Fontana's irrigation system a total maximum of 53,063 gallons per minute and a minimum total of 26,505 gallons per minute.

Drilling operations are now underway here on a new well north of Foothill Boulevard and two other wells are to be sunk shortly south of the Santa Fe right of way.

SCHOOL REFLECTS PROGRESS

The establishment of a new school at Granada within the next few months is numbered among the important phases in the program of development for that community, which is being projected by the Edwards & Widely Company, subdividers of the 4100-acre tract in the northwest end of the San Fernando Valley.

E. F. Trefz, community counselor for the firm, declared that no more conclusive proof has been offered as to the growth and development of the new town of Granada, than was given by the Board of Education of Los Angeles at its meeting the 7th inst. At this meeting the purchase of a school site of five and one-half acres in Granada was authorized by the school board, and it is expected that the new building will be ready for occupancy in the early part of February of next year.

The sale of lots for homesites at Granada began on December 2, 1926, while the first house was completed for occupancy on March 10, 1927. Since then a house has been completed every three days for these buyers of homesites. Meantime the school population of Granada increased by leaps and bounds, and the question of school facilities arose as a community problem.

The site chosen for the school takes in the block surrounded by Los Alamos, Tribune, Aldea and Amestoy streets. The assurance of this school was made within a year of the sale of the first homesite and within eight months after the first family moved into the community.

There are now seventy-one children in Granada, who are now attending school in San Fernando, which number will provide the nucleus for an enrollment for the new Granada school, when it is opened next spring.

Orange Banks Continue to Report Gains

ORANGE, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—The financial institutions of Orange continued to show healthy growth through the reports this week of the substantial gains made in bank resources during the past month. The combined resources of the amalgamated banks are now said to total almost $5,000,000, and one of these now has resources surpassing the $3,000,000 mark, the first time in Orange banking history that this figure has been reached.

With a gain of a little more than $180,000 within less than a month, the deposits of the Consolidated First National Bank of Orange stood this week at $3,032,192.49, according to the statement issued by N. T. Edwards, president.

The Orange Savings Bank, the other merged institution, also reported a substantial gain with the resources now totaling $1,850,000 or an increase of almost $50,000 since October 10.

SANTA ANA CORNER PROPERTY IN DEAL

SANTA ANA, Nov. 12. (Exclusive) The northwest corner of Main and Second streets was purchased this week by W. B. Williams, A. W. Rutan and Otto Haan, the consideration involved being $65,000. Simultaneously with the purchase announcement was made by the new owners that they expect to develop and execute a business building program at the earliest date possible, January 1 being given as the time that completion of the plans for starting the improvement could be expected.

LOFTY UNIT WILL RISE IN BAY CITY

Medico-Dental Building to Go Up as Result of Success in Los Angeles

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—The success experienced by Dr. F. E. Morgan and Los Angeles associates in the erection and subsequent manner of conducting the Medico-Dental Building in the southern city is the most important factor in Dr. Morgan's alignment with San Francisco capitalists to erect a similar building here. Plans are complete, all major contracts have been awarded and the structure will get under way January 15, next, at 450 Sutter street, in the downtown business district. It will cost approximately $5,000,000 and will be twenty-six stories in height, or as high as the tower of the new Los Angeles City Hall.

Aside from the street level floor, which will be devoted to stores, the entire building is designed to be reserved for physicians, surgeons and dentists. To assure that desire, as fully as possible, suites are being planned to suit individual needs, with any permanent, built-in features the individual occupant desires.

Financing of the structure has been underwritten by S. W. Strauss & Co., to the extent of $2,550,000.

Realty Women Plan Conclave

Members of the southern section of the woman's division of the California Real Estate Association plan a conference the 19th inst. at the Maryland Hotel in Pasadena. Mrs. Hazel M. Grant, chairman, announces in the November issue of California Real Estate.

The conference will be in the form of a luncheon, with a large number of leading women from the southern section of the State participating in the addresses scheduled. Mrs. Grant is requesting data to be sent her for a question box to be conducted as a round-table discussion.

MORE PAVING ORDERED

OWENSMOUTH, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—An ordinance of intention calling for the paving of Roscoe street from Topanga Canyon avenue to Santa avenue in the western end of San Fernando Valley, a distance of one and a half miles, has been passed. The project calls for concrete, twenty feet wide.

TOURIST CENTER PLAN INDICATED

Several Thousand Acres in Phoenix Area Involved

Options Believed Taken for Los Angeles Syndicate

Similiar Projects Under Way in Arizona Districts

PHOENIX, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—The largest suburban real estate and building project ever locally known is indicated in options that have been taken, apparently on behalf of a Los Angeles syndicate, on several thousand acres lying about eight miles north of Phoenix. Options are in the names of Phoenix business men, who refuse to state the use to which the land will be devoted. In general, the tract selected lies east of the Sixteenth-street road and Phoenix mountains, crossing the Arizona Canal into an unirrigated and north of Camelback road to the rocky district, though a number of orange groves are included, south of the canal. Practically all the district lies within the citrus belt of the valley. Some of the options, with substantial cash advances, run up to $1000 an acre. It is pointed out that the location would be an ideal one for a tourist hotel and resort of high character, somewhat on the lines that have proved so successful at Chandler. While paved roads lead from it to Phoenix, to the northward is a mountainous region of remarkable scenic attractions, to be penetrated by bridle paths and trails.

A similar project is that of La Palma, near Florence, where about $1,000,000 is being spent by a Chicago company in creation of a golfing resort and attached town, all of Spanish designing.

Still another tourist center is to be created by Ralph Murphy in the Ingleside section, ten miles northeast of Phoenix, with inclusion of a clubhouse, cottages and a golf course.

NEW FARM PROJECT INVOLVES $3,000,000

CASA GRANDE (Ariz.) Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—About $3,000,000 is declared involved in plans made for development of a new farming area in the Toltec section, eight miles east of this point, on the old line of the Southern Pacific system. A tract of 10,000 acres has been purchased by capital represented by W. H. Avery of Kansas City, R. W. Little of Minneapolis, Edward Brown of Los Angeles and Frank Shedd of Phoenix. There is to be immediate subdivision of 3000 acres, to be handled through the Frank Meline Company of Los Angeles. It is proposed to specialize in the growing, marketing and packing of vegetables. A part of the land is under the Coolidge storage project on the Gila River at San Carlos.

MEXICAN CHURCH PLANNED FOR PHOENIX

PHOENIX, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Plans are being made for a large church on East Washington street, for the especial use of Mexican Catholics who now occupy the lower floor of St. Mary's Church on East Monroe. A special offer of $25,000 toward the expense of construction has been made by a Catholic whose name has not been made public, and $10,000 more has been pledged by a parochial association within St. Mary's congregation. Administration of the new church will be by the Spanish order of Brothers of the Sacred Heart of Mary. Early construction is expected of a Catholic parochial school at Yuma.

BUSINESS-APARTMENT STRUCTURE TO BE ERECTED

PHOENIX, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Erection of a $150,000 business and apartment block is to be started soon by Nels Agren, local contractor, on 322 feet of Central-avenue frontage, at West McDowell. The corner lot was bought for $18,200 from Carl Schader of Santa Monica. The property is a full half-mile north of Roosevelt, the present northern limit of Phoenix business and is in the center of a high-class residential district.

NEW CITRUS AREA BEING ESTABLISHED

MESA (Ariz.) Nov. 12. (Exclusive) A new citrus-growing area of at least 3000 acres is being established northeast of this point, in the northern section of the Roosevelt Water Conservation District, in a section uncultivated till within the past year. Declaration is made that 30,000 acres of land in that locality are suited to the growing of grapefruit and oranges.

Former State Head of Realty Joins Firm Here

Announcement was made yesterday by J. B. Ransom of the affiliation of Edwin T. Keiser, former Real Estate Commissioner of California, and one of the best-known authorities on real-estate matters in the State, with the J. B. Ransom Corporation as director of personnel.

EDWIN T. KEISER

As State Real Estate Commissioner between the years 1921 and 1925, Keiser was in a large measure, responsible for the subsequent policies of this new department of the State government, which had been inaugurated about a year before his appointment.

As a result of these policies, and acting in co-operation with the California Real Estate Association, which Keiser helped organize, the State Real Etsate Department has been instrumental in establishing real estate in California on a firmer foundation and has raised it to a higher level than ever before in its history.

The former Real Estate Commissioner returned to Los Angeles from Chicago last June, after having devoted considerable time in the eastern metropolis to a close study of the real-estate situation. His wide knowledge of real-estate conditions in California, he said yesterday, gained while he was the head of the Real Estate Department, has convinced him that Los Angeles' East Side is one of the bright spots for investment in the United States today.

INGLEWOOD DISCUSSES MAJOR ROAD

Chamber Plans Extension of Redondo Boulevard as Improved Main Artery

INGLEWOOD, Nov. 12. (Exclusive) Plans for making Redondo Boulevard a major-traffic artery seventy-four feet wide and eventually extending on a diagonal from San Pedro street in Los Angeles into the heart of Inglewood, were outlined at a meeting of the Inglewood Chamber of Commerce this week by George M. Sutton, chairman of the Redondo Boulevard committee of the Chamber.

Mr. Sutton said that plans being drawn by the Los Angeles County Regional Planning Commission call for the opening of the boulevard from where it now joins West Boulevard through to Western avenue at a point close to the latter's junction with Slauson avenue in the near future.

Ultimate plans for the thoroughfare, it was said, will include the extension to San Pedro street. The speaker characterized the project as "likely to make another Hollywood Boulevard."

Eastern Man Plans Bringing Friends West

Two score years ago—and even later—it was not unusual for heads of families in the crowded East to come west, establish themselves and send for their families. Correspondence with former friends and neighbors oftimes led to the latter also coming west and locating in the same community.

Officials of Rancho Santa Fe, 100 miles south of Los Angeles and thirty-two miles from San Diego, point to an instance of the same sort there.

One of the purchasers of a ninety-six-acre estate is a prominent Chicagoan. On the ninety-six-acre estate there are several building sites. The owner has laid water pipes to each and has placed conduits for electric connections to each. To officials of the company he has said he is going to sell these building sites to friends and business associates who evince a desire to have a home in Southern California. His idea is not to make any money on the plan, but to have within the ninety-six acres his personal friends. He is having the entire estate landscaped in one general scheme.

Auto Building Deal Closed

The Charles G. Andrews Company, through A. G. Davenport, reports having sold the northwest corner of Broadway and Slauson avenue and closed a lease with the Chevrolet Motor Company of California for the two-story concrete building being erected there by the John M. Cooper Company, contractors.

The sale, building and lease involve more than $242,000.

Giant Pecan Contains Tract Model

Eight-Foot Nut Sent to Arizona

A giant pecan—eight feet in length, has been dispatched by Rick Burrows, manager of the farm land department of the Frank Meline Company, to Globe, Ariz., where offices have been opened for the sale of Yuma Valley (Arizona) pecan lands. The giant nut is made as nearly as possible like the two-and-one-quarter-inch variety for which Yuma Valley is famous. One side is cut away to reveal a miniature of Yuma Valley, twenty miles long by eight miles wide. In Yuma Valley is located the pecan acreage which the Frank Meline Company is marketing for the Yuma Trust and Holding Company, which is owned by the Yuma National Bank, the First National Bank of Yuma and the E. G. Caruthers State Bank of Somerton, Ariz.

E. L. Koenig Elected as New Trustee

Filling the vacancy caused by the recent resignation of A. J. Wallace, E. L. Koenig of the Pacific Palisades was elected to the board of trustees of the Pacific Palisades Association at the annual meeting of the body held yesterday in Los Angeles. All officers of the association were re-elected, including Walter Armacost of Sawtelle, president and chairman of the board; Merle N. Smith, Pasadena, vice-president; A. M. Chaffey, Los Angeles, treasurer; Eugene F. Gates, Alhambra, secretary; Oren B. Waite, Pacific Palisades, executive vice-president.

The five board members whose terms expire this month and who were re-elected yesterday are A. N. Wike of Redlands, R. C. Gillis, John G. Hill and Willsie Martin, all of Los Angeles, and A. J. Hughes of Long Beach. The election of Mr. Koenig followed his nomination along with that of W. H. Day by Dr. Waite, who recommended to the board that one of its members should come from the local community. Mr. Koenig is president of the Pacific Palisades Improvement League and was formerly a banker in Nebraska, where he still holds extensive property interests. He is a member of the national governing board of the evangelical church. He recently completed the erection of his third house at Pacific Palisades.

Work Started on New Lights

HUNTINGTON PARK, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—The work of setting the ornamental lighting poles on Pacific Boulevard was started this week and it is expected that it will take three or four weeks to complete this work and make the wire connections. There will be 102 lighting standards on the boulevard when the work is completed. It is expected that within the next two or three weeks the street paving work along Pacific Boulevard will be finished, with the exception of the center of the street, which is occupied with the rails of the Los Angeles Street Car Company.

These rails are to be moved closer together and the tracks lowered, after which the right of way will be paved.

HOSTELRY RISING AT MONTECITO

Structure Combining Auto Garage and Hotel Will Involve $500,000

Involving a cost said to be $500,000 a hotel with garage adjoining is under construction at the southwest corner of Coast Highway and Olive Road, Montecito. It will be owned by a newly organized corporation, the Montecito Company, headed by Don B. Sebastian, W. B. Seamans and J. H. Bradley. The hostelry will be supervised by L. C. Reed. The lease was handled by Cason-Hardebeck Company of Los Angeles.

Extending 260 feet along the Coast Highway, the structure is of Spanish design. A lobby eighty feet long and a dining patio are features of the hotel. More than 130 guests are provided for. A garage will be operated under the same roof so that a guest might leave his car over night, have it serviced and drive away in the morning without stepping outdoors.

Construction will be completed by January 1, 1928, it is declared.

WEST VALLEY AREA KEEPS UP RECORD

GIRARD, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—The west end of San Fernando Valley kept up its record during October in taking out one-third of all the building permits that were issued throughout the annexation district. During the month the total number granted was 439, which called for the expenditure of $401,519. During the first ten months of the year 1057 building permits were issued. Contractors and builders predict that activities among the builders throughout the western section of the valley will be on the increase during the next few months, due to the increasing number of people who are becoming interested in the business of poultry raising and small ranching.

Historic Tract at Chino to be Resort Project

CHINO, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—An extensive improvement program is announced at Los Serranos Country Club, which was recently acquired by O. W. Heinz and associates of Los Angeles.

The development program will transform the 739-acre club site into a large recreation center, according to Mr. Heinz. Facilities will be made available for golf, tennis, horseback riding, canoeing, swimming, water sports, fishing, archery, trap-shooting and dancing. Los Serranos Country Club property was the site of the famous battle of Rancho Chino, and for many years was the home of Don Antonio Lugo.

Development work has already started at the club. A contract has been let for a swimming pool 60 by 125 feet, the pool to be surrounded by a broad, vari-colored cement walk on which will be placed wrought iron tables and chairs.

Apartment to Rise at Once

Decision to erect shortly at 1477 West Adams a $90,000 brick apartment-house was reached yesterday by J. M. Close, broker and builder. According to tentative plans the new structure will be three stories high and will contain twenty-four units. Disappearing twin beds, Frigidaire and complete electric equipment will be features. Construction will be started within thirty days.

TWO BRIDGES UNDER WAY

SPRINGVILLE, NOV. 12, (Exclusive)—Two new reinforced concrete bridges are being constructed in the Balch Park country. One is across the Tule River, about a mile above Springville on the Camp Nelson Road. It will consist of three forty-foot spans. The other is at Milo and will be a twenty-two foot span. These bridges will cost about $14,500.

Fontana Poultry Head Resigns to Start Hatchery

FONTANA, Nov. 12.— (Exclusive)—Superintendent of the poultry ranch of the Fontana Farms Company for nine years, E. J. Hauser presented his resignation of that position today with the announcement that he is entering the hatching business for himself here. H. M. Harter, who came here recently from Stockton, where he was in charge of the poultry division of the Heart of the Valley Poultry Farm, will succeed Mr. Hauser.

E. J. HAUSER

Mr. Hauser is considered one of the leading authorities of California on chickens and chicken raising, and was instrumental in developing the Fontana strain of White Leghorn, which has won egg-laying contests consistently in all parts of the State. He is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, and one of his prize hens was Lady Fontana, which had a five-year record of more than 1000 eggs. She died a few years ago after gaining international fame.

H. M. HARTER

A hatchery is already under construction here for Mr. Hauser that will have three incubators at the start, each with a capacity of 12,000 eggs. He is said to have started the hatchery because of the increasing demand here for baby chicks.

Ranch Realty Appears Brisk Near Lindsay

LINDSAY, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Brisk activit in ranch real estate in this vicinity is reported. Most of the transactions are those in which persons already owning orchards in the district are acquiring further citrus properties.

J. W. Cruickshank has added to his orange interests by buying a grove in Paradise Colony from W. B. Holland of Fresno. Frank Ogilvie has sold his twenty-acre orange grove north of town to Benjamin Shoemaker. Harry White purchased a twenty-acre orange grove in Paradise Colony from H. H. Holland and wife of Fresno. The forty-five-acre vineyard known as the Gutterson property was sold by Tooker-Gordon, Inc., to Albert Jansen of Los Angeles. Mrs. L. C. McKenney has trusted her forty-acre orange grove and vineyard to A. C. Stegemeier for his business block on Sweet Briar avenue and for his two residences here. O. P. Gutterson, Lindsay orchardist, recently purchased a forty-acre grove from Ross Matkins of Los Angeles.

Record Set in Cement Pouring

What is considered to be a Pacific Coast record for pouring concrete was established by the Scofield Engineering-Construction Company on the $1,000,000 B. H. Dyas Company's Hollywood store, on the southwest corner of Hollywood Boulevard and Vine street. The structure is scheduled to be completed early in December.

Employing three working crews continuously each day, the Scofield firm poured into place all the concrete required for the building from the first floor to the roof within the comparatively short period of thirty-five days. The form work and the reinforcing steel for the first story were placed on September 16, and on October 21, thirty-five days later, the concrete for the roof was poured into place.

Occupying an area 100x148 feet, the structure rises nine stories and two basements in height, resting on the second largest mat foundation in the Western States. The Scofield Engineering-Construction Company is affiliated with the Southern California Chapter, Associated General Contractors.

FORTY-ACRE GROVE SOLD

EXETER, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Purchase of a forty-acre grove two miles north of Exeter by A. A. Neil has been announced. Neil planted the Washington navels about ten years ago, and the acreage has changed hands several times, being owned recently by W. Todd Dofflemeyer.

RECORD TILE ORDER GIVEN

Government Contracts for 100,000 Square Feet of Products for Veterans' Hospital in Tucson

An order for 100,000 square feet of Spanish roof tile, said to be the largest single order ever placed in California, has been received by Gladding, McBean & Co., for the $1,500,000 United States Veterans' Hospital now under construction at Tucson, Ariz.

The hospital is being constructed by the Sumner Sollitt Company of Los Angeles and Chicago, and, according to Harvey R. Field, vice-president and manager of the local office, it is comprised of sixteen buildings and is to be completed in July next year.

Architectural work was done under the supervision of Maj. L. H. Tripp, chief of the construction department of the United States Veterans' Bureau. The Mission style of architecture is to be followed in the construction, in keeping with the prevalent style in the Arizona city, Mr. Field said.

In addition to the main building, which is to be 650 feet long and varying in height from two to four stories, there will be an infirmary, dining-room building, administration building, recreation building, nurses' quarters, laundry, machine shop and boiler house. There also will be seven eight-room officers' bungalows.

Construction will be of reinforced concrete with stucco finish and all buildings of the group will be connected in a cloister arrangement. Mr. Field pointed out that large shade porches will run almost the entire length of all main buildings at the various floor levels and that several bell towers, typical of the old Missions, will surmount the main structures.

Speaker Cites Foreign Trade

How raw materials are brought into Los Angeles from the Orient, converted into finished products here and returned often by the same boat that brought them into the country, was told by Edgar Wilson, Los Angeles manager for the Dollar Steamship Company, to members of the Los Angeles Realty Board at their regular semimonthly luncheon meeting at the Biltmore Hotel Tuesday noon.

The recognition that is being given Los Angeles as a shipping center was pointed out by the speaker, who predicted a greatly increased tonnage as the result of the location here of large industrial plants. He also made a plea for the use by shippers of American ships, as the only way in which an adequate merchant marine could be maintained.

The proposed Academy of Smokers, to be established in Paris, will admit women as members.

We Will Soon Open Another Scenic Unit in

"VIEWPARK"

Formal announcement will be made shortly as to the definite date on which our sales organization will receive prices, terms, and conditions for the sale of this new unit in "Viewpark."

We advise you to immediately visit "Viewpark."

You will want to look over this new scenic unit before it is open, when the very choicest of its large homesites may be chosen in advance and secured by prompt action on the opening day.

"Viewpark" is just west of the intersection of Angeles Mesa Drive and West Vernon Avenue. Angeles Mesa Drive is now being widened to 180 feet and paved with concrete.

Leimert Boulevard, 133 foot wide concrete paved prolongation of beautiful Santa Barbara Avenue (now being built) terminates right in front of "Viewpark."

This new scenic unit of "Viewpark" soon to be opened offers the same marvelous panorama of the city and environs that features the previous units, and like them it will sell rapidly when made available.

We expect to have all improvements completely installed before the opening, including ornamental electroliers, underground conduits, concrete walks, curbs and gutters, paved streets, water, gas, electric and telephone wires.

PECAN LANDS

"An improved Papershell Pecan Grove in Yuma Valley is not a short cut to sudden riches, but it is an avenue toward complete independence with a minimum of effort, and the creation of an estate in which your children's children will have an ever increasing share."

For Only $287.50

THIS small down payment and monthly payments of $11.98 each will start you toward ownership of a one acre Pecan Grove.

Guaranteed 6% Interest on Your Investment

Your income starts immediately when you make your first payment on an improved Papershell Pecan Grove in Yuma Valley. The Yuma Trust & Holding Company, owned by the Yuma National Bank, the First National Bank of Yuma, and the E. G. Caruthers State bank of Somerton, guarantees 6% return during the six year growing period of your trees.

No Further Expense

After you make your down payment of $287.50, there is no further expense to you except the $11.98 monthly payment until you have paid $1150. The Yuma Trust and Holding Company will plant your land, care for it, pay the taxes, charges and all other costs.

Immense Profits

Your 6% return from the date you make your down payment is a trifling return when compared to the profits which are being reaped by Yuma Valley pecan growers NOW.

W. D. Tate, Yuma, writes that he has netted $1100 per year for eight years on about ONE-HALF acre on which eleven papershell pecan trees are growing. Needless to say he's planting more trees.

F. W. Creswell, A. R. Heineman, K. S. Yowell—prominent Yuma Valley farmers—and many others, have beautiful productive groves. One six-year-old tree belonging to Mr. Creswell produced 105 pounds of nuts last year—setting a world's record. Mr. Yowell says he has refused $3000 an acre for his four-year-old grove. These are typical of Yuma Valley pecan growers.

Let us show you how you can participate in the profits which are coming to Pecan Growers. Fill out and mail the accompanying coupon for free illustrated booklet, or better still, drop into our office any afternoon at 2:30 or Tuesday or Thursday evening at 8:00 and see Yuma Valley in motion pictures.

FRAMEWORK OF HOUSE HALF UP

First-Floor Work Completed for "Times" Home

Bliss of Dwelling's Beauty Gained by Visitors

Now Declared Best Time to Study Construction

With the framework of the first floor of The Times Demonstration Home at Miramar Estate completed, this most example of California home-building has just reached the ideal stage for beneficial study by those who are interested in getting first-hand information about the "inside" of safe, intelligent, economical and advanced dwelling construction.

The site of The Times Demonstration Home has been the scene of intense activity during the last few weeks and observers who have inspected the foundation and framework of the home have found an open book of ideas and inspiration.

Anyone who has looked at the massive foundation walls of reinforced concrete could not help getting an impression of the thorough manner in which the home is being constructed by Lee Constructors, Inc.

FIRST GLIMPSE POSSIBLE

It is beginning to be possible to see the beauty of line that will characterize the home, and little glimpses of arches, balconies and other details that will give style to the dwelling are now possible through the maze of timbers, scaffolding and temporary structures that surround the house.

The recent rains, far from hampering operations seriously, have really been of benefit. For the wood of the framework has been able to absorb moisture, thus putting it in excellent condition for receiving the plaster that will be applied about Christmas-time. The rains also proved beyond question what the contractors and foreman already knew—that the foundations were of such substantial character that not even storms could attack the basic security of the home in any way.

It is difficult to stress this matter of foundation-building on hillside property too strongly. Soil must always be excavated down to solid rock, and the element of drainage must be taken carefully into consideration, before the foundation is laid. A compromise in this respect by an unreliable contractor is almost certain to lead to disaster some time within the first year. Taking chances might not lead to tremendous damages, but it is certain to lead to annoying results at least. With a shoddy foundation, the house is almost certain to settle somewhere, with cracked plaster and uneven doors and windows resulting, if nothing worse.

BEST TIME TO STUDY

Now is a splendid time not only to study the foundation of The Times Demonstration Home, but the framework as well. The home has not advanced to the point where any of the construction work is covered up, and yet enough has been done to make an inspection trip truly worth while.

Since the home has begun to rear itself against the hillside, laymen are joining the chorus of praise previously expressed by technical home-building men for the high quality of materials and workmanship that characterize every phase of the home. Thousands of people without wide experience in home-building may now see in wood and cement what architects and building materials men have been seeing for two or three months on the blue prints of the plans and specifications.

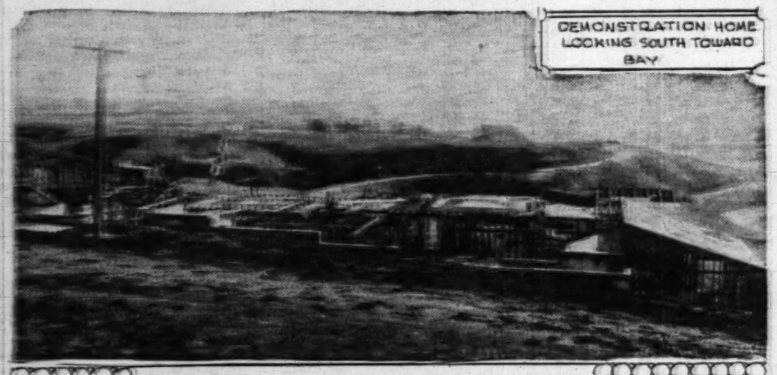
More and more people are commending The Times every week for its leadership in this important matter of sponsoring better, typically California home-building.

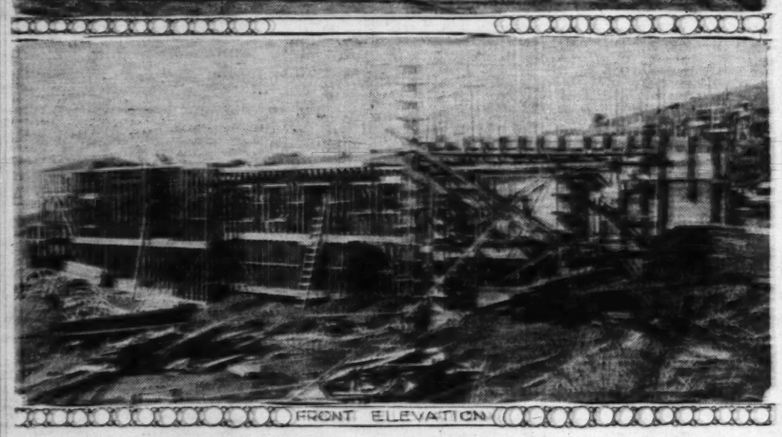
PROGRESS TO BE FOLLOWED

During the ensuing weeks the various details of the home will be explained in these columns. This week-end is the time, however, to get a general picture of the home that will give these details, as they are disclosed, greater meaning.

Even if you are only mildly interested in home-building at this time, you will find a trip to the site at Miramar Estates eminently worth while. For the fall rains have given new beauty to the landscape. The sea seems calmer, the air is clearer and the gorgeous panoramas that are a part of the daily picture of Miramar Estate are now at their best.

Construction Views of "Times" Master Dwelling





HOME ELEMENT UNPRETENTIOUS

Lot 70 Feet Wide Needed by Small Family House

Whitewashed Brick Exterior Specified in Plans

Ample Sized Rooms Planned by Architect

BY THEODORE A. KOETZLI

As the architect has pictured it, there is a suggestion of unpretentious, substantial suburban life about the little house illustrated today, with its low simple roof lines, wide porch, spacious rooms and the closely related garden, and, given a lot of about seventy feet width, it would seem to fill happily the needs of a small family requiring two bedrooms.

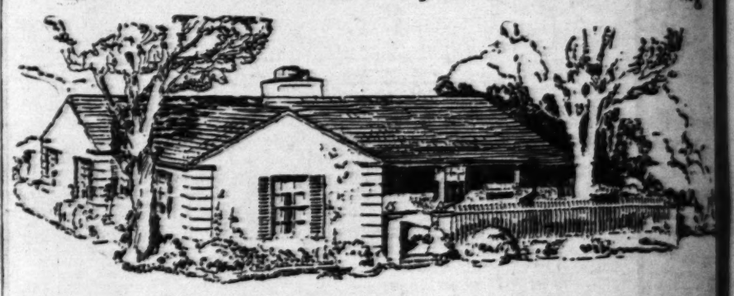
The architect specifies an unusual exterior treatment—whitewashed common brick walls, roof of hand-split shakes or shingles laid with a slight irregularity and white woodwork. This will give the walls a light-gray tone with occasional touches of outcropping color due to the nature and texture of the base.

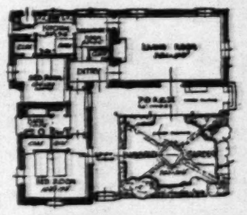
The interior finish is correspondingly free from any pretentious effort, and in keeping with it the furnishings may be very simple and inexpensive and still achieve an attractive and homelike result.

The rooms are all of ample size, the bedrooms unusually so. There are six large closets, a good-sized dinette and service porch. The entry and hall are noteworthy, as they tie the rooms together in a way to afford perfect convenience and circulation and contribute much to the livability and attractive qualities of the home.

The whole is, in fact, an unusual example of careful and ingenious planning and in the competition held by the United States Gypsum Company, the design, by Harrison Clarke, was awarded the second prize. There are 1538 square feet of room area and 238 square feet of porch area, and the construction cost would probably be kept below $8000.

Roominess One Attribute of This Small Dwelling





Small House Plan Service

Plans for this house were prepared under the auspices of the Los Angeles Architectural Club for the Small House Plan Service located in the Building Materials Exhibit on the sixth floor of the Metropolitan Building at Fifth and Broadway. Working drawings of this and other residences may be seen and studied there.

HOMESITE SALES ON INCREASE

Company Cites $616,251 More in Lot Deals Than for Ten Months Last Year

During the first ten months of this year the Los Angeles Investment Company reports the sale of $616,251 more homes and homesites than during the corresponding period of 1926.

"This increase in the volume of business," said W. H. Harrison, vice-president and general manager, "runs hand in hand with the increasing general prosperity of Los Angeles and Southern California during the corresponding period."

In Viewpark, residential project on the eastern slopes of the hills just west of the intersection of Angeles Mesa Drive and West Vernon avenue, the company reports a continued active market. Sales of the sixty to ninety-foot homesites have been outstanding.

A new unit of Viewpark homesites is to be placed on the market in the near future, it is announced, and work is being rushed to have all improvements installed before the opening date. These improvements will include ornamental electroliers, underground conduits and all utilities.

ARCADE BUILDING IN VAN NUYS COMPLETED

VAN NUYS, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—The new Provident Arcade Building, this week took its place as the most imposing structure in Van Nuys when it was announced the building was completed and ready for occupancy. The formal opening will not take place until December 17, next, when it is announced by D. P. Whitsett, president of the Provident Loan Association and chairman of the board of the Van Nuys branch of the Security Trust and Savings Bank, a large Christmas tree celebration will be held in the arcade of the structure. The loan association will occupy part of the ground floor. The Van Nuys Land and Investment Company also will be on this floor on the north side of the arcade. Office suites are on the second floor. The new building is situated on Van Nuys Boulevard near Friar street, in that part of the Van Nuys business district which within the last two years has gradually grown in a northerly direction.

Builders' Question Answered

By Southern California Chapter of Associated General Contractors

[This department, open to readers of The Times, is conducted by the Bureau of the Southern California Chapter of the Associated General Contractors of America. All queries should be mailed directly to Robert F. Boyd of the association in the Pershing Square Building at Fifth and Hill streets. Only replies will be mailed.—Ed.'s note.]

Question: I have been made an offer of $8500 for my property, the purchaser to pay $1500 down and the balance by monthly payments of $75 each including interest at 7 per cent. How much will be paid in interest, and when will the contract be paid in full? What form of sales document do you think best to use?

Answer: The time required is eleven years, three months and four days, the final odd payment being $13.39. The interest on the contract will aggregate $3138.39. The virtues of the various types of sales documents are many, and the type used is generally governed by the character and responsibility of the buyer.

Q.: When applying stucco, how many days should elapse between coats?

A.: The length of time between coats is governed largely by the rapidity with which the previous coat dries, but in no case should the time separation be less than two days.

Q.: How may the squeaking of floors be stopped in a dwelling that was built about fifteen years ago? The residence is of frame construction with C-P flooring, and the floor joists were placed two feet on centers.

A.: The floor joists are rather far apart, therefore it will be necessary to go under the house and brace the joists with cross supports. Then, if the squeak has not been eliminated, you may renail the flooring to the joists.

Q.: How long will it take to pay out a contract for a house costing $3000, with payments of $30 a month for the first two months and $40 monthly thereafter, all payments including interest at 7 per cent? How much will be paid in interest?

A.: The time required is eight years, three months and twenty-four days, with the final odd payment totaling $32.67. The interest to be paid on the contract totals $962.81.

Q.: Must the flooring in a children's playhouse be any specific distance above the ground?

A.: In this particular case the floor joists may be placed directly upon the ground, but to assure proper sanitation and to avoid rottening of the wooden joists it is advisable to have the bottom of the wooden joists at least six inches above the surface of the ground.

Q.: What is the amount required to pay the balance on a five-year mortgage for $4000 that is being paid out at the rate of $40 monthly for a period of forty-five months, and $30 monthly thereafter for a period of fifteen months? All payments including interest at 6 per cent.

A.: At the expiration of five years, the amount due on the mortgage to pay it in full will be $2780.

Q.: What monthly payment, including interest, will be required to pay out a contract for $2300 in forty-eight equal monthly payments?

A.: A monthly payment of $55.07 will be required to pay out the $2300 contract in five years.

Q.: After thirty-six payments have been made, what is the balance due on a trust deed for $3250 that is being paid out in monthly payments of $63 each including interest at 7 per cent?

A.: After the thirty-six payments have been made there will be a balance due on the trust deed of $2...62.

Q.: What will be the balance on the principal of a $5000 loan which is being paid out in monthly installments of $50 each month, interest at 7 per cent, after the sixty-sixth (eighth year) monthly payment has been made?

A.: The amount due on the principal, after the ninety-sixth payment has been made, will be $3000.

Q.: What is the time required to pay out a trust deed for which is payable $75 monthly including interest at 7 per cent? How much will be paid in interest?

A.: The time required is eight years and two months, the final odd payment totaling $74.68. The interest to be paid on the $6300 contract will aggregate $1804.68.

LISTING IDEA CONSIDERED BY BROKERS

Advantages of Multiple Notices of Sale Told in Open Forum Session

Just how a property should be listed for sale, and the advantages of the multiple listing plan, were demonstrated before the open forum meeting of the Los Angeles Realty Board Tuesday evening.

Taking the place of the regular lecture method of presentation, several members of the southwest branch of the board formed the cast for a sketch. Prior to the sketch, George H. Long outlined the factors which influence and determine residential property values, declaring that in the appraisal of residential property both the tangible values that determine the worth of business and industrial property, and an intangible sentimental value must be considered. The session Tuesday evening will be devoted to a study of appraisals of business property, and the forum discussion will be led by Robert Baker and Richard C. Willis, it was announced.

Sales Double as Residential Building Gains

Sales in Moreno Highlands during October were double those of September and more than three times the amount made in October a year ago, according to William Dickinson of Strong & Dickinson, developers.

Home-building activity so far this year has also been several times greater than the first ten months of last year. Nearly $1,000,000 worth of fine homes have already been built. Improvements costing $750,000 have been completed. Every road is wide and has been paved with concrete. The fact that every foot of wiring is underground further enhances the attractiveness of the property, it is declared.

CONTRACT LET FOR ALHAMBRA LIGHTS

ALHAMBRA, Nov. 12. (Exclusive) A contract for the installation of new ornamental lights on Electric, Bushnell, Marengo and Campbell avenues, between Hellman and Ramona Boulevard, was awarded this week to R. A. Watson.

Another civic improvement which was set in motion this week is the installation of sidewalks and ornamental lights on Valley Boulevard, between Garfield avenue and the west city limits.

Fifteen Homes Under Way in Alhambra Tract

An active program of building is now under way in [illegible] Square, the residential section [illegible] South Alhambra on Valley [illegible] and Fremont, controlled by the Frank Meline Company, with [illegible] new homes now under construction according to P. L. Cowhard, manager of the property.

There have been 121 homes built in Edgewood Square within the past year. Cowhard emphasizes that this property every effort is being put forth to enable the man of average means to build a modern home at a moderate cost and to build a residence running into figures.

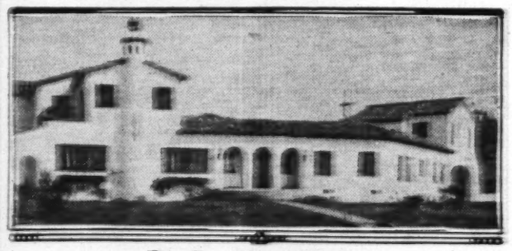
Three Beach Homes Planned

Three new homes for [illegible] purposes are projected on the [illegible] Del Mar by Dr. E. H. Clausen of San Diego. The sites are adjacent to the new beach home, according to Dr. Clausen, sales manager of the Coast Land Company, developers, and H. Korchnitz, who recently completed a new business block on the highway south of the Del Mar site, included several apartments overlooking the ocean.

MERCHANT BUYS HOME

VAN NUYS, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Z. A. Crosson, Van Nuys merchant, has bought the home on Lemona street, formerly owned by F. A. Halsmith. The home was bought as an investment for rental purposes. It is [illegible] dwellings and with [illegible] 2000 chickens.

Realty Man's Home Serves as Model



Two-Story Spanish Design

Plans have been completed and construction will commence immediately on the beautiful seven-room Spanish residence for D. E. Voss of the Frank Meline Company. It will be located on Beverly Boulevard, in the Mesa unit of Castellammare, opposite the Bernheimer estate. The Lincoln Mortgage Company is the designer and builder. The residence is to serve as a model or exhibit home for property buyers and homebuilders in this section, it is announced. Although two stories in height, the exterior will have a low, rambling appearance, an architectural feature of great charm in a Spanish house of this type. A large walled-in patio will take up virtually all of the rear part of the lot.

Real Estate and Building Law

[This department, which is conducted through the courtesy of the Legal Department of the W. Ross Campbell Company, is at the service of Times readers. Questions, however, should be addressed to the Publicity Department of the above-mentioned firm at its offices at 712 South Spring street and not to The Times.—Editor's note.]

Question: A man owns property before marriage. He marries and at death leaves no will and is still record owner of property. What interest has wife?

Answer: If there were children of the marriage, one-half of the property would go to the wife and one-half to the children. If no children, the remaining half would go first to mother and father, if neither, then to brothers and sisters, and if there were no heirs of the husband the whole would go to the wife.

Q.: Man has property in his name and wants to have himself and wife as joint tenants. What is the procedure?

A.: The property should be deeded to a proper third party who must then deed the property to the husband and wife as joint tenants, using proper form of joint tenancy deed.

Q.: If hold trust deed subject to mortgage. Property is leased, but many payments are always late. What can I do to compel owners to be prompt? I do not want to foreclose.

A.: Unless you do declare the whole amount due and payable, there is little you can do, except to insist upon interest upon all the delinquent payments until date actually paid.

Q.: In a trust deed if the trustee is an individual and dies or refuses to act, can holder appoint another trustee without consent of the maker of note and trust deed?

A.: One who is usually termed the holder of the trust deed is in fact only the holder of the note and is beneficiary under the trust deed. In the event of trustee's disability, it would be necessary to apply to the Superior Court for the appointment of a new trustee. This is done upon formal petition setting forth the facts.

Scare of Homes Built in Month

More than a score of houses have been completed during the last month, while plans for thirty-six more have been approved for construction by homesite owners immediately at Mitscoy near San Bernardino, it was stated yesterday by Charles G. Truitt, sales manager for the Mitscoy division of J. E. Root, Inc., developers of the property.

"In addition to the building and construction development that has been completed at an expenditure of more than $1,000,000, hundreds of acres have been planted to oranges, grapefruit, walnuts and other tree fruits, berries, vegetables and grain crops, which, with poultry, form the basis of income for homesite owners."

Furniture for Hotel Moved

Hotel Wintridge began receiving furniture this week with interior decorations finished and carpets laid, according to former United States Senator Frank P. Flint, who is building this handsome $750,000 hotel as the newest feature in the development of the Wintridge residence Park.

With furniture arriving in a steady stream of trucks, every effort is being stressed to have the hotel complete and ready for formal opening on December 1.

IMPETUS IN HOME BUILDING

Fifty Per Cent Increase in Mail Order Business Reported by Company

A substantial mail-order business in the home building field is reported by the home plan department of the Whiting-Mead Company, a division of the building materials firm established less than a year ago.

A 50 per cent increase for sixty days has been made in the department, which supplies home builders with the complete materials for a home. The department has grown rapidly, according to W. B. Smith, sales manager. During the last two months the mail-order business alone has doubled.

From all parts of the Southwest and points as far distant as Honolulu inquiries are coming into the office every day for information about home plans and estimates on the cost of materials for homes, Mr. Smith states.

"Old-fashioned methods of building homes are disappearing. Instead of dealing individually with the architect, the plumber, the carpenter and the painter and getting separate estimates for the cost of materials in a home, it is now possible to get a single guaranteed price for all of the materials from one responsible organization."

An expert lathe operator is kept busy fashioning new gavels and repairing old ones, so many are broken during the sessions of Congress. The shop is located in the basement of the Capitol at Washington.

NEW INDUSTRIES PLAN FACTORIES

Many Plants and Additions Announced During Week

General Motors Declared to be Seeking Location

Brunswick-Balke-Collender Plans $300,000 Unit

Marking the trend of industry toward Los Angeles and activity in this field a number of announcements were made during the week of new plants and additions to plants already established.

A Pacific Coast branch of the General Motors Company factories in the East, is scheduled for establishment within the Los Angeles-Long Beach Harbor area in the near future, according to information made public by Long Beach Chamber of Commerce officials, but so far unconfirmed by officials of the big automobile manufacturing organization.

Charles A. Bland, industrial secretary of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, is authority for the statement that General Motors engineers have been engaged in making surveys of Southern California industrial sites for several months and that three tentative sites have been selected by company officials, one at Dominguez Junction, another at Torrance and still another just north and east of Long Beach. The Dominguez Junction site is said to be the most probable one and it is reported that the General Motors interests have obtained an option on several hundred acres of the Dominguez estate.

It is believed that in the event the company carries out its asserted plans and locates a plant in Southern California, one of the smaller and cheaper-priced automobiles manufactured by that organization will be manufactured in addition to Frigidaire equipment.

SITE DOUBT EXPRESSED

Doubt was expressed in local industrial circles over the possibility of the company's selection of the site north and east of Long Beach since certain legal requirements connected with the will of the late J. Ross Clark, make it impossible for the land connected with that tentative site to be disposed of for several months. It is pointed out that while the so-called Long Beach site would prove desirable in every way, it is doubtful that the General Motors Company will be content to bide its time awaiting opportunity to purchase the necessary acreage at that location. This property is adjacent to the Union Pacific Railroad, while

Many Plants and Additions Announced During Week

General Motors Declared to be Seeking Location

Brunswick-Balke-Collender Plans $300,000 Unit

Marking the trend of industry toward Los Angeles and activity in this field a number of announcements were made during the week of new plants and additions to plants already established.

A Pacific Coast branch of the General Motors Company factories in the East, is scheduled for establishment within the Los Angeles-Long Beach harbor area in the near future, according to information made public today by Long Beach Chamber of Commerce officials, but so far unconfirmed by officials of the big automobile manufacturing organization.

Charles A. Bland, industrial secretary of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, is authority for the statement that General Motors engineers have been engaged in making surveys of Southern California industrial sites for several months and that five tentative sites have been selected by company officials, one at Compton Junction, another at Torrance and still another just north of the city of Long Beach. The Domingues Junction site is said to be the most probable one and it is reported that the General Motors interests have obtained an option on several hundred acres of the Dominguez estate.

SITE DOUBT EXPRESSED

Doubt was expressed in local industrial circles over the possibility of the company's selection of the site north and east of Long Beach because certain legal requirements connected with the will of the late J. W. Clark, make it impossible for the land connected with that tentative site to be disposed of for several months. It is pointed out that while the so-called Long Beach site would prove desirable in every way, it is doubtful that the General Motors company will be content to bide its time awaiting opportunity to purchase the necessary acreage at that time. This property is adjacent to the Union Pacific Railroad, while the proposed Domingues site is on the Southern Pacific. The Torrance site is on the Santa Fe. Each of the three railroads is said to be working to locate the proposed factory along its line.

The announcement was made during the week by local officials of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company that negotiations had been completed for the purchase of a factory site in the Union Pacific Industrial tract. The property is 177 by 400 feet.

Actual construction on the new plant estimated to cost $300,000 is scheduled to begin in sixty days and the structure is expected to be completed and in operation within six months from the time work is started.

SITE PURCHASE REPORTED

The announcement is made by Sterling Electric Motors, Inc., manufacturers of a line of electric motors, grinders, buffers and polishers of the purchase of property with spur-track facilities in the Union Pacific industrial tract. The new site has a frontage of 500 feet on Telegraph Road at the corner of Atlantic avenue.

Architect Charles F. Plummer has drawn plans for a modern daylight factory which when finished will extend along Telegraph Road several hundred feet. This factory will be equipped with the most modern rapid-production machine tools and equipment. It is planned to have the factory in operation about January 1, 1928.

When the factory units are completed about 200 skilled artisans will be employed.

Bauman Brothers, furniture manufacturers, located at 6527 McKinley avenue, have recently purchased a factory site in the Western-avenue industrial tract located at Sixty-second and Western avenue. Erection of a two-story brick building will start at once to be completed by January 1. Howard Prickett, with J. W. Canawan, broker, represented buyer and seller.

Preparing to enter the local manufacturing field, Charles E. Keifner has purchased the factory building at 809 Wilmington avenue, according to an announcement by the Phillips & Harburg Realty and Construction Corporation. The consideration was said to be $100,000. The building is two stories in height and contains about 7000 square feet of floor space.

The new entry into the industrial field will manufacture a line of soap, polish and various chemical by-products.

Announcement has just been made of the awarding of contracts for two new steel frame industrial buildings to the Union Iron Works of California. One of these buildings is for the Sylmar Packing Corporation, packers of California olives, and the other for the Superior Oil Company.

Both buildings will have steel frames of the A-frame type and will be covered with corrugated steel. The building for the Superior Oil Company will be equipped with a traveling crane.

WAREHOUSE HERE ADDED BY CONCERN

Gas Engine Company of Pennsylvania Leases Space on East Sixty-first

Announcement has been made by the Frank Meline Company that the Bessemer Gas Engine Company of Grove City, Pa., manufacturers of internal combustion engines, has leased another warehouse at 636 East Sixty-first street covering 12,000 square feet of floor space with a railroad spur reaching the property. The new warehouse covers 80 x 150 feet of ground. The leasing of this additional warehouse was necessary due to the fact that the company is installing a large number of Diesel engines in territory reached by Los Angeles.

The acquisition of this warehouse will enable the company to improve its service and enable the organization to carry a large and ample stock of both complete engines and parts.

Work Starts on Apartment Unit to Cost $250,000

Work is now under way on the seven-story Class A apartment-house for Don M. Morris at the northeast corner of Second and Mariposa streets, according to the Standard Mortgage Corporation, through which the financing of the project was completed.

Framework for the first three stories of the building is now finished and it is expected that the entire building, which will represent an investment of $250,000, will be ready for occupancy by February 1. The new apartment-house will have a frontage of fifty feet on Mariposa street with a depth of 120 feet on Second street, and will contain a total of eighty-four rooms divided into thirty-one apartments ranging in size from one to five rooms.

FRANKLIN HOME IN BEVERLY HILLS SOLD

Sale of the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney A. Franklin of 717 North Palm Drive, Beverly Hills, to C. M. Fuller of Los Angeles, has been announced by Jessie V. Duggan of Cawthorne & Bergman, Inc. Mr. and Mrs. Franklin have leased the Erwin Werner home at 609 North Alpine Drive through Cawthorne & Bergman, Inc. The consideration in the sale of the Franklin home is reported to be $60,000.

Company Moves to New Beverly Boulevard Home

The annual convention of the National Percolator Company and all of their branches, exponents of the Duplex Percolator, was held at the new headquarters, 1801 Beverly Boulevard, Saturday.

The event was a housewarming for the new quarters.

The afternoon was devoted to educational talks regarding the promotion of the enterprise. The address on "Proper Installation" was made by Ray J. Wilkins, manager of the Southwest division, and "Service" was covered by G. Fisher of the Long Beach division. The topic of present-day methods in "Salesmanship" was covered by C. W. Burleson, assistant manager of the National Percolator Company. G. J. Wiggenhorn, general manager and president, expressed the company's ideals as to sanitation and personal appearance of its representatives.

After the afternoon meeting, which stressed the importance of improving an already well-organized system of service rendered to the public, the meeting then adjourned in order to meet at the banquet rooms of the Elite with an attendance of 125.

Ten Carloads of Cork Arrive

Ten carloads of insulating cork from Spain, valued at $20,000, have just been received at Westland Warehouses, Inc. The shipment is consigned to the Gay Engineering Corporation, Los Angeles, and will be used in the construction of ice plants and cold-storage warehouses.

The use of the foreign product, reports F. S. Hadfield of the engineering concern, is justified by the fact that it is much superior to the cork manufactured in this country in insulating qualities.

Other foreign shipments received recently include a full carload of cottonseed meal to be used for stock-feeding purposes from the Compania Industrial Jabonera Del Pacifico at Mexicali. This seedmeal is produced in the great cotton-growing section of the Imperial Valley of Mexico, which has been making regular shipments of cotton linters to Westland for the last year.

Terminal Work Makes Progress

Construction is well under way on the large new produce terminal located in the Central Manufacturing District, and officials declare that when completed, this new terminal will be one of the largest and most active in the West.

An idea of the size of the enterprise is gained by the fact that more than 110 tons of structural steel will be used in the framework of the canopies alone. This steel work is being fabricated by the Union Iron Works of California and William P. Neil has the general construction contract.

Tile Company Will Expand

NEWPORT BEACH, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Erection of a building for the Hollywood Art Tile Company on Newport Boulevard in the Santa Ana Heights tract, near the country club, will start at once as the result of a $10,000 deal, the negotiations having been recently completed by R. Smalley, president of the firm, through the offices of Williamson & Williamson and Ernest Grill, Jr.

The contract, it has been announced, has been let to John Roehe of Newport Harbor, and the surveying and cement work will be done by Freeman A. Daley of Costa Mesa.

Company Finds Area Prosperous

A generally prosperous condition in Los Angeles and a particularly bright outlook for North Hollywood and near-by towns in the San Fernando Valley is seen by officials of the Whiting-Mead Company in the success which has accompanied the firm's newly opened branch store at 5163 Lankershim Boulevard.

Plans are now being made for the opening of another branch in Oceanside, which will make a total of ten.

CENTRALLY LOCATED LOTS CHANGE HANDS

HUNTINGTON PARK, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Two centrally located pieces of property recently changed ownership in this city, when Mrs. Louise Bitler of Walnut Park, sold a lot in the 500 block on South Pacific Boulevard, to a Los Angeles investor, the lot having a frontage of fifty-seven feet on the boulevard, and a depth of 150 feet. The deal was made by the Robley-Russell Realty Company. They also report that they have sold a lot on South Rita for a local investor, the buyer being represented by Marshall & Tipton. The deals were cash considerations but the prices were withheld.

TRUCK FACTORY INSPECTED

Chamber of Commerce Visiting Committee Examines $1,000,000 White Plant Here

Members of the Chamber of Commerce plant visiting committee who, with N. L. Morse, chairman, last week inspected the White Company's new Southern California branch plant, East Washington street and Maple avenue as the guests of J. L. Sydnor, manager, found a splendidly equipped and thoroughly efficient organization.

Completed last September at a cost of $450,000, the new plant is a Class A, reinforced steel concrete structure. The total investment approximates $1,000,000. The building has 132,000 square feet of floor space, steam heat and ventilating systems and was constructed by Stone & Webster of materials bought exclusively in Los Angeles.

The personnel includes 115 persons, forty of whom are in the sales and accounting departments. There are seventy-five in the service department, where experienced mechanics, aided by modern machinery and methods, are on duty day and night. An innovation here is an arrangement whereby trucks brought in for repairs may be kept in service by temporarily equipping them with substitute motors or other needed units. Testing blocks where overhauled motors are "broken in" before being replaced in the owners' chassis form another feature. Two road service trucks, one of which has a winch and steel cable for righting overturned trucks and also an overhead hoist for towing purposes, are included in the equipment.

A complete stock of parts of every description is carried for the convenience of the 6000 White truck owners operating in this territory. There is also kept on hand ready for immediate delivery a large number of trucks and chassis ranging from three-quarters of a ton to seven and one-half tons capacity.

Third Shipment of Fittings Sent to Russian Field

Indicative of the growing foreign trade of Los Angeles, the Robinson Orifice Fitting Company of this city has just made its third shipment of the year to the Baku oil fields of Southern Russia.

The recent shipment was composed of 125 orifice fittings weighing approximately 25,000 pounds and ranging in size from two inches to twelve inches. The total shipped to date this year to the above country numbers 385 fittings. These purchases have been made by the Amtorg Trading Company, the purchasing arm of the Russian government in this country.

The Robinson orifice fitting is a mechanical device of simple design used in conjunction with an orifice meter, for the purpose of measuring gases and liquids. It eliminates the old style by-passing arrangement around the meter as well as facilitating the changing of the orifice plates and increasing the accuracy of measuring.

Unique Pictures to Mark Dinner

Micro-photographs, in color, of the interior of such dense and opaque objects as vitreous brick and firebox refractories will feature the dinner of the Los Angeles division, American Ceramics Society, tomorrow evening at the Commercial Club.

The photographs, obtained by means of an intricate photo-microscope, illustrate the result of many years of intensive research into the properties of refractories by Thomas B. Curtis, chief of the scientific research division of the Vitrefrax Corporation here, principal speaker at the dinner. His talk will deal with the micro-structure of the ceramic bodies, under which heading comes everything from fine porcelain to common brick, and will reveal his methods for preparing accurate and permanent photographic records in natural colors.

Banqueters Will Consider Dairy Problems Soon

Increase in the productivity of dairy cattle, improvement of manufacturing processes and the education of the public in the food values of dairy products, will be the three main points to be considered at the annual banquet of the California Dairy Council to be held in Oakland, the 17th inst.

Executives from every prominent dairy concern in the State will attend the meeting, it was announced yesterday by D. M. Dorman, president of California Dairies, Inc., who was recently elected president of the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers.

While the growth of the dairy industry to its present production of more than $130,000,000 annually has never even approached the sensational, its evolution, from a mere farming sideline to a highly organized modern business, forms one of the most interesting chapters of twentieth century progress, the executive declared.

Soda Fountain Believed to be World Largest

What is believed to be the largest soda fountain in the world has has just been put into operation at the S. H. Kress Company store at 623 South Broadway, according to the store manager, F. J. O'Hara.

Mr. O'Hara explained that the fountain is in one unit although covering considerable area in the basement of the store, and in some places running parallel to itself. It is 275 feet long and 130 persons can be seated at the counter at one time.

In the rush hours, said Mr. O'Hara, as many as fifty persons are necessary to serve the patrons. The mammoth fountain was built and installed by the Weber Showcase and Fixture Company.

OPTIONS ON PLANT SITES ANNOUNCED

Cement Company Expects to Build Three Units in Los Angeles Soon

The erection of three manufacturing plants in this city by the American Portland Cement Company looms as an early possibility as the result of options obtained this week to a trio of sites in the industrial district, according to an announcement just made by Briant S. Young, president of the concern.

The areas covered by the options include a tract of eight acres on Alameda street on a proposed lease of forty-nine years at a stated rental of $515,000; another ten-acre block on Alameda on a proposal to purchase at a stated figure of $227,000; and a nine-and-a-half-acre site on Slauson, involving a proposed total rental of $528,000 on a forty-nine-year lease.

The holdings are being considered by the company as the sites for plants to manufacture building blocks under the Houghton Building Construction Process, to which the concern holds territorial patent rights. The blocks are made from cement to imitate marble of all kinds and other materials, and are fitted with patent interlocking devices which make possible the building of any sort of structure from a bungalow to a skyscraper without forms, according to President Young.

The company plans to supply its own raw materials for the plants from the $750,000 cement mill of the company, near Devore, in San Bernardino county, construction work on which is being rushed.

The Chinese are particularly superstitious with regard to green. A consular report was specially issued a few years ago to warn merchants against shipping to China any goods wrapped in green paper, as they would never sell. White and blue are also avoided, being the mourning colors.

Plant Expansion Program Completed

Interior View of Shop Addition

Starting with only 3200 square feet of floor space in 1921 the Los Angeles branch of the Hughes Tool Company, manufacturers of oil-well drilling bits and other oil-well tools, has just completed a building program which gives the local plant more than 20,000 square feet of space. The shops of the local unit are of steel frame construction with "sawtooth" type roof which provides glareless and shadowless north light. These shop units were designed, fabricated and erected by the Union Iron Works of California. The recent building program also included a modern two-story office building. Offices and plant are located at 2440 Enterprise street.

SALES EXCEED LAST YEAR

BY DON PARTRIDGE,
Associate Editor, "Iron Trade Review"

In summarizing the conditions of the Pacific Coast iron and steel markets this week, Iron Trade Review will say: "Sales and inquiries generally continue light and little improvement is looked for during the balance of the year.

"One of the largest reinforcing-bar contracts placed this year in San Francisco district was booked by Gunn, Carle & Co., and called for 600 tons for the Fox Theater. Awards for the week exceeded 2000 tons, bringing the aggregate for the year to 51,485 tons as compared with 35,624 tons for the corresponding period in 1926. Other important awards involved 400 tons for a grain elevator at Kelso, Wash., and 330 tons for a Los Angeles hotel. Bids were opened this week of 1400 tons for the Butler Building, Los Angeles.

"The only plate inquiry of importance in the market involves 600 tons of blue annealed material of 1000 tons of 3-16 inch plate for a pipe line in Arizona. Prices continue unchanged at 2.40 cents c.i.f. coast ports.

"Structural shape bookings included 950 tons for a transmission tower line for the Southern California Edison Company, placed with the Pacific Coast Steel Company, 475 tons for a crane runway in Seattle, taken by the Wallace Bridge and Structural Steel Company, and 130 tons for a hotel in Oakland booked by Herrick Iron Works. Lettings for the week aggregated close to 2500 tons and brought the total for the year to 124,856 tons as compared with 166,599 tons for the same period last year. Bids have been opened on 2000 tons for the Seattle auditorium and bids are being taken for 2100 tons for two bridges for the Simpson Logging Company, Seattle. Plain material continues firm at 2.40 c.i.f.

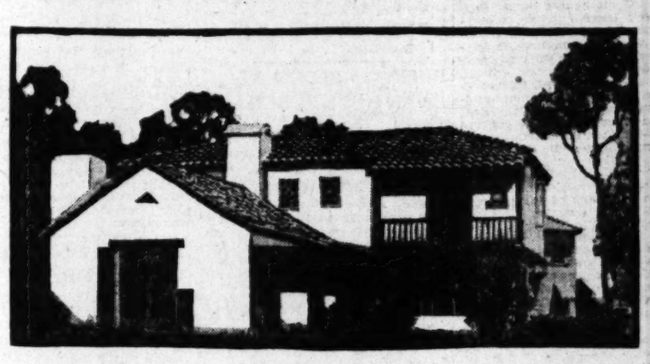
If you shopped for a TILE ROOF in the Streets of Spain



STROLL through the cobble stone streets of Madrid or Granada. Look down on Barcelona from nearby hills, and study the terraced tile roofs of the Spanish homes. You will find the same colors, the same shapes as in the roof tile we make for California. There's no mechanical look about these roofs, no severity. The lines are irregular. The colors are varied. The effect is as truly spanish as if the tile were imported from the city of Granada itself. That's the roof for your home.

PHONES SHOW PROSPERITY

All Records Broken During October for Number of New Installations

Breaking all records in telephone demands, the Southern California Telephone Company received orders for connecting 9493 telephones in October, 320 more than were filed in September, which month had exceeded all others in telephone orders. During October fewer orders were received for disconnecting telephones than in September, and a net gain was made of 3588, which is 588 more than in September. Since the first of 1927 the Los Angeles exchange has shown a gain of 18,166 telephones. At the present time the exchange is serving 327,300 telephones.

BOY ACTOR BUYS RESIDENCE SITE

Junior Coughlan and Bob Walling

A homesite in Hollywoodvale, residential development of Harry E. Jones, Inc., in North Hollywood, has just been acquired by Junior Coughlan, 11-year-old screen actor. Junior Coughlan is shown reading his sales contract to Bob Walling, son of Will Walling, character actor.

CONTRACTS RUSHED FOR HOTEL JOB

Biltmore Addition May Be Completed Ahead of Time; Materials Ordered Early

Awarding of the contract for 480 tons of terra cotta, 600,000 face brick, roof and hollow tile was announced yesterday by E. T. Heitschmidt of Schultze & Weaver, architects, for the new $8,000,000 addition to the Biltmore Hotel. The contract was awarded to Gladding, McBean & Co.

While the builders, the Scofield Engineering Construction Company, last week were completing excavation work and putting in footings preparatory to starting work on the foundation, contracts for the terra cotta, brick and tile were awarded at this early date with a view to having it on the site ahead of the regular schedule. It is believed now that the structure may be completed before September 30, 1928, the original date set for its opening.

The addition will contain 517 rooms, will be height limit and of steel, concrete and brick construction. It occupies a site between the Pacific Mutual Garage and the Biltmore Theater. In order that no rooms in the present structure be exposed where the addition is to be built, the Scofield Engineering-Construction Company last week installed tile sidings with the result that the rooms can be used during the building operations.

There will be a ballroom in the addition, measuring approximately 105x 145 feet, the largest dancing floor in any hotel in the world, according to the architects.

Work to Start on Church Hall

HUNTINGTON PARK, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Work will be started on the construction of the new Latter Day Saints' convention hall in this city within the next three or four weeks, according to J. A. P. Jensen, an official of the local church denomination. A site for the new building has been recently purchased on Middleton street.

The new building will be used by the Los Angeles Stake.

The new building, when completed, which will be some time in February it is thought, will have a seating capacity of 1200 and will cost approximately $60,000.

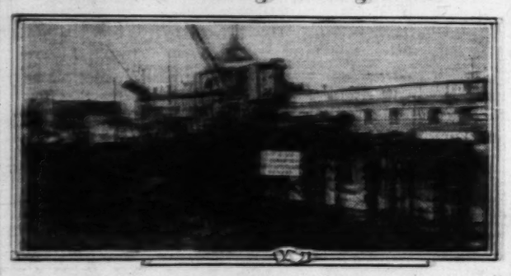
BUSINESS BLOCK AT VAN NUYS PURCHASED

VAN NUYS, Nov. 12.—A $75,000 realty deal, showing the growth of values here within the last two years, was made last week when A. A. Kinnert, pioneer Van Nuys real estate man, sold to E. Knudson the building at the corner of Van Nuys Boulevard and Hamlin street. Cash is said to have figured in the transaction. The lot which was purchased by Kinnert two years ago for $20,000 has a frontage of 100 feet on the boulevard. Last spring Knudson sold twenty acres southwest of Van Nuys townsite for $50,000. Friends say he bought the land for a song about eight years ago.

SPECIAL AGENT FOR DISTRICT SELECTED

Appointment of R. Russell Hemig as special representative of Westland Warehouses, Inc., has just been announced by Le Roy D. Owen, vice-president and general manager. The increasing volume of business as well as the many inquiries in regard to warehouse space and facilities have resulted in this addition to the Westland staff.

Landmark Bridge Being Razed



New Span to Replace First-Street Unit

In keeping with artistic and modern construction another Los Angeles landmark built almost half a century ago is giving away under rapid and modern construction. Wrecking has begun on the old steel and wooden First-street viaduct and bridge spanning the Los Angeles River and overheading the Santa Fe and old Salt Lake Route tracks by the Smith Brothers Truck Company. Harold Smith, who is superintending the demolition to make way for the new concrete structure planned by the North Pacific Construction Company, estimates that by the first of December the old structure will be demolished.

BANK CLEARINGS SHOW PROGRESS

Current Year $337,000,000 Ahead of 1926

Figures to the 7th Inst. Total $7,990,339,906

February 11 Largest Single Day of Period

Indicating in a striking manner the tremendous industrial stride made by Los Angeles within a period of less than twelve months, bank clearings to date this year exceed by more than $337,000,000 the amount for the corresponding period of 1926, it was disclosed in a report released yesterday by the statistical department of the Ward Heater Company here.

For the ten months and seven days ending November 7, 1926, according to Samuel S. Sproat, president of the concern, wch whom the report was prepared, the bank clearings stood at $7,562,813,076. On the same day this year, and for the identical period, the total had grown to $7,900,-339,906, according to the report.

"No better proof of the fact that Los Angeles has arrived as the industrial center of the West is needed," stated the executive. "Conclusive evidence that this growth has attracted the eyes of eastern capital is brought out by the locating here within the past year of Ford, Firestone, Goodrich and the announcement this week that General Motors and the Pittsburgh Plate Glass companies will build huge plants here shortly."

An analysis of the report shows that February 11 of this year disclosed the largest single day's clearings for the two years. The total was $44,973,099.28, or an increase over the biggest day of 1926 of $8,200,000.

WIDE SCOPE PLANNED IN EXPOSITION

Sell-Out of Space Said to Be Assured Builders for Show This Month

From the architect to the interior decorator with the remainder of the building and construction industry also on display—such is the line-up for the First Annual Builders' Exposition of Southern California to open at the Shrine Civic Auditorium, the 28th inst., under the auspices of the Builders' Exchange of Los Angeles, according to an announcement made yesterday by Guy E. Livingston, director-general of the show.

Exhibit booths reserved to date, says Mr. Livingston, include every phase of the industry. Architect, general contractor, roofer, lumber companies, paint and varnish companies, tile importers and local manufacturers of tiles, cement companies, rock and gravel concerns, bonding and finance houses, water heater companies, gas heating concerns, window-shade manufacturers, sash and door makers, even to the installation of telephones will be brought to the attention of the public in the most comprehensive and educational industrial show ever staged in the Pacific Southwest.

Approximately 42,000 of the 60,-000 feet of floor space of the spacious Shrine Auditorium has been reserved to date, it was stated, with a complete sell-out being assured. This will mark the first time that the industry has united in placing its wares before the public in an educational campaign for better building.

New Tract to Go on Market

Studio Vista, the fifty-sixth subdivision offered by the Harry H. Culver Company, will be placed on the market in a few days. The property faces on two major boulevards in Culver City, opposite the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, and is near the site of the $3,000,000 Lutheran school to be erected.

The Commonwealth Finance and Thrift Corporation has been made the selling agents, and the sales organization will be under the supervision of H. A. Roberts, vice-president and general manager of the Commonwealth.

IMPROVEMENTS TO BE MADE AT BEACH TRACT

LAGUNA BEACH, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Rejuvenation of the El Mirador tract, a twenty-four acre subdivision in the heart of Laguna Beach, into one of the most desirable homesites in Southern California, is promised with the announcement that the Yoch Company will spend $50,000 on the work of putting in the necessary improvements. The work of grading the streets, the contract for which was let to A. R. McGrath of Glendale and Pasadena, will be started this week. Water, electricity, street lights, gas and sewers are included in the improvements planned for El Mirador. The work will be done under the supervision of City Engineer Arthur J. Stead.

WORK ON CLINIC STARTED

Child Institution at Sawtelle to Cost $200,000; Day and Night Nursery Included in Plans

SAWTELLE, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Foundation for the first unit of a new $200,000 children's home had virtually been completed today and the structure will be ready for occupancy within three months, according to George W. Given, president of the Better Homes Co-operative Association of children of disabled veterans receiving treatment in the government hospital here, it was pointed out that treatment will not be confined to those alone, but to all children whose parents are unable to provide proper care and treatment for them.

At present the clinic is operating on a limited scale at 1772 Beloit avenue, where it originally was established in connection with the Veterans' Memorial Home through efforts of Mrs. H. T. Wright, Southern California club woman and philanthropist. She is president of the foundation erecting the new institution.

ENTERTAINMENT SET BY REALTY BRANCH

The Hollywood branch of the Los Angeles Realty Board is making preparations for a dinner and high-class entertainment for the annual "Night in Hollywood" on December 15, next, when the branch entertains the realty men of Los Angeles. The entertainment committee consists of Frank H. Greve, Arthur Darling and D. E. Lane.

Apartment for Pasadena Will Cost $100,000

PASADENA, Nov. 12 (Exclusive)—Foundations were nearing completion here yesterday for the McDonald Apartments on California near Orange Grove avenue, which are to cost more than $100,000.

According to the architect, Robert Ainsworth of this city, the building will be of Spanish architecture and will contain eight seven-room residence apartments. Contractors are the John H. Simpson Company. Specifications call for frame and stucco construction and for the installation of twenty-four Majestic electric wall heaters in bath rooms. The heater installation as well as other electrical work, is being done by the Jacobs Electric Company of South Pasadena.

Each unit will contain three baths and a maid's room with the living-room, dining-room and kitchen on the lower floor and the bedrooms and baths on the second.

PROPERTY BRINGS $500,000

HUNTINGTON PARK, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Another good-sized real estate deal was closed in South Pacific Boulevard property during the week, when Mrs. T. Newton Huntington Park, sold to M. S. Black of Walnut Park, a lot in the 5000-block on this boulevard, the consideration being $18,000. Both parties were represented by Marshall and Tipton.

DAM ENVOYS LEAVE FRID

Specials to Carry Good-Will Delegation to P for Dedication of Project

Two special trains will leave Los Angeles Friday to bear the "good-will" delegation of Southern Californians to Phoenix for the dedication of Lake Pleasant dam, the highest multiple-arch structure in the world.

Special committees of public officials will be on the platforms at both the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific stations when the delegations leave on the two special trains at 6:30 p.m.

Advices received by Alexander Hursh, chairman in charge of arrangements, from H. B. Watkins, general manager of the Phoenix Chamber of Commerce, and P. G. Spillsbury, president of the Arizona Industrial Congress, are to the effect that the Arizona capital is planning to outdo the reception of the Arizona "good-will" delegation here several months ago.

A long convoy of motor cars will bear the visitors to the Lake Pleasant dam, which is to irrigate 40,000 acres of grapefruit land under the Romola project. A barbecue will precede the ceremonies dedicating the dam.

The visitors will be taken for a sightseeing tour of proportions through the Salt River Valley, following the dedication. The specials will depart on the return trip at 8 p.m. Saturday night, arriving in Los Angeles before noon Sunday.

Investment Opportunity of the Age

BEVERLY BLVD. La Brea west. A MILLION DOLLARS IN SALES & LEASES IN PAST 90 DAYS.

In a short time Beverly Blvd. will be the outstanding boulevard and major artery of the country. "Visualize with the wise."

This boulevard is destined to carry more traffic than even Wilshire. Follow me in my trend of thoughts and see if you don't agree.

Beverly starts somewhere and goes somewhere. Destined to start from San Diego and connect with the Coast Route to San Francisco.

It is the most scenic boulevard the city will ever have. Starting from the Wilshire Country Club you pass thru one of the most exclusive residential districts in the city, Hancock Park, and in a short time you will be able to drive straight thru Beverly Hills over the most scenic boulevard, passing some of the most pretentious estates and golf clubs, on thru to the ocean.

It is destined to be not only the most traveled, most scenic, longest but also the widest boulevard in the city. From La Brea west it has 20-foot parkways on each side, which ultimately will be narrowed to 5 or 10 feet, which will go to make the widest paved major artery we have.

To connect with Wilshire Boulevard you are forced to come up one or the other of most congested car line streets and after you have passed the Ambassador Hotel what more is there to see on Wilshire? It is only a major artery from then on, but not so with Beverly Blvd., for Beverly Blvd. is not only a major artery but a scenic boulevard and much more accessible.

Business frontage on this fortune-making thoroughfare thru the exclusive residential districts is limited to only from La Brea ave. to La Cienega blvd., and the majority of it is being held by some of the shrewdest investors in the country and is not for sale.

With the prices prevailing at $1000 a foot on Wilshire Blvd. from La Brea Ave. west Beverly Blvd. from La Brea west at $200 a foot and up is the fortune-making opportunity of all times.

Adolph Uhl, running for Mayor of San Francisco, issues following statement: "35 industrial plants have closed and left San Francisco this year. 35,000 apartments and flats are vacant and 30,000 workers are unemployed in San Francisco." I say they are all coming here, so buy Los Angeles real estate, keep it and it will keep you. Buy before it is beyond your reach. It is being picked up by the big ones who see the handwriting on the wall, so follow in their footsteps and you can't lose. Only a few choice parcels left. So hurry!

We have exclusive on best buy in a corner or inside lot near La Brea, also the following: Corner next to major corner $275 per foot. $3500 handles.

Corner just west of Fairfax. $10,500. Terms.

Inside lot for $200 a foot.

Follow the sign of the Horseshoe.

STATE DISTRIBUTOR
Several mid-West and Eastern States are open for exclusive distributor to handle lacquer which is sprayed upon the exterior and interior of all structures, giving them the same long life that other lacquers give automobiles, now being marketed in great quantities by the several distributors who have been appointed for most of the Western States. Cost to consumer is no more than ordinary paint in any color than applied in one-fifth the time and the life is indefinite—now being applied extensively on homes in Los Angeles. Lacquers for automobiles displaced the paint brush and created fortunes for their distributors. Every manufacturer has tried to perfect a lacquer for outdoor use—this corporation has accomplished it. Actual everyday application in Los Angeles will answer all questions. A man of sales and executive ability and in position to buy and pay for at least $5000 worth of lacquer for initial supply stock, should in a short time have a distribution bringing in One Hundred Dollars daily profit, which will materially increase from year to year. Unquestioned references given and required. Address E, box 587, Times Branch Office.

CALIFORNIA REPRESENTATIVE OF THE ORIGINAL COPYWRITER CO., INC., SEATTLE, WASHINGTON, is in the city for a few days seeking financially responsible man to whom he can entrust the exclusive distribution in Southern California of a popular priced Office Specialty that eliminates the use of carbon paper on all typewriters. This is the biggest thing of the age with absolutely no competition and an enormous field of activity. Job seekers or promoters will not be considered. See Mr. Simmons between 9:30 a.m. & 10 p.m. New Hotel Rosslyn, Suite 407.

FISHING WITH ELECTRICITY

Word comes from Germany that the piscatorial experts of that country are putting their approval on the method of fishing with electricity, which has been done to some extent recently in that country. The operation consists of electrifying the water in a given stretch so that all the fish are stunned and rise to the surface. They are then collected and sorted. Pike and other enemies to the more edible and more profitable fish are killed, undersized fish are set aside and later returned to the water, while the marketable fish are retained. Those of the catch that are judged eligible for a further lease on life are only temporarily stunned and appear none the worse for their experience.

LIGHT OPERAS TO BE OFFERED

Shriners Sponsor Series to Open in December

Each of Selections Will Run for One Week

Principals in Cast to Come Here from East

A series of ten light operas to run one week each, is announced by Al Malaikah Temple, under the direct supervision of which the program is to be given, after Christmas, in the Shrine Auditorium.

With a seating capacity of 6500 at each performance, a total of more than 500,000 seats is available to music lovers. An organization of 122 persons including twelve principals from New York, a chorus of sixty recruited from musical talent in Southern California, a unit of sixteen dancers and symphony concert of thirty-six will be used in the productions.

The first performance will be given December 26, and there will be nightly performances with matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays. A different opera is to be presented each week, with new scenery and costumes for each.

TESTS PLANNED

The opera management at the auditorium already is receiving applications from Southern California singers and artists who will be required and in a short time an audition will be held and a general invitation extended through the newspapers, in an effort to obtain the best talent and cultured voices available.

The best compositions of Victor Herbert, Gilbert and Sullivan, Franz Lehar, Leo Fall, Reginald De Koven, Rudolf Friml and others, will be selected in arranging a repertoire. The principals will be brought from New York to fill the roles in which they achieved outstanding success.

GREAT PROJECT

"This undertaking is the greatest of its kind ever assumed by an organization in Southern California," Sim W. Crabill, Potentate of Al Malaikah Temple, said yesterday. "The officers and members are behind this splendid move to give the community the rarest musical treat ever offered it. We have virtually no overhead or staff expense and with our large seating capacity can stage these light operas more elaborately and economically than ever before.

"By purchasing coupon books good for ten tickets each, a substantial saving is shown.

"To accommodate out-of-town patrons and members we will establish ticket offices at convenient places where reserved seats may be obtained. The same seats may be reserved for each week, if desired.

"Also for their convenience we plan to start the evening performances at 8:20 p.m., and finish about 10:50. Matinees will start at 2:30 p.m., and finish about 5."

WOMAN CAR DRIVER DIES IN ACCIDENT

Husband Seriously Hurt as Pacific Electric Train Hits Auto at Crossing

Mrs. Carrie Snell, 68 years of age, of 252 South Harvard Boulevard, was killed yesterday when the automobile she was driving was struck by a westbound Pacific Electric train at the intersection of Venice and Harvard boulevards. Her husband, William L. Snell, riding with her, has an even chance for recovery, according to Police Surgeon Saverein of the Georgia-street Receiving Hospital.

According to Detective Lieutenants Roberts and Steed of the Wilshire division, Mrs. Snell drove across the intersection behind a Pacific Electric train which had halted there, directly in the path of the train which struck and demolished the car. Mrs. Snell leaves two sons, Dr. H. L. Trafford of 5427 La Mirada avenue, and William A. Snell of 815 North Magnolia avenue, Burbank.

Harry Gamplin, 4, of 126 1-2 Manchester avenue, is near death at the Georgia-street hospital with a basal skull fracture and concussion suffered when he was struck by a car driven by Lloyd Kingsbury, 16, of 2434 West Ninetieth street. With an older sister, young Gamplin was crossing Main street at Manchester. The sister stepped back to avoid the car, but the boy is said to have stepped forward into the path of the automobile.

Fitts Again to Go Under Knife

Lieut.-Gov. Buron R. Fitts will undergo an operation Monday, the seventeenth since his return from France in 1919.

Dr. F. L. Anton, 3012 South Figueroa street, the Lieutenant-Governor's physician, last night announced his patient was to have been operated upon yesterday, but speaking engagements on Armistice Day prevented preparation for the operation. Reservations have been made at the California Lutheran Hospital.

Lieut.-Gov. Fitts was wounded in the right leg by a shell during the Argonne drive. Since that time he has submitted to sixteen operations in an effort to prevent amputation.

NEAR-EAST COLLEGE POST FOR MILLIKAN

Robert A. Millikan, the noted scientist, and Mrs. Hugh Gibson, mother of Hugh Gibson, American Ambassador to Switzerland, have accepted the chairmanship and vice-chairmanship, respectively, of the advisory committee of the Near East College Association, Inc., in the Southwestern States, it was announced yesterday by Mary Wallace Weir, director of the association in Los Angeles. The new committee will co-operate with national and international groups of educators and philanthropic workers in the campaign for the endowment and maintenance of American schools at Beirut, Constantinople, Symrna, Athens and Sofia.

NEWS OF SOUTHERN COUNTIES

SIXTEEN ILL FROM POISON

All Eat One Brand of Ice Cream at Pasadena

City Authorities Ban Sale of Commodity

All Victims Reported Out of Danger

PASADENA, Nov. 12.—Sale of a special brand of French vanilla ice cream was banned here today by the city health department, following reports that sixteen persons were stricken with poisonous poisoning after eating the food, which was sold by a local confectioner.

C. W. Arthur, city bacteriologist, is testing samples of the ice cream for evidences of metallic poisoning or other impurities. All victims of the confection are now reported to be on the road to recovery.

The first illnesses were reported after a party given by Dr. Arthur A. Finch, 204 State street. Eight of his ten guests became sick after eating the ice cream, which the health officials say was purchased from the local branch of a catering company. A neighbor was given some of the ice cream and was likewise taken ill the same night.

The same kind of ice cream was served at another home with the result that seven persons were poisoned.

Arthur said today that the catering company is co-operating with the officials in their efforts to trace the cause of the poison. The ice cream was made in Los Angeles, and "processed" here. It is believed that the use of a copper mixing vat may be responsible for the poisoning of the food.

Legion Asks Changes in Border Rules

CALEXICO, Nov. 12.—Throwing down a direct challenge to civic organizations in Imperial Valley which are seeking to have the Calexico-Mexicali gateway closed at 6 instead of 9 p.m., daily, Gores-Lake Post of the American Legion in this city, at a special meeting last night passed resolutions requesting Washington authorities to remove all line restrictions and open the port twenty-four hours a day.

The Legion declares in setting forth the reasons for this action that experience at Tia Juana had proved that early line closing does not solve the moral questions involved in the issue and that existing restrictions are interfering seriously with legitimate business at this port. The veterans also voiced a protest against the action of the Treasury Department last Thursday when it instructed Deputy Collector Sheppard, in charge of the customs office here, to take up night permits now held by more than 500 local residents who have business enterprises on the Mexican side of the line.

The Legionnaires have indicated that they will ask veterans in other valley towns to join with them in opposing the 6 o'clock line-closing proposition.

Hold Mexicans After Stabbing

VISALIA, Nov. 12.—As result of a knife affray near Earlimart yesterday, Joe Alvarado is held in the Tulare County Jail here and Antonio Villa is in the County Hospital, suffering from severe cuts.

Alvarado was arrested by Constable Delos Howard of Pixley and is being held here pending further investigation and developments of Villa's injuries. The injured man is said to be suffering from a deep cut at the back of the head between the ears and a deep slash on the back of the neck. The leather coat he wore is said to have been almost cut off. The assailant used a grape knife, according to reports.

While no specific charge has yet been filed against Alvarado, it is believed a charge of a serious nature may be made, as he is now being held as a suspect in connection with the attack on Villa.

Alvarado is said to have told officers that while he and Villa were seated in an auto, Villa threw his head back, grabbing it on the car and thus inflicting the injuries. His wounds are not believed serious.

Ignacio Navarro, 29, also arrested by Constable Howard at the scene of the attack on Villa, is held in jail here on a charge of possession.

NARROW ESCAPE IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH

BAKERSFIELD, Nov. 12.—Frank Taylor, believed to be a resident of Pasadena, narrowly escaped death at 3:30 o'clock this morning when his light car crashed into a truck near the Western Waterworks on the Bakersfield-Taft highway west of here. The car was demolished.

The truck was driven by Arthur M. Carlson, 1826 Texarena street, Bakersfield, according to a report filed at traffic headquarters here. Taylor is confined at the West Side Hospital in Taft. His head was badly cut and he has a probable concussion of the brain, but will recover, according to reports from the West Side.

WILLIAM E. LOWRY

OWENSMOUTH, Nov. 12.—Funeral services for William E. Lowry, 64 years of age, father of Mrs. Nat H. Hancock, were conducted at Allhambers, following death here at the Hancock home on Sattley street. He is survived by five children, Mrs. Hancock, Waldo Lowry of Salt Gabriel, Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Lloyd Holly of Fillmore and Mrs. Glenn Miller of Santa Barbara.

MERCHANTS ELECT

TUJUNGA, Nov. 12.—E. C. Strube, owner of the Sunland lumber yard, has been made a director of the Verdugo Hills Merchants' Association, following the annual meeting of the organization. Frank Pilling is manager and G. W. Farrand, secretary.

COUNTY SEEKS INJUNCTION

Ventura Would Prevent Crossing of Parks by Oil Company to New Field

VENTURA, Nov. 12.—Ventura county has asked the Superior Court to grant an injunction to prevent the General Petroleum Corporation from crossing either of two small county parks located between the highway and the beach several miles west of this city in order to reach the land beyond the mean high tide land.

The injunction was sought today by Dist.-Atty. James C. Hollingsworth. The complaint recalls the conditions of the deed whereby the county acquired the two parcels of land, totaling about three acres, from A. L. Hobson, Helen Hobson, Effie S. Hobson and Edith Hobson, in 1915. At that time it was stipulated that the land should never be used by the county for any but park purposes. The complaint further states that the General Petroleum Corporation has threatened to cross the park sites to get men, vehicles and material onto the high tide lands, and declares that no pecuniary compensation would satisfy the county for the loss of its park. Meanwhile, Mr. Hobson is preventing the General Petroleum Company from crossing his lease adjoining on the west to reach the State oil-permit area which the company has there.

Although Mr. Hobson has not stated his reason for withholding this right, it is understood that he wishes to bring the validity of the State permits to a test as quickly as possible. It was expressly denied today by an associate of Mr. Hobson that any ill feeling toward the General Petroleum Corporation or any desire to hinder its drilling operations had caused him to refuse permission to cross his land. It is this refusal of Mr. Hobson's to allow the oil company to cross his land, which at the point of juncture with the State sea wall is only about four feet wide, which brought about the recent attempt to obtain the permission of the State to break the wall for a right of way to the tidewater tract.

RUM BOATS PLY TRADE OFF COAST

Make Effort to Land Cheer in Liquid Form in Ventura County

VENTURA, Nov. 12.—Reports that two rum-runners, one possibly the notorious Federalship, alias La Golandrina, loaded with "Christmas cheer" cruising somewhere off the coast of Ventura county have quickened the activities of agents of the prohibition enforcement department and led to arrest of Earl Simpson at a point along the beach near San Simeon, together with a coupe loaded with thirty-two cases of alleged Scotch whisky.

Upon receiving word that the pair of mysterious vessels were in the offing, Federal Agents John H. Vail and Charles E. Cass took up a vigil. They perceived one of the vessels and as they lay in concealment watched the cargo being landed and hidden at a point back from the beach. Later they noted two apparently closed cars roll down toward the cache. Finally one of the cars which was regarded by the officers as a decoy started back along the highway and was permitted to pass the officials believing its purpose was to throw them off the scent.

Later a second car followed and was stopped. This car contained Simpson and his liquid cargo. He refused to make any statement to officials and shortly after being lodged in jail, was released when a stranger appeared and deposited $2000 cash bond to assure appearance of prisoner before United States Commissioner A. H. Beall next Monday. It is opinion of Federal officers that but a small portion of one of the ship's cargo was placed ashore at San Simeon and that the vessels, which are believed to be steaming south, contemplate a further cargo landing on the mainland or adjacent island to reinforce the Christmas supply of liquor.

Imperial County Residents Go on Trip to Arizona

EL CENTRO, Nov. 12.—One hundred Imperial Valley business men are scheduled to leave here tomorrow morning on a three-day goodwill excursion that will include visits to Yuma, Phoenix, Tucson, Nogales and other points in Arizona. The trip is being sponsored by the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Imperial county and a special Southern Pacific train has been chartered for the trip.

W. C. Costello, El Centro newspaper publisher, who is chairman of the committee in charge, stated today that the excursion has no bearing on the present Colorado River controversy between California and Arizona.

"Salt River and Yuma Valley ranchers and business men have many problems identical with those in Imperial Valley. We are going to spend the three days getting acquainted with them and exchange views on subjects of common interest. If we can prevent it the river controversy will not be injected into the discussions."

BATTLE PLANES AT INGLEWOOD

INGLEWOOD, Nov. 12.—Inglewood has been selected for the first official stop of the third annual commemoration flight that will have its start and finish at Clover Field tomorrow, Sunday. The great army of planes, the largest aggregation ever seen on this Coast, including the flotilla from the United States plane carrier Langley, is scheduled to arrive here in military formation promptly at noon at the Inglewood airport on Redondo Boulevard near Pine street, according to Frank D. Parent, chairman of the Aeronautics Committee of the Inglewood Chamber of Commerce, under whose auspices the stop here has been arranged.

Abundance of parking space, at nominal cost, and the huge flying field, will give ample opportunity to inspect the Army, Navy and commercial planes, including not only the most modern, but also battle-scarred relics of battlefield "dog fights" in France, may be seen landing here, on the ground, and taking off for the next lap of the race. Mayor Hugh R. Lawrence, Postmaster of Fred H. Lazdal and Mr. Parent, will be judges at this field, one of only two stops to be made outside of Clover Field at Santa Monica.

FOREIGN DIGNATARIES AT SANTA MONICA BALL

SANTA MONICA, Nov. 12.—The flags of the nation they represent were dipped last night in honor of four consuls who attended the army and navy ball at the Edgewater club. The American flag was dipped to Capt. William T. Tarrant, of the U.S.S. Arizona, highest ranking officer present. More than 400 attended the banquet and dance, at which the club was host. The consuls were Hon. Godfrey Fisher, British; Hon. E. Didot, French; Hon. Charles Winsel, Belgian, and Count R. Gradenigo di Ginestina, Italian.

Army, navy and marine corps dress uniforms added color to the patriotic affair.

Brook Hawkins, president of the club, introduced a number of the guests of honor, including Col. George F. Hamilton, U.S.A.; Capt. Ivan Edwards, Canadian; Northwest Mounted Police; Capt. St. Remis, France; Capt. Smith of March Field; Capt. Moulton of Clover Field, Corp. Coppins, Canadian Victoria Cross hero, Nurse Sullivan, dean of Canadian war nurses, and Capt. Quinn.

Pupils Writing to Schools of Foreign Lands

FONTANA, Nov. 12.—What is believed to be an innovation in intercountry education has just been disclosed here in the organization of an International Club in the Fontana Junior High School, members of which already have started writing letters to school children of foreign lands with the expectation that an interchange of correspondence will result.

The club is sponsored by Cornelius DeBakney, native of Hungary, and questions relative to holidays, games, costumes and methods of conducting schools were asked in the first letters. The expense of postage is to be borne by Mr. DeBakney.

Aldeine Munchison sent letters to schools in the capitals of Scotland, Hungary and Egypt; Mildred Hilton to pupils of Czecho-Slovakia and France; Doris Millholland to China; Martha Roberts to Japan, and Virginia Hatch to Egypt, Switzerland, Greece and Spain. Letters from Fontana are written in English, while it is expected the replies will be in the language of the country from which they are sent. A knowledge of several foreign languages thus will also be gained.

ONE SWALLOW MORE THAN SUFFICIENT

HUNTINGTON PARK, Nov. 12.—A stranger, just after the Armistice Day parade yesterday, wobbled into police headquarters with the remark: "Officers, I took a drink of liquor, and I am poisoned; get me to a doctor quick." The man was rushed to the Huntington Park Hospital where he was given treatment, and was soon released.

He said that he took the "liquor" intending to celebrate the anniversary of the signing of the armistice, but didn't know that it would have the effect it did on him.

"I only took a swallow of the stuff, but that was almost enough to kill me," he said on leaving the hospital.

WOMEN'S CLUB TO AID UNEMPLOYED

HANFORD, Nov. 12.—An employment bureau to assist girls in securing positions and to supply employers with girls of proven ability will be instituted by Business and Professional Women's Club of this city. A committee has been appointed by the club president, Miss Charlotte Kitchner, to work out the plans.

The employment project was adopted by the San Joaquin Valley Business and Professional Women's Club at its recent convention, recommending that all clubs include it in their activities. At the Armistice Day celebration in the neighboring city of Lemoore yesterday members of the club served "hot dogs" and coffee, realizing a nice sum for the club's treasury.

NORTH HOLLYWOOD KNIGHTS ORGANIZE

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 11.—A charter list of ninety members was obtained at the organization meeting of the new council of Knights of Columbus, conducted in St. Charles Catholic Church here. Application for the charter has been sent to New Haven, Ct., national headquarters. The meeting was presided over by Thomas Humphrey, prominent knight of the order. The jurisdiction of the council as soon as it gets down to business will extend in an area from the Burbank city limits to Fulton avenue, between here and Van Nuys. Most of the members of the new council will transfer from the councils already established at Hollywood and Van Nuys.

HOLIDAY AT TEMPLE

TEMPLE, Nov. 12.—Armistice Day was celebrated here yesterday by the American Legion, Post No. 179, with appropriate ceremonies, the main speaker being Rev. Munday, retired army chaplain, who lives in Temple. A community picnic dinner was held in the city park following the ceremonies after which athletic sports were the main attraction at the base ball park of the Temple Merchants, all kinds of races and field stunts were the order and largely taken part in by the children from the local schools, after which a lively game of ball was played. The ball team from the school vs. the American Legion team, the school was victors by a score of 13 to 3.

OPEN HOUSE TO MANY FRIENDS

Couple Celebrate Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Himrod

POMONA, Nov. 12.—In celebration of their golden wedding which occurred fifty years ago at Redwing, Minn., on November 13, 1877, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Himrod, pioneer Pomona residents, will hold open house to all their many friends and relatives Sunday, at their home here at 807 North Gibbs street. No formal invitations were issued for the affair, the couple preferring to personally greet all who come to pay their respects and have designated the hours of from 2 to 5 p.m., to receive callers.

Three years after the marriage of Miss Dosmas Almira Williams to T. B. Himrod, the couple moved to Iowa in the fall of 1880, residing there until 1897, where the husband engaged in farming and live-stock raising. Five children were born during this time, two of whom died. On October 5, 1897, Mr. and Mrs. Himrod with their children joined the former's father and two sisters and established their home in this city, where they have continuously resided ever since, one child being born here. Mr. Himrod immediately became interested in farming activities in this city and for twenty-five years was engaged in the orange industry, owning extensive acreage throughout the valley up until five years ago when he disposed of his holdings and retired from active work.

During their residence here, both Mr. and Mrs. Himrod have been active in local church work and have made a host of friends throughout the valley who will be on hand to extend congratulations Sunday afternoon. Their children will be present with but one exception. James L. Himrod, who resides in Illinois, has already sent his regrets at not being able to attend the celebration.

TELEPHONE MAGNATE DIES IN PASADENA

PASADENA, Nov. 12.—Edward H. Moulton, 84 years of age, former prominent Minneapolis banker and telephone magnate, dropped dead shortly after noon today in the office of Charles L. Wright, president of the Security National Bank of Pasadena. Recurrence of a serious heart attack experienced a year ago in Portugal caused his death.

Mr. Moulton and his daughter, Mrs. Catherine Van Dyke, returned to Pasadena Thursday after an extended European trip. They came downtown today to call on Mr. Wright. Mrs. Van Dyke left her father with the banker, while she did some shopping. As Mr. Moulton appeared to be out of breath, Mr. Wright went to get him a drink of water, but when he returned, his caller was slumped down in his chair, dead. Doctors were called in vain.

EVIDENCE BLOWS UP IN COURT

Doubtful Bottle of Liquor Acts As Aid to Convict Man on Trial

VAN NUYS, Nov. 12.—A bottle of the real stuff used as "evidence" in the trial here of Frank Harper, held for asserted liquor-law violation, was not only "evidence" but it helped in the prosecution as well.

"That bottle of liquid is not the real stuff, your honor," Harper's attorney said to Judge H. A. Decker. The latter eyed the container.

"Plop," went the bottle and the cork shot for the court ceiling. The court ducked under his bench, and the bailiff hid behind a crooked elbow.

When order was restored and laughter ceased, Judge Decker said he had seen enough of the "evidence" in the case and sentenced Harper to pay $500 or 100 days in jail, for possession. He also gave Harper forty-five days in jail for having sold a gallon of liquor to one of the arresting officers.

Noted Teachers on Kern County Institute List

BAKERSFIELD, Nov. 12.—A brilliant assemblage of educators from all parts of the United States and several who are renowned abroad will lead the forty-sixth annual county teachers' institute here when it convenes the 21st, 22nd and 23rd inst. at the high school and California Theater, and more than 800 teachers from all parts of Kern county will lay aside classroom tasks to study educational subjects for these three days.

The complete program for the educational conclave to be devoted to the study of school progress was announced today by L. E. Chenoweth, County Superintendent of Schools, who will preside at the three-day convention.

Among the prominent educators who are prominently listed on the program are William John Cooper, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; Prof. Graham Allen Laing, graduate of the University of Liverpool, former secretary of education in British Columbia and now professor of economics at California Institute of Technology at Pasadena; George G. Glick, well-known Eastern Chautauqua lecturers; Samuel Haig Jameson, member of the world-famous traveling university; Dr. T. W. MacQuarrie, president of San Jose Teachers' College; Dr. Rufus B. Von KleinSmid, president of the University of Southern California; Montaville Flower, publicist and author; Prof. Junius L. Meriam, author and others.

Warehouse Fire Destroys Stock

GLENDALE, Nov. 12.—Fire that broke out late yesterday in a warehouse leased by Wilson Bell Hardware Company, on the rear of the J. W. Lawson Building at 227 North Brand Boulevard, caused damage estimated at $11,000 before it was brought under control by the firemen from four stations.

The flames spread from the warehouse to the rear of the Castle Apartments and damaged two apartments slightly before they were extinguished. Battalion Chief Al Monfort had his lip split by a flying hydrant wrench and Hoseman John White received a severe gash on the head when a skylight fell on him. Both men were given first aid and had their wounds stitched up.

The Lawson Building was recently leased for a ninety-nine-year term to the United Cigar Stores Company and the Wilson Bell stock was to have been moved within a few days. When the call was phoned to the fire department the person sending it in told the operator at the fire department switchboard that the fire was on South Brand Boulevard, and several minutes were lost when the engines turned south instead of north, only to find that the fire was several blocks from where they had expected to find it.

WANTED MAN IS SAFE IN JAIL

SANTA ANA, Nov. 12.—A. M. Keylon, who is said to have operated under several aliases, including that of Bill Edgar, is in the Arizona State penitentiary to serve from two to three years for aggravated assault, and Orange county officers need not search further for him, according to a letter received today by the Sheriff's office from the State Identification Bureau at Sacramento.

Records here show that Keyler, alias Edgar, escaped from the chain gang at Orange County Park, November 1, 1926. He was sentenced to serve six months in the county jail from Brea township for driving while intoxicated.

LIGHTING PLANT FOR PARK

THREE RIVERS, Nov. 12. — Plans for the proposed electric-lighting plant in Sequoia National Park for next spring will be made by Chief Civil Engineer F. A. Kittridge of the National Park Service, and Jack Emmerts, chief electrician of Yosemite, who are now in the park. They will spend some time at Giant Forest.

HONOR HERO DEAD

World War Men Who Made the Supreme Sacrifice Have Names Inscribed in Bronze

ONTARIO, Nov. 12.—Memory of nineteen young men of Ontario who gave their lives in service during the World War will be perpetuated as long as bronze and granite wears.

As the opening feature of yesterday's celebration of Armistice Day here, the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion unveiled a memorial to the hero dead of Ontario.

Nineteen names are inscribed on a bronze tablet secured to a huge granite rock on the lawn of the American Legion clubhouse. Among them is the name of the first Southland boy to fall on the field of battle. VALLEY TO MAKE STUDY OF RAINFALL

GIRARD, Nov. 11.—For the first time in the history of San Fernando Valley, a complete study of rainfall and flood conditions is to be made. In order to accomplish this the Federal Weather Bureau in co-operation with the county flood-control department is installing a dozen standard rain gauges at key points in the valley. Some of these are to be located in the western end of the valley, one each at Girard, Owensmouth, Reseda, Chatsworth, Cahuenga Park, Encino and skyline drive. Volume and rapidity of the flow of storm waters in the canyons also will be recorded by gauges, to the end that data dealing with height of flood water at certain points in connection with the amount of rainfall will be available for use in carrying out flood-control measures. With this information the department heads expect to be able to determine with certainty what may be the wash conditions so many hours after a rainfall of any number of inches falling during stated periods.

MOVE PRISONERS TO JAIL AT VISALIA

CORCORAN, Nov. 12.—Because there were not sufficient cells in the Kings County Jail it was not possible to keep incommunicado the four Mexicans being held in connection with the ambush and murder of Seiso Hames, after the latter had won from other Mexicans a considerable sum of money in an all-night poker game at the Battelle cotton ranch, near this city.

Seiso was killed and a companion shot in the hip, just after they left the game in which the men held in jail are said to have participated. Sheriff Kimes has had difficulty keeping the men separated, so that they could not talk to each other, and he took Petro Basques to the Visalia jail yesterday. Officers have been investigating the murder ever since it was committed, but admit that thus far they have secured no important evidence.

GRAPE MEN TO GATHER AT ONTARIO

Vineyardists of Five Counties Meet to Elect Members of Advisory Council

FRESNO, Nov. 12.—Grower members of the California Vineyardists' Association from five Southern California counties will meet at the Euclid Theater, Ontario, at 2 p.m. Tuesday to elect seven members of the association's advisory council, it was announced at association headquarters here today. Charles Latimer of Ontario, a director of the association, will serve as chairman of the meeting.

A feature of the meeting will be a talk by Donald D. Conn, managing director of the association, who will report to the growers on the activities of the association during the past season, the first since its organization, and outline plans for the winter and spring of 1928.

The advisers who are elected will meet next month to elect three directors for the association from their district. The district comprises Los Angeles, San Bernandino, San Diego and Riverside counties and that part of Riverside county west of a north and south line through Beaumont.

The Ontario meeting is one of a series of seventeen at which eighty-four advisers are to be elected.

Brea Banker Indicted by Federal Jury

BREA, Nov. 12.—Maurice J. Wolfe, former cashier of the First National Bank of Brea, has been indicted by the Federal grand jury in Los Angeles on a charge of misapplication of the bank's funds, according to information received here today. Wolfe is being held in the Orange County Jail.

The man was arrested several weeks ago in Brea in company with a telephone operator with whom he is said to have been very friendly. He disappeared from the bank more than a month ago after Federal examiners discovered a shortage in his funds. After he was put in jail, Wolfe said he took the money, said to amount to several hundred dollars, to assist Donald Fraser, assistant cashier of the bank. The day after Wolfe disappeared Fraser attempted to kill himself in Glendale by slashing his wrists. When Fraser signed over to the bank an equity in a South Pasadena lot, the charges contemplated against him were dismissed, it was said.

In Santa Ana it was said that Wolfe would probably be taken to Los Angeles within a few days for arraignment on the Federal indictment.

GIVE BANQUET TO OLD COMMANDER

BAKERSFIELD, Nov. 12.—Former members of Troop A, Bakersfield's National Guard company that was mustered out of service in 1916, staged a reunion tonight at Gaston's Restaurant in celebration of the troop captain, Willard C. Bush.

The former troopers gathered at 7 o'clock at the American Legion clubhouse and proceeded from there to the restaurant, where an Italian dinner was served and the ex-service men indulged in reminiscences of the old days in the troop.

Capt. Bush went to Siam after Troop A was mustered out, and while in that country was bitten by a poisonous snake and was reported to have died from effects of the bite. Members of his command believed he was dead until he returned here this week to renew old acquaintances. He served in the British army during the World War, enlisting long before the United States entered the conflict.

PLANS READY FOR NEW BOYS' SCHOOL

GIRARD, Nov. 11.—Announcement is made by Homer Davis of Van Nuys that plans are being made for financing the construction of school buildings and dormitories near here for the new boys' school to be known as Pacific Lodge. The site selected consists of a forty-acre tract on the highway and the improvements to be installed are to cost $250,000. The school is an institution that is sponsored and supported by the Protestant Welfare Association. This is accomplished through co-operation with all Protestant church brotherhoods. The school has been conducted at Pomona on State-owned property, and as it was necessary to abandon this the new site was selected. Plans for the group of buildings have already been completed, it is stated, and building operations are expected to begin as soon as part of the building fund is available.

BURNED WATCHMAN ON WAY TO RECOVERY

TUJUNGA, Nov. 11.—It is learned here today that Eugene Oliver, watchman at the county flood-control work just west of the Big Tujunga bridge, who is in a hospital in Glendale suffering major burns, will likely recover, though he may be abed for several months. While on duty the clothes of Oliver caught afire as he was carrying gasoline in one hand and a lighted lantern in the other. In some way he stumbled, spilling gasoline on his clothes. The fumes caught fire and he was seriously burned about the face, body and arms. Almost every particle of his clothing was burned from his body. Although the flesh was burned from his hands Oliver got into his auto, drove to the home of a friend and later was driven to the hospital.

LEGEND OF LOST MINE STIRS SEARCH TODAY

Hunt Being Made for Veins of Gold Described by Motorlog Party; Indian Original Discoverer

Along in 1840, some eighty-seven years ago, so legend says, a Mojave Indian was hunting for his horse up Bear Creek, then, as now, in the Tehachapi Mountains, but now part of Los Angeles county. However, that political subdivision was not known then.

Perhaps it was fortunate for all concerned that the days of the automobile had not yet arrived. One does not hunt for a missing flivver but merely notifies the police department and hopes for the best.

THIRST UNCOVERS GOLD

At any event the pinto was still missing when the Indian became thirsty. Having no canteen or other vessel with him he threw himself on the ground to satisfy his thirst in the handiest way by burying his face in a stream that was on its way to the sea.

To his surprise he saw what appeared to be a rock ledge in the stream in which there was a vein of pure gold. The Indian was enough acquainted with the ways of the white man to know that the gold was highly valuable.

The horse was forgotten and one of

FEDERAL-AID HIGHWAYS WILL HAVE MARKERS

Numerals in Black to Appear on White Shield; State Name Also Will be Used

Federal-aid highways in California soon will be marked with the United States shield signs in conformity with the number system of designation adopted some time ago by the American Association of State Highway officials.

This announcement was made following a conference attended by B. E. Meed, director of public works of the State; R. M. Morton, chief highway Engineer; John H. Berryman, Jr., associate counsel of the Automobile Club of Southern California; Douglas C. Rhodes, field engineer of the club; C. C. Cottrell, manager of the highway bureau of the California State Automobile Association and J. W. Johnson, chief engineer of the northern organization.

The new signs will be enameled metal, shield shape, with black letters against a white background. They will be mounted on metal posts and across the top will be the word California. In the center will be the initials U. S. and the number of the highway and at the bottom the insignia of the club erecting them, as is usual on the thousands of direction signs now dotting all highways of the State.

THE HIGH CAR FIELD THE TREND IS UNDOUBTEDLY TOWARD EIGHTS

Growing in Favor Month After Month

Hupmobile Eight is strengthening its hold on public favor, month after month, because Hupmobile engineers have achieved even finer, more luxurious performance from the straight-eight principle.

You will experience a new zest in driving the latest series Hupmobile Eight—a resilient response that comes from its improved engine design; from the finer smoothness and balance of moving parts; from the silence and ease with which it does all you ask of it.

And today's Hupmobile Eight is not only more delightful in action—but most pleasing in appearance.

If you plan a motor car investment above $1500, you especially owe it to yourself to inspect and ride in this most modern development among eights—the one car that is rapidly changing the whole trend of buying in the fine car field.

CAR OUTPUT TAPERS OFF

DETROIT, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Reduction of schedules to meet the usual periodical falling off in sales, combined with the annual inventories at several of the leading plants, is curtailing the production of passenger cars.

Proper Light Only Means of Avoiding Fine

Now is the time for motorists to have their headlights inspected for glaring or improper lighting before wet weather makes such lights doubly dangerous, warns the emergency road service department of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

A State-wide drive against illegal and glaring lights was started this week by the division of motor vehicles. The entire force of 200 State traffic officers was ordered to be especially vigilant in apprehending headlight offenders and handing them

TAG BUREAU SUCCEEDS

Traffic Violators Accept New Plan to Avoid Court Appearance; No Tags Fixed

Successful operation of the traffic violations bureau, established November 1 at 118 West Temple street, was reported yesterday by Dr. E. J. Lickley, City Prosecutor.

The two great improvements over the old system are the nonfixable tags and the greater convenience to drivers who have violated minor regulations of the traffic code.

So far as is known not a single tag has been "fixed." Miss Selma Blumpkin, secretary in Dr. Lickley's office, received a tag for parking partially in a loading zone. She paid a $1 fine.

Conferences were held last week between Dr. Lickley and Ford Jack of the City Prosecutor's office, and City Controller Myers, for the purpose of working out a checking system that will immediately show if any tags have been adjusted. A copy of every tag will be tabulated in the Controller's office.

Since the new bureau was established, the number of persons failing

Desert Roads in Fine Shape for Traveling

REDLANDS, Nov. 12. (Exclusive)—Desert roads are in fine shape for the winter travel, according to the report of county highway officers to the Supervisors.

The road from Redlands out to the Colorado Desert and Banning, Beaumont, Mecca, Blythe and so on, is in fine shape except for a five-mile detour in Yucaipa, which is not so good. The new Blythe-to-Mecca road is coming along in fine shape.

The road from San Bernardino over the Mojave Desert is all paved and

NEXT MONTH TO SEE NEW PLATES

December 15 Date for First Distribution

Gold Letters Will Appear on Blue Field

Seven-Numeral Emblems to be Used Here

Motorists who want to be first in line to get their new license plates will have to step lively this year if they apply at the license department of the Automobile Club of Southern California. Announcement was made yesterday that the club headquarters will start distribution of 1928 plates one minute after midnight on December 15, so that the first applicants may drop by after the theater.

EXTRA HALF-MONTH

Announcement by the State division of motor vehicles that distribution of the new licenses will start this year on December 15 gives an additional half-month to the license-renewal period, since the time limit fixed by law is midnight January 30, 1928.

The Automobile Club of Southern California, as usual, will distribute plates to its 125,000 members and will maintain a twenty-four-hour service during the rush. The club also will distribute California licenses to the tens of thousands of out-of-State motorists who wish them.

SAME OLD STYLE

The new plates are the same size and style as last year with the name "California" spelled out and the year designated across the bottom of the plate. The numerals and letters will be gold on a blue field.

All of the seven-numeral plates, that is above 1-000-000, have been allotted to Southern California, so that vehicles from this section may be recognized anywhere. The total distribution of plates is expected to pass the 2,000,000 mark next year, as the motor vehicle department is having manufactured 2,080,000 to meet the expected demand.

EARLY WARNING

"Get your 1928 license early," is the suggestion of the license department of the Automobile Club of Southern California. There will be a 100 per cent penalty of the regular $3 charge to those who fail to obtain their new licenses before midnight, January 30.

winter that they expect for that part of the High Sierra.

Although in previous years valley residents did not enjoy hearing such forecasts, the interesting snow programs that have been developed for the winter season makes the promise of much snow very good news. The presence of an unusual number of bear and deer on the floor of Yosemite Valley indicate a long hard winter to many of the residents. Many Southland motorists are making plans to spend holidays in the park now that the good all year road makes it accessible, according to reports to the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California. Ice skating will probably commence about December 1.

for some of the companies. Manufacturers of high-priced cars report a demand for their products well in advance of anticipations, and to a man are extremely optimistic over prospects just as soon as the industry "turns the corner" after the first of the new year.

It is almost certain that a new, very low-priced car of a well-known make will be ready for the market during the early weeks of January. Announcement of this prospective addition to its already long list of models will not be made, however, until orders can be fielled. One thing is certain, and on which everybody seems agreed, is that the low-priced field will have more from which to choose than ever before in the history of the automotive industry. Perhaps prices will be no lower because of added equipments and a somewhat better car, but even if they are a trifle higher than the buying public anticipates it will be the result of increased value.

No official statement has as yet seeped through the walls of the Ford executive offices as to when the new line will be announced. This secret has been well kept considering the mammoth job, and the thousands of men employed. This, however, is because the cars are being built in parts, and have not yet reached the final assembly stage. It is a case of making speed slowly and cautiously. Henry Ford is watching his step as never before and is not allowing himself to be rushed where a wrong decision is likely to prove fatal. He is personally "on the job" longer hours than any of his highly skilled mechanics.

The truck and bus division of the industry is showing a falling off in production and sales as a whole. However, there is a continued healthy demand for low-capacity delivery trucks from practically all sections of the country. Retail parts and accessories business is comparatively good although being materially cut because of the quietness in the passenger-car and truck market.

A normal volume of tires is being turned out, the demand holding out extremely well. This end of the industry is about the last one to feel the effects of a production and sales depression, because of the necessity of replacements of original equipment.

Upon his return this week from South America, Charles S. Mott, vice-president of General Motors, added his denial to several others of an impending war between Ford and G.M.C. Mr. Mott announced that General Motors had no time or inclination to invade the field so long held by Henry Ford, and did not expect Ford to climb into a higher-priced field.

"The lowest-priced car now offered by General Motors is being sold for $525," he added, "and the lowest-priced Ford sells for $300. That surely cannot be considered a competition in prices."

the signs, about 8000 of which will be required. It is expected that the first ones will be placed in about three weeks.

The routes that will be signed in accordance with the Federal provision include route No. 99 from Vancouver to El Centro; route 101 from Port Los Angeles to San Diego; route No. 80 from San Diego to Yuma; route No. 66 from Los Angeles to the Colorado River at Topok; route No. 91 from Daggett to the Nevada line; route No. 50 from Sacramento to the Nevada line; route No. 48 from Sacramento to Oakland and route No. 40 from San Francisco to the Nevada line.

California will then take its place among the few States in the Union that have complied with the new Federal provisions and will continue to lead all States in the adequacy of its highway markers, according to statements made by good-roads enthusiasts following the decision of the conference.

citations. This citation requires the motorist to have his lights adjusted within twenty-four hours and make a report of the adjustment to the police officials, justice of the peace or district attorney.

Arrest of the offender will follow failure to comply with the citation, it was stated. State officers stopped 65,248 motorists during the first nine months of this year for glaring or dangerous headlights. Of this number 29,050 were arrested, many paying fines.

The de luxe five-passenger sedan is a 1928 Hupmobile six. This car carries wire wheels, six of them, special bumpers, trunk rack and Hupmobile's new Midland steel-draulic brakes. This brake, a self-energizing type, has few external parts as revealed in the lower illustration.

Metallic cloths come in very fine textures and drape beautifully.

CAR CHANGES RADICAL

So many changes have been incorporated into construction of the 1928 Hupmobile six that the thousands of motorists who have seen the car during its initial display by the Greer-Robbins Company, California distributor, have been interested in examining the car inside and out and through its mechanical as well as new body features.

It would be difficult, according to A. R. Reedall, manager of the Hupmobile organization here, to designate any one feature of construction as holding the greatest interest among those who have inspected the car, with the one exception of entirely new appearance, which has proved a sensation in automotive circles.

In creating the new Hupmobile appearance, he points out, the designers have struck a new chord and the car will be set apart immediately as having achieved an individualism in appearance that will mark it regardless of other cars with which it may appear. It is much lower through the new design and smaller wheels. While an ordinary tall person may stand on a curbing and look over the top easily, the same person may, as a result of ingenious use of all interior space and new seating arrangement, sit comfortably with ample leg room regardless of the condition of the road. Lowness is gained by a double drop frame.

Among the features of the new car that are winning wide praise are the new color combinations and fine quality of interior finish. "It is interesting to note that Hupmobile has created a real form-fit design in front and rear seats alike in these new cars," Reedall says. "According to factory authorities, the seat design is scientifically right for both shoulders and spine positions, and the car has certainly proved that it is a wonder for comfortable riding.

"Another mechanical feature is the use of chromium steel plating on parts that were formerly nickel plated, including the radiator shell, headlamps and cowl lamps, door handles, and other items of outside trim.

"For the convenience of the driver, and lending a smart appearance, the dashboard instruments are now all grouped in one assembly under glass, in an attractive silvered frame on a new instrument board. The new driving position is one of the most comfortable we have ever found in an automobile."

TAG BUREAU SUCCEEDING

to answer to the charges have steadily decreased. Warrants, however, are being issued for these persons, and Chief Davis has assured the Traffic Commission, which helped to establish the bureau here, that service will be made on all warrants.

According to clerks in the bureau office, practically all violators approve of the new scheme. Instead of waiting hours for their cases to come up in court, they are able to deposit bail, and leave the bureau within five minutes.

Those who wish to explain to the court still have the privilege of doing so, but the great majority prefer to post bail and leave without further inconvenience.

SOME REPEATERS

Several persons have been tagged twice since the bureau opened, and paid larger fines for the second offense. By keeping record of all offenses; the "repeaters" will soon be known, and will be fined accordingly.

A visit to Judge Valentine's court showed a marked decrease in the number of persons waiting to be heard. The court had more time to listen to individual cases. A thirty-day jail sentence for reckless driving on Hill street at Sixteenth featured the session. The defendant turned over his watch and money to his wife, with the remark, "Well I won't need these for awhile."

DESERT ROADS IN FINE SHAPE

in fine shape. The dirt road from that road around to Old Woman's Springs through the Mojave to the Colorado Desert is also good.

The road from Cajon Pass out through Wrightwood and Palmdale on the desert was never better and is well packed. The rains have been of wonderful value to these roads. They were not washed much, but the dust was settled and the road-bed packed so that travel is comfortable.

WORK UNDER WAY ON ROAD NEAR SAN LUCAS

Shoulder construction is in progress on the Coast Road to San Francisco near San Lucas and caution should be used while passing the workmen, reports the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Kindness May be Costly for Auto Drivers

The fact that a motorist may be extending a courtesy and doing a kindness to a pick-up passenger apparently has no weight with the courts in suits for damages or in any way lessens the motorists' responsibility, according to advices received by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

It was brought out in a Long Island damage case that a kind-hearted chauffeur driving a private motor car gave two children a ride. They were injured while in the car, but in the suit that followed the jury decided that the owner of the car must pay $20,000 in damages to the father of the children.

JORDAN'S TREMENDOUS SPEED MEANS EVERY DAY UTILITY

Ability to go over eighty-two miles an hour gives Air Line Eight startling traffic performance and a conquering pace on the hills.

New motor gives 33% more power without an added pound of weight.

THE demand today is definitely for speed—tremendous speed—even though it is never used, because speed means extraordinary performance.

The Jordan Air Line Eight does over eighty-two miles an hour, if need be—and does it without apparent effort.

Few people will ever use that astounding speed—but they want the jump on the other fellow in the traffic—they want the power to swing out and around the procession on the steepest hills—they want the ability to outrun the other car if occasion should demand.

Speed, in the Jordan Air Line Eight, is your assurance of all 'round performance.

Extreme Comfort Boasted for This Car

Nell Meyers Patterson with new Franklin airman air-cooled six, one of the new model Franklins.

Sedan Model of Car Boasts New Comfort

Introducing what is declared to be a new kind of speed with extreme riding comfort, the new Franklin Airman air-cooled six, five-passenger sedan is here. It is being displayed by Franklin Motors, Inc., Ralph C. Hamlin, president. This model has an engine developing 24.3 per cent more power than its predecessors, it is stated.

"The Airman five-passenger sedan in acceleration tests stepped from five to twenty-five miles an hour in a little over seven seconds and from twenty to fifty miles in seventeen seconds," said Mr. Hamlin. "Its hill-climbing ability, acceleration and deceleration is much greater than on any previous Franklin products. It is able to maintain from six to ten miles faster hourly average on continuous driving than its predecessor. This car has sixty-six major improvements and more than 300 detailed refinements over former models.

"This five-passenger sedan has a wheelbase of 119 inches which allows the body to be constructed with a great deal of room which means real comfort. It is finished in Delaware blue and at the belt line bears a stripe of black edged with white. The upper structure and fenders are black, while window reveals are finished in the same color as the main body."

TUNNELS MUST BE USED

All school children must use pedestrian tunnels where they are available, according to a co-operative plan being put into effect by the Board of Education and the Los Angeles Police Department.

Teachers and principals will keep closer watch on the youngsters and will attempt to work out a plan by which the junior safety councils organized under the direction of the Automobile Club of Southern California will render special service in bringing the children to use the tunnels.

Traffic officers have been instructed when they observe any children not using the tunnel to take them directly to the principal of their school and report the occurrence. It is believed that with close observations all of the children can be induced to acquire the habit of using the pedestrian tunnels at all times.

NEW OIL STANDS TESTS

Following a general district manager's meeting in San Francisco, where initial plans were launched for the merchandising and advertising of the new Cycol Motor Oil a series of local sales meetings have been held in this territory with officials of the company. The Associated Oil Company officials declare that this new oil has been subjected to the severest tests ever administered an automotive engine lubricant, proving its complete adaptability to the demands of the present advanced type of automobile engine.

F. M. Rowles, sales manager of the Associated Oil Company, in speaking of the new Cycol says:

"If we take a sample of this oil and examine its viscosity range, we find that it allows a motor to start much easier because of the fact that it has at normal starting temperatures, 10 to 25 per cent less viscosity. As the engine heats up the oil flows more easily, assuring perfect lubrication of all metal surfaces even at high temperatures and high speed. But it does not get too thin. We find that at temperatures of motor operation it has retained a 10 per cent higher viscosity curve.

TRAVEL UNRESTRICTED

No restrictions on travel in the State of Washington due to the infantile paralysis epidemic are reported, except in Douglas county, where children under 16 years of age are not allowed to stop overnight, states the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

SEARCH MADE FOR GOLD MINE

the padres of the neighborhood notified. He satisfied himself that there was gold and subsequent events proved his belief for legend declares that the padres, with the aid of a working party of Indians, took nearly $1,000,000 from the mine in three years. They diverted the course of the stream and did other work which, though crude when compared with latter-day methods, yet was highly efficacious.

The legend resumes that one day there was a cave-in and fifteen Indians were imprisoned in the tunnel—and are there still. Their companions refused to work further in the mine—and the padres turned the stream back. The mine thereupon entered into the "lost" classification and has remained so, with the exception of two years, to this day, that is until recent days, if B. E. Miller and his associates of Pomona have rediscovered it.

TWO YEARS' PAY

There is another productive chapter in its life where it again paid fabulous rewards for those working in it, according to the stories. In 1873 Dr. B. F. Bragg came to California with some fine horses for the late "Lucky" Baldwin. An Indian became enamoured with one of the horses and told the doctor he would show him where there was a lot of gold in return for the horse. The deal was made and the mine reopened. Tradition says the doctor took out $750,000 in two years. The Irish foreman ran amuck one day, killed four men and tried to get the doctor but the latter eluded him and fled, never returning. The foreman was finally killed but not before he had again closed the mine.

Before his death, the doctor told Miss Annie L. Rose, present owner of the property, about the mine and how it could be located. The most important landmark was three fir trees that grew closely together. The entrance to the mine was declared to be 500 feet from them. Since Miss Rose acquired the mine numerous fruitless efforts have been made to find it.

Some time ago Mr. Miller became interested and employed two men to work along lines he hoped would lead to the rediscovery of the mine. He knew from legend that the early padres had made their entrance close to the creek bed and reasoned that if he dug a narrow trench parallel with the stream bed, ultimately the former workings would be discovered. Finally a huge boulder was found lying crosswise to the stream—in such a manner that it could not have been put there except by some other means than merely the action of the stream. Following a hunch Miller ordered the men to dig deeper and he declares unmistakable signs of blasting were discovered. He is confident that the Lost Padre mine has been relocated and that it is only a question of a few months before the debris that has accumulated for three-quarters of a century will be cleared out and the tunnel cleared.

MAY BE LUCKY

"Maybe we won't find it, and maybe we will," said Mr. Miller when he accompanied a Times-Albertson Motor Company motorlog party to the scene in a Dodge Brothers senior sedan a few days ago. "I am confident we have found the mine—and if we have, the richest workings in Southern California will be uncovered. If we haven't—it is just too bad." Incidentally, Mr. Miller declared, he is so confident of success that there is no stock for sale.

Pursuing the policy of many years of visiting interesting spots in the Southwest, whether or not they are within a few miles or many from Los Angeles, the Albertson Motor Company sent one of the new Dodge senior sedans to the mine a few days ago.

About eight miles south of Sandberg's, on the Ridge Route, a narrow graveled road leads east from the paved highway. This is followed for three miles and a half, to a ranch hidden in the hills, which is a mile and a half from the mine.

From the ranch one either walks or rides the hurricane deck of a burro, the latter being the ony means of transportation for materials and supplies. Two are used at present by Mr. Miller but others will be put into service as the needs demand. The schedule of arrival and departure of the burro train at the ranch is flexible.

Lighter and Faster Trucks in Big Demand

The trend in truck manufacture is for lighter and speedier vehicles, the result of a demand on the part of users for greater celerity in deliveries and campaigns by States and municipalities against the use of trucks that break down the pavements.

This is the conclusion of J. Jerome Canavan, manager of the truck division of Albertson Motors, Inc., Graham Brothers and Dodge Brothers dealers in Los Angeles.

In support of his contention Mr. Canavan yesterday pointed out that official figures last year indicated that 92 per cent of all trucks manufactured were of two tons or less capacity. He predicts that when the manufacturers release figures for this year the proportion of lighter trucks in comparison with the total will be found to be even greater.

"Trucks are becoming more and more popular with the increase in the number of hard-surfaced roads throughout the country," declared Mr. Canavan.

"Records show that there are huge fleets of Graham Brothers trucks in use by concerns that formerly used vehicles of the heavy type. Speed has supplanted carrying capacity with thousands of companies throughout the United States, who have found that, while they cannot move goods in such quantities at once with the lighter vehicles, the speed and lowered costs more than compensate for the loss of load capacity."

CARS GIVEN TEST ON ROUGH FACTORY ROAD

A rough road faces every Oldsmobile that comes off the assembly lines of Olds Motor Works. Before it is finally inspected each Oldsmobile is driven onto a set of eccentric rollers and locked in place. These rollers alternately pitch one corner of the car after the other upward while another corner is being depressed. The action is far more strenuous than is driving over the roughest road. Any point of weakness is revealed by this ocean-wave motion to which the car is subjected. Every Oldsmobile must successfully pass this test before it is finally approved by the inspectors.

For the first time the department of health of Spain has nominated three women doctors to take charge of "cure" stations.

STUDEBAKER

THE GREAT INDEPENDENT

You are interested in The Dictator's records of mile-a-minute speed for 24 hours, because:

When the Studebaker Dictator, running under the supervision of the American Automobile Association, established 11 new records for stock cars listing under $1400, it proved that:

...you get the highest quality of steel and other materials in a Dictator
...you get marvelous precision manufacture in a Dictator
...you get the most painstaking and expert workmanship in a Dictator
...you get brilliant but sound design in a Dictator
...you get vast excess power in a Dictator

And the above records prove that these features have been so combined that The Dictator will give you:

...thrilling performance
...long life
...economical operation

So well built is the Studebaker Dictator that every car may be driven 40 miles per hour from the day you buy it new! After the first thousand miles the motor oil need be changed only at 2,500-mile intervals. The chassis need be lubricated only at 2,500-mile intervals. Get behind the wheel of a Dictator today—drive it an hour and you'll know you have found the world's greatest motor car value. And back of every car is 75 years of honest manufacturing and selling.

$200 worth of extra equipment

The Dictator's low price includes more than $200 worth of extra equipment without extra cost: Front and rear bumpers; shock absorbers; engine thermometer and hydrostatic gasoline gauge on the dash; coincidental lock (ignition and steering); 6-wheel brakes; full-size balloon tires; no-draft, rainproof ventilating windshield; oil filter; automatic windshield cleaner; rear-vision mirror; rear traffic signal light; cowl lights; sidemounts; cantilever two-beam acorn headlights, controlled from steering wheel.

Drive a PAIGE
Before You Buy

The performance of the 208,000 Paige-built cars in service today gives evidence of the dependableness and long life of these sixes and eights.

Their attractive appearance and their comfort are evident. So also is their substantial value.

But we urge you to drive one. We want you to appreciate its liveliness in traffic or on the open road.

You will find it pleasant and restful to drive any Paige—from the six at less than a thousand dollars, to the big eight. Their power, acceleration and quick obedience to your wishes will make your drive truly enjoyable.

Your dealer will gladly place any car at your disposal. There are twenty body types, on four chassis, in sixes and eights, ranging from $995 to $2665, f. o. b. Detroit.

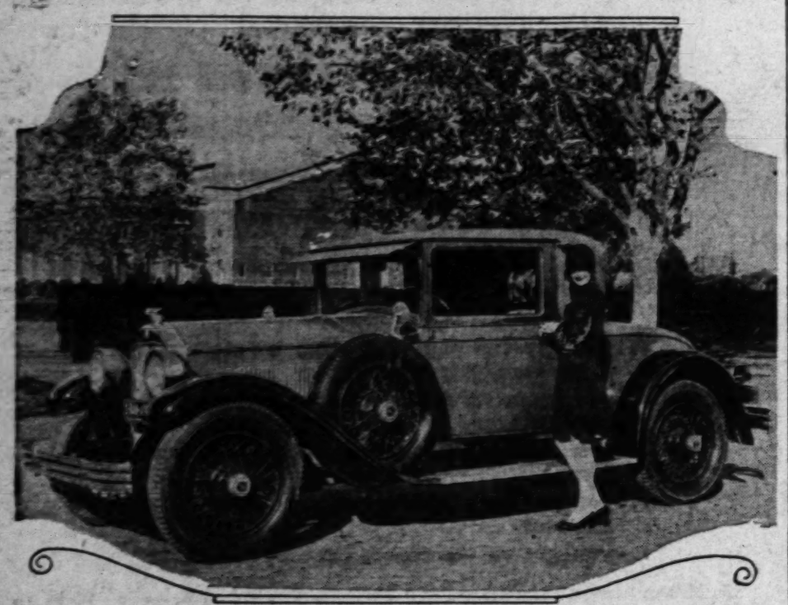
Car's Brown Color Scheme Fits Autumn Tones



Miss Frances Dade and the master six country club coupe, one of the most popular models in the Buick special autumn showing.

BEAUTY OF AUTO HAS INFLUENCE

Refinements Take Place in Motor Car; Changes Seen in Fall Showing

That refinements and beauty today have definitely taken their place in the motor car as a more important factor than ever before is emphasized in the special autumn showing of Buick models which began yesterday at the Howard Automobile Company of Los Angeles to continue throughout this week with the immense and crowded showroom open until 11 o'clock each night. In this special showing, which is in connection with a Buick salon of similar nature being held in every Buick showroom throughout the country, there are sixteen models on display, all with special wire wheel and advanced style equipment.

The autumn showing also is something of a Buick jubilee following the largest sales volume that ever greeted new models. Since the introduction of the Buick for 1928 last July the Howard organization has been reaching new peaks in sales. The October registration lists just completed by Motor-Fax again show Buick at the top of the column in six-cylinder sales in Southern California, Los Angeles county and the city. This is a position that has been held by Buick, with very few interruptions, since November, 1925.

"We are very happy to join with all the other Buick dealers of the country in holding this special Buick showing," said Harold W. Tuttle, assistant general manager of the Howard Automobile Company of Los Angeles. "When the new models were introduced last July the general comment was, 'What can Buick do now to make a finer appearing car?' The answer is in the display we are now making, each of these models having been given the special equipment which already has increased Buick popularity to a marked degree."

One of the most attractive of the entire line, judging from the attention it attracts, is the country club coupe. This car was praised by Francis Dade, prominent in films, when she visited the special showing and was given the privilege of driving the car.

"With America leading the world in living standards we have carried the desire for better things into almost every phase of our lives," said Tuttle. "America dresses better than any other nation in the world, we maintain more comfortable and luxurious standards in our homes and we demand that our motor transportation not only transport us with unbroken service, but that the cars carry out the ideas of beauty.

"Time was, not so long ago, that it was sufficient if the motor car ran. Those were in the days of engineering development. Then came the Fisher body engineers with new ideas of comfort and beauty. Immense production enabled these bodies to bring a new luxury to a price class far below that of the earlier days when the enclosed types were few and laboriously made. The American dollar buys more motor car today than ever before with many times the comfort and luxury and appearance."

Machine Earns Praise Carrying Extra Baggage

A letter recently received by the W. P. Herbert Company, local Chandler representatives, told of a trip made by Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Williams and family from Ohio to Alhambra with an excess load of baggage strapped on the side of their Chandler sedan.

Their present Chandler being the third of that kind that they have owned, the Williamses are boosters and told officials of the W. P. Herbert Company that since this trip to their new home in Alhambra from the East they cannot praise the Chandler too highly since, using Mr. Williams's own words, "They have no equal in power, economy and durability."

On the Williamses' trip of 2500 miles they averaged better than fifteen miles per gallon of gasoline and during the trip it was not necessary to add any oil to the motor, but they changed the oil three times on the way. The car, besides carrying four passengers, carried 800 pounds of excess baggage, which included a tent, metal beds, two large cupboards and a large trunk on the rear.

Comfort with MARTIN SHOCKABSORBERS

"Works like your Clutch"

SHOCK CONTROL which makes long drives a pleasure . . . which smooths out the roughest road . . . which takes the "buck" out of "Rough Riding" cars . . . providing real riding comfort under every road condition . . . that's what Martin Shock Absorbers give you.

Martins apply the Multiple Disc Clutch principle to shock control. They are really two shock absorbers in one . . . working continually in a bath of oil. One action absorbs the smaller jolts and waves in the road while the other action smothers the big bumps and chuck holes.

DEALERS HOLD MEETING

More than 250 Southern California Oakland and Pontiac dealers and salesmen gathered in the Reeve Gartzmann, Inc., salesroom in this city Monday night to listen to L. M. Dreves, Pacific Coast supervisor of sales for the Oakland Motor Car Company, outline the huge expansion program now in progress at the Oakland-Pontiac factories and describe plans whereby provision will be made for the volume of sales, which the rapidly growing Oakland-Pontiac business indicates for 1928.

The big Los Angeles meeting marked the close of a series of highly successful and enthusiastic dealer conferences held by Mr. Dreves with dealers, associate dealers and salesmen in San Francisco, Sacramento, Fresno, Portland, Seattle, Spokane and Tucson. Following the local gathering Mr. Dreves departed on an eastern trip, which will take him to factory headquarters at Pontiac, Mich.

"Last month was one of the greatest in the history of the Oakland Motor Car Company all over the United States," the sales supervisor told his hearers. "If we could have secured the cars from the factory this volume would have been immeasurable better, and it is to care for this serious shortage in cars that the big expansion program has been instituted."

Mr. Dreves especially congratulated the Reeve Gartzmann organization on their record hung up for October with a total of 568 Oaklands and Pontiacs sold—the greatest single month in the firm's history.

Stressing the desire of General Motors to at all times co-operate with its dealer organizations on an intimate, friendly basis, the speaker opined that "perhaps no other producing organization in the automotive field takes the interest in its dealers that is consistently evidenced by General Motors."

"We are constantly doing whatever possible to break down whatever sales resistance you may discover," he said. "I believe this is most strikingly exemplified in the case of Pontiac, which, since its introduction only a short time ago, has enjoyed unprecedented success, due, for the most part, to intelligent co-operation between General Motors and the dealer organizations.

"The aggregate of Oakland and Pontiac six sales during the first nine months of the year was 156,258 units, as compared with 111,821 for the corresponding months of 1926. The gain of 44,437 sales during this period is an increase of 39.7 per cent, yet this includes but a very small portion of the period since the announcement of the new Oakland All-American six with its sensational improvements, and paints a most satisfactory picture for future business."

The Los Angeles meeting was opened by G. Ray Jones, district field representative, after which the General Motors "Proving Ground" motion picture was shown. Talks were also made by Reeve Gartzmann and H. E. Franklin, general manager of the Gartzmann organization.

Care Needed in Repair of Car

Great care is necessary in making repairs to automobiles, if the work is to give real satisfaction. This care cannot be given a job if work is rushed or if proper facilities are not at hand, declares Stephen S. Nerney, Lincoln dealer. Mr. Nerney says he insists upon painstaking work and stresses neatness.

"Our repair department is a model of neatness," said Mr. Nerney. "We learned long ago that a shop all cluttered up with tools and parts will not turn out as good work as the place where cleanliness and neatness prevail. Our mechanics are highly trained men and we offer a cash prize frequently for the neatest repair stall. The result is that everything is kept spick and span, every tool is in its place and workmen do not lose any time hunting for this or that wrench or other tool. Also cars being repaired do not get smudged up with grease or dirt. We can work on forty-five cars at one time and the service department is open twenty-four hours daily."

SAN DIMAS OPEN

The filling of the approaches to the San Dimas dam drain on Bonita avenue between San Dimas and La Verne has been completed and the road is now open to travel. This section should be in very good condition, although when it rains the approaches are made very slippery and rough, reports the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Still photographs, of course! This one was taken while Donald Crisp was filming "Dress Parade," a story of the military academy starring William Boyd with a Flying Cloud roadster. The picture opened at the Boulevard Theater, Armistice Day.

OLD LANDMARKS GIVE SAN DIEGO INTEREST

"San Diego's 'Old Town' is extremely interesting," says Robert S. Breyer, vice-president and general manager of the Troy Motor Sales Company, Nash distributor, "for here is located the old Estudillo House, built in 1825, which has become famous as Ramona's Marriage Place.

"In the little square in front of this building are three interesting bronze markers, two mounted on large boulders, and the third on the concrete base mounting of an old cannon. This latter marking informs the traveler that the cannon is known as 'El Capitan' and was cast in Manila in 1783, being brought to San Diego in 1800. It was captured by Commodore Robert Stockton in 1846 when the Americans occupied San Diego."

Car Covers Long Mileage in Four Days

Three thousand and sixty-five miles in four days' elapsed time. That was the time made by W. G. Van Schaick and Allen Smith in a run from Duluth to Los Angeles in a new Hudson coach. The run as reported by the Walter M. Murphy Motors Company, Hudson and Essex distributors for Southern California, was one of remarkable speed and economy.

In telling the Murphy Company about the run, Mr. Van Schaick said: "We left Duluth Monday morning at 11 o'clock and arrived in Los Angeles Friday morning at 10:30, four days' elapsed time almost to the minute. We took the Jefferson Highway through Des Moines to Kansas City, then on through Oklahoma City, Albuquerque, Needles and on into Los Angeles.

"For the most part the roads were in excellent condition, rough in spots but very little sand. However, those that followed us did not have such good fortune, for we ran just ahead of a storm for a day and a half.

"We noticed a very peculiar thing about the varying price of gasoline during the trip. In Des Moines, which is a considerable distance from any oil field, gasoline was only 9.9 cents a gallon. In Kansas City it was 13 cents, and as we progressed nearer to the sources of gasoline production the price gradually was higher. At Oklahoma City it was 15½ cents, and in California 20½ cents. This is just another one of the things that the average motorist can't understand.

"During the run of 3065 miles we used 159 gallons of gasoline, for an average of 19.25 miles per gallon. We changed oil at Albuquerque and added two additional quarts."

Motor Makes Screen Debut

Making its bow in the motion-picture world the new Reo Flying Cloud has a prominent part in "Dress Parade," a story of West Point, which is showing at the Boulevard Theater until Friday.

William Boyd, as Vic Donovan, wins the Bergen county athletic meet and for his trouble is presented with a Reo Flying Cloud roadster. He feels pretty chesty and when he finally becomes a plebe, or freshman, at West Point, he cannot forget that he is important.

The rest of the cadets are not impressed, however, and even the Flying Cloud roadster can't seem to win him the attention of the beautiful girl with whom he has fallen in love.

But it all comes out all right in the end, and although the story doesn't say so, it is only reasonable to suppose that the hero and heroine went on their honeymoon in a "Cloud."

In "shooting" "Dress Parade," Donald Crisp took most of the exterior scenes at West Point and borrowed a Flying Cloud roadster from a New York dealer. When the company returned to California there were some other scenes to be taken in which the car figured, and the property department was assigned to dig up an exact duplicate of the roadster which was used in the East. The Reo Motor Car Company of California had such a car in stock, and it was used.

FURNITURE FACTORY NOW MAKES BODIES

"No automobile body manufacturer in America has a more inspiring history than the Seaman Body Corporation of Milwaukee, exclusive builders of Nash inclosed bodies and owned in half by the Nash Motors Company," states Robert S. Breyer, vice-president and general manager of the Troy Motor Sales Company, Nash distributor. "Back beyond the memory of the present generation—over seventy-eight years ago—the house of Seaman was founded.

"In the days prior to the Civil War A. D. Seaman, grandfather of the present heads of the business, engaged in the building of fine furniture. In later years, as the automobile industry grew to major importance and the demand arose for automobile bodies that would worthily represent the woodworking art, Seaman turned its specialized ability to this field. Today the immense Seaman shops are entirely utilized by Nash inclosed body production."

SANTA ANA AGENT NAMED

Announcement was made last week by the W. P. Herbert Company, Chandler distributor for Southern California, of the appointment of the Chandler Sales and Service as Chandler representative for Santa Ana.

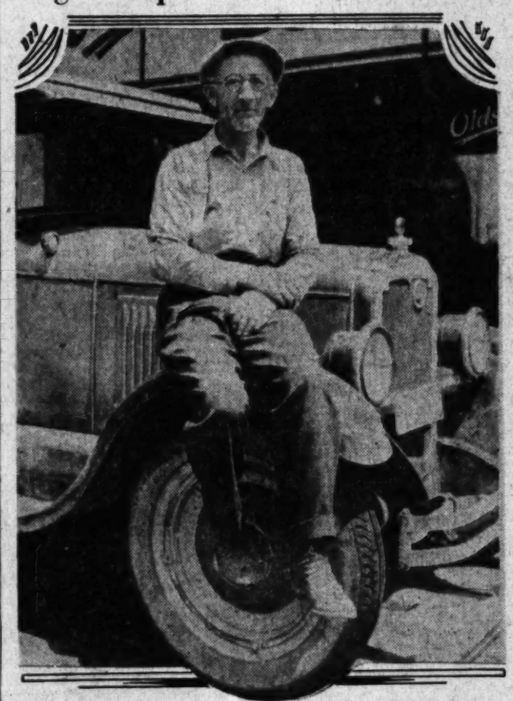
LETTER PRAISES AUTOMOBILE

Long Trip Test for Machine



A. W. Kearns With Oldsmobile

The Oldsmobile above was driven by Mr. Kearns over a journey of 7019 miles, its performance eliciting a letter of praise to the agent for the car.

L. A. JACKSON, proprietor of L. A. Jackson, Inc., South Figueroa Oldsmobile dealer, is in receipt of an unsolicited letter from A. W. Kearns of this city giving details of an Oldsmobile performance turned in on a trip which recently covered fourteen States and the Province of Canada.

The Oldsmobile, the writer explained, was purchased from the Jackson organization this summer and shortly afterward started on a long journey.

"On this trip I traveled 7019 miles, with driving conditions in some cases extremely bad," Mr. Kearns related. "At one place in Kansas I had to drive through deep mud where cars were stalled and unable to move all along the road. I put a chain on one of my rear wheels and came through without being stuck a single time.

"I did not spend a single dollar for mechanical repairs. Neither the brakes nor the carburetor needed adjustment on the entire trip. In fact the car was not touched by a mechanic during the entire 7019 miles. Upon my return the motor ran smoothly and quietly and was apparently in condition to repeat the trip. The car never boiled at any time and negotiated every mountain grade in a way that surprised me."

NEW LONG BEACH AGENCY

The W. P. Herbert Company, Chandler distributor for Southern California, announces the appointment of the Long Beach Chandler Company as representative for the Chandler in the city of Long Beach. F. E. Atwood is the owner of this new agency and, although he has not been connected with the automotive business in California, he is well acquainted with the industry, since last year he was distributor for a prominent make in Florida, and before that had several used-car stores in the southeastern State.

Beery Makes Films While on Plane Trip

To prove that he can take movies, as well as be taken in them, Beery photographed highlights of the interesting cross-country plane trek with one of the new "personal portables" of the movie camera world, when he recently traveled as a guest of Jack Maddux in the second of the planes installed by Maddux in his air line service here. This was when the plane was being brought here from the East. Raymond Hatton was also a guest.

"Los Angeles' film colony is becoming more and more every day, in so far as the stars are concerned, thoroughly Lincolnized."

This was the remark made by Jack Maddux, local Lincoln representative, in commenting on the fact that Noah Beery has just taken delivery on a new Lincoln brougham.

"It makes it 100 per cent as far as the Beerys are concerned," said Maddux, "for Wallace Beery has been a Lincoln owner for some time, as has his comrade in film fun, Raymond Hatton."

The road from San Miguel to Parkfield via Vineyard Canyon is very badly cut up, reports the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

AIRPLANES ON DISPLAY TODAY

Different Types of Motors Feature in Show

Clover Field Exhibit Has Many Makes

Instruments of Air Also to be on View

The airplane show being held today in connection with the aviation meet at Clover Field includes nearly every type of modern commercial airplane, as well as the different types and makes of engines. The show will be held on the ground at Clover Field and will be open all day.

THREE ENGINES

Outstanding among the exhibits is the giant three-engined Fokker that Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith plans to fly in a dash across the Pacific to Australia. Other three-engined airplanes include the Ford and Bach air yachts. In contrast will be shown the small sport-model airplanes carrying one passenger, that have a wing spread of fourteen feet.

The different makes that will be exhibited include Boeing, Ryan, Fokker, Curtiss, Martin, Lockheed, Waco, Travelair, Swallow, Brown-Mercury, International, Stearman, Laird, Kinner, Standard and Eaglerock.

The engine display will show all types of water and air-cooled engines of both the in-line and rotary design.

VARIED INSTRUMENTS

Among the instruments will be seen drift meters, altitude meters, air-speed indicators and barographs. The auxiliary apparatus that will be displayed includes parachutes, lighting equipment and emergency night-landing flares.

The meet is being held under the auspices of the Southern California chapter of the National Aeronautic Association.

Plane Aid to Business Man on Long Trips

Vernon Edler, president of the Vernon Edler Corporation, specialist in the installation of auto laundries, finds business so rushing in this line of work due to large installations being made in Los Angeles, San Diego and San Francisco, that his time is decidedly limited.

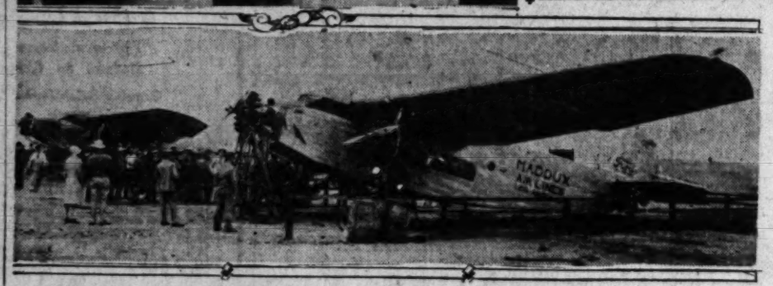
With his installation in San Diego it was possible to take the Ford airplane operated by the Maddux Air Line, leave his office at 9 a.m. and return at 4 p.m., requiring no more traveling time than to make the trip to Pomona and back by automobile.

Mr. Edler is very enthusiastic over the service offered by the air line. "To be able to look down at the highway and see the automobiles in great numbers speeding along, makes one glad to feel they were in the air floating along high over traffic with no turns, bridge crossings or other drivers to worry about."

SNOWS IN HIGHER SPOTS CLOSE ROADS

Since the first storms have come, the Automobile Club of Southern California is warning its members that they should obtain the latest road information before attempting trips into the high mountains. There are times when the higher passes are closed by snow and in mountain traveling during the winter time it is always advisable for motorists to be equipped with skid chains.

Must Be Inside Pullman Car



But looks are deceiving. The top view is of the interior of the passenger cabin of the new Maddux Ford-Stout twelve-passenger, trimotored plane, showing how the plane, having lengthwise seats, may be transformed into a regular Pullman with berths for sleeping. The plane contains electric lights, running water, lavatory and other parlor-car conveniences. Below are the "Sisters of the Sky"—the two giant trimotored all-metal passenger cabin planes of the Maddux Air Lines, Inc., as they appeared when photographed together for the first time yesterday at Rogers Airport. The plane nearest the camera is the second of the Maddux fleet which arrived late last week and will be put into commission today on the Los Angeles-to-San Diego daily round-trip, seventy minutes each way. The ship in the background is plane No. 1 now being overhauled and groomed for the launching of the complete San Francisco-to-El Paso passenger line.

Stutz Coupe New Arrival in Los Angeles

Extremely smart, beautifully finished and most luxuriously appointed, a new Stutz vertical-eight Victoria coupe has just arrived here and is being displayed by Marshall & Clampett, Stutz distributors. It is a new type car of many features, according to F. W. Clampett. It has a capacity of four passengers and ideal for women motorists.

"The Victoria coupe is finished in a lovely shade of tan, with black fenders and vermillion wire wheels," said Mr. Clampett. "Two spare wheels are mounted in the front-fender wells, adding to its smart lines. These spare wheels are held by gleaming metal braces that give a note of brightness to the sides.

NEW TRUCK DUMP BODY ARRIVES HERE

Of interest to road builders and dump-truck contractors is the announcement made by J. A. Cassidy, sales manager of the truck division of Albertson Motors, Inc., Graham Brothers and Dodge Brothers dealers here, of the arrival here of what is known as the Anthony roller rocker body for use on the Graham Brothers "G Boy" one-ton dump truck. The operation of the new dump body is entirely automatic and follows a new principle in dump-truck construction, according to Mr. Cassidy. Heretofore, he declared, most of the load on dump trucks has been carried on the rear axle. With the new mechanism it is more evenly distributed. The new body, while not made by Dodge Brothers, is an approved accessory, its efficiency having been proved.

LANDING MOST DIFFICULT MANEUVER WITH PLANE

BY FRANK J. CARMODY

Standing a plane on its nose or tail, or doing some other breath-taking acrobatic trick, may look like the apex of flying skill. It is not, however. One of the apparently simplest operations of the good pilot really is one of the most difficult. Briefly, it is that of landing the plane safely.

For, as one of the most dexterous of the Army pilots puts it, paraphrasing a once popular song:

"If you can't land 'em as they should be landed, then you'd better not fly them at all."

He is right. A plane almost will pull itself off the ground if the throttle is opened, but the same simple gesture will not bring it back to earth in anything like the manner its occupants would like. That is, safely. In the Army Air Service flying schools the instruction in landings is one of the most rigorous parts of the difficult course. After learning the other maneuvers, the student is called upon to make landings by the score. Time after time, he brings a plane down until he assumes that if it is true that "practice makes perfect," he has reached perfection. But, invariably, he finds still more practice necessary.

"Landing speed," a prominent item in the performance of any plane, has been given considerable attention by airplane manufacturers during recent years and is becoming still more important now that the commercial plane is being more widely used and developed. According to the performance specifications of several makers, their products today may be "set down" at speeds as low as twenty-five or thirty miles an hour, which is quite in contrast with the landing speeds of military and racing ships. The latter one running from fifty to around seventy-five miles an hour when their landing gears touch the earth.

From this it may be judged that the landing speed—and in a sense, landing ease — of a plane depends largely upon its design. In general, a slow flying ship is slow in landing. The fast craft comes down at break-neck speed, with the skill of the pilot a strong safeguard against untoward incident.

The shape and size of the wings and the load imposed upon them are the chief factors governing the pace at which a plane descends. The comparatively flat, small wings of the pursuit, attack or race plane with less lifting power and a proportionately heavier load, must have high momentum if it is to be stable when it comes down. That the fast ship should carry a heavier load per square foot of wing surface may seem surprising. It is due to the fact that the wings must be as small as possible for performance, while in the case of the commercial ship they must be as large as possible for reliability. For instance, the wings of the tiny Italian racer that won the Schneider cup races two years ago carried a load of twenty-five pounds per square foot—probably a record—while those of the giant Curtiss Condor, the Army's largest bomber, have imposed upon them a load of only 10.9 pounds per square foot But, while the Condor's weight, loaded, is 16,300 pounds, its wing area is 1498 square feet. Incidentally, although its peculiar design stands it apart in performance from other airplanes, the huge bomber has a landing speed of fifty-six miles per hour.

The wings of the commercial aircraft are not small and flat, however. They are large and their upper surface, or surfaces, are convex-shaped to impart the greatest possible amount of lift. Varying, of course, with the type of service for which they were designed, wing loads are proportionately low. For instance, one plane quite popular in sightseeing and taxi work, although by no means a fast traveler may be landed at thirty-two miles an hour. Its top speed is ninety-five miles per hour. The wing load in this plane is but 4.3 pounds per square foot. Another plane for which a landing speed of twenty-five miles is claimed carries a load of 4.45 pounds.

Considering Its High Resale Value

The* PONTIAC SIX *Actually Costs You Less To Own and Drive

Even if the Pontiac Six did not command the high resale prices that it does, it would still enjoy the reputation of being a "wonderful buy"—

—for it is the only car combining the advantages of superior six-cylinder performance and the luxuries of a Fisher body at a price of $745.

But with a high resale price which reduces the net cost of ownership, a Pontiac Six is actually more economical to own and drive.

This is a direct result of definite planning on the part of General Motors and Oakland engineers. From the very start they set out to design a low-priced six that would win approval on the sound principles of genuine, long-lived, inexpensive owner satisfaction.

That is why the severest usage affects the Pontiac Six so slightly—why used car buyers are willing to pay more for it when the original owner is ready to replace it—why Pontiac owners benefit by this condition and enjoy true six-cylinder luxury at a cost that defies comparison! Come in—get a ride—and let us give you the facts!

New lower prices on all body types (Effective July 15th): Coupe, $745; Sport Roadster, $745; Sport Cabriolet, $795; Landau Sedan, $845; De Luxe Landau Sedan, $925. The New Oakland All-American Six, $1045 to $1265. All prices at factory. Delivered prices include minimum handling charges. Easy to pay on the General Motors Time Payment Plan.

OWNER CAN DRIVE NEW AUTO FAST

Breaking-in Period Gone, Says Report Regarding Latest Models

The slow-driving ban on new Studebaker automobiles has been definitely removed, and the owner of a new Studebaker is now relieved of the breaking-in process, according to announcement made by officials of the Paul G. Hoffman Company. Studebakers may now be driven at any speed up to forty miles per hour from the moment they leave the factory, and they can be driven at this speed without the slightest danger to the motor or the car. After the first 500 miles, which are easily passed at the new limit, the car will deliver smooth, comfortable-a-minute speeds, some models attaining as high as eighty miles per hour with ease.

The new speed limit for the breaking-in period has been made possible by the precision standards employed by the Studebaker Corporation in the manufacture of the cars, and by a final dynamometer run-in which each car is given as it leaves the assembly line. Each car, before it goes to the shipping department, is given a thorough breaking-in test by experts, who check every detail on the ma-

The Studebaker Corporation has completed a huge new research laboratory for its staff of 250 trained engineers who make 550,000 laboratory tests annually, literally testing every material used in the manufacture of Studebaker automobiles. Under the direction of D. G. Roos and W. S. James, the corporation has assembled what is believed to be the most brilliant group of automotive engineers ever retained by one company.

During the process of manufacture, 4,000 inspections are made by 700 inspectors before the cars are passed for delivery. In 1610 mechanical operations on Studebaker automobiles a variance of not more than one one-hundredth of an inch is maintained, while 415 operations are held to a tolerance of one-half thousandth of an inch. Each new model, as it is built, is thoroughly tested on Studebaker's own proving ground, and every new model is subjected to every type of driving and road condition before it is approved.

Ushering the Cohens Into Los Angeles

When Bernard Gorcey and Ida Kramer, who created the roles of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Cohen in Ann Nichols's "Abbie's Irish Rose," arrived in Los Angeles this week to play the same parts in Paramount's screen production of the famous play, they were met by a Paige 6-65 sedan. They were "Paige-ed" through the courtesy of J. M. Sterling, at the request of C. H. Jennings, Paige dealer in New York, an acquaintance of Gorcey's. The Cohens played the same parts 2327 times.

LARGE GOTHAM DEALER CHANGES LINE OF CARS

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. (Exclusive) Creating a tremendous surprise along New York's automobile row, announcement was made today that C. H. Jennings, Inc., one of New York's largest retailing organizations, associated with one factory continuously since 1914, has become affiliated with the Paige-Detroit Company of New York.

The announcement that Mr. Jennings will henceforth serve exclusively as a Paige dealer in New York comes as a surprise due to his long association with the other company, first as New York sales representative, then as sales executive at Detroit, and since 1924 as the metropolitan dealer.

Since the organization of C. H. Jennings, Inc., in November, 1924, it grew to include a force of more than 650 persons, operating thirty-eight salesrooms and service stations with a sales volume in 1926 approximating $10,000,000.

Mr. Jennings's new connection with the Paige company brings to Paige one of the strongest retail selling organizations in the automotive field.

In associating himself with the three Graham Brothers and the Paige line, Mr. Jennings has resumed in a closer way a contact with the Grahams which he enjoyed when they manufactured Graham Brothers trucks and Dodge Brothers cars.

"In my association with Joe, Robert and Ray Graham in the past, I found the same honesty, sound business policy and remarkable organizing ability which gave John F. and Horace E. Dodge their wonderful reputation and established public confidence in the values they offered. The public knows the Graham standard of values," said Mr. Jennings in announcing his agency for Paige.

"I believe that their association with the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company will make Paige one of the key factors in the industry. I feel that it is certain that they will advance standards of value in their new field just as they have in other fields which they have entered.

"This is why I can turn with real enthusiasm to this new undertaking and at the same time carry with me the hearty support of my organization. Beyond question it enables C. H. Jennings, Inc., to continue its basic policy of offering outstanding motor-car values in this market."

The rise of Mr. Jennings to a position of power in the New York automotive field has marked him as one of the interesting personalities along New York's automobile row.

Throughout the development of the Jennings business there has been evidence of military precision and dispatch, which probably traces back directly to Mr. Jennings's career at West Point from which he was graduated in 1902, later completing a four-year mechanical engineering course at Lehigh University.

"Fundamental honesty, mechanical genius, ability to organize," Mr. Jennings counts them off, "these are the qualities upon which lasting successes are built. The convincing successes of the Graham brothers in other and varied lines of endeavor are indicative of the fact that these principles are now being applied to Paige under the Graham control and operation."

Through the affiliation with the Gotham dealer, Paige acquires full retail coverage of the metropolis and most of its prosperous suburbs, service stations and salesrooms, together with the immeasurable good will built up by Jennings's policies and activities in the last three years.

Car Tested in High Gear on Sixth Street

Practically any modern automobile will pull up a fairly steep hill in high gear if it gets a fast start, but it takes a car with power and flexibility to mount such grades at very slow speed, declares Clair R. Savage, general sales manager for J. W. Leavitt & Co., distributor of the Falcon-Knight six. He made this remark after Ted Barger had driven a Falcon-Knight sedan carrying an extra passenger, up the Sixth-street hill at the slow gait of eight miles an hour in high gear.

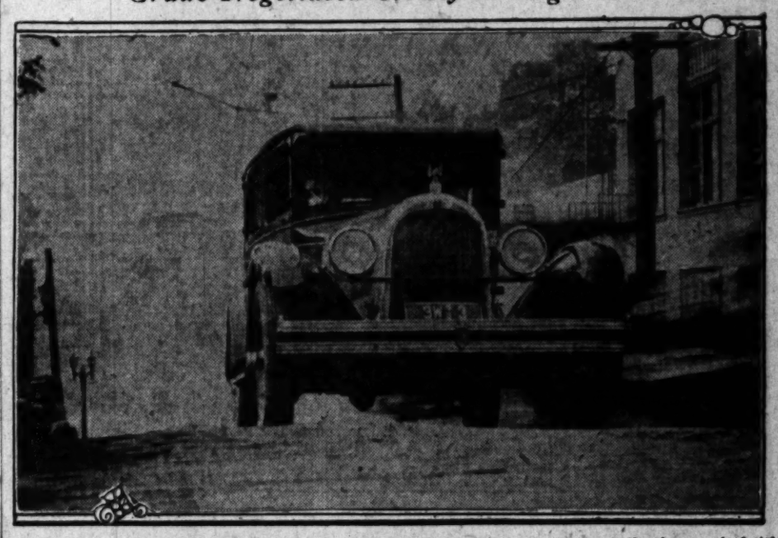
"When the Falcon-Knight started at the foot of the hill at Figueroa street it was going about six miles an hour in high gear. As the grade grew steeper where it nears the sharp turn this speed was increased to eight miles. This was continued until the car went over the top. The cars that caught up to him on the grade were compelled to shift into second," said Mr. Savage. "The Falcon-Knight was not prepared for the trial in any way. It was a car used in connection with our business every day.

"This car will accelerate from five to twenty-five miles an hour in less than eight seconds and is capable of a sustained speed of more than sixty miles an hour. It will turn in a radius of forty feet. In a recent speed test on a mile dirt track it traveled twenty-five miles in a little more than twenty-four minutes or at a rate of sixty-one and one-half miles per hour. This speed on the small track was made possible by its low center of weight and wonderful road stability."

Christmas Hint

Nearly everybody has a car, so when you give auto supplies not only do you give useful gifts that are lasting reminders of your thought, but also give pleasure to the entire family, advises the Western Auto Supply Company.

Grade Negotiated Slowly in High Gear



The Falcon-Knight six seen here as it climbs the steep Sixth-street hill in high gear at the slow speed of eight miles an hour.

WORK UNDER WAY ON THREE ROAD PROJECTS

Work is now well under way on three major road projects, under the direction of Los Angeles county officials, it was announced yesterday. The important highways included are Pomona Boulevard, Long Beach Boulevard and Mines avenue, an extension of Ninth street. Preliminary work preparatory to paving has been started on a fourth, the Riverside-Redondo Boulevard from Compton to Arlington.

Pomona Boulevard is being paved with cement concrete, thirty feet wide, from Covina Boulevard to East street, Puente, by the Griffith Company, Los Angeles contractors. The Long Beach Boulevard project will provide a seventy-foot roadway from the south limits of Lynwood to the flood control channel, a distance of 3.57 miles. Mines avenue is being paved with two strips of cement concrete, one on each side of the roadway, which is seventy feet wide between curbs.

ATLANTIC OPENED

The detour on Atlantic avenue between Slauson and Baker avenue, which has been in effect for some time, has now been eliminated and motorists traverse that section over a chucky macadam highway, according to the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

OLDSMOBILE SIX

PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

Readin', 'Ritin' and a Roadrunner

Motor transportation has helped make the school system what it is today. Above is shown a Moreland roadrunner, one of a fleet of sixteen Moreland which played their part in delivering six carloads of text-books to the schools of Los Angeles this fall.

TRUCKS SUPPLY SCHOOLS

It is with a wistful smile that old folks tell of their school days—the little red schoolhouse on the hill, the mellow bell that coaxed laggard feet, the grim-visaged teacher with an all-too-ready hickory stick, the well with its moss-covered bucket. Those are memories cherished along with a cracked old slate and McGuffey's First Reader.

Times have changed—so have schools. Contrast the little red schoolhouse with the comprehensive, efficient educational system of today. A finely architectured educational edifice, scientifically equipped, is found in nearly every community. Modern furnaces have replaced the old pot-bellied wood stove and sanitary fountains have supplanted the community drinking cup.

Motor transportation has been instrumental in this revolution of educational facilities. Where Jack and Jill once carried their books slung over the shoulder, the school tomes are now furnished by the State and are delivered by truck.

In Los Angeles, a fleet of sixteen Morelands is playing its part in the education of the younger generation. They operate between the warehouses of the Board of Education and the 400 elementary, special, and high schools of the city. Three large buildings house the supplies and appointments of the Los Angeles schools. The supply warehouse is a five story affair, with a three-story annex, containing everything that is used in a schoolroom from pins to desks. Six carloads of textbooks alone were delivered to the schools at the start of the year. These are supplied to the children by the State. The Morelands were kept mighty busy rushing the texts to the teachers in September, in order that the children might start at their tasks from the opening day of school. Often, the scholar enrollment is heavier than expected and rush orders are sent out for an additional supply of books. Moreland's speed truck—the Road Runner—fills the need on such occasions.

Delivery of texts is the smallest part of the work done by Board of Education trucks. Pencils, stationery, paper towels and other supplies must be delivered throughout the school year. There is a special vehicle for electrical repairing, another for decorating, another for plumbing.

Buenos Aires Event Won in Speedy Time

In a race held recently at Buenos Aires, a stock Moon six touring car demonstrated its speed and stamina by winning the event against a field of seven machines, according to a report just received here by Willard Barrows, Moon distributor for Southern California. It was driven by Furio Springolo and the race was for a distance of twenty-eight miles, it was stated. The Moon's time was 31m. 8 4-5s., it making an average speed of fifty-four miles an hour.

"Evidently the San Martin's Autodrome dirt track was not in very good shape, for this report states that five of the cars in the race were compelled to quit for various reasons," said Mr. Barrows. "Only one other machine besides the Moon finished.

"After the first few laps one car burned out a bearing and quit. Then others began to have various troubles. In the tenth lap the Moon six took the lead and was never headed.

BRITIAN'S EXPORT OF AUTOS GAINING

English automobiles apparently are gaining favor in other parts of the world, according to reports reaching the Automobile Club of Southern California. British figures for the first six months of 1927 for exported cars exceed those of 1926 by nearly 50 per cent. During the first half of 1927 the British exports to Australia were more than during the whole year of 1925.

De Vaux Now at Conference in New York

Norman De Vaux, active head of the Pacific Coast Star car factory, is now in New York attending the annual conference of executives of Durant Motors, manufacturers of Star cars, the Locomobile and Flint lines.

The New York gathering of Durant officials includes the heads of the Star plants located at Elizabeth, N. J.; Lansing, Mich.; Leaside, Ont., Can., and Oakland, Cal. W. C. Durant is the presiding officer of the combined Durant interests at the meeting in New York but the heads of the various factories will have an active part in the program of the business sessions.

During 1927 the Star car has made an excellent record throughout the Pacific Coast region and the report taken back to headquarters by Norman De Vaux is one of the best that has ever been carried back from the West. In some sections of the western territory the Star car has broken all previous sales records and established marks that will be held up before the representatives of other prosperous sections of the country.

While in New York De Vaux will take a hand in the shaping of the 1928 sales and production program of the Star organization. A great deal of thought will be given to the subject of advertising and De Vaux will set forth his suggestions for the national campaign of 1928 that promises to be the biggest advertising program ever launched by the Star or any of the Durant lines.

SPEED LIMIT FOR NORTH INCREASED

California motorists touring Oregon and Washington will not have to slow down as much as they did last year, according to the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California. Oregon has increased its speed limit in the open from thirty to thirty-five miles an hour. In Washington the previous limit of thirty miles has been raised to forty.

Sales Gain by Car Registered for October

Tom Johnson, Southern California zone manager for the Durant Motor Company of California, recently concluded a tour of the Southland, bringing an optimistic report of Star sales in this territory. An increase of 22 1-2 per cent in sales was registered over September in October.

"We are more than pleased with the Star record of October," said Johnson. "Star sales have been steadily increasing during the past two months, which is encouraging in view of the fact that the winter months are supposed to be the least productive of the year."

Johnson is announcing the signing of three new Star dealers in Southern California.

E. A. Scimears has taken the Star franchise in Inglewood. Scimears has been established in Inglewood for many years and should prove a valuable asset to the Durant organization, according to Johnson.

In Redondo, W. H. Masters and E. D. Perkins have opened up as Star dealers at 112 South Catalina. They are well known in the beach city as automobile service men. I. M. Purdy has taken over the dealership in Lancaster. Purdy for many years was a successful used car merchant in Los Angeles and his friends here will be pleased to learn of his new success.

Waterhouse & Holdredge, Pasadena Star dealers, have found business so good in that city that they have opened up a new salesroom in the center of the Crown City automobile row. They were formerly located at Lamanda Park.

Johnson reports that the Durant plan of operating a controlling office in each territory has met with great success. The increase in sales volume during the past two months is conclusive proof of this.

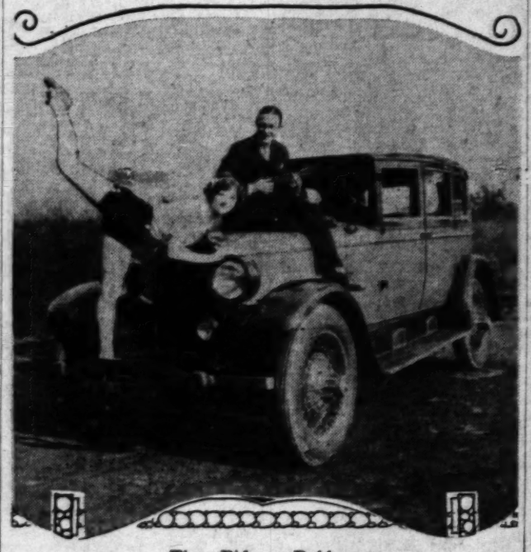
ACTORS TRAVEL BY MACHINE

Theater Jumps Made in Auto



They Ride on Rubber

The team of Hoey and Walker, playing at the Metropolitan this week, do all their traveling between show-houses in a Nash advanced six.

THE musical-comedy team of Hoey and Walker, playing at the Metropolitan this week, prefers travel by motor car over that by train to such an extent that they make all their jumps on the Fanchon and Marco circuit to the many West Coast theaters by motor car only, overcoming all objections of the producers by posting a $500 bond, which, it is stipulated, will become forfeit if they are late in arriving at any of their scheduled stands.

Despite uncertainties in the weather, Herbert Hoey and Doris Walker, have, since they have been traveling by motor car, never missed a performance, their Nash advanced six roadster, with 27,000 miles on the speedometer, never having occasioned them any mechanical delay, the only hold-ups on the road being for an occasional puncture. And, in view of the fact that the team of well-known entertainers has maintained regular railroad schedules for their jumps, the Nash, by its consistent performance, has endeared itself to those two sparkling artists

La Salle ownership and motoring satisfaction

La Salle is powered with the famous 90-degree, V-type, eight-cylinder engine, developed by Cadillac. Today there are more than 250,000 cars operating with this superb type of engine.

La Salle gives you performance, unattainable in a six, and unequaled, even, in any other eight except Cadillac because of the principle employed and the perfect balance of the engine.

La Salle is remarkably easy to steer and control. It responds instantly, even to the feminine hand, with only the slightest effort.

La Salle is graced with rare beauty in line and color—a style so fresh and fascinating that it has become the symbol of good taste.

La Salle is Cadillac-designed, and built in Cadillac plants by Cadillac craftsmen, which means quality, through and through, of the highest degree known to motordom.

A product of General Motors—an assurance of unmatched value made possible only through unequaled facilities and resources.

A complete line—a wide variety of Fisher and Fisher-Fleetwood bodies. Select the car that meets your needs. Drive it. Then ask yourself if there is any reason why you should be deprived of the satisfaction that La Salle ownership gives.

Many Fail to Understand Car Principle

While the fame of the Knight sleeve-valve engine for power, silent operation, efficiency and long life is world-wide, numbers of people do not understand its simple operation, declares L. J. McCracken of the Willys-Overland dealers' organization. When it is explained to the average person, he can readily understand why this engine has grown to be such a favorite, he stated.

"In all internal-combustion engines means must be provided for the entry and expulsion of gases," explained Mr. McCracken. "In Knight engines this is accomplished by means of ports in sliding sleeves. Each cylinder has two sliding sleeves, one inside the other. The outer sleeve bears against the cylinder wall while the piston works up and down inside the inner sleeve. Each sleeve moves on a film of oil.

"In each of these sleeves are rectangular openings called ports, through which the gases are introduced into and expelled from the cylinders. To allow the ports to coincide or open at the right time each sleeve is given an up-and-down motion by means of a short connecting rod actuated by the eccentric shaft which corresponds to the camshaft in the poppet-valve motor.

Four Cars of Same Make in One Family

"Four to 1" is apparently the slogan of the Hopkins family for that is the way they are equipped with Marmon eights. Right after C. N. Hopkins, Los Angeles oculist for over twenty-five years, purchased his Marmon eight collapsible coupe, his son, W. Charles Hopkins of the Trojan ticket, department, took a Marmon eight speedster, following which John Clayton Hopkins stepped in line for another collapsible coupe and then, when the family felt they were fairly well Marmonized, John M. Dickinson of Rockford, Ill., a cousin, wired that he was on the way out with his Marmon eight, and that's how come there are four Marmon eights in the family.

The father, who has owned some fourteen cars of various makes, says after studying the field carefully he selected the Marmon eight collapsible coupe as offering the greatest combination of the roadability, dependability and ease of riding necessary for his camping trips, with the ease of handling, economy and dash needed for the city traffic he fights every day.

EIGHT PER CENT PEOPLE BUY EIGHT-TENTHS CARS MADE

It is one of the American paradoxes that with only 8 per cent of the world's population the people of the United States absorb 80 per cent of the world's production of automobiles. This statement is made by Edward Ver Linden, president of the Peerless Motor Car Corporation, in a letter received here by Clair R. Savage, general sales manager for J. W. Leavitt & Co., distributor of Peerless cars.

"Mr. Ver Linden attributed this situation to two major factors," said Mr. Savage. One, he states, is the ability of American industry to perform miracles in producing a constantly improved product, and by mass production steadily decrease the cost of American motor cars. The other is that by improved processes and as a result of mass sales, to be able to pay high wages, thus adding to national prosperity and shortening the working hours which give the worker time to play and spend his money.

"He declares that European firms started making automobiles long before any American concern thought of it, but even with this start the foreigners have failed to materially increase the national prosperity of their native countries. As a result they have not the huge domestic market to support their industry.

PASS STILL CLEAR

No snow is on Snoqualmie Pass in Washington at the present time, but the road is muddy and chains are advisable, reports the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

A Powerful Speed Truck, $1595 here

The Moreland Road Runner, first of the 6-cylinder speed trucks, is Los Angeles-made—none of its purchase price is consumed by freight charges.

The Road Runner has a bigger motor than any other truck selling near its price. It hauls up to 2-ton payloads at 50 miles per hour.

IT IS STANDARD

Moreland is a standardized truck; parts are interchangeable. This is a distinct maintenance economy. The Moreland Road Runner is the ideal high-speed, low-cost motor truck.

Small corner posts on the sturdy and comfortable Road Runner cab permit maximum driving vision. This is just one of the numerous features pioneered by Moreland

OTHER CHASSIS

NEW TRUCK ANNOUNCED

ANNOUNCEMENT is being made today by C. W. de Lancey, local Fageol branch manager, with headquarters at the Fageol Motor Sales Company, of the new six-cylinder Fageol Flyer which, in the four-cylinder model, has achieved fame in the light truck, heavy-duty field. De Lancey has just returned from the big California plant in Oakland, where he made a thorough study of the new model.

Embodying the refinements of its four-cylinder predecessor and present side-partner, the Fageol Flyer six, has been produced, according to de Lancey, in response to the demand of hundreds of truck buyers for a truck the equal of the original Flyer but having the advantages of a six-cylinder power plant.

As in the four-cylinder model, the motor selected by the Fageol organization to power the new truck is made by the Waukesha Motors Company, and has the Ricardo head, which is claimed to add unusual advantages to the operating efficiency of both Fageol Flyer models.

Some of these advantages, as cited by de Lancey, are the truck's adaptability to all types of work, its flexible construction which permits maximum efficiency on all types of roads, and its ability to accept overloading without strain.

"The Fageol Flyer," said de Lancey yesterday, "was first presented to the truck-buying world in August, 1926. It excited unusual attention when, at that time, it made a splendid test run between Oakland and Los Angeles, covering the 411 miles over the treacherous Ridge Route in eleven hours and forty-four minutes' actual time and twelve hours and twenty-six minutes elapsed time, the average speed being 32.6 miles per hour. Ever since that startling introduction, the Fageol Flyer, as a four-cylinder job exclusively, has been piling up sales in this territory, but here, as elsewhere, we have experienced a demand for a similar truck with a six-cylinder motor. In the Fageol Flyer six, which is the natural result of that demand, all of the advantages of the Fageol Flyer four are to be found, together with the smoothness and flexibility peculiar to six-cylinder engines and embodied with particularly exceptional skill in the products of the Waukesha Motors Company."

Sale of Tires Gaining With Lowered Price

Crowds have been pouring into the local salesroom of the Coast Tire and Rubber Company during the past week, taking advantage of the lower prices on Coast Ranger tires which carry a guarantee of 12,000 miles. This gigantic sale of tires started last week and will continue for thirty days ending December 15, according to officials of the Oakland tire factory.

"We are swapping dollars with the motoring public for this limited period in order to acquaint as many people as possible with the remarkable values that are offered through our direct factory-to-consumer policy," said Louis B. Budd, vice-president of the California tire concern. "We also want to acquaint people with the famous Ranger tire which we think is one of the best built tires on the market carrying such a long-time guarantee.

"One feature which is especially attractive about the Ranger cord or balloon is the nonskid quality. It is next to impossible to slide or skid regardless of how wet or highway might be. With winter right on us and several months ahead which are certain to be rainy, those who seek safety will be doing the wise thing if they take advantage of this very unusual offer which we are making for such a short period of time.

"The every city where we have factory branches a continual string of people have been on hand daily to get in on this gigantic sale. The fact that we are giving a 12,000-mile guarantee with each and every Ranger tire sold makes the offer just that much more enticing," concluded Budd.

Squeak in Hood Stops

A squeaking hood may often be traced to a glazed hood lacing. A few drops of oil will soften the fabric and remedy this, advises the Western Auto Supply Company.

WORK STARTS ON AUTO HOME

Home for Parts Depot, Offices

WORK commenced last week at the northwest corner of Broadway and Slauson avenue on a handsome two-story concrete building for the Los Angeles zone office of the Chevrolet Motor Company. Besides housing the general offices and a huge parts depot to serve the big Chevrolet dealer organization in Southern California, the new Chevrolet headquarters will be specially equipped to carry on the extensive educational and promotion work that is part of the broad sales program which Chevrolet follows. A service school, with an ideal shop layout, equipped with the most modern tools, will be in constant session for educating Chevrolet dealers and service men in the most efficient repair methods. A Duco school, in which will be taught the method of applying the motor-car finish which today has replaced paint, will be another feature of the building. Conference rooms for the use of the sales-promotion department, and rooms to accommodate the new accounting schools which the Chevrolet Motor Company has just instituted, will also be provided.

According to George H. Willisee, Los Angeles zone manager for Chevrolet, the new building is interesting evidence of the extent to which the modern motor-car company goes in the effort to increase the efficiency of its entire organization in serving the public.

"One of the prime reasons for the new structure was to establish an adequate parts department to give quick service to our Southern California dealer organization," said Willisee yesterday. "The entire ground floor of the new building, measuring 112 by 125 feet, will be devoted to this purpose. A spur track on the Slauson frontage will facilitate receiving freight shipments.

"We have been conducting sales, service and Duco schools for some time, but the new building will enable us to concentrate all of our many branches of dealer educational work under one roof, including the new accounting schools which we will hold from time to time. The schools and general offices will be located on the second floor. Of course, the task of handling the routine of Chevrolet sales today is not a small one, for they will run in the neighborhood of 24,000 cars in Southern California this year, but our general offices will be ample to care for this.

"The building is designed to carry an added story when enlargement is necessary. The roof will be used for the storage of employees' cars.

"According to the John M. Cooper Company, who designed the building and are erecting it, February 11 will see it ready for our occupancy. Completed, it will represent an investment of approximately $150,000, and will be impressive evidence of the advance which Chevrolet has made to first place among motor-car manufacturers."

Plane School Plan in Brazil

There has been introduced in the Senate of the Brazilian State of Minas Geraes a bill to establish a State aviation school, according to advices received from the Rio office of the bureau by the automotive division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

The bill provides for its establishment in the city of Bello Horizonte and that it is to be under the directorship of the Board of Public Safety. The bill calls for a maximum expenditure of about $90,000, which sum is to be used for the purchase of property, buildings and machines.

Car Answers Demands in Price Class

That the Whippet which was introduced about sixteen months ago is regarded by automotive experts as the type of four-cylinder car that answers demands of owners in that price class, is the declaration of L. J. McCracken of the Willys-Overland dealers' organization. He points to the remarkable performance of the Whippet and the praise given it by 125,000 owners, to support his contentions.

"The Whippet is a perfected car of proven ability that has practically revolutionized the American light-car field," said Mr. McCracken. "With other manufacturers of cars in the Whippet class recognizing the advantages of Whippet construction, it is declared that any new cars introduced in that price range will embrace definite Whippet features. These are now regarded as essential in modern motor cars.

"These features include low center of gravity construction, four-wheel brakes, fuel and oil economy, force-feed lubrication, compact, powerful yet speedy engine, smartly designed bodies with roomy interiors and rugged chassis. The fuel economy of the Whippet has set a new standard for American motor cars while the demonstrations of power, speed and stamina have never been approached by any car in the Whippet's price range."

Luster Saved by Attention to Car Finish

The former policy of automobile owners in permitting their new car's finish to spend its life, then attempting to restore and revive lost luster with temporary polishes, is rapidly being replaced by prolonging the life of the beauty and luster of the original finish by regular attention.

In the past few years lacquer and duco finishes have become popular. Many manufacturers are using them exclusively for finishing and stations for refinishing in lacquer or duco are being established in cities all over the country. The reason for the extensive popularity of this finish has no doubt been due to the ease and speed with which it is applied and its durability.

"When first applied, the lacquer or duco finishes have practically no luster. Luster is obtained by rubbing with special abrasive compounds. This luster, however, is very short lived as particles of grit work into the pores of the finish, dulling the luster. If the owner of the lacquer or duco-finished car desires to maintain it in its highest degree of beauty, he must do one of two things. He must polish it frequently, or he can eliminate the bother and expense of doing this by having it polished," says Joseph Kreutzer, owner and operator of one of these stations.

What Do You Think of Lorelei?

Trixie Friganza portrays gay Mrs. Spoffard, mother of Henry.

The other member of the famous "team" is Alice White, who takes the part of Dorothy, Lorelei's friend and pal. This character, too, may be topic for debate—so strongly is the personality of the Follies girl established in the popular mind. —Photo by Richee.

It is Mr. Gus Eisman's desire to educate Lorelei, the way a young girl really should be educated—but from the appearance of Ford Sterling, who enacts the part, in this view it is quite evident that Lorelei saw some little trinket, probably in Tiffany's window, that she particularly needs.

"—I mean, you're so won-der-ful-l!" In her role of Lorelei, gold and jewel extractor de luxe, Ruth Taylor both woos and wins the man of her dreams—golden dreams—Henry Spoffard, the wealthy reformer, portrayed by Holmes Herbert. —Photo by Richee.

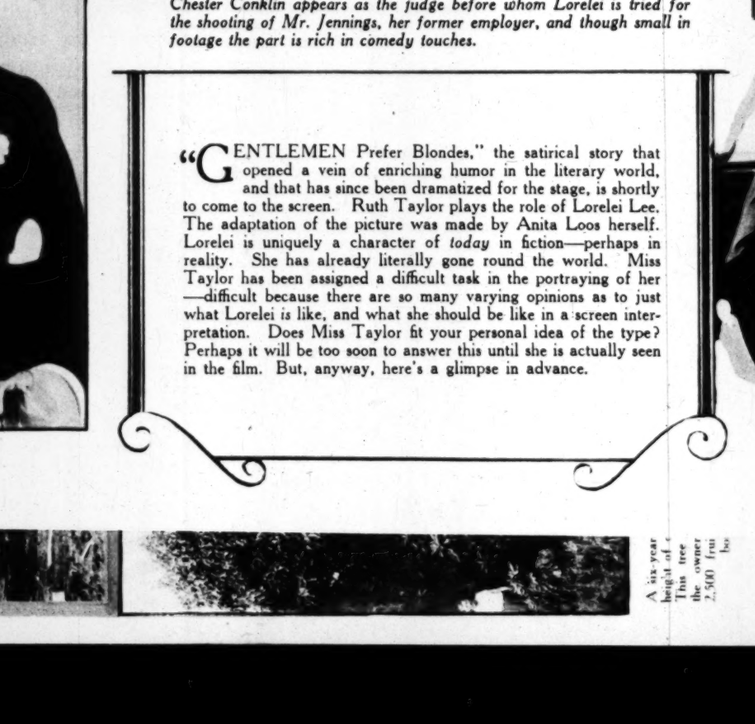
Lorelei's passage to Paris is considerably refreshed by her pursuit of Mr. Spoffard—and steamer-chair acquaintances are SO delightful.

The roles of Sir Francis and Lady Beekman are in the capable hands of Mack Swain and Emily Fitzroy, whose marital troubles are amusingly interpolated. —Photo by Richee.



Chester Conklin appears as the judge before whom Lorelei is tried for the shooting of Mr. Jennings, her former employer, and though small in footage the part is rich in comedy touches.

"GENTLEMEN Prefer Blondes," the satirical story that opened a vein of enriching humor in the literary world, and that has since been dramatized for the stage, is shortly to come to the screen. Ruth Taylor plays the role of Lorelei Lee. The adaptation of the picture was made by Anita Loos herself. Lorelei is uniquely a character of today in fiction—perhaps in reality. She has already literally gone round the world. Miss Taylor has been assigned a difficult task in the portraying of her—difficult because there are so many varying opinions as to just what Lorelei is like, and what she should be like in a screen interpretation. Does Miss Taylor fit your personal idea of the type? Perhaps it will be too soon to answer this until she is actually seen in the film. But, anyway, here's a glimpse in advance.

Sir Francis Beekman's experience with Lorelei terminates somewhat disastrously for the English lord, when, after an hour on deck, he "advances" her enough money to purchase his own wife's tiara.

SHADOWLAND

Spotlight shadows are these—caught from the stage sequence of Paramount's "Serenade." Silhouetted against the dancers is the figure of the orchestra leader, Adolphe Menjou, the picture's star, while the young lady on the wagon steps is Lina Basquette, former Follies dancer.

That delicate flashing line is also THE DANGER LINE

THE modern woman never neglects her teeth or gums. For she knows full well that beauty . . . and health, which is the foundation of beauty . . . cannot long survive if her teeth and gums receive improper care.

There is one place on your teeth where proper care can do more to prevent unsightly decay, inflamed gums, and to reduce the peril of Pyorrhea and loss of teeth, than any other. It is The Danger Line.

Look into your mirror and you will see that the gums thin out to a very fine, delicate flashing line where they join the teeth. Right at this union of the gums and teeth there are tiny V-shaped crevices, barely discernible to the eye. It is in these crevices that the acids form which are the cause of the most treacherous tooth decay and gum irritation.

The truth of these facts is borne out by the dental profession of America. Definite questions as to the cause of tooth and gum trouble were asked of 50,000 practicing dentists through a world-famous research institution. In replying—

95% agreed that mouth acids are the most frequent cause of decay and infected gums.

95% stated that the most treacherous decay and gum infection occur where teeth and gums meet—the place known as The Danger Line—especially at that part of The Danger Line between the teeth where a tooth-brush cannot reach.

85% stated that Milk of Magnesia is the best product to neutralize these acids.

These answers point out the safe and sure way to protect your teeth and gums. Use Squibb's Dental Cream. It contains more than fifty per cent Squibb's Milk of Magnesia in a most convenient and effective form to neutralize acids. Each time you use it, tiny particles of Milk of Magnesia are forced into every pit and crevice where acids form and remain to safeguard your teeth and gums.

Squibb's Dental Cream cleans beautifully. It relieves sensitive teeth and sore gums. It is safe for everyone.

Start now to protect your teeth and gums correctly. See your dentist regularly—and use Squibb's Dental Cream. 40c at all drug stores.

If all interviewing were like this, there would probably be a sudden departure of women journalists for foreign countries, where to interview a king would be to marry him. This is Marian Nixon's experience in "Meet the Prince." Glenn Tryon is the king, —what a king!

Sally Eilers carries on the tradition of the Salvation Army by gladdening the eye of anyone fortunate enough to see her. She has the leading role in Mack Sennett's screen classic, "The Romance of a Bathing Girl"—and following the completion of this will no doubt attain no little popularity.

Dr. Phil collects a bill and Sally washes the collection

"It's priceless, Sally," said Bee Westbrooke. "Where did you get it? I'm simply green with envy!"

"Phil has just brought an old antique-dealer through a long siege of pneumonia. The poor dear was so grateful that he gave Phil this old painting—the Museum people say it's a genuine early Bougereau. It was so dingy we could hardly see the colors until I'd washed it."

"Washed such a precious old thing! With soap and water!"

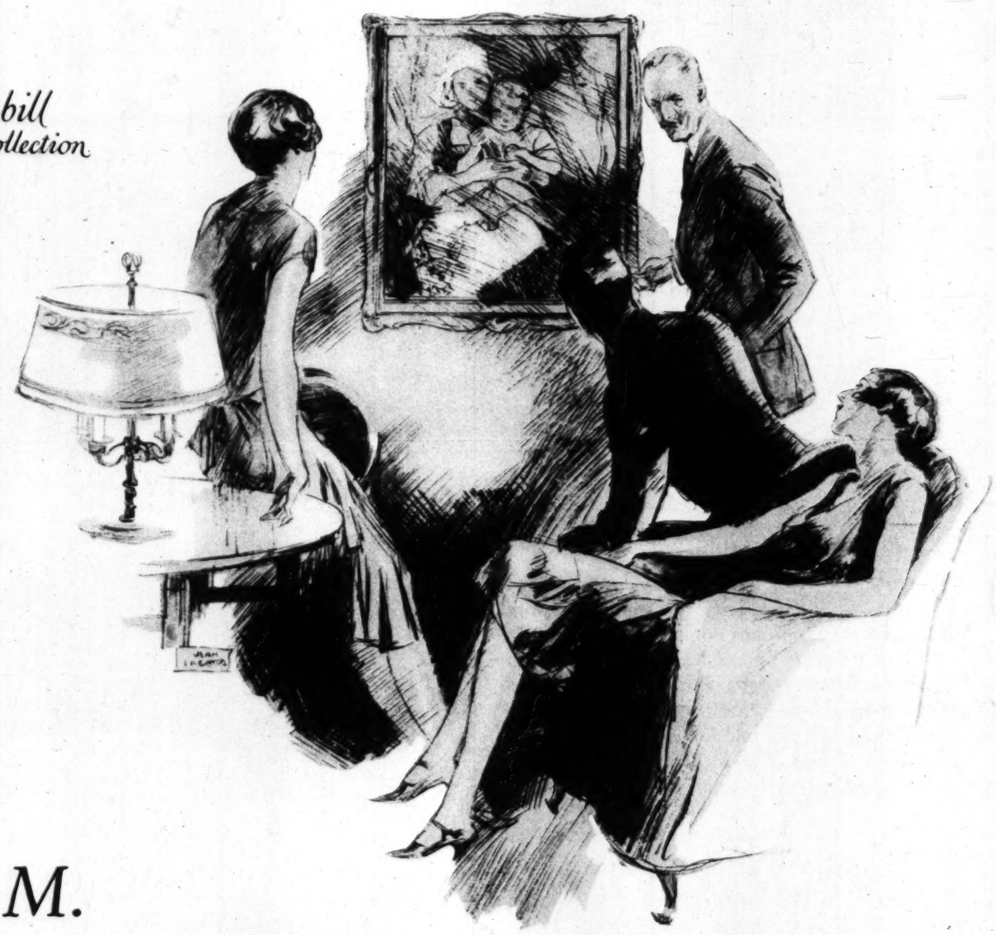
"Well, not with ordinary soap. I used Ivory, just as I do for my face. I've since learned that this is what most picture dealers use, too."



By 6 P.M. the beauty of your skin is smothering!

ALL day long, soot and grime from dust-filled city air rain down upon unprotected, sensitive complexions. When evening comes, every tiny pore is choked with dust and dirt, mixed with the natural oils of the skin.

And skin-beauty is soon smothered, robbed of its life and glowing charm—unless the face is perfectly cleansed; every night, of the day's accumulation of grime and soil

Not every woman knows what perfect skin-cleansing is. Some attempt to remove dirt from an oily skin with an oily "cleansing cream." Others daub their faces with mysterious lotions, notable chiefly for their perfume and extravagant price.

But, a vast and ever-increasing number of women know that perfect skin-cleansing means washing with warm water and pure soap. And millions of them choose Ivory as the purest soap they know.

Ivory has but one purpose—to cleanse safely. No soap, at any price, can do more than that for your skin. Washing with Ivory and warm water, followed by a cold rinse, and a touch of pure cold cream, if you like, offers your skin the most perfect cleansing that you can find.

And, of course, a really healthy skin is always a clean skin and usually a beautiful skin.

Ivory Flakes meets this important safety test:

Before you trust your costly fine fabrics to any soap in any form, a doubt naturally comes up in your mind: "Is this soap really safe?"

Ask yourself: "Would I be willing to use this soap on my face?"

A soap which is too strong for your face is naturally too strong for your delicate and costly garments. Ivory Flakes is simply Ivory Soap in flake form. Of course it fully meets this important safety test. For Ivory Soap — pure, mild, gentle, white—has protected the faces and hands of millions of women since 1879. Ivory Flakes offers you a real margin of safety for cleansing the very finest garments you own. Many women wash all their clothes and dishes with Ivory or Ivory Flakes, thus saving their hands and preventing redness and roughness.

When the jail's most beautiful murderess meets the jail's most stylish husband killer! Of course, you've guessed it by now, that this is a scene from the screen version of "Chicago," with Phyllis Haver as Roxie Hart and Julia Faye as her excited opponent.

"The Main Event," which William K. Howard is directing for de Mille, features one of the bloodiest ring fights filmed in many months. Charles Delaney appears to be getting the worst of it from Robert Armstrong, who will be remembered for his work as the "pug" in the original stage, "Is Zat So."

Jackie's a fighter now. "Buttons," young Coogan's most recent production, finds him a bell-boy on board ship, where he and Coy Watson, Jr., indulge in some rather heated arguments.

LET THE SPREAD BE THE KEY TO COLOR

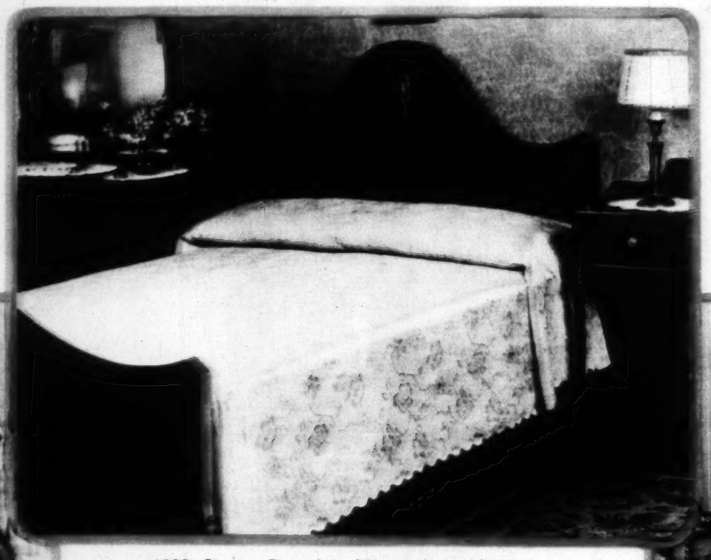
A BEDSPREAD can be just a thing to cover a bed. Or it can glorify the whole room and determine the dominant note of its color scheme.

Scranton Lustre Spreads are of the latter class for two definite reasons: 1, they are made in so many shades, colors, and designs that you are sure to find just the one for your room. And 2, they yield nothing of their dainty freshness to the harsh treatment of the wash tub or the sunlight.



Compare Scranton Lustre Spreads with the ordinary spreads. Notice the colors in the Scranton Spreads—then the workmanship. Feel them. Now you will know why the Scranton label is sewn on every Lustre Spread. See them at your favorite store.

Or mail the coupon for the booklet. It shows in color the many and varied designs from which to make your selection.

1900. Lustre Spread in blue, rose, gold, ivory, green or orchid. Brocaded pattern.

[Right] 3100. LustreSpread. Blue, rose, gold, orchid or green. Brocaded patterns.

All Scranton Spreads come in 72 in. and 90 in. widths by 108 ins. long. Also in bolster sets and by the yard to match.

In which our hero turns Romeo—but slips. There is much comedy suspense in these scenes.

GOLF and William Haines!

"Spring Fever" presents popular star in humorous role.

Below—Golf—and love—and Joan Crawford—and William Haines. Our hero again turns ardent lover.

Even a stock-room makes a good golf course, if you have an expert to teach you. Haines' restoration to favor occurs simultaneously with his showing the boss, George Fawcett, how to avoid slicing.

ENTER William Haines again. If you are a Haines' fan and enjoy golf, you'll naturally like "Spring Fever"—and even if you never drove a golf ball in your life you'll doubtless be amused by this comedy-drama.

"Spring Fever" was produced on a local stage about two years ago, with Robert Ames in the part Haines plays on the screen. As Haines portrays the role of Jack Kelly, boy golf wonder, he is a conceited "nut" whose opinion of himself is, "The Great I Am." This was true in the original stage version, to a certain extent, but the director has emphasized this point on the screen.

There is always a certain similarity to all Haines' pictures. He is introduced invariably as a character who views himself in the most favorable light, and this opinion holds until nearly the last reel. Then, of course, he becomes the meek little lamb who realizes he has been in the wrong and tries to square himself with the world in general.

Edward Sedgwick has treated "Spring Fever" with a lightness of touch that assures good entertainment. The tempo is generally rapid and one situation after another piles up for laughs. His direction has a quality that is particularly adapted to light action, and he has taken the plot, which, though slight, is thoroughly humorous in theme, and placed it in the most advantageous light.

Joan Crawford, opposite Haines, gives one of the best performances she has ever rendered. It is light and airy, and in the dramatic sequences she acquits herself admirably. If Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer would realize that as a comedienne they have a great bet in her she would register even better than she has in the past. As it is, her following will be augmented by her work in this production.

The remainder of the supporting cast is uniformly good. George K. Arthur, as Eustace Tewksbury, contributes, as usual, an outstanding bit of comedy, and Bert Woodruff, as Haines' father, is likewise excellent in a more serious type of role. George Fawcett has lost none of his charm as a comedian and Eileen Percy, Edward Earle, and Lee Moran do sincere work.

The story, in a few words, tells of a business man whose passion for golf leads him to excuse his shipping clerk for arriving at the office constantly late, because that particular individual teaches him a new stroke whereby he may improve his golf game. He is so pleased with his progress in score, made possible by this lad, that he rewards him with a two weeks' guest card at his golf club. And thereby hangs this tale, for Mister Shipping Clerk goes there for his vacation.

Ralph Spence's titles aid considerably in bolstering up the story, and while trite here and there the majority are very cleverly written. Albert Lewin and Frank Davis wrote the continuity from Vincent Lawrence's stage play, and from their script Edward Sedgwick has turned out a smoothly directed picture.—Whitney Williams.

One cannot enter the new John C. Fremont Branch Library without noticing the exquisite beauty of the chandeliers. They are of a design that is decidedly odd, yet one that blends perfectly with the beamed ceiling. These chandeliers were designed and made for M. L. Below—Something new in the way of art. Hal Roach has his cameraman take pictures of his comediennes in bathing suits—then gives the finished prints to an artist to clothe with a pen. How do you like this one of Dorothy Coburn?

Helene Costello's dressing table is enough to create that little bug of envy to rise in the heart of any girl. As you may see for yourself, its beauty is outstanding.

Gaiety - Sophistication - Romance!

THESE lovely perfumes by Houbigant present three highly individual conceptions of fragrance:

Quelques Fleurs, at the left, is a dancing sprite of a perfume—gay as a flower-filled breeze—whimsical, laughter-loving, irresistible! . . . In the centre is the little black shrine, lined with brilliant red, which holds the Buddha bottle with the perfume Subtilité. A sophisticated odeur—exotic and daring, is Subtilité . . . The bottle at the right holds Le Parfum Ideal—the perfume of romance—"moonlight and the eternal feminine" . . . And these perfumes continue to be preferred above all others. Quelques Fleurs is $7.50; Subtilité, $12.50; and Le Parfum Ideal, $6.75. There are also other sizes in these odeurs, which range to as low as $1.00.

A request will bring to you "Things Perfumes Whisper," an interesting booklet about perfume and its uses, also sachet samples of five Houbigant odeurs. Houbigant, Inc., 539 West 45th Street, New York.

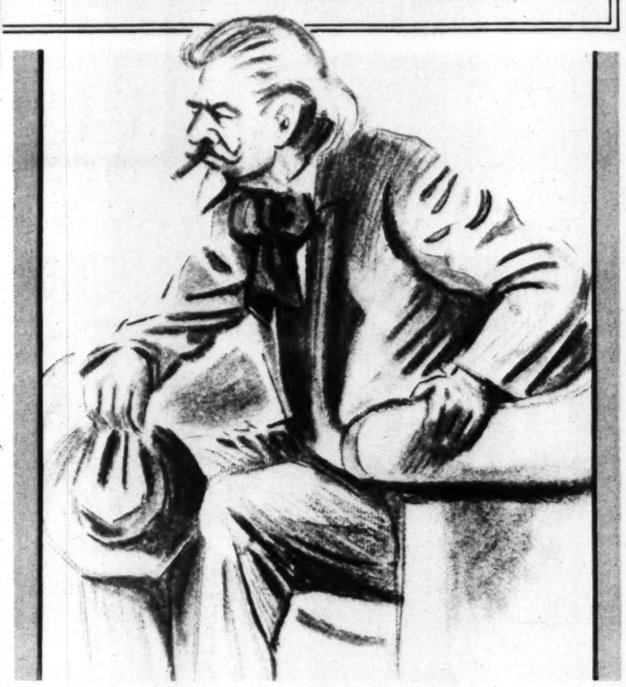
IN JEST AND SERIOUSNESS

Bert Levy, noted vaudeville cartoonist, adroitly captures some everyday sidelights on the doings in the studios

"Just another day wasted away." Trying to make a baby laugh for a scene ofttimes has its difficulties.

"Now, if I were playing that part—" Envious extras watching the star enact a difficult bit of work before the camera.



A casting office close-up. The man who doubles for "Uncle Sam" in quest of anything the director has to offer.

The social butterfly, "tired of it all," whose mama thinks it would be quite all right for her daughter to break in motion pictures, provided, of course, she were at once offered the starring role in a big special production.

Legit and vaudevillian are on common ground in the films, when "Shakespeare" and "song and dance" are forgotten for a few days' work in the studio.

It's somewhat difficult even to recognize a friend after he has been to the make-up man's office for a "new face." Transformations are sometimes startling.

A story without words. Waiting for the director—in "conference."

In the movies, at last. Making a test shot for a character part.

Ye gods, a fortune for a gag line. In which a title writer is glimpsed in a desperate mood.

Location Madness

Like Dolores del Rio's new pet? Its name is Ca-Ca, Indian for chili peppers, or something like that, and appears in a number of close-ups with the star in "Ramona." Dolores found it in a herd of sheep while she was locationing in Utah and insisted upon its being in the picture. —Photo by Smith.

Would you recognize Gloria Swanson in her character of Sadie Thompson, in the production of that title? Gloria spent a month at Catalina where the tropical atmosphere for the picture was photographed.

Life in a logging camp [illegible] like this—that is, not until [illegible] d'Avril was seized with the [illegible] to become a logger whilst [illegible] in Northern California with [illegible] Valley of the Giants" company.

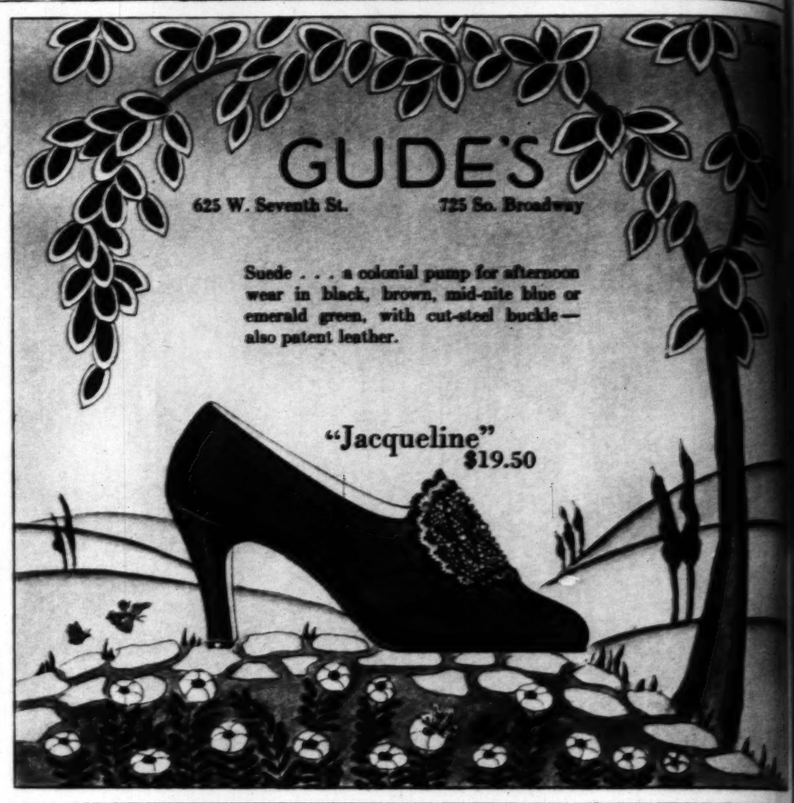
Dorothy Sebastian is "heap big Injun" now, what with being adopted by the Arapahoes while she was on location with Tim McCoy's production, "Wyoming," and having a war bonnet presented her. Dorothy seems to have an eager audience.

Snow-shoeing over the sands is the only practical manner of romping on the desert. And if you doubt it, here's Evelyn Brent, trying to watch a battle scene on a neighboring sand dune.

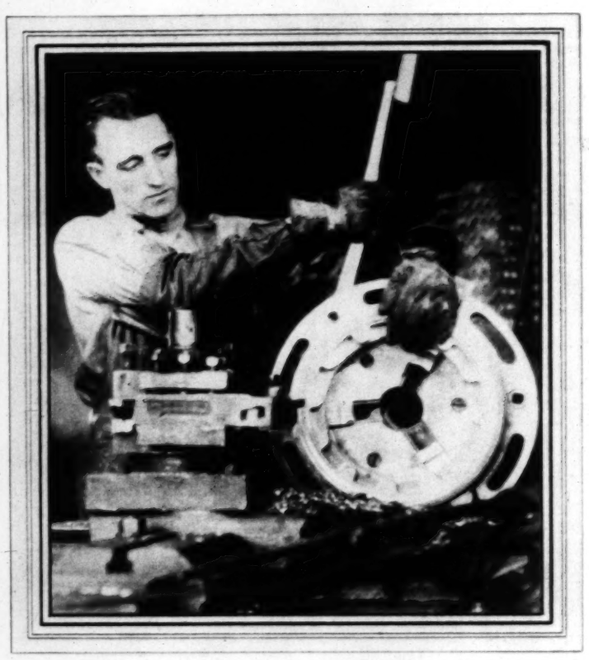
This playing nurse-maid to an Indian papoose has its responsibilities, Jobyna Ralston discovers. While she was in Northern Utah, making exterior scenes for "The Night Flyer," for want of some other pastime Jobyna amused herself by entertaining the numerous Indian babies with free rides.

There are dears and deers—and in so quoting we present this view of Molly O'Day on location with "The Shepherd of the Hills" company. Molly takes the part of Sammy Lane in the screen version of the Harold Bell Wright story.



Indigestion

BANISHED BY A SIMPLE FOOD



Now . . . . "attacks the old job with a new vengeance."

Buffalo, New York, May 10th

"I FACED A PROBLEM at the plant which was hard to solve. I had been ill and my vitality was low. Any attempt at eating was uninviting. And I did not seem able to digest what food I did eat. Rather than take a less exacting position and sacrifice on my earning power, I decided to build up my system. Fleischmann's Yeast was the agent employed. The results were quickly noticeable. The first indication of improvement was a desire for food. Gradually my indigestion completely vanished. Now I attack the old job with a new vengeance."

W. THAYER HENNEMAN

Chicago, Ill., April 2nd

"AS OFFICE MANAGER of a Chicago bond investment house, I am, of course, indoors most of the day. Like so many others who work in offices, I suffered from indigestion. I was in actual distress a few hours after eating. I got to consider discomfort and that unpleasant 'fullness' almost a matter of course. I tried many remedies—to no avail . . . Then, one day, a good friend advised me to eat Fleischmann's Yeast. I could do no less than give it a trial. Soon I began to feel an improvement. I kept on. The results were remarkable. Now all pain, discomfort and 'fullness' have gone as if by magic. Today I am in splendid condition."

BERNARD CAMPBELL

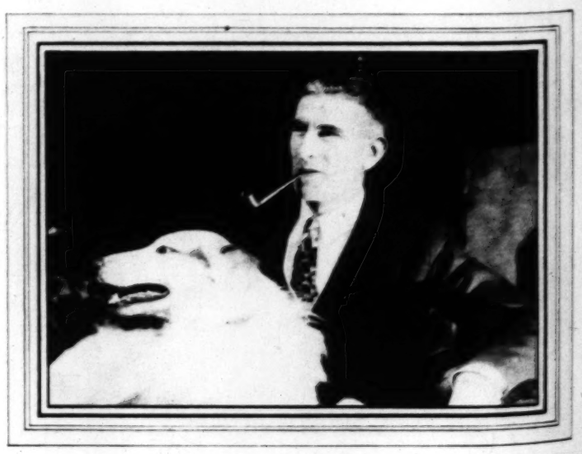
No longer fettered by ill health

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 18th

"I LIKE TO TRAVEL but life seemed nothing but worry and ill health. The trouble was indigestion, accompanied by constipation. I felt tired every morning when I woke up.

"One evening when I was particularly miserable I decided to give Fleischmann's Yeast a trial. Early the next morning I went to a grocer for a supply. I noticed improvement within a few weeks. I began to sleep soundly. My digestive troubles simply disappeared."

ALMA BRUESTLE



"Placed a credit in the bank of health"

AS FRESH *as any garden vegetable, Fleischmann's Yeast gradually cleanses the whole intestinal tract, aids digestion, makes elimination easy, regular, more complete. Order 2 or 3 days' supply at a time from your grocer. Eat one cake before each meal or between meals, plain, or drink it dissolved in water, cold or hot (not scalding), or take it in any other way you prefer. What's winter, in California, Gilda Gray is anxious to know. A dancer needs plenty of exercise—so what could be better than a dip now and then in the ocean, if you don't mind cold water? —Photo by Welborn.

Now would you ever guess that such a thing as winter even existed in the fair state of California? Judging by this view of Vera Steadman, center, and a few of her Christie Comedy colleagues, one would immediately reply in the negative. Who would say anything else, anyway?

Wot of it, Anyway?

No longer soap, water and luck

IT is no longer a mark of intelligence and good breeding for a woman to trust her precious complexion to nothing but soap, water, and luck. It is unscientific, dowdy, and not even very cleanly.

Dorothy Gray's method of skin care appeals to the modern woman, for it was evolved with this scientific principle as its foundation; a rapid, healthy circulation is the first essential of a good complexion. Miss Gray's treatments and preparations cleanse, of course; they nourish the skin; they correct excessive oiliness or dryness. But the basic principle of the Dorothy Gray method is the stimulation of circulation.

That is why Dorothy Gray has had so remarkable a success in strengthening sagging muscles, in restoring the firm contour of youth, and the satiny skin texture which is every woman's natural heritage.

The Dorothy Gray treatments are now available to Los Angeles women at the new salon at 3301 Wilshire Boulevard. There, and at the leading shops, the Dorothy Gray preparations may be obtained.

SHOWER TIME!

Colleen Moore's party in honor of Diana Kane's approaching marriage to George Fitzmaurice is occasion for the feminine members of the film colony to turn out in force with beautiful gifts.

This French marble mantel reflects the modern point of view. Its authenticity and beauty are typical of the many other mantels available at Barker Bros.' Studio of Interior Decoration. There are, of course, widely differing styles to correspond with every period trend in furnishing. Above the photographic study of this French mantel appears a graceful Louis XVI trumeau. Beside the mantel, stands an original Louis XVI chair covered in fine Aubusson tapestry.

Rare antiques, faithfully interpreted reproductions, richest wall hangings ... these are found at the Studio of Interior Decoration. Here experienced decorators are ready to advise correctly in regard to home furnishing problems. Second Floor—Barker Bros.—Seventh Street, Flower and Figueroa.

Colleen Moore's ability as a hostess is nearly a Hollywood institution. She is generally among the first, too, to give a shower for a prospective bride.

By GRACE KINGSLEY

"OH, DEAR, I should think every engaged girl in the films would hurry up her marriage when she sees all the lovely showers being given the other engaged girls!" exclaimed Stella.

"If for no other reason," put in Carmelita Geraghty, humorously, "than that they would be afraid the donors' money would run out!"

We were gathered at Colleen Moore's house, in honor of Diana Kane's approaching marriage to George Fitzmaurice, in order to give her a shower.

It being a Cat Party, there weren't any men, not even John McCormick, Colleen's husband. But later they came for a bite of supper and a sup of punch and to escort the feminine guests home.

DIANA looked lovely in a white organdie with tight bodice and exquisite pink-and-blue embroidered bolero jacket. Her gifts were opened after supper and she received a lot of lovely things, ranging from gorgeous lingerie to beautiful bottles of perfume and bits of statuary. Everybody gathered around as the big pile of gifts was unwrapped.

One very amusing note accompanying a tea-gown explained: "Mr. Fitzmaurice enjoyed a long shot of this gown when I wore it in a picture. I thought maybe he'd like a close-up of it."

Aileen Pringle had sent the gift.

Norma Talmadge couldn't be present, but sent a lovely lot of linen with the note—"I'm so tired of these long engagements. For heaven's sake, hurry up and get married."

Poor Elsie Janis, laid up with her throat operation, also gave absent treatment through a bottle of perfume.

AS USUAL, Colleen Moore was quite the most adorable hostess. She had come home late from the studio, and, like most of the guests, the occasion not being a formal one, she hadn't put on evening dress, but wore a becoming sweater suit. She is looking wonderfully well these days.

The latest bride, Norma Shearer, was there, appearing radiantly happy, which naturally increases her beauty.

"Norma is one of those rare souls," confided Stella, "whom success and happiness do not spoil. She is sweeter than ever. Do you know, she wouldn't let any of the girls give her a shower before she was married, because she was afraid, as she was marrying Mr. Thalberg, that some of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer girls might feel obligated to bring her presents."

Norma was in gay spirits as became a bride. She said that the reason she had never married before was because she wasn't proposed to.

"That only shows," retorted Estelle Taylor, "how clever you were at holding men off when you didn't want them!"

"Well, I wasn't even really proposed to this time," confessed Norma. "Our engagement just somehow happened. And then one day Irving called me into the office. I wondered what it was all about. Maybe you won't think it very romantic, but he just said, as I stepped into his private office, 'I thought I'd give you a ring. Which one do you want?' There were just twenty gorgeous rings laid out for me to choose from."

She and Irving, she said, expect to take a wedding journey to Europe some time next spring.

ESTELLE TAYLOR and Hedda Hopper were joking about showers. Hedda remarked about the probable cost of one of the gifts, whereupon Estelle declared that before Hedda got married she was going to give her a money shower.

"Now you're reflecting on the groom's financial status!" retorted Hedda.

Gertrude Olmstead said, "Sorry, but when that money shower comes off, I'll be out of town!"

VILMA BANKY couldn't be present, but sent a gift with the note, "With my hole heart." Vilma hasn't yet learned the idiosyncrasies of "English as she is written."

Hedda Hopper's gift to Diana was not only very beautiful, but one attended with real sentiment, inasmuch as she bestowed on the bride-to-be two lovely amethyst drinking glasses which she had had for ten years.

May McAvoy acknowledged that she would be having a shower soon herself, she being engaged, as everybody knows, to Maurice Cleary, that handsome, distinguished and charming man connected with United Artists legal department.

Poor Ruth Roland had lost her voice so that she couldn't even speak, much less sing. Or rather, poor us, as Stella said, inasmuch as there were many voices we could much more easily dispense with than Ruth's.

Bessie Love was a guest, and so were Bebe Daniels, Billie Dove, Anita Stewart, Doris Kenyon, Eleanor Boardman, Laura La Plante, Mary Astor, Claire Windsor, Lila Lee, Pauline Starke, Adela Rogers St. Johns, Alice Glazer, Marie McKean, a house guest of Colleen's, a very lovely little girl from the South, who may later go into pictures, Lois Wilson, Bess Meredyth, Edna Murphy, and a lot of other very lovely and very famous girls.

Anita Stewart confessed that she is just a bit afraid of another attempt at matrimony, although her Italian admirer is a very wonderful man, she admits, and she likes him tremendously.

Pauline Starke sent to Diana—"As one bride to another," she said—a gorgeous lace-trimmed, rose-colored, heart-shaped sofa-cushion.

Bessie Love declared, when she saw all the gifts, that she was going to get married just in order to have a shower.

"If you break the engagement, you don't have to send the gifts back, do you?" she inquired with mock anxiety. "You see, I'm just furnishing up my new home in Hollywood, and the things would come in so handy."

Laura LaPlante had been drilling as a soldier all day in her picture, with a lot of ex-service men. She admitted she was awfully tired, but she told how one soldier had said, "Well, I wasn't going to give in to weariness until Laura LaPlante did, but I must admit I'm all in."

SOME of the girls got to talking about athletics. Billie Dove said she was learning to swim.

"I'm just swimming every chance I get," said Billie, adding kiddingly: "Why, if anybody asks me to their house, I just say, 'Have you got a swimming pool?' And if they haven't I don't go!"

Pauline Starke explained: "Well, I've got the funniest stroke you ever saw, but it gets me through the water somehow. However, I'm sure a swimming teacher would repudiate it with scorn."

Estelle Taylor was carrying the most gorgeous pearl handbag, and we all looked at it in awe. Estelle never puts on any swank or pretends anything, and so, though we should all have believed the bag cost $4,600 if she had told us so, we had to believe her when she explained it cost $46.

A fortune teller was telling fortunes upstairs, with everybody waiting eagerly for her turn, as she is quite famous.

JACK DEMPSEY, as became a strong and brave man, was the first male to have the courage to show up at the party. He had come to take Estelle home. Everybody gathered around him to tell him how we did hope he would have a chance to fight Tunney once more, and to beat him.

Then John McCormick stuck his head into his own door, and seeing that Jack had made the place safe for the men folk, he, too, joined the ladies. After which, of course, you couldn't possibly have kept George Fitzmaurice out. He probably, as Stella suggested, had been outside for hours, peeping in the window at his fiancee.

Irving Willat came for Billie Dove, after which Dick Barthelmess and several other men dropped in.

FINALLY we all sat down, either in chairs or on cushions on the floor, and watched some pictures run off.

I've never seen anything quite so funny in my life as the picture made up of different pieces of film from the cutting room floor, pieced together, and with irrelevant subtitles. It is quite impossible to describe the effect. But I would advise the comedy makers to cut out expense, and just get Paramount, or M-G-M, or First National, or any other firm, to let them have some of their cutouts for a comedy.

Then there were some old Biograph pictures—some of the very first—showing many now famous people. Mary Pickford was the star of most of them, and though then a mere child, we all exclaimed at the perfection of her screen technique. Perhaps some of us hadn't, before that, really fully realized Mary's genius.

Through funny action on the part of the rest of the actors, through odd and ridiculous story and subtitles, Mary's genius shines forth, a pure and vivid flame.

Mr. Fitzmaurice brought his big limousine around to the door, to assist Diana to her home with her presents, and so, of course, none of us then had any excuse not to say good-night.

"Well, of all these happy couples," remarked Stella, as we sped toward home, "what an example of fineness and worth are Jack and Colleen!"

So Easy to Lose Fat

A great number of slender women are telling this story to others. They have done so for two decades. Now you see the results in every circle. Note how slenderness prevails. Excess fat is nowhere near as common as it was.

The story is this: "I took Marmola prescription tablets—four a day. No abnormal exercise or diet was required. New beauty came, new health and vitality. I ceased them when my weight came down to normal. Now I take Marmola only when I start to gain again."

Marmola contains a scientific discovery, based on wide research and thousands of experiments. Men thus found a substance which in the body turns food into fuel and energy, rather than into fat.

Marmola supplies that substance, plus other helps. The complete prescription is in every box, also the reasons for results. Thus you may know just why the good comes, and have no fear of harm.

Marmola has for 20 years brought priceless benefits to people over-fat. Those people have told the results to others, and the use has spread. Millions of boxes have been used to contribute to the slender figures of today.

Go try it for a little time and watch how the fat disappears. Then tell others about it, in kindness to your friends. It means a great deal to many. Go order before you forget it.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

Pass the word . . . skin irritation from hydrolysis is no longer necessary in shaving.

A new shaving cream is freeing men at last from old-style smarting, irritating shaves. Read how science has controlled hydrolysis and produced a more efficient lather that is soothing, actually beneficial to the skin.

Now you can come to breakfast with a face that is soothed and refreshed.

For science has learned to control hydrolysis. Hydrolysis is the name given by chemists to the process by which free alkali is released when water is added to soap. All soap—and this means shaving soaps too—is made with caustic soda or caustic potash (lye). While combined with other ingredients this lye-constituent is harmless. But when water is added, a part "hydrolyzes," forming free alkali. It is this alkali, so liberated, which, in combination with the action of the soap, causes skin irritation.

But you need not suffer that way any longer.

A notable achievement

When E. R. Squibb & Sons set out to control hydrolysis, there was the to-be-expected chorus "it can't be done." But Squibb chemists thought differently. They had made a really protective dental cream . . . learned to guard the vitamins in cod-liver oil . . . solved other important problems that men thought impossible. Now they set to work determined to create a real shaving cream.

They worked for four years, steadily—they tried formula after formula. They made more than 900 separate experiments, and then one day (a red-letter day for men who shave!) the perfected formula was announced. The amount of free alkali liberated by hydrolysis had been reduced to one part in 325,000!

And in addition the chemists combined with the cream certain ingredients that make the lather not only non-irritating, but actually beneficial to the skin. A shaving cream by Squibb!

The coupon below is worth 10 cents to you

Squibb's Shaving Cream whips up quickly into rich, creamy lather—a wonderful beard softener that leaves your skin cool, supple, softly smooth. SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 13, 1927

It's Planting Time at Rancho Vista

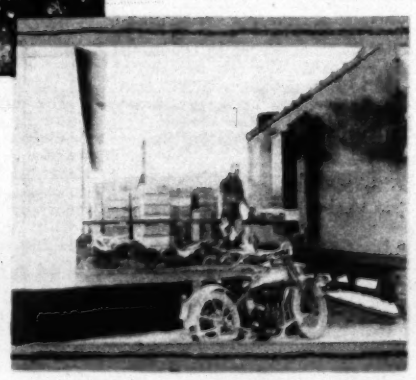
You will see activity like this these days at Rancho Vista. The large-scale planting is done under the supervision of experts, and the young trees, budded from successful groves, are guaranteed at the end of three years.

An avocado landscape looking from Rancho Vista toward the ocean. Vistas like this, years ago, inspired the writing of "Ramona," and later named the district, "Vista." Now they make a profitable country homesite for hundreds more charming every passing day.

A six-year-old avocado grown to a height of over 20 feet, near Vista. This tree produced, according to the owner in the picture, about 2,500 fruit last year. Have you bought any lately?

This young man of six will find his future well taken care of by the valuable fruit of this tree and its brothers. It will grow much faster than he, as may be seen by the picture above, and when as old as he is will have had several crops already.



Shipping winter vegetables from Rancho Vista's own packing house. A 20-pound rail line through the property aids shippers. Facilities and improvements at Rancho Vista have won high praise everywhere.

ARE YOU TOO PROVIDING FOR OTHER NOVEMBERS TO COME?

17,500 AVOCADO TREES now being set out will enrich hundreds within a very few years. Reputed to be the "World's Most Valuable Fruit Tree," the AVOCADO MAY BE GROWN ONLY IN A LIMITED AREA, experts agree.

RANCHO VISTA is in the CENTER of the area approved by government, state, and county experts—the Vista Irrigation District. Recommended to us a year ago by Dr. J. Eliot Coit, soil analyst, two parcels of the same tract have recently been purchased by this eminent avocado expert for his own home!

JOIN WITH HORTICULTURISTS,

engineers, business, and professional men in this profitable enterprise. Judge for yourself what may be done with 70 trees planted per acre at Rancho Vista. (A grower near Vista reports $1,450 last year income from 27 trees, 3 to 4 years old.)

PROFIT THE FIRST YEAR FROM STRAWBERRIES,

which, coming off the plants in December, January and February, are expected by one Vista grower to bring from $1,500 to $2,500 per acre this year. Winter tomatoes from Vista brought $4 per lug in Chicago last year; peas, beans, and other vegetables mature all during the year. Off-season vegetables are the most profitable.

ONE-YEAR-OLD Rancho Vista is completing roads through its fourth unit—MAR VISTA. One year has seen the Vista district add nearly 500 water meters to its original 30 when water was first turned into the lines from Lake Henshaw reservoir. GET YOUR ESTATE NOW.

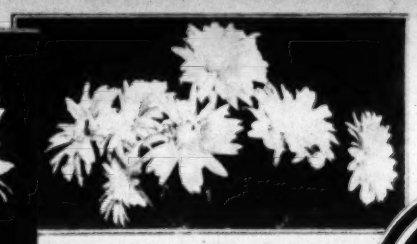
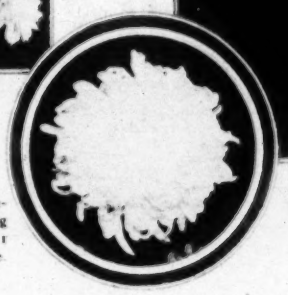
After Dahlias Comes the Reign of the Chrysanthemum

By Frances Duncan

The true anemone type has a cone-shaped cushion-like center. The anemone can be grown in sprays, or disbudded to give a flower of superior excellence. Lovely pastel tints are found in this type.

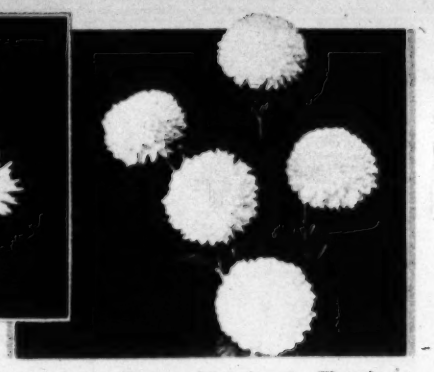


Typical single chrysanthemum—a type among which very lovely colors are found, such as Bronze Molly, Ella Gilliford, and Gloriana.



New Jersey. One of the newer varieties and a very lovely one, suggesting Katherine Twigg, but with broader petals, faintly tinged with palest rose.

The Decorative Pompon is an increasingly popular type of chrysanthemum—very lovely as a cut flower and in exhibitions.



The popular Pompon chrysanthemum. These have been disbudded, which doesn't mean, among this type, only one bloom to a plant, but finer blooms and not quite so crowded.

IT SEEMS peculiarly kind of the chrysanthemums to come into such luxuriant and brilliant bloom when even California gardens are thinking of a period of repose. The best of the dahlias have passed, but at about Thanksgiving time the chrysanthemum is in its glory, and blessed is he who has his garden full of them!

It is an old flower, the chrysanthemum, akin to the Artemisias of the old gardens. The show flower, as we know it, is a blended product of a species which grows wild in China and Japan—Chrysanthemum miticum, and Chrysanthemum morifolium of the gardens. The great vogue of the chrysanthemum in America began with the debut of "Mrs. Alpheus Hardy" in 1888. This gorgeous flower, of what was then considered extraordinary size, took the gardening world by storm, and the vogue of the big chrysanthemum has lasted ever since. It would be hard to find a more impressive flower for exhibition.

In later years there has been a reaction in favor of the smaller types, the bush forms, and the old-fashioned chrysanthemum of our grandmothers' time, wherefore the buttons and pompons have again come into our gardens. Not in their old form, however, but in great variety and richness of color and in increasing delicacy of shape, which make them a very delightful addition to the autumn garden.

The typical forms so far as the gardener is concerned—not the botanist—are the single, of which the characteristic is the set of ray-like petals about a central disk. It may be almost daisy-like, or the petals may be crowded, but as this is its character, a ray-like set of petals about a flat disk, the gardeners call it "single." The anemone-flowered has a raised cone-like center which is very definite. Then there is the pompon, with the petals so closely set that no center at all is visible—and the intermediate type, known as the "decorative" pompon, with more loosely set petals. The other form is the exhibition or standard, the great flower-heads with incurved or outward-curving petals, and great variation of form. These rather rough classifications describe the groups as the gardens know them.

The chrysanthemum is easy of culture—especially in Southern California. Here the gardener is not haunted by the menace of frosts which keep the eastern gardener awake at night (unless he grows his beauties in a greenhouse) and causes him to have in readiness all sorts of coverings to throw over the lovely heads when a cold night looms. Here, outdoor grown chrysanthemums can bloom in peace until Christmas time. Any good soil will serve, says F. H. Clarke, the chrysanthemum expert of Pasadena, and when budding has begun, from then until blossom time is the time to enrich the soil and to give plenty of water. Cow manure is safest for the amateur, says Mrs. Clark, though she and Mr. Clark use a variety of fertilizers—dried blood, tankage, and some highly concentrated commercial fertilizers. Also, don't irrigate. Chrysanthemums prefer overhead watering—the old-fashioned kind that the heavens send, or as near an imitation of it as possible.

The time to plant is in the spring—and about each April, although now is a good time to choose.

For those who like a gorgeous flower, sumptuous in color and stately in form, among the best sorts are New Jersey, pictured here, whose petals are faintly tinted with a clear shell pink; Bronze Turner, Majestic, Thanksgiving pink, which is a warm lilac; the splendid Pocketts, Louisa Pockett, Yellow Pockett, and Pockett's Crimson, William Turner—these are only a few. Among the Anemones, Triumph, a new variety, is a magnificent chrysanthemum; if disbudded, the bloom will measure sometimes six or eight inches across—the color is a warm golden bronze. Buff Queen is another beauty among the Anemones, but softer in tint and beautifully shaded.

For those who do not take their chrysanthemums quite so large, there are among the Anemones—Izola, which makes a fine bush, deep rose color; Nokomis, also bushy, smaller, interesting in the garden, violet rays, and at Thanksgiving, in splendid bloom.

Among the newer singles, try Ella Gilliford, Louise Mayo; for the older ones, there are Bronze Molly, Gloriana, Skiff, Lady Astor, and Old Gold. There are charming Pompons. Very attractive is "Pink Dot," rose with a touch of crimson in the center, and Mary Ann, and the fat little White Caps—the pompon known as Yellow Fellow is a golden beauty. Bokhara has a fascinating color—rose tinged with bronze. Bucema is another beauty with a touch of bronze—indeed, the bronzes and yellows are peculiarly effective in the autumn garden. Other well-known pompons are Ermalinda, rose tinged with lavender, and Clorinda, a bronze-sort which makes a delightful border; Mrs. Wm. Staats; Unalga, an intensely brilliant golden yellow, which blooms courageously from Thanksgiving until New Years. These are only a few, but they would suffice to give a wealth of joyous color in any garden.

Besides choosing the varieties, it is well for the novice to visit about a bit and observe how carefully the staking and tying are done. When the tall beauties are in rows, usually there are two, or sometimes three, rows of wire between stakes and the flower stems are secured to these with raffia—not tightly tied, but so that the storms will not devastate. Also, the chrysanthemum grower consoles himself, if the blooms do suffer from violent rains, the buds will be unhurt and presently all will be blooming serenely again.

Arcadia's Fete

Arcadia has put itself on the horticultural map with its chrysanthemum fete, which has now become a yearly event. At the recent shows the assembly room of the city hall was lined with pretty booths, and tables in the center were loaded with splendid chrysanthemums. As flower shows go in California, Arcadia's was not large, but the excellence of the blooms exhibited was high. One could not easily find better blossoms of "Wm. Turner," for instance, than were displayed by Marvin Parker of the Mountain View Nursery, Arcadia. Also the stage setting by the Diamond Nursery—a banking of ferns, "footlights of brilliant cyclamen"—was very well done. But the competing exhibits were amateur. The first prize for the finest collection from a private garden went to Miss Mary Chase, who had a very beautiful display of fine exhibition chrysanthemums—great gorgeous blooms with splendid foliage. In this class, A. E. Nelson took second. The first and second prize for the best single flower went also to Mrs. Nelson. The first prize for the best bouquet of chrysanthemums—any variety—went to F. H. White, and for the most beautiful basket of chrysanthemums, to Mrs. A. L. Daniels, who should also have had a prize for her charmingly arranged "magic garden," although that was not entered for competition. Prizes for the most artistic basket of any flowers other than chrysanthemums went, for dahlias, first, to Mrs. L. S. Godbe, and second to Mrs. C. F. Statcup; for roses, the first prize went to Enos Mussachi for a lovely basket of many kinds of field-grown roses, the second prize to Miss Grace McCurdy. Some of the bouquets used in decorating the booths were lovely enough to have been entered for competition in any show—especially charming was the basket in shades of violet and lavender, purple sage, statice, a single deep violet iris, a few asters in palest rose and cream-color, the work, I believe, of Miss Newhall and Miss Graves.

Fred McNabb was to have spoken on chrysanthemums, but he said that evidently Arcadian amateurs needed little information on those when they could grow such lovely ones, and wisely gave out light, instead, on how to plant the sweet peas and bulbs which should go in now. Much credit is due to Mrs. Nellis A. White, president of the Garden Club, whose zeal and enthusiasm put the fete across.

Pasadena's Flower Show

Pasadena is such a city of garden-lovers that its flower shows are always notable. Year after year the Horticultural Association has staged an impressive show; this autumn's show was no exception.

The rain may have worried and deterred some of the visitors, but the continued dampness kept the flowers in admirable condition—and flowers under a tent usually suffer pitifully. Certainly they did at Montebello. Real gardeners rarely consider rain, except in its relation to their plants, therefore the big tent in the Crown City's Municipal Park was thronged with flower-lovers.

Howard and Smith had a gorgeous exhibit of roses; one whole end of the tent was banked with the loveliest ones. Armacost and Royston had a very beautiful display of orchids, in a setting of delicate maiden-hair fern, suggesting the places in which one finds occasionally in New England woods the lovely cypripedium. They did not repeat the elaborate exhibition of the Biltmore dahlia show when the tropical setting of the orchid was admirably suggested.

The Pasadena Garden Club was educational; its exhibit showed natural beauty on one side—on the other what happened to it when campers or picnickers did their worst. One rather wished this "worst" could have been staged next to Armacost's lovely ferns and orchids—it would have seemed more deadly. But the bother is, folk who visit flower shows aren't the ones who do terrible things to wild loveliness. These things should be shown at the movies or at the bargain-counter of department stores.

Beautiful chrysanthemums were shown. Notable were those exhibited by Hector Ross, Mrs. E. E. Finkbine, Mrs. Joseph Hixon, Mrs. M. R. Bacon. Mrs. W. Williamson won no less than seven first prizes; J. R. LaFollette was a notable prize-winner; also Mrs. W. P. Herbert, Mrs. M. L. Stewart, Mrs. R. P. Seeley, and Mrs. M. E. Keeley. R. C. Cook, Mrs. J. Mansar, Louis Fried, and Mrs. Joseph Scott took prizes for chrysanthemums. Mrs. Finkbine showed some adorable pompons, and singles, and anemone-flowered chrysanthemums; so, also did H. Ross, Mrs. Williamson, and Mrs. Stewart. To those who like this type of chrysanthemum they have a peculiar fascination and charm, which the more imposing ones have not. But there is a gorgeous stateliness and opulence to the big exhibition varieties—Yellow Pockett, Louisa Pockett, New Jersey, White Giant, and the rest that is tremendously impressive.

The Diggers had a fine exhibit; also the Pasadena Garden Club. There were industrial exhibits which interested the practical gardener—a new type of sprinkler which watered a square space, not a circular one so one could sprinkle without overlapping; the best type of rake for getting out devil grass; fertilizers.

GROWS FINE OLIVES

WOODLAKE.—Manzanilla olives from the F. A. Little ranch at Woodlake, are being shipped to Riverside. The olives are transported in a weak brine solution, in large tanks on flat cars, four tanks filling a car. Each tank holds about three tons of olives. The Manzanillas from this ranch are unusually large and uniform in size, according to representatives of the Lindsay Ripe Olive Association. Oman Simpson, manager of the ranch, who grew the extra fine fruit, estimates the yield at about 100 tons.

FEEDLOTS FILLING UP

BRAWLEY.—Present indications are for a good demand for green feed and pasture this winter in the Imperial Valley. Thousands of head of sheep and cattle from Arizona, Utah, Idaho and Wyoming have already been shipped in to local feedlots. Thirty-five carloads of sheep were brought in from Althone, Cal., recently.

WALNUT HARVEST OVER

TUSTIN.—The harvesting of the largest crop of walnuts ever grown in this district is about over. The season of picking was comparatively short, considering the size of the crop. Weather conditions were ideal this year for picking and curing. The nuts dropped unusually fast, although quite a percentage of sick-lights were experienced in certain orchards. About 3000 tons of nuts will be shipped from the Santa Ana packing house, which serves this district.

SELLS HOLSTEIN HERD

Riverside—W. R. Elliott of Riverside has sold his herd of pure-bred Holsteins and the animals have been removed to Arizona. There were about thirty head in the herd. Mr. Elliott's father was one of the first breeders of pure-bred Holsteins in Riverside, and the family has been in the business here for many years.

"Biday" Has to Be Good to Work in This Egg Factory

(Illustrating Article by Paul S. Williamson)

The California Farm Bureau Egg-Laying Contest at Santa Cruz is the arena where what might be called the "state egg championship" is determined. Much of the success of the contest, now eight years old, is due to the untiring efforts of the board of directors, some of whom are shown above. They are, left to right, Messrs. Geo. Wood, Walter Cartright, E. M. Eisele, Wm. Marshall, R. E. Burton, and S. L. Gibson.

The contest is a practical demonstration of poultry management, and poultrymen from the Santa Cruz vicinity gather frequently at the plant to hear lectures and discussions on poultry problems.

Manager James Blenkhorn has also worked untiringly for the success of the contest. He is shown here making ready some freshly cut green feed for birds entered in the egg production classic.

A well-equipped poultry plant has been provided for the egg-laying contest by the Santa Cruz Chamber of Commerce.

J. H. Hauschildt, left, vice-president of the board of directors, and Geo. Gray, one of the oldest members.

The directors spend much time at the contest plant, as they are keenly interested, not only in the competition among birds, but in the development of better poultry management methods there being studied.

City Sewage Need Not Be Waste After All

Pasadena's Farm Tract Provides Satisfactory Disposal Outlet for Three Municipalities—Modern Treatment Plant Converts Solids Into Valuable Fertilizer—Water Purified, Does Irrigation Duty

By H. H. BUSHNELL

"A SUPPLEMENTAL synchronization of correlatory processes!"

That's what one engineer I talked to called the arrangement under which the cities of Pasadena, South Pasadena and Alhambra are regulating the disposal of their sewage. It sums up, in technical language a plan whereby the municipal trio not only get rid of their sewage, but contrive at the same time to make some use of it.

That any city should be able effectively to accomplish such an end seems to call for commendation, since sewage disposal is for most communities a problem as difficult as it is pressing. The three cities named are turning the trick by utilizing a modern sewage treatment plant in combination with Pasadena's municipal farm.

About twenty years ago the Crown City acquired a farm of about five hundred acres on the Valley Boulevard eight miles east of Los Angeles, adjoining the city limits of Alhambra. Those backing the undertaking had in mind some such plan as has since been worked out—namely, the utilization of sewage, and the water required for flushing it, for agricultural purposes. Many will remember the troubles Pasadena encountered in getting the plan started. The whole countryside, it seemed, objected violently to the idea of disposing of sewage in such an open fashion, and criticisms flew thick and fast. The city went ahead, however, and gradually developed its idea. Flowers and ornamental plants for the Crown City parks were grown at first and then an orange grove and walnut orchard were established. In the course of time, field crops were added.

Today, forty acres of the land is utilized for a sewage disposal plant and the rest is intensively farmed. Those who formerly protested are willing to concede that the layout is remarkably free from objectionable features. Seventy acres is devoted to citrus, mostly navel oranges. Walnuts grow on thirty acres. There is some alfalfa, for the mules maintained on the place; some vegetables are grown for the farm help. Field crops cover a large acreage. Some ornamentals are still grown for the Pasadena parks, and about seven acres is leased to a seedsman for flower seed production. And the whole tract is irrigated from sewage water, and kept in a state of fertility by the use of treated sewage.

Potatoes, corn and other crops have been grown, and grown to perfection, on this city-owned farm, but for the past two seasons bush lima beans have been the main field crop. Last year the farm boasted fine yields of citrus fruits, walnuts and beans. The municipality holds memberships in both citrus and walnut associations and sells through regular association channels.

B. C. Bougher is the farm superintendent, H. A. Freer is his assistant, and both have their homes on the place. There is a good-sized cook house and a bunk house; officers and other buildings round out quite a group.

THE MODERN PLANT

The present model sewage plan is vastly different from the ones that were objected to at the beginning, for two plans were tried before the right one was hit upon. There was such an offensive odor at first that the management was driven in desperation to bury the sewage on the land. This couldn't go on forever, so a second plant, crude enough by comparison with present standards, but fairly modern for its day, was established. This helped some, but proved inadequate, so that burial in trenches of a part of the sewage was resorted to. More trouble followed when heavy rains washed out some of these trenches. Pasadena determined to "do the thing right," regardless of expense. Four years ago the present plant, known as the Tri-City sewage disposal system, was built, after engineers had made a study of the best systems of the kind to be found in the world. The new plant serves not only the three cities that entered into the arrangement, but a part of the San Marino district as well.

The plant, somewhat increased in size since its construction, is considered one of the best of its type in existence. Known as the activated sludge system, it is of a type successfully used for years in England and Germany. In this country, Milwaukee has such a plant, considerably larger, that is regarded as a model of its kind. Chicago is preparing to build such a plant to cost $35,000,000. One other California city, Lodi, has a small one, and Pomona is planning one. Los Angeles, which pours its sewage into the Pacific, may be forced some day to build one.

The plant on the Pasadena City Farm receives about 7,000,000 gallons of sewage a day. With its present equipment, it could handle several million gallons more, and as it is built on a unit plan, additions can be made at mere construction cost. The power house is ample for twice the present capacity. Other neighboring cities are now considering plans for sending their sewage to the plant by an extension of sewer lines.

HOW IT WORKS

The principle on which the Tri-City plant operates is that of aeration, the introduction of air into the sewage working a chemical change by mechanical means. Sewage, to begin with, contains septic bacteria, but the air, thoroughly incorporated into it, kills these and introduces in their place nitrifying bacteria which are said actually to digest the contents of the water, changing it into a totally different substance. Such is the scientific explanation given by A. W. Wyman, the plant superintendent.

When the sewage first enters the plant it is screened to remove all undissolved substances. Mr. Wyman says that an average of about 10 per cent of the solids of the sewage is removed in this straining. This 10 per cent, mostly paper, is hauled to the fields and buried. The 90 per cent of solids remaining is in the water, almost, it seems, in solution, and this flows from the straining room into great aeration tanks. Here air is pumped in from the power plant. There are thirty concrete tanks, each seventy feet long, ten feet wide and fifteen feet deep. The sewage is circulated from one to another of these, the aeration process requiring four hours, when the work of nitrification is complete. Practically no odor is noticeable above the tanks, which are open to the air.

The water is next introduced into five re-aeration tanks of dimensions similar to those of the others. Then it is forced into five clarifying tanks, fifty by fifty feet. Here the water drops its sediment, now in the form of a grayish powder. At the bottoms of the clarifying tanks are great, slowly revolving sweeps which gather up the sediment into an outlet whence it goes to the fertilizer department. The water, now quite clear, is further treated with chlorine gas. Mr. Wyman says that 97 per cent of all the septic bacteria are destroyed by aeration, and that the chlorination kills the rest, so that the water issues from the plant so nearly pure as to be quite inoffensive. It goes right onto the farm and there is more than enough for all purposes. The surplus is run through a concrete pipe line to empty into the Rio Hondo some miles away.

MAKES GOOD FERTILIZER

The sludge or sediment is run in just enough water to carry it into another building in which great vacuum drums fourteen feet long and about twelve feet in diameter slowly revolve through the mass. The vacuum draws the substance up on webbing on the drum surfaces and extracts a good deal of the remaining moisture. The sludge then appears very much like thick damp sheets of heavy paper, and is peeled off the drums by big shuttle knives, dropped in sheets into an endless conveyer and taken to a dehydrator. This latter is the newest part of the equipment. Formerly the sludge was used without drying for fertilizer, that in excess of requirements being buried, but because some odor did develop after it had stood awhile, the dehydrator was installed. This is a big cylindrical affair and provides a high temperature, causing the sludge to come out in the form of a gray powder, odorless and easily sacked.

From the records of the well equipped laboratory maintained at the plant it is found that this substance contains approximately 70 per cent organic matter, of particular value in making humus for Southern California soils; an average of 6.16 per cent available nitrogen, a little over 2 per cent phosphoric acid and about one-fourth of one per cent potash. It is regarded by many users as of decided worth and Mr. Wyman states that it recently has had a market value of $35 a ton.

The plant turns out from thirty to forty tons of wet sludge every twenty-four hours, and from this the finished fertilizer is ordinarily produced at the rate of from seven to eight tons a day. The plant works twenty-four hours in the day and employs about thirty men.

SOME COST FIGURES

The Tri-City sewage disposal plant cost about $1,000,000, as it stands today, and its maintenance is given at about $125,000 per annum. As it serves around 125,000 persons, the annual cost for sewage handling for the three cities figures about a dollar a year per capita. However, there are the items on the credit side of the ledger.

Of course, the farm uses a large amount of the fertilizer. The past several hundred tons of it were sold at wholesale, although the plan is to develop the sales direct to the consumer. Some of the inoffensive residue is still buried, but it is the hope of the management that enough demand for the dry fertilizer can be developed to enable the city to dispose of all of the sludge in this form. The market for the sacked product is expected to grow as its merits become better known, and Mr. Wyman states that at $35 a ton, there could now be enough output to bring in around $90,000 a year. Figuring in the value of fertilizer and water used on the farm, there is possibility of a return, he says, that will go far toward making the plant self-supporting.

Regardless of economic considerations, the plant seems to offer the most satisfactory method of disposing of a city's sewage that has ever been found. Almost every week engineers of other cities come to inspect the workings of the system.

The disposal of sewage is a problem of Problems of Home Gardener Made Plain for Newcomers in Southland

By ROSS H. GAST

EXCLUSIVELY Southern Californian, and developed largely around Los Angeles, the small suburban farm home represents a mode of rural living that, though economical, borders on the luxurious. These tiny holdings combine the ideal rural environment with the conveniences of the city; permit indulgence in the pleasures of home beautification, with the economies of a continuous home-grown supply; bring an increased money income without sacrifice of sustaining employment. During the past decade thousands of families have sought such environment in the Southland, and because of the unique advantages, both natural and acquired, that have been enjoyed, have found health, comfort and happiness through better home life and augmented income.

But the problem of the newcomer in establishing plantings in his new home is always pressing. Under irrigation, and with different seasons, soils and crops, the home-seeker is generally at a loss as to how to begin. It is the purpose here to tell of some of the permanent economic plants that should be present in every garden, and to give some information as to how they should be handled. One should plan these plantings with the same care as is taken in planning the home.

One of the most important factors is the selection of proven varieties. Every year, there are many so-called "new introductions." Exotic fruits have a charm which is enhanced by the fabulous promises of these who catalogue them, but unless they have been vouched for by reliable plantsmen they should not be given space.

The selection of disease-free stock is another important factor in getting the right start. All nurseries and plantsmen must have their premises inspected carefully by the county horticultural authorities each year, and are given a clean bill of health before any stock is sold. Purchasing plants and shrubs from reputable concerns precludes any chance of bringing in pests or soil infections, which will in time ruin the soil for planting purposes. A good example of this danger is seen in the rapid spread of the nematode, which is not only a serious menace, to the small grower, but a source of trouble to commercial growers.

Then, one should never begin planting of permanent plants, shrubs or trees, without first making up some sort of a plan or arrangement. Most shrubs and trees of this kind serve a dual purpose, in that they are useful as ornamentals as well as for the production of delicacies for the table. No definite plan can be outlined here, for each place presents an individual problem.

WIDE PLANTING RANGE

In Southern California it is possible to have deciduous fruits of nearly every kind, grapes, berries and the perennial vegetables in every garden. In most sections, too, citrus and even subtropicals can be planted. The size of the holding is the only limit to the diversity of planting and, with proper planning, one can enjoy nearly all of the favorites.

Planting time for most of the permanent trees, shrubs, berries and vegetables is fast approaching. Artichokes, rhubarb, asparagus and strawberries can be set out now, while bush berries can go in after the first of the year, followed by deciduous trees, and later citrus and subtropicals. One should busy himself now with the garden plan, and the preparation of the soil for various plantings.

We will start with the perennial vegetables. Artichokes are especially popular in California, and do best close to the ocean.

packed for shipment to Germany and for storage in Los Angeles warehouses. The honey was shipped from the Donhoe Apiary of Packard, Mexico.

GROWS FINE OLIVES

WOODLAKE.—Manzanilla olives from the F. A. Little ranch at Woodlake, are being shipped to Riverside. The olives are transported in a weak brine solution, in large tanks on flat cars, four tanks filling a car. Each tank holds about three tons of olives. The Manzanillas from this ranch are unusually large and uniform in size, according to representatives of the Lindsay Ripe Olive Association. Oman Simpson, manager of the ranch, who grew the extra fine fruit, estimates the yield at about 100 tons.

FEEDLOTS FILLING UP

BRAWLEY.—Present indications are for a good demand for green feed and pasture this winter in the Imperial Valley. Thousands of head of sheep and cattle from Arizona, Utah, Idaho and Wyoming have already been shipped in to local feedlots. Thirty-five carloads of sheep were brought in from Athlone, Cal., recently.

WALNUT HARVEST OVER

TUSTIN.—The harvesting of the largest crop of walnuts ever grown in this district is about over. The season of picking was comparatively short, considering the size of the crop. Weather conditions were ideal this year for picking and curing. The nuts dropped unusually fast, although quite a percentage of stick-tights were experienced in certain orchards. About 3000 tons of nuts will be shipped from the Santa Ana packing house, which serves this district.

SELLS HOLSTEIN HERD

Riverside—W. R. Elliott of Riverside has sold his herd of pure-bred Holsteins and the animals have been removed to Arizona. There were about thirty head in the herd. Mr. Elliott's father was one of the first breeders of pure-bred Holsteins in Riverside, and the family has been in the business here for many years.

HEADS TULARE BUREAU

IVANHOE.—J. T. Stewart of Ivanhoe will head the Tulare County Farm Bureau as president for the coming year, succeeding Frank T. Elliott of Orosi. W. P. Crumley of Woodlake has been re-elected as vice president, and Allen Thompson as secretary-treasurer. Two new departments were created at the recent annual meeting of the bureau, with election of E. B. Armstrong of Earlimart as head of the water and irrigation department, and Mrs. E. R. Hessitine of Tulare as chairman of the home department.

CHILEAN IS PREFERRED

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—According to E. E. Quick, 80 per cent of Arizona alfalfa seed now is of the standard Chilean variety, with call for the Hairy Peruvian about at an end. Yuma remains the main producer, although about 1,000,000 pounds is shipped each year from the Salt river and Buckeye valleys. The average crop, cut in July or August, is of 300 pounds to the acre, the yield rather diminishing in successive years of cultivation. The price has netted the farmer around 13 cents a pound, with shipments to almost every part of the Union, though mainly to the Gulf States. In late years, the Dakotas and Minnesota have been taking much of the seed. Arizona of late has been taking the cream of the alfalfa seed market, owing to the fact that no weevil or disease thus far has been known in the fields the utmost importance for any city—the larger the city, and the faster it is growing, the greater the problem. It is becoming more and more evident that dumping sewage into a river, or shooting it into the ocean is not a satisfactory method of solving the difficulty. The former inevitably leads to contamination and the possible breeding of epidemics. Nor does the sea prove an ideal place for sewage.

Airplane passengers flying out over the Pacific relate that from the great Los Angeles outfall sewer a noisome river of sewage meanders through the blue ocean waves for miles offshore. It does not dissolve and vanish into the depths by any means, at least not for a long time, and it is always flowing. At the whim of shifting currents and stormy winds it may, and sometimes does, visit the beaches along the Southern California shoreline. Not a pleasant thought for the coast dwellers or the folk who find joy in surf bathing. Already there may be heard the rumblings of community, State and Federal discontent over this unwholesome state of affairs.

The aeration system, with proper equipment like that on the Pasadena City Farm, obviously robs the sewage of its offensive character and turns it into something that not only can be more easily disposed of, but which can actually be made use of. It also helps conserve water, an important consideration in this part of the country. Los Angeles may some day thank Pasadena for having pointed the way to the solution of one of its most trying municipal problems.

"MEAT ON THE TABLE"

ulation, is next to the smallest in thirty-three years.

All of which is good news to farmers and to the nation in general, for it indicates that return to normalcy, whatever that is, that all good Americans have been working for since the Kaiser retired in ignominy to his castle at Doorn. But what is more important, especially here in the Southland, is that our ranchers and orchardists have labored hard during the seven lean years to put their business on a stable basis and, even though the cycle shows seven fat years ahead, they're going to keep right on improving their products, and perfecting their growing and marketing systems, in preparation for any future idiosyncracies of a fickle world.

Again there's "meat on the table" and some money in the bank. The scars war left on American agriculture are fast disappearing. While the farmer isn't exactly "sittin' pretty," he's at least "sittin' easier," and he's enjoying the glimpse of the silver lining in the seven-year-old clouds that have frowned upon him.

The Cover Page

Corn that would make even an Iowan look a second time is pictured on the cover page of this week's Farm and Orchard. As will have been noted by the reader, it was grown not in the Middle West, but in the Owens Valley of California. Up there on the eastern edge of the High Sierras they grow many things that "belong" in the Central States of the country and corn is one of them. The photograph from which the cover was made was taken on the ranch of Grover Smith at Manzanar. The land is held by Mr. Smith under lease from the city of Los Angeles, which now owns all of the Manzanar area.

If You Keep Chickens
CUT THIS OUT

"The great trouble with the poultry business has always been that the laying life of a hen was too short," says Henry Trafford, International Poultry Expert and Breeder, for nearly eighteen years Editor of Poultry Success.

The average pullet lays 150 eggs. If kept the second year, she may lay 100 more. Then she goes to market. Yet, it has been scientifically established that every pullet is born or hatched with over one thousand minute egg germs in her system—and will lay them on a highly profitable basis over a period of four to six years' time if given proper care.

How to work to get 1000 eggs from every hen; how to get pullets laying early; how to make the old hens lay like pullets; how to keep up heavy egg production all through cold winter months when eggs are highest; triple egg production; make slacker hens hustle. These and many other money-making poultry secrets are contained in Mr. Trafford's "1000 EGG HEN" system of poultry raising, one copy of which will be sent absolutely free to any reader of this paper who keeps six hens or more. Eggs should go to top notch prices this winter. This means big profit to the poultry keeper who gets the eggs. Mr. Trafford tells how. If you keep chickens and want them to make money for you, cut out this ad and send it with your name and address to Henry Trafford, Suite 1048C, Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., and a free copy of "The 1000 EGG HEN" will be sent by return mail.

Farm and Orchard Magazine

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Orchard Magazine is the only farm journal in the West printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

"Meat on the Table"

WE'VE never taken a great deal of stock in this talk about things good and things bad running in cycles, but if it is true that agricultural prosperity and depression runsin periods of seven years' duration each, then we can most certainly look forward to seven years of those oft-heralded "good and days" on the farm. Following a period of unprecedented farm prosperity, induced by the demands created by a world at war, the American farmer found himself totally unprepared for slacking demand and normal prices, when the Dove of Peace fluttered on the scene. The armistice was a blow to agricultural opulence, and the later part of 1918 and 1919 witnessed a steady skidding downward until 1920, when farm prices hit the bottom with a sickening thud.

Then came the period of reconstruction—of readjustment. Beef cattle herds, built to supply the demands of a nation at war, were all out of proportion for a nation in peace. Steer prices dropped from fabulous peaks to the price of a good war-time steak, and the stock couldn't be moved at any price. Millions of extra acres, brought into production of wheat and corn and beans to feed a fighting army at speculative prices, became millstones which dragged some farmers and ranchers into poverty. The transition from peace to war was a man-sized job, but it paid good wages. The transition from war to peace was a nightmare of struggle and worry, and it cost the American farmer more than he earned doing "his bit."

But the worst is over—the reconstruction period, the cycle of seven bad years, nears the top of the hill and the proverbial turn in the road. We have it on no less authority than that of the Hon. William Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture, that "the farmers of the country are now in their best position since 1920 in the matter of purchasing power of their products in terms of nonagricultural products." The Secretary, in reviewing the farm situation, mentions the better position of live stock, dairy and poultry products, and states that this year's crop of cotton, at October prices, is worth $209,000,000 more than last year's, despite the smaller acreage. The farm price of beef cattle on October 15 this year, was the highest since October, 1920, and hog prices are back to a position where once more the lowly porker can be referred to as the "mortgage lifter." The cotton belt, the northwestern apple districts and the northern wheat belt are all in better shape, it is pointed out, and the southern fruit and vegetable grower is marketing the products of his field and orchard at favorable prices. There are no conspicuous surpluses or shortages, and crop production, per capita of pop-

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS

BRAWLEY.—The Imperial Valley Citrus exchange 1927 season opened the last week in October, and indications point to a successful and profitable year. The fruit this year will be shipped to the Sierra Madre-Lamanda packing sheds, where it will be culled and made ready for shipment. Best grapefruit will be branded "Sunkist," and will be marketed through the California Fruit Exchange. This is the first year that Imperial Valley growers have been affiliated with this exchange.

WARNS AGAINST GRASS

EL CENTRO.—The county horticultural commission warns against the scattering of Para grass until more is learned of its nature. This grass has been heralded as an especially fine stock feed, growing where other grasses will not. If tests are to be made of its feeding value, however, they should be carried on where the grass cannot reach canals, it is stated, as otherwise a noxious weed might be released over the valley.

HOLD POTATO SHOW

RENO (Nev.)—Lyon won the silver loving cup awarded to the county having the best exhibit of potatoes, while Douglas took second and Washoe third, in the fifth annual Nevada Potato and Apple Show held recently at the University of Nevada. All sections of the State were represented in the displays. Displays of seed potatoes from twenty-five various localities attracted much attention. Elko county, which is trying to build up the seed potato industry, had a most extensive exhibit.

SOIL EXPERT ON TOUR

WINTERBURG.—Dr. A. P. Dachnowski, peat soil specialist with the bureau of soils, United States Department of Agriculture, was a recent guest of Farm Adviser Wahlberg, while studying the peat soils found in Orange county. Dr. Dachnowski was particularly interested in the peat deposits at Wintersburg, where he extracted samples from every foot through a sixteen foot strata. The peat formation is the result of thousands of years of tule deposit, according to the specialist. He is gathering peat specimens from all parts of the world, for a concentrated exhibit of soils in his department at Washington, D. C. Dr. Dachnowski recently returned from an extensive soil exploring trip in Europe, Russia, Finland and Sweden.

EARNS "PIN MONEY"

PASADENA.—Mrs. A. F. Strehle, 1490 Glenn avenue, this city, has learned the art of earning her own "pin money," and she learned it quite by accident. A small plot of ground in the Strehle front yard became an eyesore to Mrs. Strehle, so she planted it to aster plants and chrysanthemums. She had no intention of growing the flowers commercially, but so great was the demand from passers-by and neighbors, that Mrs. Strehle ended the season with quite a few dollars in her personal fund. She'll plant the yard to flowers again in the early spring, for profit this time, as well as pleasure.

WATER BONDS SOLD

SAN JACINTO.—The sale of $300,000 of the recent bond issue of the Fruitvale Mutual Water Company to William R. Staats and the Drake Riley & Thomas Company of Los Angeles for $288,000, or 96 per cent of their par value, is reported here. Funds thus secured will be used in retiring $217,000 of the company's outstanding bonds, the remainder going to make improvements to the company properties. The company serves over 4000 acres of land near this place and in the Fruitvale district. Roger W. Bruce is president of the company, the other directors being C. H. Mansur, W. H. Pawson, Jr., David Brockie, Charles W. Howard, Ray R. Mathews, Edwin Meyers and W. W. Perry.

LARGE GRAPEFRUIT ORDER

LINDSAY.—B. G. Rooke, independent packer and shipper, formerly operating under the name of the Hillside Packing Company, recently completed a contract for what is believed to be the largest single export order from the Lindsay district. It was for 10,000 packed boxes of Tulare county grapefruit, shipping period November 1 to March 10, 1928. The fruit goes to European markets.

WINDBREAKE DISCUSSED

VENTURA.—Methods of securing greater efficiency from windbreaks, and of reducing tree-root competition with crops, were described to Ventura county ranchers by Prof. Woodbridge Metcalf, extension specialist in forestry, at a windbreak field meeting at the Limoneira Company's Del Mar ranch recently. A majority of the ranchers who attended the meeting were from the Santa Clara Valley, where windbreaks, for the protection of crops from heavy east winds, are essential.

GOOD VEGETABLE DEAL

SANTA MARIA.—A total of 339 carlots of vegetables were shipped from the Santa Maria Valley during the month of October, exceeding shipments for the previous month by 152 cars. Shippers are of the opinion that the November movement will exceed even October's due to the demand for head lettuce, carrots and tomatoes for the holiday trade. The total returns to growers for vegetables shipped thus far this year from the valley has been $1,440,453, according to figures compiled by Clarence I. Nielson, horticultural inspector for this district.

HUGE HONEY SHIPMENT

CALEXICO.—Four cars, containing more than eighty-three tons of strained honey, recently passed through here en route to San Diego, where the honey will be re-

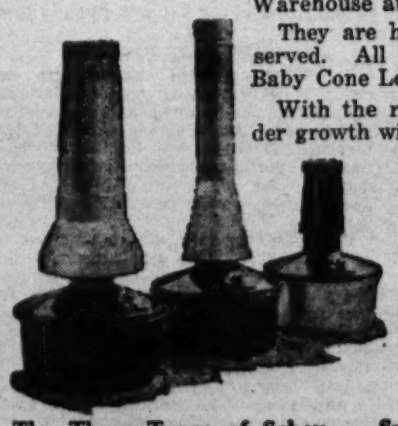
Get Heaters Before Frost Danger—Don't Delay and Take Chances

Ample Stock in New Warehouse at Covina Now!

Frost danger is just ahead. We have sold all the 100,000 heaters ordered by the Fruit Growers' Supply Co. Now we have prepared for you with a big stock of heaters on hand in the new Warehouse at Covina.



They are here for you—first come, first served. All three types—Jumbo heaters; Baby Cone Louvre and the Double Stack.

With the recent heavy rains, new, tender growth will start. Weather Bureau records show a very similar condition in 1922—the year of the big freeze, when in many districts only those with adequate heating equipment saved their groves from severe tree damage as well as crop loss. Why take chances with this year's and next year's crop?

The Three Types of Scheu National Heaters
1. JUMBO HEATER
2. BABYCONE LOUVRE
3. DOUBLE STACK HEATER

One of these three heaters will supply every heating need. They are practically smokeless and will burn through the coldest night.

test the national work through this visitor from Chicago. President Thompson was the principal speaker at a banquet the opening day of the convention, talking of agricultural conditions in Europe, from which country he has recently returned.

W. F. Eldridge, president of Riverside County Farm bureau, welcomed the delegates, as did C. A. Gillespie, president of Riverside Chamber of Commerce. One of the principal speakers at the regular convention sessions was Prof. R. H. Crocheron, director of the agricultural extension service, University of California. In his annual report of the work of this department in connection with the county farm bureaus of California, Prof. Crocheron urged that city dwellers be informed of the needs and problems of agriculture. He also called attention to the work being done with boys and girls of rural districts, through the agricultural clubs sponsored by the extension service. In an address on "Asia—A New

Southland Sends Cattle to Oakland Show

OAKLAND.—Southern California plans to invade this year's Dairy Show at the Oakland Municipal auditorium with notable entries in the cattle show, including a Los Angeles county community herd of Holsteins and another of Jerseys. San Luis Obispo has already entered a community herd of Jerseys, and two other leading herds of that breed are being filled for competitions which will carry more than $10,000 in premiums. Special cash premiums for community herds have been made possible by the Oakland Chamber of Commerce.

First entries of the Los Angeles community herd of Holsteins have been received from F. F. Pellissier & Sons, and this herd will include last year's grand champion Holstein bull, King Tola Korndyke Pontiac, and ing to build a $300,000 building at Davis to study animal nutrition, physiology and breeding.

One of the most interesting features of the day's program was the presentation of thirty-four large loving cups, given as prizes in the dairy cow contest. Pottenger Farm of Monrovia was awarded the sweepstakes cup for purebreds. This herd won both first and second on purebred heifers, with productions of 650 and 589 pounds of butter fat, respectively. It also won first prize in herds of more than thirty purebreds, with the average production of 503 pounds per cow. Frampton Brothers, Artesia, won second place in this class, with a production of 479.5 pounds of fat per cow. They also had the high five in this class, and second high purebred cow.

Santa Monica Dairy Company of Venice won heavily in the under-thirty-cow class in purebreds, by winning high herd and high five cows. This company also won the [illegible] five plenty of space to the asparagus bed, say several rows fifteen feet long, or a single row equal to that total length. One-year-old crowns are best, according to recent tests, and one should try to secure those with a few strong buds, rather than many small ones. The Martha Washington variety is well adapted to local conditions, and is grown by commercial growers. When only a garden plot is to be planted, one should secure crowns from a grower or a plantsman.

In making up a bed for asparagus, a large quantity of well-rotted stable manure should be secured, if possible. This vegetable responds to good culture very readily. In fact, the best results are obtained when the initial preparation of the soil has been right. In planting, first draw furrows twelve inches deep and about four or five feet apart in well-prepared moist soil. Then set the crowns in the bottom of this furrow, spacing them about two feet apart and cov-

Champion Hens Get 'Referee's Decision' In Farm Bureau Laying Test

By PAUL S. WILLIAMSON. Agricultural Extension Service

WHEN Tunney and Dempsey settled the last dispute about the world's heavyweight championship, a referee was employed as a matter of course. Even after taking that precaution, there was some argument about the decision.

In the same way poultrymen need a referee to render an impartial judgment upon the value of their stock. Every normal human who raises chickens is thoroughly convinced that his or her particular chickens are the best on the globe. The owner is usually only too willing to admit it. But to carry conviction to the world at large, it is necessary to enter some representatives of the flock in a fair fight, presided over by an impartial referee. The California Farm Bureau Egg-Laying contest, at Santa Cruz, offers poultrymen such an arena.

And just as the referee's decision that Mr. Tunney was the winner of the famous fistic combat did not check with the opinions of all the fans, so the egg-laying contest decisions are open to argument. There are many "ifs," just as there are in any kind of a contest. But by and large, the records hung up at an official contest may be taken as a fair indication of the egg-laying ability of the flocks they represent.

This contest at Santa Cruz is the outgrowth of a small local affair, conducted by a few progressive poultrymen of that community during the year 1918-1919. The local contest so aroused the interest of the poultry raisers of the area that the poultry department of the Santa Cruz County Farm Bureau took over the work the following year, and secured the advisory co-operation of the poultry division of the State college of agriculture.

In the 1919-1920 contest thirty-four pens were entered. The results again were most satisfactory, so that the active assistance, both of the agricultural extension division of the university and of the California Farm Bureau Federation was readily obtained to make the competition of 1920-1921 an officially indorsed "California Farm Bureau Egg-Laying Contest." Arrangements were also made to have the contest conducted under the auspices of the poultry division of the college of agriculture. With the financial aid of the Chamber of Commerce of the city of Santa Cruz, a larger and more desirable location was secured, a new specially designed contest building was erected, and the first official California egg-laying contest opened November 1, 1920, with fifty-four entries of ten hens and two alternates each.

COST RECORDS KEPT

During the eight years of its operation it has been very successful, not only in attracting national and world-wide interest through the high records it has made, but in demonstrating the practical value of an economical poultry ration. Careful records have been kept of cost of production. These records, as published from time to time, also have proven very valuable as a source of information for local poultrymen.

The land and buildings for the enterprise were furnished by the Santa Cruz Chamber of Commerce. The poultry division of the college of agriculture has acted in an advisory capacity, and Prof. Dougherty of the college has been, and still is, the president of the board of directors. Feeding and management policies, as outlined by the president of the board of directors, have been strictly adhered to. The local staff of the agricultural extension service has met with the board and helped to formulate policies, and has loaned its stenographic force to help with the clerical work.

The contest has received no financial support from any institution for current operating expenses. The fact that these heavy expenses have been met by the entry fees, sale of eggs, and an occasional subscription, is due to the untiring and loyal work of the public-spirited men on the board of directors.

The six main objects of the contest are as follows:

1. To afford poultrymen means of proving the worth of their respective strains of fowls.
2. To show the adaptability of California for egg production.
3. To create an appreciation of better poultry.
4. To establish a demand for high quality bred-to-lay stock.
5. To demonstrate commercially the practical results of the experimental work of the poultry division of the University of California.
6. To acquaint the public with the relative value of the different strains of poultry.

USE COMMERCIAL FEEDS

The management has always maintained the policy of using practical commercial poultry feeds, and has never resorted to forcing. The birds have access at all times to a mash of the following composition: 26 per cent bran, 18 per cent midds, 11 per cent ground oats, 11 per cent ground corn, 6 1-2 per cent fish scrap, 6 1-2 per cent meat scrap, 4 1-2 per cent soy bean meal, 4 1-2 per cent cocoanut oil meal, 3 per cent charcoal, 3 per cent ground limestone, 2 1-2 per cent alfalfa leaves and blossom meal, 2 per cent bone black, 1 per cent codliver oil, 1-2 per cent salt.

This is fed in the dry form, except for a small amount of moist, crumbly mash of the same formula fed at noon.

The morning grain feed is entirely of germinated barley. The evening feed is 20 per cent whole barley, 30 per cent wheat and 50 per cent cracked corn.

An abundance of fresh cut, tender green barley, kale or clover, is fed in the hoppers each day.

The success of this practical method of poultry management is attested to by the wonderful records the contest has made. The Alberta entry of ten hens in the 1922-23 contest, for example, laid 2817 eggs. The Alex Stewart hen, in the 1921-22 contest, Columbia Belle, laid 324 eggs. The entire contest flock has averaged between 176 and 204 eggs per bird.

Southland Benefits by October Rains

Late grapes, especially Emperors, and late fields of cotton in some districts, were slightly damaged by the downpour of October 31, which set a record for the heaviest initial rainfall in recent years, and brought the total October precipitation to more than 2 inches in Los Angeles county, and to as high as 4 inches in other sections of the Southland. The slight damage to grapes and cotton was, however, offset by the great amount of good done by the soaking, according to a survey conducted by the Los Angeles county farm adviser's office. The damage to grapes on the vine will result in a better demand at higher prices for that portion of the large crop already harvested and now in storage. Cotton damage, in most instances, was confined to a slowing down of the picking process, due to muddy fields.

Offsetting the slight damage, according to Farm Adviser Rounds, is the fact that most areas of California were in need of a good soaking before going into the fall and winter season. Citrus and deciduous fruit growers, as well as truck growers in Southern California, report that the heavy rain was more than welcome, and that their lands are now in excellent shape, well filled with moisture, which will bring their crops into early maturity. Optimism rules in the dry-farming areas of the State, where fall plowing was greatly aided by the recent storm. The range areas face the fall and winter season with excellent prospects of an abundance of forage for sheep and cattle. All in all, according to Farm Adviser Rounds, the drenching of October 31 was in reality one of those oft-heralded "million-dollar rains."

Reports from all sections of California indicate that the rain was of a general nature. Los Angeles recorded a rainfall of 1.60 inches on October 31, which brought the total October precipitation to more than 2 inches. The heaviest precipitation from the recent rain was at San Juan Capistrano, where 2.97 inches were reported, and the lightest was at Calexico, where but .06 of an inch fell. Orange and Ventura county orchardists report that the rain did a great amount of good in those districts. Northern California, also, participated in the late October storm, with 1.40 inches precipitation reported at Stockton; .59 of an inch at San Francisco; .37 of an inch at San Jose; and .57 of an inch at Sacramento.

State Farm Bureau in Annual Meeting

By JESSICA BIRD

RIVERSIDE.—An increase of membership and the pressing need for farm relief, including closer co-operation in the marketing of produce, were outstanding features discussed at the ninth annual convention of the California Farm Bureau Federation, held October 31 and November 1 and 2 in Riverside. Election of officers brought A. Ahlf of Colusa, president of the Colusa County farm and regional director of the farm bureau, to the presidency of the State organization. R. W. Blackburn, prominent Coachella Valley rancher, was chosen vice president. These men succeed Earle Houghton of Placentia, retiring president, and W. S. Rosecrans, Los Angeles, retiring vice-president. Alex Johnson was re-elected to the position of secretary-treasurer. Regional directors chosen include J. A. Smiley, Orange county, No. 1; C. E. Kelsey, Ventura county, No. 2; J. J. Neilsen, Fresno county, No. 3; B. H. Schulte, Monterey county, No 4; L. C. Stoll, Sacramento county, No. 5; E. E. Burnet, Placer county, No. 6; J. E. Bandy, Yolo county, No. 7; J. C. Johnson, Mendocino county, No. 8.

A. C. Hardison of Santa Paula, former president of the State organization, and President Ahlf, were elected delegates to the December convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation, to be held in Chicago. Earle Houghton was named as alternate.

The convention voted an amendment to the constitution, which will be effective after 1928, whereby the State dues of members are increased from $1.50 per year to $2.50. The increase was made to properly finance the law and utilities department, which will remain in charge of J. J. Deuel and his staff. The work of this department will continue under the present plan of financing by counties, until the amendment is ratified by the membership of the State federation. Sacramento was chosen as the 1928 convention city.

Mrs. B. H. Schulte, chairman of the home department of the Monterey county farm bureau, was nominated as chairman of the State home department for the coming year. She will succeed Mrs. Sarah Railsback.

The presence of Sam H. Thompson, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, was of primary importance to the convention delegates, who were enabled to contact the national work through this visitor from Chicago. President Thompson was the principal speaker at a banquet the opening day of the convention, telling of agricultural conditions in Europe, from which country he has recently returned.

W. F. Eldridge, president of Riverside County Farm bureau, welcomed the delegates, as did C. A. Gillespie, president of Riverside Chamber of Commerce. One of the principal speakers at the regular convention sessions was Prof. B. H. Crocheron, director of the agricultural extension service, University of California. In his annual report of the work of this department in connection with the county farm bureaus of California, Prof. Crocheron urged that city dwellers be informed of the needs and problems of agriculture. He also called attention to the work being done with boys and girls of rural districts, through the agricultural clubs sponsored by the extension service. In an address on "Asia—A New Customer," he pointed out the potential purchasing power of China and Japan as customers for fruits and vegetables of California, because of the rapid industrialization of those nations, and the ever-reducing agriculture. J. J. Deuel, of the farm bureau law and utilities department, was another speaker.

CAN GROW RICE SEED

BRAWLEY.—Rice seed can be grown in the Imperial Valley as well as any other place in the world, according to Prof. W. W. Mackie, of the University of California, who has been conducting rice experiments in this district. Growers met recently with Prof. Mackie at the McCarthy ranch, where valley-grown rice seed was used. The McCarthy field is one of the best in the valley.

FALL MELONS MOVING

BRAWLEY.—Fall cantaloupes and honey dew melons are being harvested in the Brawley district. The melons are of unusually good quality, and early shipments have created a good demand in all marketing centers. Commercial plantings of fall melons are being tried this year for the first time.

Southland Sends Cattle to Oakland Show

OAKLAND.—Southern California plans to invade this year's Dairy Show at the Oakland Municipal auditorium with notable entries in the cattle show, including a Los Angeles county community herd of Holsteins and another of Jerseys. San Luis Obispo has already entered a community herd of Jerseys, and two other leading herds of that breed are being fitted for competitions which will carry more than $10,000 in premiums. Special cash premiums for community herds have been made possible by the Oakland Chamber of Commerce.

First entries of the Los Angeles community herd of Holsteins have been received from F. F. Pellissier & Sons, and this herd will include last year's grand champion Holstein bull, King Tola Korndyke Pontiac, and the junior entrant, Sir Aaggie De Kol Acme 8.

California high school judging contests in both dairy products and dairy cattle, all of which will be held on Saturday, the closing day of the show, will bring together twelve teams in the products judging, and twenty-five teams in the dairy cattle judging, according to J. A. McPhee of the State department of education, superintendent. Among the teams which have qualified are those from the following high schools: Dairy products—Marysville, Petaluma, Fremont (Oakland,) San Juan, Santa Rosa, Visalia, Bakersfield, Riverdale, Caruthers, Tranquility and Santa Maria. Dairy cattle—Willows, Ripon, Lodi, Healdsburg, Point Arena, Petaluma, Salinas, Oakdale, Fowler, Caruthers, Denair, Turlock, Madera, Kingsburg, Beaumont, Manual Arts (Los Angeles,) Torrance (Los Angeles,) Riverside, Hemet, Lancaster and San Luis.

County Dairymen Stage Annual Dairy Day

By C. V. CASTLE
Agricultural Extension Service

Once each year the dairymen of Los Angeles county gather to celebrate the ending of the Farm Bureau cow-testing year. In spite of a rain, more than 200 dairymen gathered at the Arden Dairy at El Monte on October 27 to hear talks, partake of a barbecue and to find out who won the prizes in the year's dairy cow competition.

The chief speaker was Dr. George Hart, head of the animal husbandry division of the University of California. He spoke of the good work that is being done in this county on tuberculosis eradication, and the high production that has been obtained through cow-testing associations. He discussed some of the problems that confront the dairymen in nutrition and disease control, and told them that the university is going to build a $200,000 building at Davis to study animal nutrition, physiology and breeding.

One of the most interesting features of the day's program was the presentation of thirty-four large loving cups, given as prizes in the dairy cow contest. Pottenger Farm of Monrovia was awarded the sweepstakes cup for purebreds. This herd won both first and second on purebred heifers, with productions of 650 and 589 pounds of butter fat, respectively. It also won first prize in herds of more than thirty pure-breds, with the average production of 503 pounds per cow. Frampton Brothers, Artesia, won second place in this class, with a production of 479.5 pounds of fat per cow. They also had the high five in this class, and second high pure-bred cow.

Santa Monica Dairy Company of Venice won heavily in the under-thirty-cow class in pure-breds, by winning high herd and high five cows. This company also won the high pure-bred cow, with a production of 745.8 pounds of fat. Harry Johnson of Artesia was second in herd and fives in the under-thirty class. El Colmo Rancho of Norwalk won second place for fives in the over-thirty class, with 650 pounds

V. Del Fante of Van Nuys won the sweepsteaks cup for grades. He had the high-grade cow and the high-grade heifer, with a production of 512.8 and 973.5 pounds of fat, respectively. He won second for herd production in the over-150-cow class, with a production of 387 pounds.

John Vandermeer of Hynes won first on herd average in the thirty-to-sixty-cow class, with the remarkable production of 586.6 pounds of fat per cow. He also won second high cow with 849.9 pounds, and both first and second high fives in the thirty-to-sixty class, with production of 770 and 653 pounds respectively.

S. W. Boekema of Norwalk and Ira Hostetler of Pomona won first and second both in herd and high fives in the under-thirty class for grades, with production of 487 pounds and 404 pounds in the herd class, and 588 and 540 in the groups of five.

Walter Thompson of Burbank had the first herd in the 60 to 150 class, with the splendid production of 504 pounds per cow. He also won the first in this class on high five, with 720.9 pounds. Gustave Reinke of Downey was second in this class with 641 pounds. Hugo De Graff of Hynes won second place on herd average in this class, with 462 pounds.

R. L. White of Burbank won first prize in herds of over 150 cows, with the production of 406 pounds. Adohr Stock Farm of Reseda won second high five in this class, with 6.2 pounds of fat.

There were a total of 7871 cows to finish a year's record in the association this year, which is an increase of 3000 over last year. The average butter fat was also higher than last year, being 355.3 pounds per cow, with 9128 pounds of milk. There were 1491 cows in the association to make more than 400 pounds of fat in the year's time.

California Live Stock to Chicago Show

DAVIS.—Three steers, sixteen wether lambs and nine barrows will carry the University of California colors into the show ring at the 28th annual International Live Stock Exposition, Chicago, November 26 to December 3, according to an announcement made from the University Farm this week. An informal showing of the stock is planned at the farm just prior to its being shipped to Chicago, at which time breeders and others interested will be invited to inspect the animals.

Orange Prince Segis Pontiac

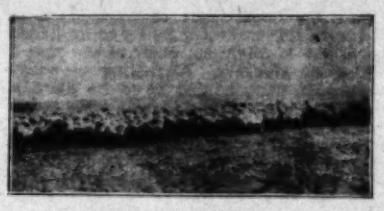
This "Black and White" (without the black) was senior champion Holstein bull at the Orange county fair. He was shown by the Orange County Farm.

Accompanying the stock to Chicago will be Professor Gordon H. True and Prof. J. F. Wilson of the animal husbandry division; Alex McDonald, beef cattle herdsman; George Phillips, shepard, and L. W. Feldmiller, swine herdsman. Prof. True will be the guest of honor at the annual dinner of the Saddle and Sirloin Club, which always is held at the time of the Chicago International, and Prof. Wilson will be one of the speakers on this occasion.

In the last eleven years the University of California has shown eight times at the Chicago International, although one year only sheep were exhibited. Twice the University has won the grand championship of the show with its cattle, and twice has had grand champion in sheep. Three times the college champion steer has been from California, and five times the University has had the college champion wether.

He Finds Ready Market For Lamb Crop

RIVERSIDE.—Joseph Grant of Riverside finds sheep raising both interesting and profitable. Mr. Grant has a flock of 2000 sheep, which he runs over the grain fields in Moreno Valley after the grain has been harvested. Wool production adds to the profits, as sheep are sheared twice a year in the Southland.



Profit on the Hoof

Part of the 2000 head of sheep being fed on grain stubble by Joseph Grant in the Moreno Valley area. Wool and lambs bring ready returns, says Mr. Grant.

"However," Mr. Grant states, "my sheep are not heavy wool producers. I am chiefly interested in raising lambs, for which I find a ready market in Los Angeles. Lambing begins the first of November, and continues until the latter part of December. We lamb on alfalfa ranches, because of the scarcity of green feed in the hills."

HOME GARDEN PROBLEMS

However, planting does not necessarily have to be limited to this area. In a commercial way, the producing season is reversed by cutting down the tops in June, throwing the plants into production during the winter. This practice can be followed if desired, or the plant can be allowed to take its natural habit of growth. The artichoke is started from suckers, taken from a parent plant of good characteristics. It is advisable that one secure the plants from a commercial plantsman or seed house, if only a few are to be planted, for generally they are trimmed up for planting.

If a bed is to be made of artichokes, they should be set five feet apart in rows six or more feet across. For the small home garden, however, it is advisable to use the artichoke as a "hedge" or border. Set the roots about six inches deep, and press the soil firmly around them, leaving a depression for a generous application of water. Six plants will supply the average family with enough buds.

ANOTHER DELICACY

Most folks who develop a small garden place, plan for an asparagus bed, and this is a most excellent idea, although one must wait for the delicacy. There is no vegetable which is better fresh from the garden. However, to get the best results, one should give plenty of space to the asparagus bed, say several rows fifteen feet long, or a single row equal to that total length. One-year-old crowns are best, according to recent tests, and one should try to secure those with a few strong buds, rather than many small ones. The Martha Washington variety is well adapted to local conditions, and is grown by commercial growers. When only a garden plot is to be planted, one should secure crowns from a grower or a plantsman.

In making up a bed for asparagus, a large quantity of well-rotted stable manure should be secured, if possible. This vegetable responds to good culture very readily, in fact, the best results are only obtained when the initial preparation of the soil has been right. In planting, first draw furrows twelve inches deep and about four or five feet apart in well-prepared moist soil. Then set the crowns in the bottom of this furrow, spacing them about two feet apart and covering them with six inches of soil. As the plants grow in height, more soil can be placed over them, and even after they have grown two or three feet high, the soil from between rows can be drawn up around them. Do not cut the first year, but wait until the second spring for the first "mess" of grass.

Rhubarb is one of the best garden vegetables, and some varieties can be used all year 'round for the making of pies and sauces. This vegetable, for its normal growth, requires a good soil, and will tolerate some shade. Best results are obtained from medium-sized roots, which can be secured also from growers or seedmen. About a dozen roots will supply the wants of the average family. Plant the roots about two feet apart, setting them so that the crown is on the level with the surface of the soil.

YOU'LL WANT BERRIES

Strawberries can be set out right away. If one wants berries the first season, then use the double row system, that is, make up raised beds about sixteen inches across, with a twelve-inch furrow for irrigation between, and set two rows of plants from ten to twelve inches apart on each shoulder of the ridge. Keep the runners cut off. To get the best results with the garden strawberry bed, select a spot that is fairly retentive of moisture, if possible, and do not fertilize the soil before planting. Also have the plot closely available to the faucet, since they will require ample water. If the soil is very light, then the double row, or raised bed system, will not work out satisfactorily. On soils of this nature, plant flat, spacing the rows far enough apart to cultivate and irrigate thoroughly.

The quality of the fresh fruit, their value in the making of jams and jellies, combined with comparative ease of culture, have all contributed to the present popularity of the blackberry and the dewberry. Some varieties can be found in nearly every garden. They will do well on almost any soil that is deep enough for free root development, so before planting, the soil should be turned over to a depth of at least fifteen inches, if possible.

By selecting varieties, once can have blackberries and dewberries from the latter part of April until November 1. The Advance will ripen about the twentieth of April, followed by the Gardena dewberry around May 15. A week later the Lucretia dewberry is ready, and then the Crandall and Macatawa blackberries, as well as the Mammoth and Cory Thornless. The middle of August finds the Himalaya in fruit, and this variety, under proper care, should last until November 1.

However, on the home place, one should best have a few plants of the Advance, the Gardena, Crandall and the Macatawa. The Himalaya is not especially adapted to the home garden. When space is limited, the Cory Thornless can be trellised on the fence. The Advance, Crandall and Macatawa are upright growing sorts, and should be planted four feet apart in rows six feet across. The Gardena can be set closer. While sometimes not afforded support, it is best to give the latter three varieties a two-wire horizontal trellis. Plant the Cory about twelve feet apart on the fence row. Blackberries and dewberries bear their first crop the following spring and summer, after the plants are set out.

Both the red and black raspberries do well in the Southland garden, and are very popular. They are planted eighteen inches apart in the home garden, with rows five feet apart, and supported by a two wire horizontal trellis. They require no pruning or cutting back the first summer, but in February of their first bearing season, they should be headed back to about three feet. The Cuthbert, St. Regis, La France and California Surprise are all grown in Southern California, while the Cumberland is the best black raspberry for local planting.

A new berry, the Improved Logan, or Young Dewberry (known locally as the Youngberry) is recommended to the home gardener. It is a cross between the Loganberry and the dewberry, with all of the good qualities of the Loganberry and more.

A subsequent article to appear early in the year will deal with the selection of varieties and handling of grapes and fruits for the home planting.

Here Is a Calf That Has Everything You Want

You remember Matador Segis Walker, one of the greatest foundation sires of the Holstein breed. Ten of "Old Mat's" daughters made from 1000 to 1209 lbs. of buttter in yearly tests, and another half dozen made between 900 and 1000 lbs. We have one of his young daughters from a 1270-lb. record cow who has sisters on both sides of the house with beter than 1070 lbs. of butter, and she also has three advanced registry daughters with very creditable records, one over 890 lbs. of butter as a 2-year-old; a rare and valuable line of breeding.

Her six months old bull calf is a nice, individual about 60% white with a good middle and good top line. His dam is of good dairy type with a particularly fine udder, and is averaging better than 50 lbs. of fat per month as a 2-year-old in the string with 200 others. His sire is a good son of one of the finest individual cows that ever made a 1200-lb. butter record. This bull's sire is a son of Sir Aaggie De Kol Acme, whose three nearest dams average 1176 lbs. of butter in yearly tests.

This is the kind of calf we would like to keep here, but as we have all the service bulls we can use at present, we want to place him in some herd where his daughters will get a chance to show their worth on official test.

Field Tour Interests Avocado Growers

VENTURA.—An industry in the first stages of its development in Southern California was the object for a gathering here recently, when 200 avocado growers from all parts of the Southland attended the second avocado growers' field day. The program was held under the auspices of the California Avocado Growers' Association, with the co-operation of the agricultural extension service.

Dr. J. Eliot Coit of Pasadena, avocado specialist, who was the principal speaker at the first tour held in Ventura county several months ago, delivered the principal address at the morning session at Seaside Park. "Pests and Diseases of the Avocado," was the subject of his talk. In the afternoon, during the field tour centered in three avocado orchards in the county, comparison was made by illustrations of the condition of the trees at this time, with their condition during the former tour of the county.

Climate, pests and various other conditions were discussed at length during the program, by Farm Adviser Vincent F. Blanchard, who spoke on "Growing Avocados Under Ventura County Conditions."

Other speakers on the morning program were C. V. Newman, manager of the San Joaquin Fruit Company whose topic was "Starting an Avocado Orchard," and E. C. Dutton, president of the State Association of Avocado Growers, who presided. An open discussion concerning the growing of avocados was led by Mr. Newman.

During the afternoon a field tour was made to the avocado orchards of J. H. Bays at Mound, Will Borchard near Oxnard and C. J. Daily near Camarillo. At these orchards, demonstrations were given of growing methods, including irrigation and methods of treating various avocado diseases. Local growers also told of their individual experiences in growing the fruit under Ventura county conditions, and Dr. Coit explained to the growers that the avocado industry is still in the stage where it is benefited most by the activities of amateur growers who are willing to experiment by planting many varieties of the fruit. It is in accordance with this type of development that the Ventura county farm advisers office is assisting the county growers to bring out all possible reliable data on avocado growing.

Heavy Grapefruit Deal in Arizona

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—Grapefruit shipments from the Salt River Valley this season will be the largest ever known, according to I. de R. Miller, manager of the Arizona Citrus Growers. As a rule, he says, the Arizona grapefruit grower makes even more money than the orange grower, especially with the Marsh Seedless. Mr. Miller declares that general conditions here, with a few exceptions, are highly favorable for profitable citriculture.

Oranges for the present season will be less in quantity than for the past two years. Last year, the Citrus Growers Association handled 186,000 boxes of fruit, 170,000 of it packed, and 75 per cent of it grapefruit, at a packing cost of 57 cents a box and a selling cost of 8 cents.

More than 175,000 citrus seedlings planted in the Salt River Valley are being budded with pedigreed stock. While most of this new stock is of grapefruit, there is something of a turn toward Valencia oranges, which some growers consider best for local planting. Heretofore, orange production mainly has been of Navels, which have had eastern demand at good prices, but the variety here is an uncertain bearer, susceptible of every adverse influence. Usually Valencias are lighter bearers in Arizona than in California, but this is believed a condition that can be corrected by proper fertilization. Valencias mainly are to be planted on a new area of citrus land being opened northeast of Mesa, where 2000 acres are considered available. Northwest of Phoenix, a large acreage under the Beardsley-Agua Fria project is to be planted to grapefruit.

REDLANDS.—Orange growers are rejoicing because of the rain late in October. They say that it was just what the trees needed at that time. It served to wash off the leaves and the fruit, and some growers say it will result in much larger sizes.

Growers Study Potato Field Trials

By F. H. ERNST,
Agricultural Extension Service

The recent potato field day at Temecula indicates an "honest-to-gosh" interest in the production of good seed potatoes. More than 150 potato growers, from all parts of California, and a few from Nevada, gathered at the E. D. McSweeney ranch, and the resultant meeting was undoubtedly one of the most interesting "spud" confabs held in recent years. Most of those in attendance traveled more than 100 miles, and burned up plenty of good gas, to acquaint themselves with the progress made in potato-growing methods. The McSweeney ranch is one of the largest potato projects in California, and affords an ideal place for study of the crop. Most of the White Rose seed used in Southern California comes from the Temecula area, where conditions seem to be most favorable for potato culture.

One of the most interesting things inspected on the field tour held in connection with the meeting was the seed-improvement project being carried on at the ranch. Beginning with just one sack of seed, which was tuber indexed and then planted in a small patch by itself, there is now a field of about thirty acres which shows a perfect stand. Mosaic disease has been reduced to about 2 per cent. In another year, seed from this plot will be available for commercial planting. This will be welcomed by the potato industry, as it represents undoubtedly the best White Rose seed available.

Growers were very much interested in the discussion, led by Jack McSweeney, on the handling of the fall crop. Most growers have experienced great difficulty in securing a good stand where seed was planted in the summer time. Mr. McSweeney states that for fall planting, seed preference is given to the previous fall seed, held in cold storage. This gives regular and rapid germination and an even stand, whereas spring seed is usually slow and very irregular in its germination.

Next to good seed, it is essential to have fertile soil. Large numbers of field trials have shown that organic matter and nitrogen are the two things most needed. Potash has given some results, but usually on the lighter types of soils. The purchase of fertilizer materials should, therefore, be on the basis of the plant foods contained and the cost per pound of such plant food. Field trials at Temecula this year have again demonstrated that increases in potato yields are largely proportionate to the available nitrogen added to the soil.

Jack McSweeney reported on a series of fertilizer treatments that were carried on in duplicate. Cottonseed meal used on two plots averaged 300 sacks, as compared to 184 sacks on equal sized check plots. Five hundred pounds per acre of a mixture of ammonium sulphate alone produced 341 sacks to the acre, at a cost of 12 1-2 cents per sack. Whether applications of ammonium alone are justifiable, and whether they are comparable to mixtures containing organic and inorganic nitrogen can only be answered by practical field trials. The McSweeneys believe that more inorganic nitrogen can be added than is customary in applications of the usual fishmeal or dried blood nitrogen. Their aim is to keep the cost of production within practical limits, and to produce large crops of superior quality potatoes. These objectives they hope to attain through field trials with fertilizers, and cultural studies under a wide range of conditions.

Most of the seed used in Southern California for the spring crop of potatoes is grown the previous fall. The fall crop has to be planted in July and August, and is harvested in October and November. Seed for this fall crop is often obtained from the spring crop, but the results are not very good. The previous fall's seed, held in cold storage, gives the best results for summer planting. The common objection to this is that it makes the seed too expensive. Chemical treatment of spring crop seed bids fair to become of considerable importance to the potato grower. Experiments with ethylene, potassium and throurea have proven that dormant seed potatoes can be stimulated to sprout when exposed under certain conditions. Ethylene chlorhydrin used as a dip solution, wherein the cut seed potatoes are dipped for one hour, produced excellent results in McSweeney experiments.

HAY TEST PLOT

FRESNO.—A hay test plot has been planted in Squaw Valley on the O. V. Piercy ranch, by the agricultural extension service of Fresno county, in an effort to select a more desirable combination hay for the foothill rancher. Tests are being carried on with common vetch, purple vetch, Monantha vetch, Calcarata, Senugreek, Lantils and Canadian field peas. When the most desirable legumes are chosen, they will be combined with barley or oats, or both, according to John C. Hays, assistant farm adviser of Fresno county.

The attempt to save odd scraps sometimes costs more in time and trouble than the scraps are worth.

Europe Takes Bulk of His Honey Crop

UPLAND (Cal.)—One hundred tons of honey were shipped to Europe last year by William Atchley, local bee-keeper and a director of the San Bernardino County Bee-Keepers Club, proving that the busy little bee is one of the best money makers in the "little live-stock" world. Most of the honey shipped to Europe by Mr. Atchley, went to Germany. Another heavy user is Scotland. European buyers prefer the wild honey produced from sage and buckwheat, rather than that from the orange blossom of Southern California, says Mr. Atchley, chiefly for the reason they have grown accustomed to the wild product, and have not used enough of the orange brand to really appreciate it.

The honey season just closed was a good one for the man who gives all his time and attention to bee-raising, says Mr. Atchley. Those who produced honey as a side issue, however, did not fare so well. During the orange blossom period, a good colony of bees produces honey at the rate of from 5 to 15 pounds a day, and first-class colonies, which were provided with proper equipment, produced between 75 and 100 pounds during the 15-day blooming period last spring.

The present is the time to prepare for the honey harvest of the spring, Mr. Atchley declared. Believing that the sage blossoming season is likely to be a short one, he has placed test colonies in the orange groves and sage and buckwheat range. Scales are provided and a close record is kept of the amount of honey each colony gathers. When production is shown to be increasing in a certain area all colonies are placed in that particular locality.

Good, young queens should be at the head of each colony, according to Mr. Atchley, and when winter comes the hives should be properly "shut down." The winter opening to the hive should be but one-fourth the size of the regular opening, and the hive must be kept warm and free from draught, he declares.

So far this year, Mr. Atchley's bees have produced 125 tons of honey. He expects the 1927 total to reach 150 tons.

San Bernardino's county's crop this year will amount to approximately 950 tons, it is estimated.

Market Problems Will Be Discussed

STOCKTON.—This year's California Fruit Growers' and Farmers' Convention, the sixtieth of the organization's history, and which will be held at Stockton November 16 and 17, promises to be one of the most important of the long series. Unlike the conventions of previous years when discussions were confined principally to proplems in connection with the fruit industry the meeting this year will be devoted to the farming industry in general and marketing in particular.

Live-stock marketing will have an important place on the program, and live-stock interests of the State are expected to be well represented. The pronouncement relating to the Federal government's marketing policy is looked forward to with much interest, as this will be made in person by Lloyd S. Tenny, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

In addition to the Federal program, the California Department of Agriculture will set forth its marketing policy in an address by Wells A. Sherman, chief of the new Division of Markets. Marketing of various California commodities is to be discussed by men identified importantly with the different agricultural industries and marketing associations of the State. National quarantine measures will come in for considerable discussion. Agricultural tariffs will also be taken up.

This Cotton Co-op Does Things for Grower

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—A large degree of success has attended operation of the Arizona Pima Cotton Growers, an organization that centers in this city. By no means does it embrace all the cotton growers of the Salt River Valley, but it is marketing more and more of the Arizona cotton each year, both long and short staple. In the annual report of President K. D. Hellwarth, statement was made that operating cost, per bale, for the past season was $2.04. For this the members secured advances aggregating $450,000 in the Salt River Valley, and $125,000 in the Yuma Valley, at 6 1-4 per cent interest, and also reception of cotton at the gins, truckage, storage, grading, shipment and sales, the care of the cottonseed and all bookkeeping. The organization is growing, as the farmers comprehend its policies, one of which is the gradual marketing of the valley product. One feature of profit is the ability of the association to secure reasonable rates for ginning and a good price for the cottonseed, assured when a fourth interest was bought in the Mutual Cotton and Oil company. This investment is nearly paid up, and the association's gin and oil stock now is valued at $336,000.

President Hellwarth states the greatest trouble with cotton growing in Arizona lies in the labor problem, and the great expense of bringing pickers in from other American points. Laborers brought in for picking very generally now have spread into other agricultural industries. The situation appears to be getting worse, in view of the tightening by Congress of the immigration quota. This was apparently done under demand of the American Federation of Labor. It is suggested as a remedy that cotton-pickers be given somewhat better housing conditions than they now enjoy.

A farm machine that stands exposed all the time not only depreciates in value, but often requires a lot of extra time and patience to get it ready to run when it is needed.

Gaining Ground In War On Mealybug

RIVERSIDE.—More than 300,000 ladybird beetles have been released this season in the citrus groves of the county to combat the Citrophilus mealybug, according to E. G. Tuthill, superintendent of the Riverside county insectary. Most of these were placed on the new and one-year-old infestations, as it was not believed necessary to do further protective work on the groves where ladybirds had been released for two years running.

One of the essential features of the mealybug campaign is the control of Argentine ants, says Mr. Tuthill. This alone has cost the growers an average of three cents per tree for poison material. The cost of the ladybirds, he reports, has been as follows: 1925, 1 cent per beetle; 1926, ¾ cent per beetle; 1927, ½ cent per beetle. During the three years, 636,000 beetles have been reared in the insectary, at a total cost for material, time and overhead of $4235.

About 640 acres were infested with Citrophilus mealybug in 1924. The next year, 85,000 cryptolaemus ladybirds were reared and released in 312 acres of groves. The insects were placed in the worst infested section, the very worst proving the original forty acres in which the mealybug was discovered.

In 1926, another 250,000 ladybird beetles were released, many in the same groves, but concentrated chiefly in a new infestation in the Arlington Heights district. Before releasing the insects, it was found necessary to control the Argentine ant, and to put burlap around the trunks of the trees as traps for the mealybugs, and provide protection for the beneficial ladybirds.

According to Mr. Tuthill, there are whole groves, formerly infested, that are now practically clean.

Grain Crop Assured by Early Fall Rains

FRESNO.—With two inches of rain the last of October to put the soil in proper condition for fall plowing, grain farmers of the San Joaquin valley probably will have the major portion of their grain under ground nearly two weeks ahead of the usual time, according to J. C. Hays, Fresno county assistant farm adviser. If the grain reaches a height of four inches by the time frosts strike, the crop may be practically assured, says Mr. Hays.

Planting of grain this fall is expected to at least equal; and probably pass, the total acreage of last season, because of the good prices paid this year. Most of the crop is usually planted between October 15 and November 30 in the San Joaquin Valley. Some is planted as late as December. Rains during the fall season are also very desirable, as they assure a good supply of early winter feed. Already patches of green have appeared in the lower foothills and valley areas.

Here's An Ideal Farm! No Work, Good Pay!

SAN DIEGO.—Most farmers dream of a farm without work, other than the harvest. It was left to Miss Ethel Page of Los Angeles to discover such a farm near Grossmont. It was a small lake hidden in a grove of eucalypti and pepper trees, planted to Egyptian Lotus. She sensed the commercial value of the great scarlet blossoms, that had been wasted since the plants had been set out almost twenty years before by a world traveler who had hoped to make his home near them. He had imported the plants from Egypt.

Two years ago Miss Page, aided by her mother, was able to secure a lease on the lake and its surrounding grounds. Now without labor, other than cutting and marketing, she says, the Lotus farm provides a good income. The plants bloom from June to September, and the blossoms are shipped to Los Angeles, where they have commanded a high price. After the flowering season, large quantities of leaves and seed pods are sold to manufacturers of curios.

The Lotus blossom is the sacred flower of Buddhism, hence oriental residents of California seem always eager to secure it and are glad to pay good prices to florists.

Uncle Ab says its better to do something without thinking than it is to think without doing anything.

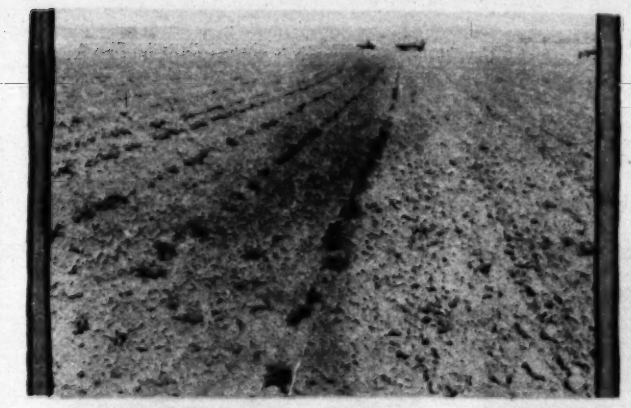
You Can't Grow Good "Spuds" by Just Planting 'Em

(Illustrating Story by F. H. Ernst)

Southland potato growers gathered recently at the McSweeney ranch, near Temecula, for a field tour and to study potato culture. This picture shows an interested group listening to Jack McSweeney presenting his views on careful seedbed preparation, proper handling of seed, and adequate irrigation and cultivation.

The four men on the left are from Las Vegas, Nevada. They are greatly interested in seed potato culture in their own section, and came down to get a few tips from Mr. McSweeney. The black-eyed beans planted to the right of the potato patch are for crop rotation purposes.

The McSweeney potato "patch" proved an ideal spot to study the lowly "spud." Between 400 and 500 acres are planted each year to both the spring and fall crops. The fall crop is used mostly for seed.



Both sides of this field were planted on August 20. The potatoes on the left were from fall stock, left in cold storage until planting time. The rows on the right, just coming through, are spring seed stock planted without any treatment. This proves the value of cold storage seed.

The Throurea treatment causes the eyes to sprout a number of shoots instead of just one, as shown by this picture. This may be of some value in the production of "one drop seed."

Cold storage potatoes are usually best for seed, says Mr. McSweeney, but good storage conditions play an important part in the vitality of the seed. On the left are fall potatoes cold-stored for seven weeks, while those on the right are from seed cold-stored for 14 months for experimental purposes. The latter germinated slowly and were weak.

Uniform and prompt germination of potatoes planted in July and August is, of course, desirable, and usually hard to get. The middle row, showing vigorous growth, was treated with Ethylene; the row on the left was treated with Throurea; and the row on the right was treated with Ethylene by gassing for 36 hours.

Sodium nitrate has been used somewhat for the stimulation of sprouting, but this treatment is likely to cause seed damage, as shown in the middle row.

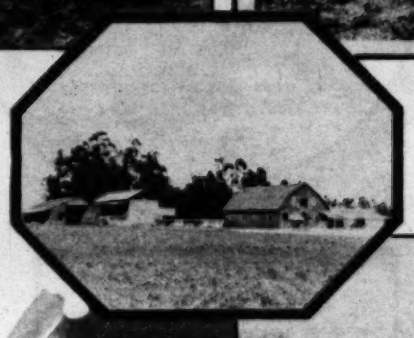
There Are Better Places for Sewage Than the Ocean

(Illustrating Article by H. H. Bushnell)

Adjoining the city limits of Alhambra is the Pasadena City Farm, of which this is a typical view. The farm has nearly always paid its municipal owner a goodly income and, what is considered of more importance, has afforded a place for the disposal of the Crown City's sewage. Of recent years, South Pasadena and Alhambra, as well, have made similar use of the city-owned agricultural tract.

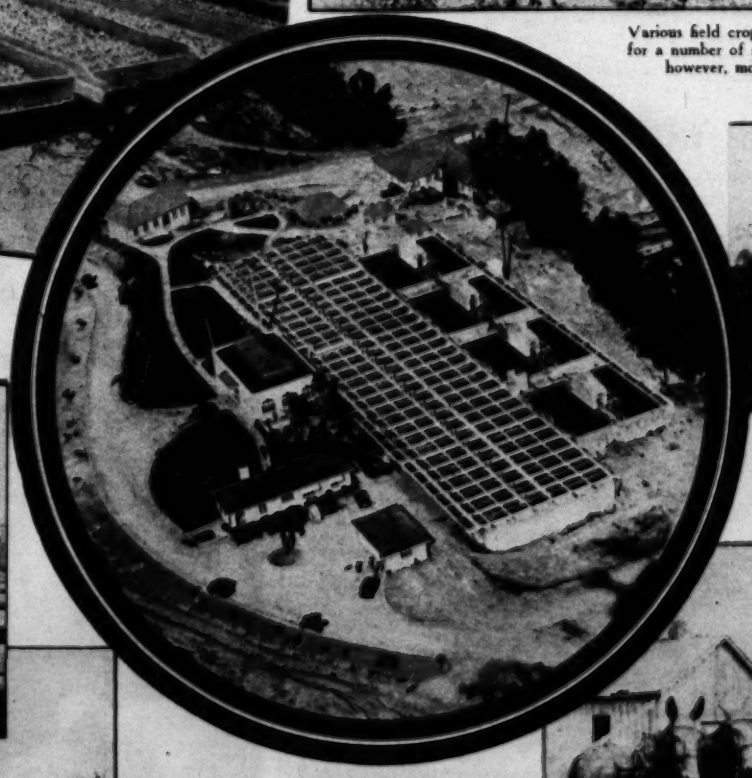
The Pasadena tract has about seventy acres in citrus, mostly navel oranges, some thirty acres in walnuts and a large acreage in field crops. Fertilizer obtained by the scientific treatment of sewage keeps the soil rich, and water from the same source is used for irrigation. The sewage treatment plant on the farm is one of the most modern plants of its kind in the world.



In the barn at the left the farm offices were formerly maintained. Fire this year destroyed barn, offices, and many records of the municipal establishment.

Various field crops are grown. Potatoes were the mainstay for a number of seasons, as this scene indicates. This year, however, most of the land was devoted to beans.

The municipality holds memberships in both citrus and walnut associations and markets its orchard products through association channels. Here is a part of the walnut crop.



The Tri-City Sewage Disposal Plant, as the big sewage treatment plant is called, occupies forty acres of the municipal farm lands. Here the sewage is received and aerated in a series of huge tanks, the water, purified, being utilized to irrigate the five hundred acres of the farm and the solids being converted into fertilizer. This view from the air shows the office, power plant, aeration and settling tanks, with the fertilizer factory at the rear.

There's this much water left over after the farm has all it needs. The overflow is discharged by a concrete pipeline into the Rio Hondo several miles away.

Three close-ups of the treatment plant aeration tanks, where air, forced into the sewage, destroys septic germs and provides nitrifying bacteria in their place. These latter practically digest the solids and destroy all odors. The dried solids are high in nitrogen and humus and besides being used on the farm, are being prepared, sacked, and sold as commercial fertilizer.

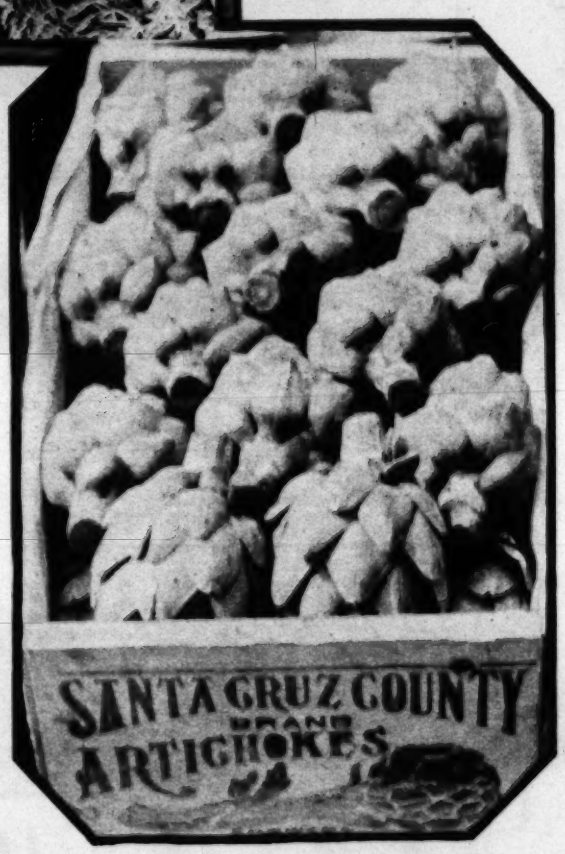
Mule power is still the main source of power on the Pasadena agricultural tract. This "battery" has been in service for years.

Southland a Winter Paradise for the Home Gardener

(Illustrating Article by Ross H. Gast)

Newcomers to Southern California quite often face serious problems in planning the home or suburban garden, with different seasons, soils, and crops to consider. In selecting permanent economic plants, that should be in every garden, it is wise, first of all, to consult with some reliable seedsman. Artichokes are popular in the Southland, but in the small garden it is best to plant them as a hedge or "border," rather than in large beds as shown above.

This shows the method of trellising if the home gardener desires to plant Crandall blackberries.

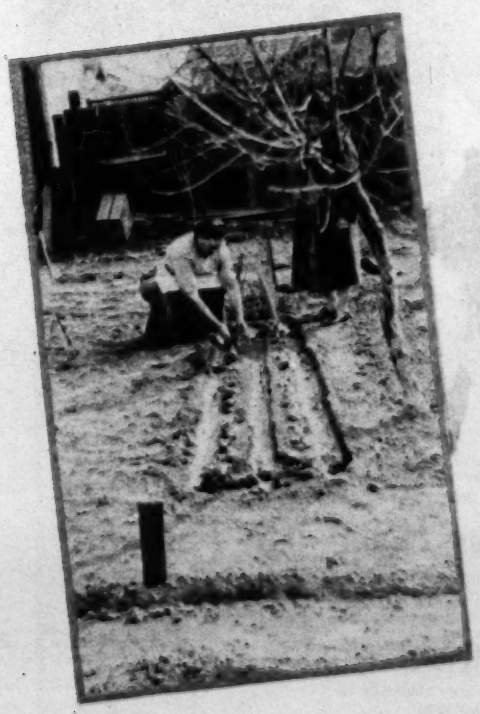


No vegetable is better fresh from the garden than asparagus. It is advisable to hill up the asparagus rows as the plants grow in height. The Martha Washington variety is adapted to local conditions.

The Cory Thornless bears heavily under proper culture.

Artichokes are a real table delicacy, but they are easily grown if the best type of plants are selected. Globe artichokes, above, are recommended.

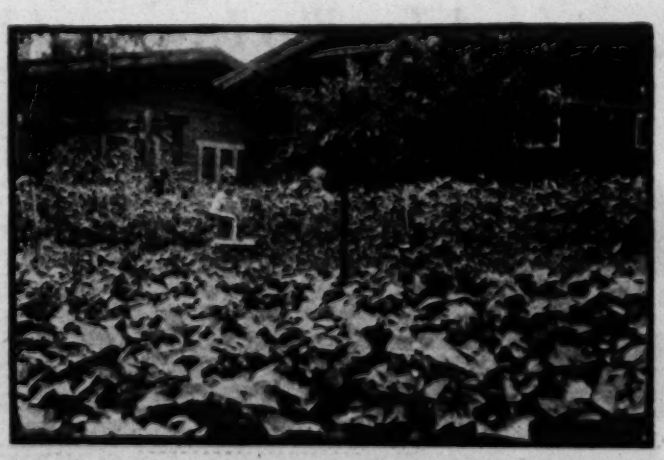
Raspberries are a Southland garden favorite.



Strawberries can be set out right away. This woman, in starting her home strawberry bed, is using the single row system. The double row system is advisable in California if you want strawberries the first season.

Trailing types of blackberries, such as the Cory Thornless, can be planted on the fence row.

This shows the proper type of strawberry plant for fall planting. The tops should be cut back somewhat.



Fence rows are also ideal spots for the raspberry "patch."

Fathoming GERMAN SECRETS of WAR

A French Ace of Counter-Espionage, Penetrating to Essen, Witnesses the Superlatively Important Test of a New Gas Shell Before the Kaiser

ON APRIL 23, 1915, we received the following communication:

Department for the Supervision of the School for Chemical Research
Laboratory of the Department of War

Paris,
April 23, 1915.

From the director of the main laboratory to the director of the Counter-Espionage Service.

According to a report received by this office from the general commanding the N— army, it appears that yesterday, April 22, 1915, toward five o'clock in the afternoon, a large cloud of heavy, greenish yellow vapor came from the direction of the German lines between Bixchoote and Langemark (Belgium.) The wind blew it toward the Allied lines.

An entire division of French infantry was hit by it. Despite their violent coughing and choking, our soldiers held fast, although their heroism cost many of them their lives.

As the use of gas was definitely forbidden by the Hague agreements of the 29th of July, 1899, we will be greatly obliged to you if you will furnish us at once with the details of this business . . .

(Signed) X.

This business did not catch us unawares. Since we allowed no schemes on the other side of the Rhine to mature very long before our directors got hold of them, and since we had learned that several German factories were preparing some unusual "tricks," we demanded details.

But for perhaps the first time since the outbreak of the war we found ourselves up against a blank wall. Behind that wall something important was happening.

We had, however, two points of departure: 1. The factories in question were all connected with the chemical industry. 2. Most of the output of these factories went to the Krupp works at Essen.

In the latter factory there were several men who, without actually belonging to our organization, had, before the outbreak of hostilities, consented to give our agents certain information—for a consideration. Moreover, when traveling in Germany in 1911, I had got in touch with a German engineer who was working for the Gulsheim-Elektron people at Frankfort-am-Main. M. S.— had, since the beginning of the war, been working as a "mobilized chemist" in the Badische Anilin und Soda Fabrik at Mannheim.

My "friend," M. S.—, who had been on the Badische payroll before (he worked at their branch factory at Butirki, near Moscow,) had a first-class job at Mannheim. It was such a job that, if necessary, he could get the details of what his compatriots were doing in secret. Well, M. S.—, for reasons that I shall not divulge—and wisely!—was not in a position to refuse me anything that I asked him. My chiefs happened to think of this little fact, so they requested me to go.

Before setting out I had to lay all my plans with the utmost care. A counter spy who goes into enemy territory has against him from the moment he crosses the frontier all the power of the enemy police. I assure you, that is not to be sniffed at!

However, by means that I may not reveal—the Germans have never found out about them—I got into Germany. I had no trouble getting the information my chief desired from my "friend" S— at Mannheim.

One of the things he told me was that Germany was preparing a poison gas campaign. In support of his assertion, he not only gave me the formula of the gas his compatriots had used on April 22, 1915 (it was chlorine gas—C 12,) but also the formula of these four other gases then in preparation: Bromine (liquid)—Br2; Benzyl Bromide (liquid)—C6 H5 CH2 Br; Bromacetone (liquid)—C-H3 CO-CH2 Br; Methyl Chlorosulfate (liquid)—SO2 CL-OCH3.

Lilium Regale

Our Regal Lily

This recent importation from the Orient is destined to become the favorite of all lilies. The term, regal, is well applied to this splendid flower. The Madonna lily, St. Joseph's lily and other so-called Easter lilies are fine types, but they must all bow down before Lilium Regali, the magnificent lily of the Far East.

The flowers are white, slightly suffused with pink. The base of the throat is of a rich golden yellow whcih extends part way up the trumpet. The fragrance is delightful, reminding one in a slight way of the jasmine or gardenia.

This variety of lily blooms early in July and will grow well in either sun or shade, the bulbs increasing in number each succeeding season.

These liliums shoot up their giant stalks to the height of three or four feet, producing from eight to ten buds, which open quickly, expanding into flowers of mammoth proportions. The effect is magnificent. The individual flowers are so placed on the stalk that in full glory of bloom the plant suggests the thought of some antique candelabrum, each wax-like blossom having the apparance of a candle in its bracket.

THE BULBS WE OFFER ARE SPLENDID TWO-YEAR-OLD STOCK AND WILL BLOOM THIS SEASON

ON BEING TOO CAREFUL

By Bruce Barton

Illustrated
by
Rockwell Van Buren

THEY told me the other day that a big, full-blooded friend of ours had broken down at the age of forty-three and was in a sanatorium.

This is not a remarkable bit of news unless you know the circumstances.

The big fellow was one of the famous oarsmen of his time on the crew of an eastern university. His father's income was sufficient so that our friend has never worked. He has been a traveler, a fisherman, a big-game hunter. His first and almost his only real concern has been to take care of his physical well being.

And he goes to smash at forty-three.

The father, on the contrary, works every day as the president of an important business in a highly competitive field. He is still hitting on all six cylinders at the youthful age of eighty-one.

There is something to think about.

Lord Leverhulme, the great English manufacturer, in a recent letter to a friend, quoted this story of Gladstone:

"During the early coaching days, Gladstone used to inquire from the coaches that went out of London through Barnet and St. Albans, whether it was not hard on the horses, and whether the alternative road, which goes through Slough and is fairly level, was not better.

"And he was surprised to find that the horses on the Highgate road lasted half again as long as the horses on the level Slough road. From which he drew the inference that it was variety and change, collar-work at one point and no collar-work at another, that was best for the health of a horse, and in his experience, best for the health of a man."

Gladstone himself was that sort of worker. He knew not how to take relaxation and exercise, but he made no effort to spare himself when it came to work. He carried a tremendous load all his life and was sufficiently youthful in old age so that he took up the study of a new language a year or two before the end.

I have no quarrel with the folks who "look after themselves," as the saying goes, who are always cautious not to overwork or be overtired. They doubtless live quite comfortably, but I think they deceive themselves if they imagine that they are going to outlive those who work hard and long.

The man who throws his whole self into his job seems somehow to draw new strength and energy from its up hill and down dale exactions.

And frequently he outlives the chap whose principal care is to be careful.

A gentleman, whose name is so well advertised that we need not mention it, has predicted that the United States is about to enjoy a hundred years of uninterrupted prosperity.

When that prediction was published, I happened to be with a man wise in these affairs.

"Will there be a hundred years of uninterrupted prosperity?" I asked.

He shook his head.

"Why not?"

I expected him to show me a chart or say something about the "business cycle" or "economic fundamentals," or to use some of the other well-worn phrases. But to my relief, he took an entirly different approach.

"There will not be a century of uninterrupted good times because the universe is not arranged on that basis," he said. "What is taking place on this earth is a great experiment in the development of human character. The Creator is not interested in money or markets, but in more enduring men.

"Such men are not developed when everything is easy. They never come out of countries where the sun shines every day. Trials develop them; problems develop them; suffering develops them. As long as the present Divine plans continue to operate, we shall continue to have enough setbacks to keep the race from growing altogether soft."

Years ago Roger Babson made a chart on which one wavy line represented national prosperity and the other wavy line showed church membership. It was decidedly interesting. When money rolls in too easily and too long, men drift away, not only from their churches but from hard work and simple living; they form extravagant tastes; they take long chances.

Then comes the panic. Their easy wealth evaporates. They clear their lives of rubbish and start in again on the sound basis of economy, worship and work.

Sometime the race may develop to a point where it can stand prosperity all the time, but in our present state hard times have still their needed work to do.

Ignatius, the grand old Bishop of Antioch, on his way to suffer martyrdom in Rome, sent this ringing message to his younger colleague Polycarp, the Bishop of Smyrna:

"Be diligent. Be sober . . . Stand like a beaten anvil."

It is the men who "stand like a beaten anvil" who have done the big things. But men can't stand like beaten anvils if they're made of French pastry. Or are wrapped up always in the gentle softness of prosperity.

A man who has accumulated more than a million dollars in various enterprises was in my office not long ago.

"I understand that Jones is going to leave you to go into business for himself," I said, referring to one of his younger associates. "I hope the venture will be successful."

"It will be," my friend replied positively. "I wouldn't have let him undertake it unless I was sure he could make it go. It's a point of pride with me to have my boys successful.

"The biggest satisfaction I get out of business is in picking likely youngsters and helping them up the hill," he continued. "Look at the men who started with me. There's Mason, vice-president of the best concern of its kind in the country; and Emerson, who has made a fortune in Chicago; and Needham, with a snug little business that gives him fifteen thousand dollars a year; and a dozen others. I held on to them in the face of all sorts of offers until just the right thing came along. Then I said: "Go to it, and I'll help you all I can."

"I am prouder of them than I am of my factories," he concluded. "Their success is the best thing in my business life."

As he spoke, I thought of another millionaire who died not long ago. Of him it was said that he hired brilliant young men, paid them well, sapped their ideas and energies, and tossed them out like squeezed oranges. He left great wealth when he died, but that is all he did leave. There is no single man anywhere who can say: "I owe my good fortune to the interest which that man took in me. His training and encouragement made me what I am."

About a century ago a certain scientist was startling the world with his researches. One great discovery after another came out of his laboratories; his lectures were thronged by eager listeners. He was the lion of the hour.

He received a note one day from an unknown, self-educated boy, the son of a blacksmith. The boy confided to the scientist his ambition to give his life to scientific research; he even hoped that some day he might meet and talk with the great man himself.

The reply to the note was "immediate, kind and favorable." The boy was invited to meet the scientist, and later became an assistant in his laboratory.

The scientist was Sir Humphrey Davy, to whom the world owes a great debt for his long list of discoveries in physics and chemistry. But an even larger debt is due him for the encouragement offered to the unknown son of a blacksmith, whose later work outshone his own. Sir Humphrey Davy's greatest discovery was that boy—Michael Faraday.

I sometimes think that successful businesses should add a line to their letterheads after this fashion: "John Jones and Company, Builders of Automobiles—and of Men."

And that somehow the government should discriminate, in levying its taxes, between the businesses where men are merely used and those where men are made.

ARE YOU SUFFERING from painful affliction of the feet, broken down arches, callouses, bunions, etc.?

Ready-made Arch Supports are an unsatisfactory makeshift because everyone's foot is different and the displaced bones, enlarged joints and deranged ligaments complicate matters still further. We make supports from carefully prepared plaster of Paris casts and alter them to accommodate changes brought about by the wearing of the supports. In order to give relief and lasting satisfaction it is imperative that the foot be restored to as normal a shape as possible. We have an extensive experience in the correction of flat-foot, broken down arches and other deformities of the feet, and are able to promise our clients comfort and relief in every case.

It is not necessary to wear clumsy shoes with our supports; on the contrary, we often restore daintiness of appearance to feet badly deformed and unsightly.

Restores Hearing With German Discovery

SCIENCE has made remarkable progress in making it possible for deafened people to hear. Recognized authorities on both continents consider a new discovery called the "Duotone" the most perfect means of making the deafened hear instantly. It is an entirely inconspicuous device and is so tiny, the earpiece is worn in and not on the ear.

Results are astonishing even in the most severe cases.

The R. L. Scherer Company of Los Angeles are the distributors in Southern California and Arizona for this German invention. A trial demonstration for those interested will be given by Mr. L. E. Greene, factory representative, at the offices of the company, 736 So. Flower Street. Write him today for full information and trial offer.—[Advertisement.

CARE OF THE BODY

pital, a modern and recently built institution, I was very pleased to see the nurses spraying the babies instead of immersing them.

As with the adults, the spray bath is by far more hygienic, more sanitary, and more conducive to health. Especially when baby soils his skin by the close-lying napkin, is it undesirable to wash the body with polluted water. With a spray, each particle of water is fresh and clean and not used twice.

For all normal conditions, the spray bath should be used after the first two weeks of life. During the first two weeks only a sponge bath should be given.

If the skin has running sores of any kind, or if there be an abscess or other pus-discharging disease, the same water should never be used twice. That is, it should not touch two parts of the body as is necessary in an immersion bath.

The next question would concern the temperature of baby's bath. You, undoubtedly, know that many Indian tribes and others immerse the new-born infants in a creek or stream of cold water under the belief that this toughens or hardens the infant. This may be true of those that survive, but we, as a civilized nation, are not concerned with destroying our puny infants. We want to conserve, rather than to destroy life.

The thread of life is very delicate in a tiny infant, and one cannot jeopardize its existence. A tiny infant is like a very aged person. The vital energy must be conserved.

The application of cold to either group, the very young, or to the very old, must be done cautiously, advisably, if at all. It is a mistake to thrust a tiny child into a cold bath or under a cold spray without adaption and acclimatization—the shock is too great to that delicate, sensitized, nervous system.

On the other hand, the mother who bathes her child in hot water almost as hot as he can comfortably bear it, equally injures her little one.

The devitalizing enervating effect of hot water destroys baby's natural resistance and weakens him tremendously. Besides this, hot water dissolves the precious oils from baby's skin. It is these oils which give the delightful softness and velvety feeling to baby's skin. Their loss is irreparable. When one dissolves the oil by continuous hot bathing, baby becomes predisposed toward the skin eruptive diseases.

What should be the proper technique for bathing baby? During the first two weeks of infancy he should be given a tepid sponge bath. Use a soft cloth for his body and separate pieces of absorbent cotton for each of the body openings, including the eyes. He should then be dried in a soft, napkin and warmly dressed.

After baby is approximately one month old, the bath should be changed. If he likes to play in his little tub, prepare his bath in the usual manner—that is let him rest on a bed of clean soft napkins and splash around. The temperature of the water should never be warm, tepid only.

Baby should not be permitted to remain in the water more than from five to eight minutes. By this time the skin is thoroughly acclimated to the water and there is the possibility of undesired reaction, that is—chill. An ideal bath consumes four or five minutes. It is destructive to baby's resistance to come directly from a warm bath to be dried and dressed. Every bath for baby as well as those of older folks should always end with the application of cold water. However, this must be done somewhat cautiously.

Baby should become slowly adapted to its use, the best technique is to take him from his bath, place him alongside the tub, dip the hand in cold water, and rub his body with the cold, wet hand. After several days of this procedure, a cloth or sponge may be used.

After several weeks, the ideal method is to use a spray attachable to any bathtub and to give baby a brief spray of cold water at the close of his bath. He should then immediately be well rubbed until that soft pink glow comes to his skin—a sign indicating good reaction and normal body warmth. This technique will go a long way toward immunizing baby against the frequently recurring colds.

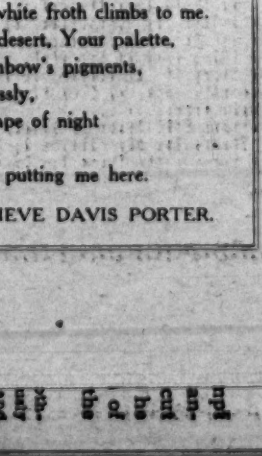
Seen from the Green Verdugo Hills



By John Steven McGroarty

We wish that you all who sit in the Synagogue could have been with the neighbors the other night in the green Verdugo Hills when they were gathered together in the little gray house in the hollow that has two big rocks behind it and the lilac bush in front.

The Talk Was About That Other Country

We wish you all could have been there because of the talk that was going around in the little gray house. The talk was about that Other Country and what it may be like when we all reach it and are settled down in it to stay forever and a day. That Other Country for which we are all inevitably bound, and from whose bourne no traveler returns.

It was a bonnie night, like a night in June, with the windows and doors of the little gray house flung open. The warm, gentle night winds whispering in the trees. The crickets in full tune in the chaparral. The cloudless sky deep with stars. And one deep star that one man loves swung like the lamp of Venus high above the dim crest of the hills. A star that holds memories in it that one man cannot forget.

Well, as we were saying, the talk was about that Other Country. And we wish you all could have been there with the neighbors, listening in and maybe having your own say every now and then.

The way the talk started was that our neighbor, the man who plays the flute, remarked, naturally and innocently enough, that the night was like heaven.

And then all the talk drifted that way—talk about heaven and what it must be like.

It is that way with the neighbors in the green Verdugo Hills when they are gathered together. Some one will make a remark about something or other, and then nothing else but that very thing will be talked of the whole evening long.

Maybe some one will make a remark about rutabagas. And so, rutabagas it is. And you would be surprised to know all that can be said about rutabagas. In a discussion of that subject alone, simple and humble and prosaic as it may seem, quite all the knowledge and learning of the ages can be rung in.

In the propagation, growth and harvesting of a crop of rutabagas there is an amazing combination of circumstances to be taken into account.

The chemistry of the soil must be considered, almost to begin with. Which is to say that the chemist is concerned. And, next to the engineer, or maybe ahead of the engineer, comes the chemist. He is the fellow who must be reckoned with in this ultra age of science. He is the man we must look to for help when the earth's oil supply is exhausted. And the coal all gone. He is the man we must look to, when the time comes, to turn stones into bread.

And from the time the seed of a rutabaga is planted in the ground till it is harvested and cooked and placed on a dinner table dozens of other specialists take a hand. Last but not least, the dietitian.

Has not Dr. Lovell told us all, time and again, that a man can do nothing better for his health than to eat rutabagas?

But, we are getting away from our story.

It was not of rutabagas or anything else earthy that the talk was in the little gray house on this night that we are telling you about. The talk was about heaven.

Now, this talk about heaven had no sooner started than the man who has the phonograph said, wait a minute, he said, before you all get into this conversation and meaning to take up the evening with it, let me put a record on the phonograph that has to do with the subject in hand.

The record on the phonograph was that old, haunting negro spiritual called "Heaven."

"Heaven—heaven—
Everybody talkin' about heaven
Aint gwine there—"

So ran the words. And then the man who plays the flute resumed his opening of the discussion.

I wonder if that's so, he said—that everybody isn't to go to heaven when they die? Will any man that was created be shut out of God's heaven, everlastingly and forever, after he has endured the pain and sorrow, the sufferings and the care of this world?

It was a staggering question. It is a question to stagger even the most profound mind. But, as far as that's concerned, here was a question that the simplest mind can grapple with, as well as a profound mind can do. Heaven is not a question of learning, education, or even intellectuality. It is a question of faith, and nothing else. It is a question upon which an unlettered man may be wondrously informed; and the scholar densely ignorant.

And it was also pointed out in the discussion that a great many people who boast of belief in their particular religion and who are intensely partisan about it, seem to not like the idea of anybody going to heaven but themselves. Their notion of it is that God made heaven specially for them and for no one else.

The neighbors gathered together in the green Verdugo Hills thought this to be the most grotesque idea of all, concerning heaven.

Now, anyone might say, well enough, that all this that was said has been said many a time before. True it is, but what made the night magical in the little gray house in the hollow was the conception of heaven expressed by the man whose house is by the side of the road.

Most anyone you meet can point the house out to you. There are roses nearly always growing over the door of it, there is a hive for the honey bee among the fruit trees in the garden, and an old, gray, friendly dog will meet you at the gate. And anytime that you may be kind enough to stop you will be welcome to a glass of goat's milk and a cookie.

And this is what the man who lives in the house by the side of the road thinks heaven is like.

Heaven is not a place where, when we go to it, we shall be fat little angels with wings, nor is it a place where we shall all have crowns and golden harps. The man whose house is by the side of the road, does not even think that there are sidewalks and streets of gold in heaven.

Angels are there, to be sure. But, they were always there. And there are seven particular angels who stand always in the presence of God and are His messengers. Gabriel is one of these—Gabriel who brought the message to Mary, who buried Moses, and who is to wind his horn on the last Great Day when God shall call back the sea and roll the heavens as a scroll. But man—"a little lower than the angels" and often a whole lot lower—won't be like the angels at all.

We shall be there as we are here, only that our deformities, the scars that life on earth has left on our bodies and in our hearts, will all be healed. Youth will be restored to us. And we shall, at last, have our hearts' desires.

Those whom we have loved and lost on earth we shall find again in heaven. And those who loved and were kept apart here by fate will go hand in hand across the fadeless fields of asphodel; they shall sit by the still waters and speak the dreams that could not be uttered here.

There are green forests in heaven. And there is much laughter among the trees. The endless days filled with a vast content and the peace that passeth all understanding.

This is what was said by the man whose house is by the side of the road.

When he had finished a hush fell upon the little gray house in the hollow. Deeper than ever before seemed the night with stars. And the star that one man loved because of memory shone brighter than it had ever shone. And each man in the little gray house sat wrapped in his own dream.

CONTENT

God, I love Your world that You made,
I thank You for putting me in it.
I love to dance in the sun
And watch my shadow on the grass.
It quiets my soul to lie in the shade
And look up into a tree.
I climb the slopes of Your hills,
And smell the fragrance of the flowers below.
I reach the heights and hear the music of the winds.
I gaze with rapture on Your blue, blue sea;
Up the rocky cliffs the white froth climbs to me.
At eve I walk on Your desert, Your palette,
To see You mix the rainbow's pigments,
And wait there breathlessly,
To watch the purple drape of night
Cover Your handiwork.
I thank You, God, for putting me here.

GENEVIEVE DAVIS PORTER.

There is a rafter of the Synagogue that stretches over the red hills as you journey down the high roads to the bright lake of Elsinore. And under this particular rafter sits a member of the Synagogue who every now and then lays before us the thoughts that come into his mind.

We Don't Think We Would Like It

Just lately he has been wondering if some of these smart fellows who are inventing things might not be able to devise a contraption that would control gravity. A contraption that attached to each side of an airship would enable it to raise up straight from the ground and come down the same way.

Now, as far as we, ourself, might be concerned, the thing is entirely too deep for us. The Lord did not bless us with inventive genius. When we were a boy we couldn't even fashion a kite. Other boys had to do it for us. And to make our sled for coasting on the icy hills of old Penn's Woods in winter. The only thing we shone at was shooting marbles. And, by gollies, when the marble season was over we had all the glass allies there were in our village.

And so we must pass the message around to those who sit under the rafters of the Synagogue between Dan and Beersheba, which means the whole wide world. Passing the message in this way may set some clever brain at work. And the result may be that this thing of getting an airship to raise up straight from the ground and to come down the same way may be accomplished.

More to please the man who sits under the rafter of the Synagogue near the bright lake of Elsinore than for any other reason we hope that this contraption will materialize. But, personally, we think we should admit that we are not at all interested in it. And the reason is that we have no desire whatever to travel by air.

There are a great many people in the world who, like ourself, cannot stand heights. Many people who like us when they are on a tall tower or on the top of a high building have an insane impulse to jump to the ground. Poor Charles Lamb was like that, and there are many other instances in history.

We fear that if we were ever to be taken up in an airship that we would have to be tied hand and foot in it. Otherwise we would jump, and if it would so happen that the airship was then, say, a couple of miles up in the air, the jump down to terra firma would do us no good.

There was an old theatrical man in San Francisco years ago who was taken up in a balloon. It sailed across the great harbor and over among the hills of Contra Costa. And when it landed and the old theatrical man had returned to his friends in San Francisco they were eager to know whether or not he had enjoyed the experience. He said no—he did not. He didn't want any more of it and after this, he said, it would be "terra cotta" for him.

We say the same—"terra cotta" for us. And we shall look forward with keen anticipation to when most everybody is traveling by air and our little Henry shall have the big roads of the world most to himself.

What Made His Hair Grow?

Read His Letter for the Answer

"Two years ago I was bald all over the top of my head.

"I felt ashamed for people to see my head. I tried different preparations, but they did no good. I remained bald, until I used Kotalko.

"Now hair came almost immediately and kept on growing. In a short time I had a splendid head of hair, which has been perfect ever since—and no return of the baldness."

This verified statement is by Mr. H. A. Wild. He is but one of the big legion of users of Kotalko who voluntarily attest it has stopped falling hair, eliminated dandruff or aided new, luxuriant hair growth. KOTALKO is sold by busy druggists everywhere.

CARE OF THE BODY

insufficient oil, dandruff will result. When there are skin eruption in any other part of the body, it will inevitably affect the skin of the scalp.

Better than water, lotions, ointments, shampoos, and the host of other remedies for dandruff, is exposure to the sun, an alkaline diet of fruits, nuts and vegetables, freedom from hat pressure, and a gentle loosening massage to increase the circulation and invigorate the blood supply of the scalp.

Above all, hot water washes to the head should never be used. Hot water dissolves the precious oils and leaves the hair dry and scaly—an excellent producer instead of preventor of dandruff.

The hair and scalp do need washing but all that is essential is merely a fairly soft soap, and the liberal use of cold water, at the close of which there should be a deep, vigorous finger massage of the scalp.

Laxatives

If you will make a brief study of the process of peristalsis, the activity of the intestines whereby food is passed forward, it will shed some light on the why and the how of laxatives.

All laxatives are divisible into three main groups:

(1.) The mucous membrane and nervous irritants.

(2.) The salts.

(3.) The lubricants.

In the first group are included most of the patented compounds whose presence in the intestines is so irritating that an extraordinary peristalsis is established to get rid of them.

The various teas, herbal extracts such as cascara, senna, licorice, etc., as well as drugs like phenolphthalein, come under this category. Their ultimate effect is to produce, first, congestion, then inflammation.

They are neither remedial nor curative. They accentuate constipation.

The second group is that of the salts. All salts are laxative. The higher the molecular weight of the salt, the greater its laxative properties.

Salts are hydroscopic in action. That is, they extract water from the blood and thus flush the intestinal system. Their very presence is so irritating that, in order to neutralize and get rid of them, the blood must give up its own precious fluids.

Thus it is that salts accomplish their flushing action.

Ultimately the osmotic (filtering through) power of salts is lost through the inflammation that invariably ensues. Then they become ineffective.

By this time the patient turns to more powerful medicines. The last group, and the one in which there is a great deal of confusion and misunderstanding, is that of the so-called intestinal lubricants.

They are sold under the presumption that they have no irritating, inflammatory effects. The claim is that their action is solely through lubrication of the fecal wastes and thus they cannot be classed in the same group as the ordinary laxatives.

Many people place castor oil in this group.

Water

Modern hydrotherapy has become one of the most important adjuncts that the healing art knows.

Its uses are multifold and varied. In fevers it is infinitely superior to any antipyretis coal tar drug. In subnormal temperatures it will assist restoration to normality very rapidly. In diseases where vitality is low, water constitutes a splendid tonic. In others where there is an excess of nervous energy, it soothes and has a sedative ecet

Proper usage of water will invigorate the feeble, calm the neurotic, stimulate the sluggish, hasten elimination and retard exhaustion.

The proper use of water constitutes an agent that in its flexibility and adaptability for healing purposes is second to none.

Care of the Baby

There are a number of important points that should be understood concerning baby's bath. There are many ways of giving a bath. The old orthodox manner is to put baby into a tub and sponge him in the usual fashion. That is the way our mothers bathed us. We—our children, they—theirs, and each generation the same, ad infinitum. But, it is coming to be recognized that proper bathing is fairly important.

milk, a generous piece of butter and seasoning.

Eggplant a la Rumanian

Toast eggplant on tin over fire, turning until skin is thoroughly charred on all sides, then remove from fire, and let cool. Remove skin, place peeled eggplant in dish in refrigerator or cooler. At serving time, drain off juice, place in chopping bowl with one bunch cleaned green onions and chop. Add olive oil as desired. Place mounds in nests of crisp lettuce leaves, surround each mound with red radishes, and top off each mound with a ripe olive.

Cold Beets

Cook beets in skins as usual, pour off hot water, chill in cold water for few seconds. Peel, cover with lemon juice. Chill in ice box. Honey may be added. These may be served alone on lettuce or in salad.

Salad Suggestions

Combine: Celery, bananas, grapes and serve on lettuce. Apples, celery and cabbage on lettuce. Cabbage and grapes. Or grated carrots and shredded cabbage. Parsley, cottage cheese, pineapple and mayonnaise on lettuce.

A Wonderful Sandwich

Between very thin, very brown and crisp, buttered slices of whole wheat bread spread a soft ripe avocado.

Baked Carrots

After slicing one bunch of carrots into discs, cook them in a little water until just soft. Butter a deep baking dish and put in a thin layer of carrots, then a layer of white Spanish onions thinly sliced, mixed with some chopped green pepper. Over this sprinkle a layer of toasted whole wheat bread crumbs. Repeat the process until the pan is nearly full. Melt a lump of butter by pouring some of the hot water the carrots were cooked in over it, mix in some seasoning of onion or garlic juice, and then pour over the pan of carrot mixture. Bake slowly for half hour. When cooked enough, brown under flame and serve.

Head Up and Stomach In!

"Stomach in and chest out" is something that is rarely practiced. If it were we would have considerably less of the abnormal vicissitudes, dangers and terrors of childbirth; we would not be such a constipated nation today; and the national resistance to disease would be tremendously increased.

Here and there feeble efforts are made in our school curricula to correct the habits of the children, but at best it is a drop in the bucket. Fallen stomachs, fallen wombs, and the prolapse or displacement of practically every abdominal organ can, to a large measure, be traced to abnormalities of posture.

Learn how to walk straight in a position that is not tensed, abdomen pulled in, shoulders thrown back, chest out, head up, chin in! Do it consciously for a day, a week, a month. Slowly you will become inculcated with the new habit. Slowly it will develop you and go a long way toward accomplishing a physical reformation.

Cold Water and Dandruff

Water and cleanliness seem to be somehow directly related. The daily bath is an institution that is firmly embedded in the habits of the people. The free and liberal use of water is generally understood to be concomitant with cleanliness.

In general this is so, but here and there one runs across exceptions. In the care of the hair or skin, internal cleanliness is vastly more important than the external application of liberal quantities of water.

The average young woman considers it a necessary part of her toilette to take the weekly or biweekly shampoo or hair wash in order to remove the accumulated dandruff. Frequently this is done with the aid of lotions, ointments, oils, etc.

The common belief is that by keeping the hair continuously clean that it will act either as a preventive or cure for dandruff. Innumerable patent antiseptic lotions are on the market with much-vaunted, cleverly written claims for their curing ability.

What is dandruff? Dandruff is nothing more nor less than the scaly peeling of the skin of the scalp. It cannot necessarily be considered a disease. Its cause does not lie in bacterial infection, but rather in the improper or unbalanced ingredients of the blood.

When the skin of the scalp is too oily, dandruff will result. When the scalp has

7,778 LEGS HEALED
By Increasing Circulation

A Circulation Correction Method will quickly heal the most stubborn leg sores or ulcers in a few weeks. It reduces swollen legs and relieves practically all pain suffering over night. No matter how long your legs have been troubling you, circulation will stop the pain and allow you to walk and play as well as ever—while the leg heals.

A hundred physicians, picked at random, have said that over 90% of leg sores and ulcers, swollen and aching legs, are the result of faulty circulation. They all agreed there was no safer, pleasanter, surer and inexpensive way of correcting this fault and healing the legs than by increasing the circulation. Viscose Circulation Method does that perfectly. Send for book on leg troubles with a complete explanation of how circulation heals. This book is free. Write today.

By Katherine Newlin Burt

Fear caught at Barnaby's heart. He clutched her arm . . . They were leaning side by side against his coping.

UNDOUBTEDLY he was ill, undoubtedly he was no longer very young, undoubtedly he was a failure; nevertheless, it seemed to Barnaby Graem that loyalty might have reinforced the affections of a beloved woman so that even with a complete awareness of these facts she could still have dug with him some gold out of their joint claim on living. He found considerable gold unaided; with her help there would have been a vein.

But Maydie was not, when all is said, a prospector or a pioneer. She wanted, Barnaby had learned to believe, her gold refined and even shaped and stamped to coin. At least this was certainly the demand of her family for her. Her mother and her sisters—all with the same kind of face and figure as Maydie, fair and light, that is, with shining gray eyes and curly hair—articulated her probable disillusionment concerning the gold of her marital claim. It had not—Maydie's mother would have said, did in fact say with no very clear understanding of her simile—"panned out."

Barnaby was a failure. The sale of his first book had promised other sales as flattering; the second book had fallen flat; his third had not crept into a second small printing. Maydie and he were living in a New York apartment on the savings from that first book and on Barnaby's insignificant but sure inherited income. They were not living very well. Maydie was better at expenditure than at economy, just as, in reverse similarity, she was better at being loved, perhaps, than she would ever be at loving.

"You'd think poor Barnaby with a wife like you—and you do look so pretty and distinguished in good clothes—would have more ambition," said Maydie's mother. "Why doesn't he try some real business . . . and drop this writing?"

Maydie, who had been proud of marrying an author, twisted her pretty lips and moved her pretty slender shoulders.

When a doctor, to whom he had made a stealthy visit, told him that an open-air life in the country was a grim necessity, Barnaby laughed, coughed, and laughed again.

"It's not a joking matter, Mr. Graem. Your chest—"

Barnaby turned his thin, hard, expressive face on the medical adviser, and the latter, too, smiled. The laughter of Barnaby's eye was eternally contagious.

"My chest isn't the joke, you see," he explained. "It's your prescription that amuses me. It's so—well—so spacious."

And he went home, still with a laughing eye, and tried to write the third movement of his "Symphony in Prose." But Ellen, Ruth, Margaret and Mrs. Brettel were trimming a hat for Maydie in the adjoining room. Barnaby gnawed at his pencil, ran his hands through his hair, and suddenly lost his sense of humor and his magnanimity. He flung open the door, and the four thin, fresh, bright-eyed, sharp-featured faces turned to him with a look of startled scorn.

"I must have quiet," he said. "I must abso-lute-ly have quiet—Q-U-I-E-T—or I might as well give up my profession."

He walked across the room and went out into the narrow vestibule. It was too narrow. He opened his front door, then walked up to the roof.

He stopped, his mood arrested by what looked like a group of dancing clowns. Fantastically with a snapping of wet muslin they danced against an immediate blue sky; a bellied burgomaster nightshirt, a frilled matronly nightgown, a marvelous, inflated, and active pair of pantaloons, and alongside of them, some short, plump, lacy articles, coquettish and most immodestly insouciant.

The wind blew. It smelled of smoke and ocean harbors, of cargoes and adventures. Behind him the jolly clowns snapped all their jolly joints and leaped again, holding up their arms.

Barnaby breathed, slow and deep, with the cramp of misery releasing his threatened chest. He leaned there and looked around him. Immediately beside him, only a few feet lower, was the roof of the neighboring apartment-house, a studio attic evidently, for through a half-opened skylight he could see a workman. He wore a smock and was charging to and fro before an easel with the scissors aspect of bodies seen from a height. His model was somewhere out of the angle of Barnaby's vision.

The sight of that artist, the sound of his whistling, dreamy and absorbed, stung Barnaby like salt on a raw cut. He tightened his fingers on the coping and looked away. A man at work upon the work he loved, a man who saw that what he did was good, a man in full vigor of creation . . . health! What was it the doctor had said? "An outdoor life—fresh air—quiet!"

Barnaby coughed, flung up his head, turned right about, and stared at the top of his world. Air? . . . here was all humanity might want of it . . . and here was the sun, a bold round ball of it . . . and here . . . O God of still creation—there was peace. Some quotation, a text perhaps, took a quaint sharp stitch cross his memory . . . "better to dwell in a corner of the housetop . . ."

Barnaby laughed aloud. A chair in the shelter of that chimney-angle, a warm overcoat, a rug, a sewing-board across his knees . . . he was better off than that artist-fellow, for he needed no studio, no easel, no palette, and no model. His brain had once been full of malleable color. It might be again—and life itself with every sharp and fragrant memory was a model. Almost he could feel the hurried tripping arrival of a host up through the trapdoor of his consciousness. Thoughts stirred and came to life. He would have something to say again . . . something that must be said . . .

. . . . . .

For the first week, however, Barnaby did no writing at all. He lay along his deck-chair in the sun, half closed his eyes, and breathed—as he had forgotten how to breathe. Sometimes he was asleep. The stillness saturated him, seemed to massage him as the brown fingers of Hindu women take nerve by nerve and delicately disentangle them, deliberately, one by one. He did not go down to lunch but drank a bottle of milk slowly. He had a strip of canvas, and a rubber blanket, in case of storm. Maydie thought he went out to the library.

"Well, I hope and pray he'll do a stroke of honest work there," commented Mrs. Brettel bitterly.

On the tenth day of his experiment in orientalism, Barnaby's train-tongue seemed to wake from an enormous lethargy and to wag in silent, voiceless words. Upon its owner came the necessity to take down what it had to say.

The work over which he had so long fretted had to be begun again; the tongue would have it so, speaking with an authority stronger than Barnaby's jaded will. It commanded that the first two movements—he had conceived his novel as a symphony—should be thrown into the fire.

The new speech ran in a different vein, not like that first successful book which in an unconscious slavery he had been trying to imitate, less like the second, least of all like his third. There seemed to be a new mind in him, something that had matured in an ironic patient loneliness, in a pained humility, but which for all its over-disciplined childhood had a spirit by no means jaded or sad. It was not even bitter as it might have been; only reasonable. Its voice had the edge of wit and the resonance of poetry. Barnaby felt for the mysterious inmate a queer respect. At the end of five or six hours of work the writer on the roof would be exhausted, elated, happy as he had not been for seven years. He would fold up the closely written sheets, weighted beside him against the wind, and lie there in his chair, passive, until the nipping air forced him to take a brisk, rapt walk to and fro. It was then that the jinnee made his cloudy plans for the next morning.

In February Barnaby had to bring up to his corner a little kerosene stove which kept his feet and hands alive and made a small circle of ruddy human warmth at the bottom of his icy sea of pure deep air. When it snowed, the stove hissed and sputtered. He had to shovel clear his corner from the morning's drift. But day by day he felt the cold less bitterly, his thin body grew perceptibly heavier and more resistant, his blood seemed at once thicker and more nimble. He became unreasonably gay, could have danced with the Tuesday morning clowns pinned up by a stout incredulous person who mumbled "Mornin'" to him from a big Irish mouth contracted about a hedge of clothes-pins. She thought him crazy, doubtless, but what matter up here so far above the rational wash-day world . . . no madder than these sober clothes of every-day humanity, inflated and preposterous upon her line.

From Maydie, Barnaby kept jealously the secret of his sky workroom. Several times he hid at the turn of the concrete stairs when she, so straight and slim and unobservant, went in at their front door. She must never know where he was; if she should come to find him at the library, he would invent, he told himself, some explanation of a temporary absence. Part of the magic, the miracle, lay in secrecy, in the true and profound isolation, spiritual and physical, he had achieved. His only real companion was the unsuspecting artist, charging, whistling, or gnawing an anxious lip down there before his canvas. That man was a hard worker, but he had his diversions, too. There were hours of tea for two, and hours of evening revelry. At night, Barnaby fancied, his chimney, tiptoeing above the skylight, saw queer things.

Then, one March evening, humanity reached up and wounded his happy solitude.

All day the ragged clouds, pouring across his dizzied chimney-top, had threatened rain. The city had a blasted look, its buildings stared, its voices were the murmurs of imprisoned men. The river wrinkled and crawled with white snakes behind its stacks and masts and factory chimneys. Barnaby's work, happily progressing under a mysterious wind as steady as that which drove the clouds, kept him detached from the sad humor of the day, until, at four o'clock, the sun struck him with a sudden glare. The city glittered, its smoke flamed, the clouds smoldered, the west opened to a clear green emptiness. Barnaby, excited by the shock of splendid light, got up and walked to the edge of his housetop.

The studio skylight was closed and lamps were lit below. It was the tea hour, but evidently not for two today. A piano was life men accumulate in front what the doctors politely call an apron. The same operation was recently performed on one of the richest and ablest men in the United States.

"That operation will seem simple in years to come. Surgeons will do away with pain in childbirth. And, what is more important, they will perform operations to enlarge the cavity containing the pituitary gland, giving that gland room to grow, thus removing one great cause of human inferiority.

"'When we understand our glands as well as the electrician understands his mechanism, the efficiency of the human race will be increased at least 100 per cent.'

"The above is an editorial from the Cleveland News. The editor evidently imagines that the human body is an inanimate machine. Strange reasoning! What is the significance of the distortions that the editor would have trimmed off? Gluttony. To cut off the excess weight reduces the capacity for taking care of the excess fluids heretofore carried in these overfed distortions.

"This particular editor would think a farmer a fool who would cut down the capacity of his granaries and storage-houses with a continuously increasing harvest.

"Slicing off twenty-five, fifty, or more pounds of fat removes just that much storage room for surplus urine, sweat, and blood. The heart and remaining blood vessels must carry an extra amount equivalent to the amount carried by the part destroyed by the operation, and this puts an extra strain on vessels already carrying too much. The patient's organs will all suffer from the extra load. Excess weight is a conservative measure. Water that the kidneys fail to carry out of the body is stored in the form of fat; and this is what the editor, with a distorted surgical vision, would have removed. He does not know that such operations remove vicarious urinals which the body has so laboriously built as fluid repositories. The heart is enervated in all obese people, because of an excess of circulating fluid, causing overwork. Besides, the heart's nutrition is reduced, because the nutritive standard of the blood is much below the normal, and all the muscular system as well as the heart is weakened in power.

"Reducing the repository accommodation of the body without reducing its need is to invite destruction. If it were possible to force an excess weight on the body in as few minutes as are required to cut the same amount off, it would cause death. Nature does not work in that way. There is a lot of illogical surgical work done in these modern hectic days, but the proposition brought forward by this editor is about the nuttiest surgical scheme of which I have heard.

"If the obese wish to play a safe game, they should stop all fluid, eat raw fruit and vegetables, and protein three times a week; exercise vigorously every day, and stop coffee, tea, alcoholics, and tobacco. This scheme will reduce weight and restore dependable health; but it is not for weaklings or for those looking to get something for nothing. To get well, these perambulating private rest rooms must be willing to make personal sacrifices to have their house of flesh put in order. It is worth the effort, but it is a job that cannot be delegated to others. To cut fat off is the work of mountebanks or quacks. Real physicians will not engage in it.

"The prophecy that some day surgeons will be busy removing weight with the knife is a fiendish dream that would do credit to a Nero. More surgery has been practiced in the past than will be done in the future. Surgical insanity will end; for people will get wise. It is a game intended to beat nature. Disease will be treated rationally some time; cause will be known and removed; then nature will do the curing."

Cold Beets

Cook beets in skins as usual, pour off hot water, chill in cold water for few seconds. Peel, cover with lemon juice. Chill in ice box. Honey may be added. These may be served alone on lettuce or in salad.

Salad Suggestions

Combine: Celery, bananas, grapes and serve on lettuce. Apples, celery and cabbage on lettuce. Cabbage and grapes. Or grated carrots and shredded cabbage. Parsley, cottage cheese, pineapple and mayonnaise on lettuce.

A Wonderful Sandwich

Between very thin, very brown and crisp, buttered slices of whole wheat bread spread a soft ripe avocado.

Baked Carrots

After slicing one bunch of carrots into discs, cook them in a little water until just soft. Butter a deep baking dish and put in a thin layer of carrots, then a layer of white Spanish onions thinly sliced, mixed with some chopped green pepper. Over this sprinkle a layer of toasted whole wheat bread crumbs. Repeat the process until the pan is nearly full. Melt a lump of butter by pouring some of the hot water the carrots were cooked in over it, mix in some seasoning of onion or garlic juice, and then pour over the pan of carrot mixture. Bake slowly for half hour. When cooked enough, brown under flame and serve.

Head Up and Stomach In!

"Stomach in and chest out" is something that is rarely practiced. If it were we would have considerably less of the abnormal vicissitudes, dangers and terrors of childbirth; we would not be such a constipated nation today; and the national resistance to disease would be tremendously increased.

Here and there feeble efforts are made in our school curricula to correct the habits of the children, but at best it is a drop in the bucket. Fallen stomachs, fallen wombs, and the prolapse or displacement of practically every abdominal organ can, to a large measure, be traced to abnormalities of posture.

Learn how to walk straight in a position that is not tensed, abdomen pulled in, shoulders thrown back, chest out, head up, chin in! Do it consciously for a day, a week, a month. Slowly you will become inculcated with the new habit. Slowly it will develop you and go a long way toward accomplishing a physical reformation.

Cold Water and Dandruff

Water and cleanliness seem to be somehow directly related. The daily bath is an institution that is firmly embedded in the habits of the people. The free and liberal use of water is generally understood to be concomitant with cleanliness.

In general this is so, but here and there one runs across exceptions. In the care of the hair or skin, internal cleanliness is vastly more important than the external application of liberal quantities of water.

The average young woman considers it a necessary part of her toilette to take the weekly or biweekly shampoo or hair wash in order to remove the accumulated dandruff. Frequently this is done with the aid of lotions, ointments, oils, etc.

The common belief is that by keeping the hair continuously clean that it will act either as a preventive or cure for dandruff. Innumerable patent antiseptic lotions are on the market with much-vaunted, cleverly written claims for their curing ability.

What is dandruff? Dandruff is nothing more nor less than the scaly peeling of the skin of the scalp. It cannot necessarily be considered a disease. Its cause does not lie in bacterial infection, but rather in the improper or unbalanced ingredients of the blood.

When the skin of the scalp is too oily, dandruff will result. When the scalp has

7,778 LEGS HEALED
By Increasing Circulation

A Circulation Correction Method will quickly heal the most stubborn leg sores or ulcers in a few weeks. It reduces swollen legs and relieves practically all pain suffering over night. No matter how long your legs have been troubling you, circulation will stop the pain and allow you to walk and play as well as ever—while the leg heals.

A hundred physicians, picked at random, have said that over 80% of leg sores and ulcers, swollen and aching legs, are the result of faulty circulation. They all agreed there was no safer, pleasanter, surer and inexpensive way of correcting this fault and healing the legs than by increasing the circulation. Viscose Circulation Method does that perfectly.

Send for book on leg troubles with a complete explanation of how circulation heals. This book is free. Write today.

Shopping With the Wife

By Frank Godwin

A Corner of the Housetop

By Katherine Newlin Burt

Fear caught at Barnaby's heart. He clutched her arm . . . They were leaning side by side against his coping.

UNDOUBTEDLY he was ill, undoubtedly he was no longer very young, undoubtedly he was a failure; nevertheless, it seemed to Barnaby Graem that loyalty might have reinforced the affections of a beloved woman so that even with a complete awareness of these facts she could still have dug with him some gold out of their joint claim on living. He found considerable gold unaided; with her help there would have been a vein.

But Maydie was not, when all is said, a prospector or a pioneer. She wanted, Barnaby had learned to believe, her gold refined and even shaped and stamped to coin. At least this was certainly the demand of her family for her. Her mother and her sisters—all with the same kind of face and figure as Maydie, fair and light, that is, with shining gray eyes and curly hair—articulated her probable disillusionment concerning the gold of her marital claim. It had not—Maydie's mother would have said, did in fact say with no very clear understanding of her simile—"panned out."

Barnaby was a failure. The sale of his first book had promised other sales as flattering; the second book had fallen flat; his third had not crept into a second small printing. Maydie and he were living in a New York apartment on the savings from that first book and on Barnaby's insignificant but sure inherited income. They were not living very well. Maydie was better at expenditure than at economy, just as, in reverse similarity, she was better at being loved, perhaps, than she would ever be at loving.

"You'd think poor Barnaby with a wife like you—and you do look so pretty and distinguished in good clothes—would have more ambition," said Maydie's mother. "Why doesn't he try some real business . . . and drop this writing?"

Maydie, who had been proud of marrying an author, twisted her pretty lips and moved her pretty slender shoulders.

When a doctor, to whom he had made a stealthy visit, told him that an open-air life in the country was a grim necessity, Barnaby laughed, coughed, and laughed again.

"It's not a joking matter, Mr. Graem. Your chest—"

Barnaby turned his thin, hard, expressive face on the medical adviser, and the latter, too, smiled. The laughter of Barnaby's eye was eternally contagious.

"My chest isn't the joke, you see," he explained. "It's your prescription that amuses me. It's so—well—so spacious."

And he went home, still with a laughing eye, and tried to write the third movement of his "Symphony in Prose." But Ellen, Ruth, Margaret and Mrs. Brettel were trimming a hat for Maydie in the adjoining room. Barnaby gnawed at his pencil, ran his hands through his hair, and suddenly lost his sense of humor and his magnanimity. He flung open the door, and the four thin, fresh, bright-eyed, sharp-featured faces turned to him with a look of startled scorn.

"I must have quiet," he said. "I must abso-lute-ly have quiet—Q-U-I-E-T—or I might as well give up my profession."

He walked across the room and went out into the narrow vestibule. It was too narrow. He opened his front door, then walked up to the roof.

He stopped, his mood arrested by what looked like a group of dancing clowns. Fantastically with a snapping of wet muslin they danced against an immediate blue sky; a bellied burgomaster nightshirt, a frilled matronly nightgown, a marvelous, inflated, and active pair of pantaloons, and alongside of them, some short, plump, lacy articles, coquettish and most immodestly insouciant.

The wind blew. It smelled of smoke and ocean harbors, of cargoes and adventures. Behind him the jolly clowns snapped all their jolly joints and leaped again, holding up their arms.

Barnaby breathed, slow and deep, with the cramp of misery releasing his threatened chest. He leaned there and looked around him. Immediately beside him, only a few feet lower, was the roof of the neighboring apartment-house, a studio attic evidently, for through a half-opened skylight he could see a workman. He wore a smock and was charging to and fro before an easel with the scissors aspect of bodies seen from a height. His model was somewhere out of the angle of Barnaby's vision.

The sight of that artist, the sound of his whistling, dreamy and absorbed, stung Barnaby like salt on a raw cut. He tightened his fingers on the coping and looked away. A man at work upon the work he loved, a man who saw that what he did was good, a man in full vigor of creation . . . health! What was it the doctor had said? "An outdoor life—fresh air—quiet!"

Barnaby coughed, flung up his head, turned right about, and stared at the top of his world. Air? . . . here was all humanity might want of it . . . and here was the sun, a bold round ball of it . . . and here . . . O God of still creation—there was peace. Some quotation, a text perhaps, took a quaint sharp stitch cross his memory . . . "better to dwell in a corner of the housetop . . ."

Barnaby laughed aloud. A chair in the shelter of that chimney-angle, a warm overcoat, a rug, a sewing-board across his knees . . . he was better off than that artist-fellow, for he needed no studio, no easel, no palette, and no model. His brain had once been full of malleable color. It might be again—and life itself with every sharp and fragrant memory was a model. Almost he could feel the hurried tripping arrival of a host up through the trapdoor of his consciousness. Thoughts stirred and came to life. He would have something to say again . . . something that must be said . . . . . .

For the first week, however, Barnaby did no writing at all. He lay along his deck-chair in the sun, half closed his eyes, and breathed—as he had forgotten how to breathe. Sometimes he was asleep. The stillness saturated him, seemed to massage him as the brown fingers of Hindu women take nerve by nerve and delicately disentangle them, deliberately, one by one. He did not go down to lunch but drank a bottle of milk slowly. He had a strip of canvas, and a rubber blanket, in case of storm. Maydie thought he went out to the library.

"Well, I hope and pray he'll do a stroke of honest work there," commented Mrs. Brettel bitterly.

On the tenth day of his experiment in orientalism, Barnaby's train-tongue seemed to wake from an enormous lethargy and to wag in silent, voiceless words. Upon its owner came the necessity to take down what it had to say.

The work over which he had so long fretted had to be begun again; the tongue would have it so, speaking with an authority stronger than Barnaby's jaded will. It commanded that the first two movements—he had conceived his novel as a symphony—should be thrown into the fire.

The new speech ran in a different vein, not like that first successful book which in an unconscious slavery he had been trying to imitate, less like the second, least of all like his third. There seemed to be a new mind in him, something that had matured in an ironic patient loneliness, in a pained humility, but which for all its over-disciplined childhood had a spirit by no means jaded or sad. It was not even bitter as it might have been; only reasonable. Its voice had the edge of wit and the resonance of poetry. Barnaby felt for the mysterious inmate a queer respect. At the end of five or six hours of work the writer on the roof would be exhausted, elated, happy as he had not been for seven years. He would fold up the closely written sheets, weighted beside him against the wind, and lie there in his chair, passive, until the nipping air forced him to take a brisk, rapt walk to and fro. It was then that the jinnee made his cloudy plans for the next morning.

In February Barnaby had to bring up to his corner a little kerosene stove which kept his feet and hands alive and made a small circle of ruddy human warmth at the bottom of his icy sea of pure deep air. When it snowed, the stove hissed and spluttered. He had to shovel clear his corner from the morning's drift. But day by day he felt the cold less bitterly, his thin body grew perceptibly heavier and more resistant, his blood seemed at once thicker and more nimble. He became unreasonably gay, could have danced with the Tuesday morning clowns pinned up by a stout incredulous person who mumbled "Mornin'" to him from a big Irish mouth contracted about a hedge of clothes-pins. She thought him crazy, doubtless, but what matter up here so far above the rational wash-day world . . . no madder than these sober clothes of every-day humanity, inflated and preposterous upon her line.

From Maydie, Barnaby kept jealously the secret of his sky workroom. Several times he hid at the turn of the concrete stairs when she, so straight and slim and unobservant, went in at their front door. She must never know where he was; if she should come to find him at the library, he would invent, he told himself, some explanation of a temporary absence. Part of the magic, the miracle, lay in secrecy, in the true and profound isolation, spiritual and physical, he had achieved. His only real companion was the unsuspecting artist, charging, whistling, or gnawing an anxious lip down there before his canvas. That man was a hard worker, but he had his diversions, too. There were hours of tea for two, and hours of evening revelry. At night, Barnaby fancied, his chimney, tiptoeing above the skylight, saw queer things.

Then, one March evening, humanity reached up and wounded his happy solitude.

All day the ragged clouds, pouring across his dizzied chimney-top, had threatened rain. The city had a blasted look, its buildings stared, its voices were the murmurs of imprisoned men. The river wrinkled and crawled with white snakes behind its stacks and masts and factory chimneys. Barnaby's work, happily progressing under a mysterious wind as steady as that which drove the clouds, kept him detached from the sad humor of the day, until, at four o'clock, the sun struck him with a sudden glare. The city glittered, its smoke flamed, the clouds smoldered, the west opened to a clear green emptiness. Barnaby, excited by the shock of splendid light, got up and walked to the edge of his housetop.

The studio skylight was closed and lamps were lit below. It was the tea hour, but evidently not for two today. A piano was life men accumulate in front what the doctors politely call an apron. The same operation was recently performed on one of the richest and ablest men in the United States.

"That operation will seem simple in years to come. Surgeons will do away with pain in childbirth. And, what is more important, they will perform operations to enlarge the cavity containing the pituitary gland, giving that gland room to grow, thus removing one great cause of human inferiority.

"When we understand our glands as well as the electrician understands his mechanism, the efficiency of the human race will be increased at least 100 per cent.'

"The above is an editorial from the Cleveland News. The editor evidently imagines that the human body is an inanimate machine. Strange reasoning! What is the significance of the distortions that the editor would have trimmed off? Gluttony. To cut off the excess weight reduces the capacity for taking care of the excess fluids heretofore carried in these overfed distortions.

"This particular editor would think a farmer a fool who would cut down the capacity of his granaries and storage-houses with a continuously increasing harvest.

"Slicing off twenty-five, fifty, or more pounds of fat removes just that much storage room for surplus urine, sweat, and blood. The heart and remaining blood vessels must carry an extra amount equivalent to the amount carried by the part destroyed by the operation, and this puts an extra strain on vessels already carrying too much. The patient's organs will all suffer from the extra load. Excess weight is a conservative measure. Water that the kidneys fail to carry out of the body is stored in the form of fat; and this is what the editor, with a distorted surgical vision, would have removed. He does not know that such operations remove vicarious urinals which the body has so laboriously built as fluid repositories. The heart is enervated in all obese people, because of an excess of circulating fluid, causing overwork. Besides, the heart's nutrition is reduced, because the nutritive standard of the blood is much below the normal, and all the muscular system as well as the heart is weakened in power.

"Reducing the repository accommodation of the body without reducing its need is to invite destruction. If it were possible to force an excess weight on the body in as few minutes as are required to cut the same amount off, it would cause death. Nature does not work in that way. There is a lot of illogical surgical work done in these modern hectic days, but the proposition brought forward by this editor is about the nuttiest surgical scheme of which I have heard.

"If the obese wish to play a safe game, they should stop all fluid, eat raw fruit and vegetables, and protein three times a week; exercise vigorously every day, and stop coffee, tea, alcoholics, and tobacco. This scheme will reduce weight and restore dependable health; but it is not for weaklings or for those looking to get something for nothing. To get well, these perambulating private rest rooms must be willing to make personal sacrifices to have their house of flesh put in order. It is worth the effort, but it is a job that cannot be delegated to others. To cut fat off is the work of mountebanks or quacks. Real physicians will not engage in it.

"The prophecy that some day surgeons will be busy removing weight with the knife is a fiendish dream that would do credit to a Nero. More surgery has been practiced in the past than will be done in the future. Surgical insanity will end; for people will get wise. It is a game intended to beat nature. Disease will be treated rationally some time; cause will be known and removed; then nature will do the curing."

NAUGHTY BOYS

By Alma Whitaker

Shaking to jazz, there was dancing, he could hear the rhythmic scraping of feet. Suddenly, hanging there alone above the gaiety, Barnaby had a taste of desolation. That long creative and absorbing labor had left him empty of flame . . . ashen. After all, a housetop is a lonely place. And it was just as he told himself this truth that, moving his eyes, he discovered that he was not alone. An immobile black figure stood against the coping of that other roof.

She was a woman of spare, tall, and elastic figure, not dressed for roof-tops but for drawing-rooms. Her black, sheer dress, cut with a Florentine neck, had lines both picturesque and elegant. A silver-colored scarf was drawn very tightly about her shoulders, giving her a sad, contracted, wounded look. Her head, dark and small, was bent, held rigid, staring down.

She was as entirely unaware of Barnaby as he, until that instant, had been unaware of her, and some instinct made him move out of range of any possible discovery, when suddenly she turned from what must have been a protracted stillness and began a very rapid, careless pacing of her roof. He could watch her, himself unseen, and had no scruple about doing so. In fact, he felt it, queerly, to be a sort of obligation. Her solitude was altogether too desperate, her walk too disordered. A woman slippered and draped in silver, bareheaded and bare-necked, is not normally a visitor of housetops. That other half of human tragedy had lifted itself up into his masculine refuge—the woman half. Perhaps a wound as shrewd as his own had thrust her out of her painful and cramped circumstances in just such as urgent need of space and air and loneliness as his had been.

But he was not slow to perceive that for her pain there was another and a deeper need, a craving for solitude and silence more complete than he had discovered. The woman's despair was not creative like his own. Her quarrel with life was furiously destructive. He could see her eyes glinting as she turned, the long silver ear-rings barbarically swinging; could see her mouth, her hands working at each other as though tearing a fine web. It was not so much an instinct as a conviction which, as she fled suddenly to her roof-edge, sent him with a running leap down from his elevation, across the space, and with all his strength upon her. He was not too late—just not too late. She had climbed to the top of the coping and was balanced, ghost-white and blind, above her plunge.

She fought him with a dumb frenzy then; as he persevered, she fell from a sheaf of vibrant resistance to a silken emptiness of strength. He half released her, penned her against the coping. They were both breathless, shaking. She had a wet brow and livid lips.

"Why did you stop me?" she panted, striking at him weakly. "You didn't know why, did you? Stupid . . . cruel . . ."

She passed from that bitterness into long weeping. Barnaby thought of Maydie one night soon after they had been married when they had quarreled and she, creeping against him for reconciliation, had cried like this, yielding to his arms. Her neck had looked so small and white and pitiful . . . But for such a little reason! This woman . . .

"No," he said, "I don't know why. But life is pretty sure to be worth waiting for. It has a way of dragging you down—coming at you in waves—and tossing you up again. Can't you wait for the next wave? It's more than likely to fling you up against the sun. Don't shake so. Stop your crying. You're beginning to be glad already, aren't you? You know you're just a stupid poor sport . . . can't take punishment."

"Why do—they p-punish you for—l-loving?"

"Good Lord! What else have they got to punish you for? We all get that, don't we? Loving—or not loving . . . too little or too much . . . foolishly or coldly . . . Is that all your complaint? You might as well try to kill yourself for an attack of measles or a toothache."

She looked at him; her face had lost its distortion and won back a shade of natural color. It was more pale, that is, than livid . . . but bitterly desolate.

"I know I'm a coward . . . pain . . ." she quivered.

"Physical . . . you're ill? No? Mental? He doesn't love you any more, and it hurts?"

She answered him in a low voice as though she were speaking not with her lips but with her mind . . . into space . . . the space that lies around the door of death.

"He loves me—he dances on my heart—breaks it off piece by piece and gives it to—" her voice dropped brutally—"to dogs."

When he comes to me from the—easy women—his hands seem hot and—perfumed." In the dark I can bear what he thinks—remembers . . . I'm so many women . . . in the dark . . ."

Barnaby's nerves quivered. This was a revelation too revealing. He could not silence her any more than one can silence another person's heartbeats without forever silencing them. "I've learned to be ashamed—of this. . . this . . ." She gathered her hands into her slender breast . . . "all this . . . I mean . . ." There she stopped as though reality had fallen on her head and looked at him. "Was I speaking? Who are you?"

"Never mind. Just an intruder. Call me . . . Life. You'd be crushed now—all broken up and bloody on the stones . . . all this that you hate . . . far too

"It takes a lot of courage to be beautiful, doesn't it, mother?"

lovely. You must learn to respect it more."

Staring at him, unable to hold the thread of a complete awareness, hypnotized, too, by his deliberate impersonal outspokenness, she began again to stammer in that queer intimate, almost inner, voice.

"But I don't. My pride's gone."

"Why don't you leave him to his easy women? Perhaps, after a while . . ."

"That's worse than dying. I see him . . . always. I'd freeze without him . . . if he took his touch away from me. He's all the comfort and the ease I have—like air for breathing . . . In his way . . . he loves me . . . most."

"Haven't you any life of your own, then, apart . . . you poor fool . . . you . . . woman? No child?"

"No child."

"No talent—no work?"

"I used to." He took it away. He was jealous."

"That's when you lost him and took your first step toward self-obliteration. You see how stupid you've been. Is it music?" She had long, clever hands.

"No . . . sculpture. Won't you please—let me go? I'm . . . tired."

He stepped back a little from her. He was horribly tired himself. "You could go away from him, you know; you could, in a certain fashion—take yourself from him a little way—lift yourself out and up—without the help of death. Death," he told her, "is altogether too final, too obliterating to be either a release or an answer. There are any number of anesthetics for your pain. You can even stay with a person, you know, and still keep your pride, your life . . . even your bodily life, out of his reach. I can tell you all about, that my dear desperate fool. It's one of the secrets of a housetop."

At that she looked all about her slowly and back at him.

"You know . . . I'd forgotten where I was. It's . . . you were up there?"

"A corner of the housetop."

She heard the music suddenly below that skylight. Her senses seemed to be coming back to her control one by one, like startled birds, gradually reassured.

"He's down there . . . dancing," she said.

"Better a corner of the housetop," Barnaby quoted, and added from another portion of the script, "where peace is."

"What do you do up there?" She had seen his chimney and his chair.

"I'm writing a novel about men and women like the chap dancing down there, and like you, trying to die up here . . . and like my little . . . blind wife . . ."

"Oh, is she blind?"

"And deaf and dumb . . . poor child!"

"You're a writer?"

"Yes."

"And it makes you happy enough to keep on living?"

"For a thousand years."

"I think I used to feel that way, too—about my work. I did animals—wonderful cats . . . Don't laugh."

"I'm not laughing. I'm keen about cats. They mean all sorts of things to me. There are several models for you upon this roof. And if you were only a painter, there's something merry and sardonic and altogether original—I could show you—a troupe of dancing clowns."

She put her hand to her head.

"I'd better go down. I feel queer—and horribly ashamed."

"So much the better." He walked with her over to the trapdoor. "Don't come back again," he said, "unless you bring a lump of clay. I don't allow triflers with life upon the housetop."

She went down . . . a small white face uplifted . . . a strange slave face . . . faintly smiling, vague with a returning consciousness of life.

"And nothing," Barnaby told himself, half rueful, half relieved, "is more certain than that she will never want to see me again."

He walked for a long while across her roof while the city rippled up in light and the music in that blind bright studio room throbbed and jingled like an Oriental dancing-girl. Then with some difficulty, he climbed back to his own corner, collected his papers and his wraps, praying as he did so with vehemence that life would leave his roof alone from henceforth, would not tamper again with the clean passion of his solitude.

Barnaby's roof was higher by six or seven feet than the roof of his neighbor; and it was in the shadow of the cliff, where this difference made a spot least visible from his usual quarters, that he rediscovered his desperate intruder about a fortnight later. How many days she had been working there he did not know, but she had the air of frequency. She was so changed by a straight painter's apron and a face of keen self-forgetfulness that only the certainty that she couldn't be any one else made his recognition positive. A lump of clay on a sort of pedestal occupied her attention and both her limber hands, until his shadow, falling across her roof, made her look up. She brushed back her hair with an elbow.

"I've been working," she said in the tone of quick apology used by a child caught in mischief, "but my hand's hopelessly out. Does that animal look like anything to you?"

"It looks like the story of Cleopatra reincarnated in a peculiarly degraded alley cat."

She smiled, darkly brilliant, as though shadows were struck away to gather somberly again at their leisure. "Then I haven't failed. The alley cat dozes over there in that corner by the hour—" Barnaby saw the tattered ears, mangy body, and rheumy eyes of her model—"dreaming of slow peacock fans, spices, a striped awning, and sunshine on the Nile . . . Romance wrapped in dirty brown paper . . . That's like life, isn't it?"

"Except when its's silver paper wrapped round a dirty stone," said Barnaby.

"Don't let me talk to you. I want least of anything in the world to interrupt you—" the blood tumbled across her brows down to the collar of her apron—"again."

"I won't let you interrupt me," he murmured, lingering and lighting his pipe. "April isn't so bad on a housetop," he remarked. "What do you do when it rains?"

"I go down. Please get back to your work. It's been going well?"

"Wonderfully. I feel possessed. I'm almost daring to hope it's really good."

"It must be good." She gave him a grave upward look. "And—brave," she added.

Presently he went back to it—his work. But, though he had said she wouldn't interrupt, she had given his jinnee pause—a little time of obsession while he thought about her, smiled over her earnest, literal obedience, and remembered her eyes. Was she older or younger than Maydie? Older . . . no matter what her years. Twenty-five years of blindness, deafness, dumbness had left Maydie the apple-blossoms and clear eyes of sixteen, with much of a girl's hardness . . . incomprehension . . . Here the jinnee roughly took Barnaby by the shoulder, and he returned to his duty of masterful amenuensis.

Like a rare stitch in heavy cloth, small evidence came to him during his hours of work that there was another frequenter of the housetop. When the studio piano jingled he could hear her rattle her tools and move her feet. Sometimes she went walking rapidly, with a clop-clip of heels across her roof. Once in a while she stretched prodigiously; occasionally, not quite under her breath, she swore. Several times she addressed, in one tone or another, the alley cat. Before leaving her roof, she would breathe a cautious, timid murmur of good-by. He would answer rather robustly, not moving from his chair. But he usually half rose to see her vanish through her trapdoor, her dark short hair ruddy with sun or beaver gray with wind.

One day at four o'clock when the skylight was rosy and quietly intimate, petaling some soft-laughing interview between four eyes, the interpretress of Egypt invited Barnaby to tea. She had a spirit-kettle, metal cups, sugar, lemon, crackers, jam, a delicate, rare-flavored tea. In the chill shadow of her cliff, they were driven to greatcoats and made an amusing picture, like two shipwrecked people on a story book desert island where some kindly deus ex machina had washed up a five-o'clock refreshment complete. A quaint and bitter gaiety enlivened his hostess. They laughed a good deal, talked foolishly enough, catching and releasing shyly, daringly, each other's eyes.

"I feel," said the woman, "Martian—released. We're not really in the world of other people, are we?" Then abruptly, "Does your wife ever come up?"

Barnaby dropped his eyes to his teacup,

Prof. Alan Brown of the University of Toronto gets wide prominence in the news columns on account of a series of experiments proving the healing power of sunshine. It is no news to us at the Health Center. Every member of the drugless healing profession is well acquainted with, and constantly relies on, the healing of the great source of light and energy. I have written a booklet on the subject of sun bathing it would pay you to read. Write me, Care of the Health Center, enclosing 50c, and I will mail you a copy postpaid. Repeated infections such as the common "bad cold," according to a speaker at the annual meeting of the American Public Health Association, lead to heart disease—which heads the list of causes of death in the United States. Another instance where the theories of Prof. Arnold Ehret, the founder of the Health Center, 1000 West Seventh Street, are being accepted by science in general. What is a cold, anyway? Prof. Ehret proved it to be a localized congestion of uneliminated filth which Nature tries frantically to throw off from the body. A cold is a sure indication of a clogged system.

To effect a thorough innercleansing in such conditions Prof. Ehret perfected Innerclean Intestinal Laxative—a harmless compound of dried aromatic herbs and vegetables. Prevent colds by keeping clean internally. Innerclean is 50 cents a package at the Health Center and all druggists. Write to the Innerclean Mfg. Co., 846 E. Sixth St., for a generous free sample.

How shall heart disease and other ailments caused by a clogged system be treated? Prof. Ehret and other famous Naturopaths say by elimination of the disease cause. Others say by suppression through drugs. I will let your common sense say which is most logically right.

The whole system of treatments at the Health Center, 1000 W. 7th St., is founded on the principle of elimination. And it has been proved phenomenally successful in cases of inflammatory rheumatism, heart trouble, diabetes, asthma, obesity, partial paralysis and scores of other ailments. Send for our free illustrated booklet "Disease Washed Away," describing our Hydralite Bloodwash Baths, color therapy cabinet baths and various other recognized methods. A Health Center clinician will be glad to give you a free consultation any weekday between 8:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m.

If you are interested in Prof. Ehret's healing methods, read his world-famous "Mucusless Diet Healing System." This book contains actual health menus in addition to a complete 25-lesson course which cost $100 when taught personally by him. It will be sent postpaid anywhere in the U.S.A. for $1.50.

A Fearless Confession

Surgeons have discovered that we will continue to live with a loss of many of the body accessories, but this does not prove that we do not need them. A car will run nicely without a spare tire, but it is not considered sound economy to go off on a long journey without a spare.

We are a beautifully constructed machine, every part of which has been designed by nature, or has evolved in response to some environmental or economic need, and while we can live without some of our lesser organs, even as we can live without an arm or a leg, yet it is poor economy to sacrifice any of these baser parts to please some surgeon.

I have been practicing medicine without the blessings of either surgery or medicine for the past twenty years, having so long ago tabooed both, and not till then did I ever do my patients any real constructive good, and till I abandoned surgery I know that many of my patients were crippled in function or physique permanently, though they did not die, and many of them still think I saved their lives. I know better now and wish every internal operation of which I have been guilty could be undone, for not one of these was necessary or advisable.

This is Bolshevism, of course, and I should be shut up in jail six months twice every year for such utterances, but when they are the result of twenty years of very wide observation and experience they will not seem to stay pent up inside, and if they hurt some sensitive soul who is still doing what he considers conscentious surgery I am only sorry for him, for he is still in the dark, and the causes of disease are to him a sealed book.

He is working with end results, never for one moment looking behind the scenes to see what makes the condition, so never realizing that the whole thing is first preventable easily so, and second curable, by reversing the continually repeated causes of the disease.—[William Howard Hay, M. D.

On the Train

"I am going east. What shall I eat en route."

This question is asked dozens of times by those who follow sane diet principles.

Fifteen or twenty year ago this would have been an insurmountable obstacle.

Then it was almost impossible to get fresh fruits or vegetables en route. One had to be satisfied with the smoked meats, the few canned vegetables and white bread. Otherwise it was a case of "fasting."

Recently I had occasion to spend a couple of very pleasant days on board ship. I was surprised and delighted at the menu. The diet epicure and the diet crank could have everything the heart desired. Even though miles away from shore, fresh vegetables right from the refrigerator were forthcoming at each meal.

The railroad and steamship lines have kept abreast of the times. One may secure practically everything sold in a first-class restaurant on board a steamer or train. There need be no dietetic changes whatsoever if one goes traveling nowadays, so thoroughly is the modern refrigeration system organized.

Besides, the minute few who, twenty years ago, took diet problems seriously, have now been multiplied until their number is legion.

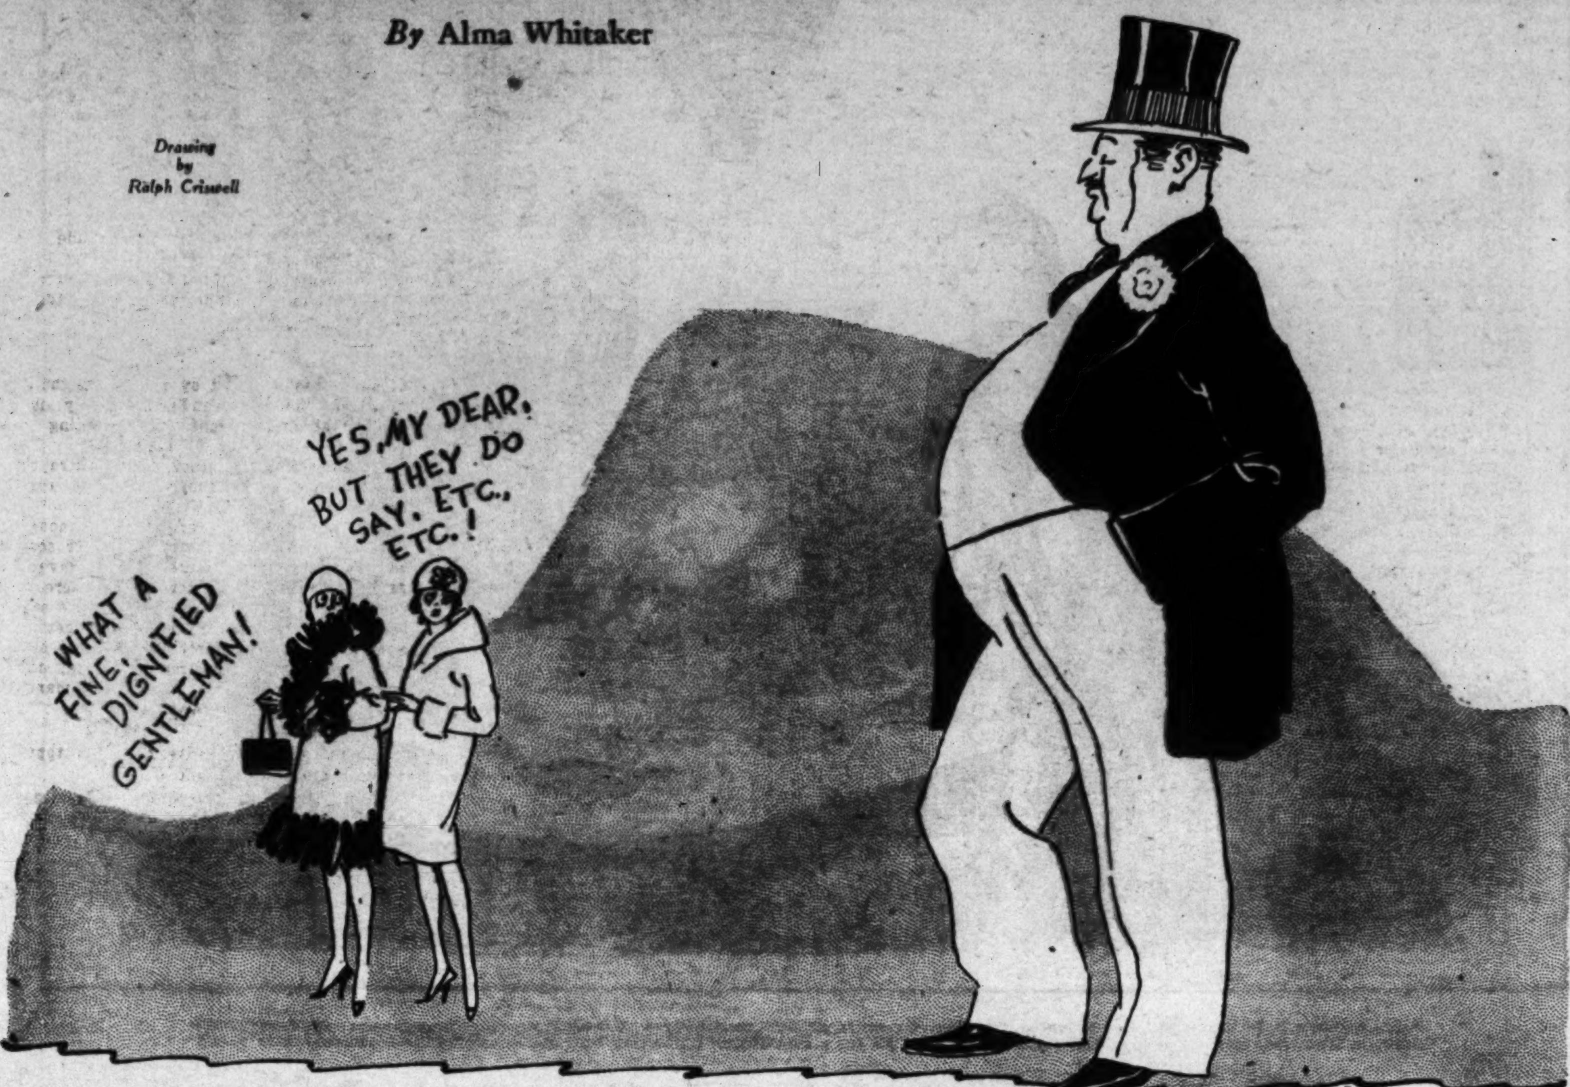
NAUGHTY BOYS

By Alma Whitaker

Drawing by Ralph Criswell



SO MANY august and profound gentlemen speakers continue to assure women audiences that the hope of the world, the salvation of civilization, rests in their fair feminine hands and superior virtuous judgment.

This vogue set in soon after the woman's suffrage amendment passed. Before that the only real hope of salvaging civilization depended on the women not being accorded the vote.

We just love to listen to these gentlemen speakers. They are so earnest, so appealing. They always begin by telling us we are the most intelligent audience it has ever been their pleasure to address. For quite a while we used to settle down into our seats with a glow of satisfaction as this promising opening phrase reached our ears. Lately some of us have taken to exchanging naughty winks, however. Not that we doubt the gentleman's sincerity in any way, you understand, nor our own intelligence, for that matter—but we do sort of recognize that the fellow is handing us a sizable job, which if we performed it as advised, might seriously jeopardize our popularity with the trousered sex. It is very difficult to salvage the noblest principles of civilization and retain one's essential charms.

Because, you see, such a large preponderance of the masculine sex just dote on being naughty boys. They want the world reformed collectively, en masse, without their own pet naughtinesses being curtailed in any way. We must never get personal in our reformative ventures. So long as we generalize we are nice proper girls with a noble mission whose votes at election time are very superior and valuable. But directly we get specific and pick on individual masculine activities that we regard as jeopardizing the progress of nicer civilization, we are a lot of wowsers, nasty intolerant buttinskys, killjoys, with altogether too much zeal.

Just take the one subject of motion pictures. It seemed such a worthy crusade. What could be more desirable than that the women's clubs and welfare organizations should stand behind the reformative ideals of Mr. Will Hays and throw our zeal for virtue into better pictures committees? Who could possibly have better judgment upon desirable and undesirable pictures than the mothers of the nation?

But we were soon to discover that all that was required of us was fine talk. Any specific intrusions impaired the value of our intelligent judgment seriously. It was one thing to say we stood behind the industry and Mr. Will Hays for better pictures, but quite another to pick on individual pictures, directors and producers, private and professional morals, and speak our mind about them—unless our remarks were strictly complimentary. Right then we became narrow minded prudes and morons . . . trying to stifle "art" and all that.

For instance, neighborhood picture theaters all over the country provide "junior matinees" on Saturday afternoons. One would have supposed mother was justified in being interested in those. So when recently we saw a "Hula" picture with lots of impassioned love-making put on as "an approved junior matinee" to which all age children under fourteen were specifically catered for, a select committee of mamas ventured a protest. Phew! It seems that we were taking the wrong method of salvaging civilization right there. Our judgment suffered a serious relapse in gentlemanly appreciation.

If, on the other hand, some woman's club comes out with a fond indorsement of a picture, our opinion is quoted in the advertisement and the chances are the more sophisticated critics will toss us a jeer for our pains. They imply that if women indorse a show it is liable to be neither art, realism, nor, in fact, anything but wishy-washy hokum.

Dubious as our judgment is, however, we are gradually coming to understand that "boys will be boys," that certain motion-picture directors cannot be expected to resist injecting a certain proportion of naughty impropriety, and that the real hope of salvaging civilization lies in women's better picture committees being caught napping on the censor job in a sufficient number of cities for the naughty-boy directors to "get away with" their risque insertions. It is noteworthy that these risque insertions are so carefully injected that when a better picture committee happens to be wide-awake and unpleasantly on the job, they can be cut out without embarrassing the progress of the story.

Pretty well every studio has a little library of such expurgated feet of film. Naughty-boy directors just had to put them in when making the picture—always in the hope of being able to "get away with it." The picture may be heralded as a nice worthy picture without the risque naughtiness bits, but the director will always feel that his art was cruelly cramped by their omission. Catch any director in a confidential mood and he will hasten to reveal the "touches" that petty censorial minds insisted upon deleting . . . oh, oh, oh, and they call this a free country!

But it isn't only the motion-picture industry that harbors naughty boys. Nay, nay. Naughty boys abound in every industry and profession. Never a masculine convention held yet—commercial, professional, Masonic, Elkish, Rotarianish, or even Trade Unionish that does not harbor its full quota of naughty boys, intent on being a little shocking. Even pastors are not immune, although pastors manage to get the naughty-boy streak out of their system quite often by preaching frank harsh words against other people's naughtinesses. But the verbal pictures they draw are often strangely like the bits edited out of the naughty-boy directors' films.

Watch even the nicest lawyer of impeccable standing in his profession when he is conducting one of these cause celebre cases. The naughty-boy streak in him rises lusciously to the occasions when the judge rather feels he ought to exclude the ladies. They adore skating on thin ice, as it were, and making remarks that the opposition later has "excluded from the testimony." And their fellows grin with admiring approval when he "gets away with it."

I recently heard a nice important influential banker speaking at a bankers' convention banquet—a most impressive and dignified occasion, you know, where all the wives were invited and wore their best imported gowns. But the "leading citizen" speaker couldn't resist his naughty-boy streak and injected several highly dubious "funny stories" into his serious talk about billions and the nation's credit. Some of us women looked a little dazed, but his fellow bankers laughed uproariously, and subsequent speakers were green with jealousy that the great one could "get away with it," when their own complexes demanded excessive caution and decorum.

I recently heard Will Rogers tell a great convention of real estate men that they were all "post-graduate liars" and a lot of other naughty things about themselves. They adored it and whooped hilariously. And when later a fashion show was staged for them in which the lovely models were intent on revelation rather than concealment, and much of the vaudeville show between was of a distinctly risque nature—were they indignant that this was all considered representative of their tastes? Were they? On the contrary approving acclamation was heard on all sides . . . Any nice intelligent lady intent upon rescuing civilization and injecting a reformative note, would have proved highly unpopular. In fact, she would have been no lady . . . Really nice-minded women must please to understand that "boys will be boys" . . . and reserve any superior virtuous judgment for other more appropriate occasions.

Paradox

Back about 1900 man rushed along on horseback or in horseless carriages at five or ten miles an hour. And in thirty-odd years he reached his final destination—the grave.

Nowadays by auto and aeroplane man dashes along at one to two hundred miles an hour. But it takes him, on an average, about fifty years to reach, his final destination—the grave.

Moral: What's the use of hurrying?

A missionary reports that the ancient pygmies of Central Africa are now extinct. They are believed to have succumbed during a drive for Bigger and Better Pygmies.

GLAND STIMULATIONS
by RATIONAL MEANS

Medical authorities claim that 65% of all men past middle age are victims of Prostate Gland disorder. Many thousands are so afflicted without knowing it. Bladder weakness, aches in back, pains in legs and feet, nervousness, loss of vitality, frequent nightly risings, sciatica and chronic constipation are a few of the more common symptoms often due to a disordered prostate gland and are oftimes mistaken for signs of approaching old age. Don't accept them as such.

CARE OF THE BODY

By Philip M. Lovell, N.D.

Head and Ear Noises

When advancing age comes on, amongst the many complications of symptoms, head noises occupy a prominent position.

With the characteristic habit of the medical profession, the localization of symptoms is invariably interpreted to mean that the structure itself is involved. Because there are rumblings and other distortions in the ears, darting pains or sounds in the head, the assumption is that either the head or the ears are affected.

Consequently, it is very common to record, in a case history where head noises and ear rumblings are present, that the doctor has given headache powders or local injections into the ear membrane.

In more severe cases I have known them to puncture the ear, a typical remnant of premedievalistic beliefs to "let the devil or evil spirits out" by puncturing holes in the body.

The ear-puncturing business comes practically under the same category except that it is now labeled "science."

The learned profession, of course, will say that puncturing the ear relieves the tension, permitting an outflow of pus or of other waste accumulations. But in essence, it is virtually the same as the age-old puncture to permit the escape of evil spirits.

Puncture, surgery, or drug medication does not get at the cause of ear rumblings or head noises. Seldom, indeed, are the ears or the head involved except as effects rather than causes. That is to say, with scarcely an exception the causes of head noises or ear rumblings will be found in the peripheral organs, in disturbed digestion, in chronic constipation, in the toxic absorption of foul gases, in a diseased uterus, in the senile processes of old age, in the gradual atrophy and hardening which occurs through dietetic mistakes.

It is these conditions which should be treated.

What I am telling you is not abstract theory. I have seen it work out again and again.

You who are taking pain-depressing dope, stop it! You who have had surgery suggested to overcome ear noises, don't consider it! Radical, extreme measures, as involved in both drugs and surgery, never get at a cause whose insidious onset usually dates back many, many years.

The history of those suffering from these complaints is never sudden or acute. The premonitory symptoms have gone on years and years before.

Careful, abstemious dieting and strenuous elimination are necessary. Follow the principles of diet as laid down by "Care of the Body." Stick to them!

The relief is slow, but Nature works slowly, steadily, step by step. There is nothing sudden or miraculous.

In a "stick-to-it" program of this nature more can be accomplished to overcome this basic condition that through either suppressive drugs or causeless surgery.

Pretubercular Conditions

We speak of the soil in which a plant will grow. Everything must be favorable for its development—moisture, temperature, nutrition, etc.

Bacteria are similarly a form of plant life. They must have a soil in which to thrive and multiply. This is true whether they be pathogenic (disease producing) or the so-called harmless bacteria.

The orthodox definition of a tubercular infection is that it is an invasion of the tubercle bacillus. Every tubercular victim knows this. If he gets into medical hands his efforts are directed toward killing the bug. He is given shots of tuberculin consisting of emulsions of dead bacteria, in the hope that by infesting the blood with dead bugs, protective mechanisms from the blood will destroy the living ones.

"The "success" is evidenced by the colossal mortality rate following such treatment.

He has tried other methods as well.

For a time creosote held the center of the stage as creosote, in the test tube was known to destroy the bacilli.

Dozens of variations have been offered, methods all intended for the same obvious purpose—to kill the bug.

In none of these do we concur. To us, the bug is of secondary importance, merely an incidental factor in the problem of tuberculosis. The thing of utmost importance is the soil, the environment, the conditions under which the germs thrive and multiply. Correct these and the recuperative power inherent in the human body will assert itself.

What are some of the conditions leading up to this soil environment of which I speak?

Trace back the history of each tubercular case and with unvarying exactitude it will be found to conform to one of the several contentions mentioned below.

In some very few cases there is the hereditary predisposition. That is, father or mother, or both, have weak lungs. The child's vital powers are correspondingly impaired. As a result, the least change in environment, the least congestion favors a tubercular process.

Such cases, however, are the rare minority. The bulk of tuberculars come under the next classification.

We eat what we please, thoughtlessly, in undue quantities. Autointoxication ensues. There is toxic absorption of the intestinal residue. The blood stream becomes filled with this waste. It gets into the lungs and a sort of catarrh is induced. Mucus, cellular debris and similar substances collect.

The soil is prepared for bacterial invasion. Then comes the contact. The germs, omnipresent, everywhere, invade. A chill, a shock or an undue exposure is sufficient to precipitate the onset. Long before the environment has become favorable, all it needed was the contact with the germ and the precipitating cause. Then we have a full-fledged condition of tuberculosis.

There is still another cause which should be definitely understood at this time of the year when colds are so prevalent and so stupidly combated.

A cold is Nature's grand attempt toward toxin elimination, the discharge of the debris accumulated over a period of time. When this debris seeks to escape we should not suppress it by means of cough medicines, cough drops, doctors' prescriptions or patented compounds. We should assist elimination rather than suppress it. A cold or a cough never yet produced complications unless it was suppressed, generally by means of drugs.

Drug-suppression of colds is the third primary factor inducing a favorable environment for tuberculosis.

These facts should be considered by the average "weak-chested" individual long before the actual tuberculosis condition has set in. If he knows how to conduct himself before the invasion, there will be no infection.

The Kidneys as Filters

In this department you have read the statement again and again that diet, or rather wrong diet, is the principal cause of kidney diseases even including the dread ailments of diabetes and Bright's disease.

Perhaps you wonder why this statement is made. It will not be until you can understand the function of the kidneys that you can see the relationship between diet and these diseases.

If is were possible to dissect the human body in such fashion as to remove every structure, muscle, bone, nerves, tendons, ligaments, abdominal organs, lungs, brain, skin and leave nothing but the blood circulation—we would still have the perfect formation of the human body.

What I propose to illustrate here is that every cell of the body is bathed in blood, that we cannot enter a needle, even ever so small, without puncturing some of these blood vessels.

Besides the red portion of the blood, it is a well-established fact that blood carries nutrition and, in turn, is made from nutrition. That is to say, the quality, caliber and kind of blood are dertermined by the quality and kind of food eaten. If you have pure blood, your food must be pure; if you have poor food, your blood must be poor.

Establishing this, let us draw our conclusions. Since the ingredients of the blood are determined by the nutriment furnished, what we eat determines what enters the blood channels.

Now, we know that the function of the kidney is to filter the blood as it passes through it. It is estimated that approximately four times the weight in blood of the kidney itself passes through the renal arteries (kidney arteries) each minute. As it passes through, some of its ingredients are removed and other ingredients are permitted to remain in the blood circulation.

The substances that are removed determine the kind of urine that is discharged, and the quantity of work which it has to do determines the condition of health or disease of the kidneys.

We know that any structure which is excessively used tends to enlarge. When we overuse the heart we have what is known as "athletic heart." When we overuse the stomach we have an enlarged, pouched

LADY KATHERINE'S BETTER NATURE

Friendship Pulled Angus One Way and Professional Pride Another. He Compromised, and the Result Was Not Bad for Either Side

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

Illustrated by Rex Maxon

PETER BRAGG picked up a letter from the heap by his side.

"A distinguished client is arriving within a few minutes,' he announced to his friend and partner, the Hon. George Vincent Angus, "to consult us as to the loss of a diamond necklace."

"Who is the Johnny?" Angus demanded. "Do I know him?"

"It is possible that you may," his partner admitted. "It is the Duke of Cumberland."

"Good old Rattles!" Angus exclaimed. "So he's been stung. Any particulars?"

"None whatever," Peter Bragg replied, exhibiting the letter. "His secretary writes that his grace will call at ten-thirty this morning to consult me as to the possible recovery of a missing diamond necklace."

"Half past ten already," Angus observed, glancing at his watch. "I'll go in and have a chat with Miss Ash while you receive our august client."

"Nothing of the sort. Without desiring to be unduly critical, Angus, you devote too much of your time to sitting in Miss Ash's easy-chair and interfering with her work."

"Intriguing sort of person," Angus admitted.

"If she is intriguing, it is for me to discover the fact," Peter Bragg declared. "She is my secretary, not yours. Personally, I have failed to discover the qualities you suggest."

"She don't let herself go with you. Keeps to the little gray mouse and that sort of thing. She told me only the other day that her idea of the perfect secretary was a colorless negation. I must say in business hours she plays the part well."

"How much do you know of her outside business hours?" Peter Bragg asked suspiciously.

"There was that night when she came to the Cafe Guido," Angus reflected. "I tell you she looked ripping. Not the ordinary type of good-looking girl, you know, but something different, something that set you wondering what it would be like to hold her hand, and that sort of thing."

"Shut up!" the other enjoined. "Here's the duke."

The duke was ushered in—a still youthful-looking man, a little tired about the eyes, but bearing his forty-two years well enough. He shook hands stiffly with Peter Bragg and recognized Angus with surprise.

"Hullo, George!" he exclaimed. "What are you doing here?"

"Partner in the firm," was the cheerful reply. "I told you I'd got a job."

"You amaze me," the duke confessed, accepting the client's chair. "I thought that your profession, Mr. Bragg, required a high order of intelligence on the part of its votaries."

"Don't you queer my pitch," Angus grumbled. "My friend doesn't understand chaff."

"Far be it from me," the duke declared earnestly, "to interfere with any effort you may be making, George, to earn an honest living."

Peter Bragg coughed. He was flattered that his partner should be on such intimate terms with his dintinguished client, but he thought it time to assert himself.

"Concerning this loss of your grace's—" he began.

"It's an annoying business," the duke confided. "I dare say Angus here will appreciate the situation more precisely even than you. These are the facts: Last Wednesday I gave a party at Cumberland House. It wasn't altogether a Bohemian party, but it was of that order. You follow me, Mr. Bragg?"

"Perfectly," Peter Bragg assented. "I gather that her grace was not present."

"Her grace," the duke continued dryly, "is on her way home from India. She will arrive within ten days. It is for that reason that the matter concerning which I have come to see you is somewhat urgent."

Peter Bragg nodded. The duke accepted a cigarette from Angus's case and lit it.

"We danced and played the usual jinks," the former continued. "Late in the evening I showed some of my guests the contents of my jewel-chest. A lady who is a friend of mine persisted in trying on a certain diamond necklace, an heirloom, of which my wife is very fond. Rather foolishly, I let her keep it for a time. Twice during the evening, I asked her to take it off, and each time she begged to be allowed to wear it a little longer. In the end, she slipped away without saying good night to me, and when, as the last of my guests were leaving, I was called to the telephone, she spoke to me from her house in Hertford Street. I need not detail the conversation. She told me that I owed her a birthday present, which was perfectly true, and that she had decided to keep the necklace. Then she rang off."

"Have you made any attempt to see her since?" Peter Bragg inquired.

"Naturally. I have been to see her twice—once with my lawyer. She simply treats the affair as a tremendous joke."

"Are we," Peter Bragg ventured, "to know the lady's name?"

"I imagine that that will be necessary. It is Lady Katherine Somerby. I admit that I'm a good bit to blame. I've flirted with Lady Katherine, and now she thinks I don't dare make a fuss."

"Lady Katherine is a difficult nut to crack," Angus mused.

"She is a lady of determination," the duke acknowledged. "She has announced her intention of taking a trip to the States in three weeks' time. It is my opinion that she is going there hoping that, during her absence, the matter will blow over. To tell the whole truth, in addition to flirting a bit with her, I've seen a good deal of a former friend of hers whom she now greatly dislikes, so she's jealous and is taking this way of paying me out."

"Are Lady Katherine's jewels insured?" Angus asked.

"Not to my knowledge," the duke replied. "I have never heard her mention the fact."

"Has this little affair," Angus ventured, "interfered with your feeling for her?"

The duke coughed. "I have not seen Lady Katherine for two days," he admitted. "She has rung up twice. Tonight I was to have dined with her."

"And you are going to?"

"I have not made up my mind."

"Go through with it," Angus begged. "I have the glimmering of an idea, Rattles, although, of course, it may not come to anything. Still, take my advice. It can do no harm. Dine with her and be, as far as you can, your old self. Affect to accept the situation."

Lady Katherine was an exceedingly good-natured person, but even she was a little ruffled when she swept into the morning room of her house in Hertford Street at twelve o'clock on the following morning to receive her too-early caller. She held out her hand affably enough, but she indulged in a grimace of annoyance.

"My dear George," she protested, "what sort of a person do you think I am? Fancy sending up a card at eleven o'clock—"

"A quarter past," he interrupted.

"A quarter past eleven, then—to say that you wished to see me on business. In the first place what business could you have with me, or any one else, and, in the second place, if you had wanted to see me, why couldn't you have taken me out to lunch or tea and a dance?"

"My dear Kate," Angus explained, "when I sent word to say that I wished to see you

THE SONG IN THE DARK

By Edwin Balmer

ON ONE day no one out in the big world had ever heard of him. By noon of the

"They're about a year apart; the youngest come just last Christmas; and each prettier makes a man different? There was eighteen men that all see what goin' to happen to the rest of 'em. But Nicolo, he was the only one that jumped to try to stop it."

Nobody on the back seat offered any theory. Presently Jim asked: "What are we coming to?"

"Macara mine."

There were black buildings with two powerful electric lights high up on poles and protected by reflectors. A pump and blowers were going. The rescue crews were at work.

Lucy and Jim stepped from Buxby's car and went to their work, in the process of which Jim lost track of Lucy. He didn't worry about her. He was sure she was not underground, since no one but the rescue shifts were allowed below.

One crew was still repairing ventilating apparatus, renewing the trap doors and air stoppings; another crew, with gas masks, was clearing up and digging on the lowest level, where a lot of bad "roof" had come down. They had found nobody yet; and hoped not to for several hours, for anybody found in the part of the mine already reached would surely be dead. The hope was that the men had retreated to some far end of a cutting, where there remained a pocket of air, and that they had been able to seal it off from the afterdamp.

Jim talked to several men and to a few of the women, who dully and stubbornly stood around in the mine building. Nicolo's wife was not there; she had gone home. Jim gradually realized that, in spite of the ceaseless work below, no result was to be expected for some time. He went to the cottage of one of the assistant mine foremen and arranged for a room, then dried his clothes and had breakfast. At ten o'clock he went out to work again.

The rain had stopped and the sun was spotting the little mine settlement with golden patches. He was on his way to interview Nicolo's wife, and presently he came to a cottage neater than its neighbors and with clean, white curtains at the front windows. He knocked at the door and, almost instantly, the door was opened and a young woman confronted him, with dark, wide eyes gazing into his.

"What hev you?" she asked him; and, realizing that his coming suggested news from the mine, he replied quickly, "Nothing's happened. I just came to see you. I'm a newspaper man. You are Mrs. Baresi?"

"Nicolo's wife, I am," she said with the slightest of accents.

Though the mother of five children, she was not older than Lucy. Her smooth olive throat was exposed and her arms were bare, for she had rolled up the sleeves of her blue gingham house dress. She was shorter than Lucy and heavier, but in a madonna-like way. Instantly you thought of this woman as giving life.

She said, "Eef my baby, you do not mind him, come in. Now I give him the bath."

"I don't mind a bit," assured Jim and stepped into the front room where, in the full sunlight which was streaming through the windows, was Lucy bent over a low table upon which stood a tin tub in which sat a four-month-old boy.

Lucy was supporting him; and she was doing her best to appear expert and easy at it. But as the baby slipped slightly she grabbed him in such a desperate grip that Jim burst out laughing.

When he had started laughing, he kept right on; for it was so good to have something to laugh at that morning. And as Jim laughed, Lucy went red from her forehead to her chin.

The baby seemed to feel something funny in this queer, tense hold upon him. He bent back his round head and gurgled.

Mrs. Baresi gazed from one of them to the other, puzzled. It was clear that they knew each other; so she offered no comment, but busied herself with the baby's bath. Lucy also remained silent. Jim, feeling the need of conversation, asked Mrs. Baresi, "You've other children, haven't you?"

"Oh my, yes! Four other."

"Is Ferdinando the youngest?"

That gave Lucy her innings, and she shrieked: "Well, Jimmy," she patronized, "at least I've seen a baby before."

Jim admitted they were even. "Horse apiece," he said.

The baby's bath was soon finished. Then, having come for the purpose of getting Mrs. Baresi to talk about Nicolo, Jim led into the subject.

"He will come back to me!" Amata Baresi asserted with glistening eyes. "How I think of him? I tell you! Nicolo, he is down where it is dark; oh, yes, all black! But he sing—" and she sang "Donna e Mobile."

Her voice broke; but she continued: "That way! That how he sing! Oh, I sing not like Nicolo! He sing so gran'. For everybody he sing! Maybe somebody, down where it is so dark, he get afrai'. Not Nicolo! Oh, no! 'Corragio!' he say, and hold him so strong. 'Corragio, compare!' Then nobody can be afrai'. And I know sometime he speak to me. He say soft, for only me to hear, 'I will come back, my girl!' He say, 'Io tornero, fanciulla mia!' So he call me 'fanciulla mia!' An' I know Nicolo, he come back!" And Nicolo's fanciulla, his little girl, burst into tears.

Three or four minutes later Lucy Blaine and Jim Steever were walking away from Nicolo's home.

"Well, I should think," said Lucy, "you'd be feeling particularly illustrious just now. You did such a considerate little act. There was that woman, packing about all she could bear with this waiting; she was holding up her end in a way I'd pray for power to do, if I was ever in her place. Of course I could never be in her place, for I could never care for any man half her way. However, there she was, keeping hold of herself.

The seats were only half filled.

Copyright, 1927, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.

Catch her weeping around the mine mouth! Not she! She's listening for the bell, but till it rings she's sticking to her post seeing after her children, feeding 'em, washing 'em, keeping 'em from getting frightened. Then in you walk on her, and ask her how she is feeling!"

"I did not!" denied Jim.

"About the same as."

Jim was feeling so particularly unillustrious that he retorted, "well, what were you doing there? I suppose you dropped in, as an old friend, to make a pleasant little social call."

"I did not. I came to get copy for about fourteen hundred words which I'm supposed to shove on the wire this afternoon," Lucy admitted.

"Well," said Jim again, "what are you going to shove?"

"What're you?" demanded Lucy. "I suppose you'll say, 'I dropped in to interview the wife of Nicolo for the readers of the Telegraph;' Lucy composed paraphrases of his imaginary story; "'and there, in the miner's simple home, I came upon the maiden lady correspondent for another paper awkwardly holding the baby in the bath. He was a four-month-old infant, the youngest of the family as I ascertained by inquiry. Within five minutes I had Mrs. Baresi's assurance that she believed her husband would return; and in no time after that I had her in tears.'"

Jim had no come-back, and changed the subject: "Where are we going?"

"I don't know," said Lucy. "Don't you? You started this way."

The path they took led away from the tiny town. They came to a bit of pasture land where the sun had dried the ground at the top of the slope.

Below them law the rows of miners' cottages, the shining white sides of the store, the church with its steeple and belfry, and beyond, the black buildings about the mine and the stack, from which smoke was rising.

"We'll hear the bell, if it rings," said Lucy. She meant that bell which would peal or toll when word reached the mine mouth that the rescuers had news below.

Lucy said, "I think I've met my share of the women who are considered interesting to the general reader. Most of them have simply given me the sensation of extreme insultude—bustling old four-flushers!"

She had spoken with vehemence. But, after a pause, she went on more calmly. "Now, this morning is entirely different. I'm the four-flusher. That's what I'm feeling. I don't feel tired at all. I want to do something, because I've never felt so worthless in all my life as I do since I've spent a morning with Amata Baresi."

Jim gazed at her face, which was turned away from him. "What do you want to do?" he asked.

She didn't answer. "Amata Baresi is undoubtedly the most benighted soul I have ever met," Lucy continued. "She gets on without the most rudimentary conception of current thought about women. She hasn't the slightest impulse to develop her personality—"

"Oh, come now!" Jim objected. "Five children!"

"You know what I mean!" Lucy retorted. "I bet she hasn't been to a lecture in her life—never heard of the approved, scientific regulation and limitation of the family. She's simply blundered blindly ahead and had five of the loveliest children I ever saw. She's probably not got two dollars in the bank, and her husband's down in a coal mine on the wrong side of a disaster. Ten to one he's dead—the improvident emotionalist. Isn't he?" Lucy asked. "Ten to one Nicolo's dead, isn't that so?"

"All of ten to one," Jim agreed. "Look here," he went on suddenly, "I've met my share of four-flushers, too. Men mostly. I'm so fed up with 'em that I'd got to think everybody was a four-flusher or a fake. I came down here naturally wanting to think that about Nicolo—that he didn't do what they said he did; that he didn't mean to, if he did do it; or that he never really had a chance to get out of the mine himself. But he did . . ."

"Boom!" went the bell about twenty minutes later, while Lucy and Jim still sat on the slope. A second boom resounded, deep and slow; and when the bell beat again there could be no doubt that it sounded a toll. Reluctantly, at long, lingering intervals it beat: "Boommm . . .boommm."

Lucy and Jim were on their feet. They looked toward the bell. Then they gazed at each other and tears filled Lucy's eyes. Her lips quivered. "They've found them," she said. "They're dead."

"Maybe not all," said Jim.

Lucy clutched at his sleeve. "Oh, not Nicolo, anyway! Not Nicolo, Jim!"

"Come!" said Jim and he clasped her hand. "The women are running."

It was not Nicolo. The rescue crew had found two men dead, but they were in a different heading from that down which Nicolo had run. These two men had been killed by afterdamp; and of course this was no good omen. It told too plainly what must have happened to the rest of the men, unless they had found safe refuge somewhere.

Several miners among those who had escaped remembered that Nicolo had worked in the original cutting under the "bad roof." Surely he had known it; likely it had been in his mind when he jumped to do something before the second explosion.

Lucy and Jim put this and other relevant matter on the wire that evening. They waited up until very late, on the chance that more discoveries would be made before the press "run" started. Then they separated and went to bed.

A bell was beating in the night: "Behmmm, behmmm!" On and on, quickly and sharply it beat. Not at all like the toll of the dirge of yesterday; not at all unwillingly. "Behmm, behmm!" It told of victory and triumph.

Jim leaped from his bed, where he had been sleeping without having undressed. The dim gray of dawn was at his window, and a voice was shouting, "Everybody's alive! Every man—all of them—all—all right!"

The shout ceased in the English tongue and others took it up; Jim heard the cries of women. He came out to the street, where they were running and calling to one another. The church was lighted. The whole village was aglow, and the electric lamps high up on the poles glinted on the sheds of the mine from which the cage was lifting the first of the twenty-two miners who had been found to be "all right."

Of course they were not actually all right. A good deal of gas had got through that first barrier which Nicolo had created out of roof timbers and sand; a good deal also had seeped beyond the second barrier, which he had engineered farther on. The men had had no water and only bad air to breathe, and they had been lying, with lights out, sucking in the air close to the floor. But they were alive, and would again have strength, though most of them had to be carried out of the mine.

"I don't believe we could have pulled through—some of us," gasped one of the rescued miners as the flickering torchlight fell on his drawn face, "if it hadn't been for Nicolo—an' the way he sang to us down there—in the dark!"

Jim came upon Lucy in the crowd of excited women and children. What they saw, they described faithfully and well in their newspapers—all but one incident which occurred when the weaker men had been carried out and at last the rescuers brought Nicolo from the mine.

Lucy and Jim both told how the crowd cried out to him; how they cheered and wept; how they wanted to get hold of him. But neither mentioned how he looked when he saw his wife; neither described nor even attempted to describe, how she stepped toward him and he, lifting himself on one elbow, with his other hand made his flourish of joy toward her and said, "Io ritorno, fanciulla mia!"

They wanted those words for themselves; they wanted more than those words; far, far more of what they had found at Macara mine they wanted.

They went for a walk together after they had finished their assignments at Macara and while they were waiting for a train unimportant enough to stop at Groton.

"Well," announced Jim, "you and I, old dear, are going to have a hard time keeping our faces straight before each other when we're back to modernism again. Maybe we can keep up the bluff before the rest that we're hard-boiled; but you and I—we certainly have the goods on each other."

"Who's ashamed?" said Lucy. "I'm not."

"And you're not over it, dear?" Jim left out the "old" this time.

"Over what?"

"Your feeling about Amata Baresi; the feeling you mentioned yesterday—that you want to do something!"

"No; I'm not!" said Lucy boldly; and then she looked away: "And I don't mean ever to get over it."

He had started this talk on a path which led by a little stream which had a grove of trees, so that they were alone. Suddenly his arms were around her.

"And I don't mean ever to let you. I've got something I can't get over, Lucy. I guess I caught it down here—from Nicolo. I want you for my wife and not in any 'modern' way, I want you as you are, not as you and I have pretended to be. I want to learn to care, and make you care, like they care. Love, I mean; let's say it. I want to love, and make you love, like that!"

She struggled a little: "Jim, I can't. I want to, but I can't."

"You can; we can. I saw you the other night when you were asleep—on the train. I went and looked at you. Then I saw you on the hill yesterday, and this morning at the mine when Nicolo came out. I know you now!"

She said, very quietly, "I saw you, too; not asleep, but all the other times. But oh"—she pressed him from her a very little—"how could you laugh at me!"

"When?"

"You know when!"

"But I didn't mean to hurt you, dear!"

"Oh, didn't you know I never wanted anything in all my life like being able to hold him right?"

"Forgive me, dear," said Jim.

"I'll show you, some day!"

"Oh, will you!" He kissed her. "Fanciulla mia!"

"What?"

"Fanciulla mia, Lucy."

on business, it was a perfectly honest statement of the facts. We cannot possibly discuss business at lunch or at a tea dansant. Let us finish with the commercial side of the affair, and I am entirely at your disposition."

"Well, that's something," she admitted, with a complacent little sigh. "Now please explain yourself. The word business in connection with you intrigues me."

Angus coughed. "I don't know why it showed," he complained, "I am not the eldest son, and, according to the governor, his taxes eat up all his income and a little bit around the corner. However, as you know, we're all doing something nowadays—selling automobiles, champagne, or touting for bets. I'm in the insurance business."

Lady Katherine smiled. "The insurance business!" she murmured. "Any business at all for you, George! How sweet! Go on, please and tell me where I come in."

Angus solemnly opened his pocketbook and produced a card printed that morning at red-hot speed. Lady Katherine read:

"The Honorable George Vincent Angus,

Protective Insurance Company,
100 Cornhill,
London, E. C."

"What on earth—what does this mean?" she asked. "And what do you protect?"

"You, my dear lady," he said earnestly—"you and your belongings. You from any evil that could possibly happen; your belongings from any possible loss that might accrue to you from their untimely disappearance. Honest, Kate, to cut thte gabble, my job is to insure people, and I get a jolly fat commission out of it. I can insure you against death, measles, permanent disfigurement, railway accidents, house burnt over your head, loss of your jewelry, or any other of those trifling misfortunes likely to happen to the modern young woman."

She began to laugh, softly, at first, but more heartily later.

"Ring the bell," she directed. "Groves must make us a cocktail."

Angus did as he was bidden. The butler duly appeared and received his instructions.

"Spare me the rest," Lady Katherine begged, "until I have received stimulus. Where were you yesterday evening and the night before? Rattles gave us a wonderful party last week at Cumberland house."

"Never asked me," Angus grumbled. "I think he knows I'm too fond of you."

"Rubbish! Well, anyway, yesterday evening?"

"Yesterday evening I was out trying to get a Johnny up at Hampstead to insure his house."

"Any luck?"

Angus shook his head gloomily.

"The only thing I'm doing any good with," he confided, "is the jewelry insurance. That is really a good egg. You can wear all your priceless things down at Whitechapel, if you like, and all that happens, if you lose them, is you have the fun of replacing them. I think this insurance-of-jewelry stunt will break my people, sooner or later."

"Explain it to me the moment I have drunk my cocktail," she begged. "As it happens, I am a little interested."

The cocktails were duly brought.

"It is this jewelry insurance," Angus went on persuasively, "I should recommend to you, Kate, more particularly than anything. I don't want to bother you about the other things; I expect your agents look after that. Perhaps you have an insurance on your jewelry?"

"I haven't—not a penny—never thought it worth while."

"Well, listen. All you have to do is to let me run through your little lot, and you tell me the values, or approximately what you gave for them."

"I didn't buy them all myself," she murmured, glancing reflectively at the ceiling.

"That doesn't matter. We can easily get at the values," he assured her. "After that, I lump the things up. Say you've got thirty thousand pounds' worth. I give you a policy. You pay me about a hundred pounds—no hurry about the premium—you can date the check a bit, if you want. And then you can go and lose the whole bally lot and get the boodle."

Lady Katherine was impressed.

"It sounds all right," she admitted. "I lost two of my pearls last week."

"You'd have had the cash for them, if you'd been insured with us," Angus pointed out, "and you could have spent it on something else, if you'd liked."

Lady Katherine toyed with the remainder of her cocktail.

"As a matter of fact, George," she confided, "my stock of jewels has been added to very considerably during the last few days."

"All the more reason for you to insure," he persisted eagerly.

"You see, Rattles rather spread himself the other night," she went on. "He gave me the necklace I have been wanting all my life."

"You don't mean the Madras necklace!" he gasped.

"That is just what I do mean," she admitted triumphantly.

Angus's whistle was long and expressive.

"My dear Kate," he said emphatically, "if you wear that necklace without insuring it, you will commit a positive crime. Have you any idea of its value?" Her eyes glistened.

"Tell me, George, dear!" she begged.

"I should value that necklace," he pronounced, "at something like twenty-five thousand pounds."

She finished her cocktail with a little purr of content.

"Well, there it is," she assured him. "It's up-stairs now in my safe."

"I consider my visit," Angus declared, "to have been a dispensation of Providence. Let your maid bring down the lot. I'll run through them and give you a policy on the spot. Then you'll be safe."

"You're a dear, George," she said, "but the safe is in the wall. You'll have to come up to my room."

They marched up the stairs together. Her maid, who was busy in the room, fetched the keys and brought the cases into the adjacent boudoir. George produced his pocketbook and made careful note of the various contents. They came at last to the necklace. Lady Katherine took it out of its case almost reverently. She held it up to the light, held it against her neck, and then passed it over to her companion.

He took it in entirely the same spirit of veneration. Suddenly his look changed. He lowered the necklace to the table, brought it again into the light, hurried to the window, and stood there for several moments. When he came back again, a certain limpness in his manner intrigued her.

"What's the matter, George?" she asked.

"Nothing," he assured her. "Nothing at all."

"How much are you going to put the necklace down for in the valuation?"

"I really don't know," he answered evasively. "Perhaps—well, why not leave the necklace out?"

She started at him.

"Leave the necklace out? What do you mean?"

"I don't know," he repeated miserably. "You see, Kate, I'm a pal and all that, but this is a matter of business, isn't it?"

"Well, we're treating it as such, aren't we?" she demanded.

"You wish me to?" he asked wistfully.

"Of course, I do."

He had the air of a man making great demands upon his courage.

"Well, look here, Kate," he said, "between you and me, that necklace is a fake."

"Don't be absurd," she scoffed.

"But I know it is a fake," he insisted. It is a copy of what all the dealers know as the Madras necklace Rattles gave his wife when they were married. You know she's just been out to India?"

Lady Katherine nodded.

"She's on her way back."

"I ask you," George demanded, "would she be likely to have gone out to India, where every one knows faked jewels from real ones, wearing the copy of the necklace? She took the real one and left this at home. A perfectly natural thing to do. I can't believe, Kate, that Rattles really gave you that as the real thing."

Lady Katherine thought hard for several moments. The softness in her eyes had departed. Her brain was busy. Involuntarily she gave an impression of what she would become in, say, a matter of half a dozen years.

"George," she said, "I can't believe you. Rattles was perfectly furious when I marched off with the necklace and insisted upon sticking to it. He owes me a present, so I helped myself, but he's offered me anything else I liked in its place."

Angus smiled dubiously. He passed his arm through Lady Katherine's.

"Perhaps he doesn't know himself," he suggested. "The duchess is no fool, you know."

There was a brief silence. Lady Katherine with the necklace in her hand, walked to the window and back again. She looked at the gems in the darkness and in the light.

"Look here, I tell you what!" Angus suddenly exclaimed. "Naturally, as we insure jewels, we've got an expert on the premises. Cleverest chap there ever was! He's never been deceived yet. Let me telephone to him. He knows nothing about the facts. He shall come here—I left him in the office—I should think he could be here in ten minutes. We'll simply put it to him: are these real gems or aren't they? That ought to be sufficient, oughtn't it? Personally, it doesn't make any difference to me, but, for your sake, I think it ought to be cleared up."

"For my sake, it shall be," Lady Katherine agreed. "Go into my room and ring up your friend."

They carried the case to the table and, acting upon a hint from Angus, the butler paid them a second visit.

"If I thought Rattles dared play me a trick like that!" Lady Katherine murmured, with gleaming eyes.

"My dear Kate," Angus protested earnestly, "don't get away with that idea. I tell you that honestly I don't believe Rattles knows. I'm not acquainted with the duchess, but that's just the sort of trick she would play on him, and I don't believe, for a moment, she'd go to India without her necklace."

The butler presently made his appearance with an announcement:

"The gentleman your ladyship was expecting."

Mr. Peter Bragg stepped in. Angus rose at once.

"Mr. Bragg," he said, "let me present you to Lady Katherine Somerby. Lady Katherine was on the point of concluding an insurance with me of her jewelry, but she wished me to include a necklace concerning which I feel that I ought to have a second opinion."

"In plain words, Mr. Bragg," Lady Katherine intervened, placing the necklace in his hands, "will you take that to the light or the dark or wherever you please, and tell me whether those are real gems or imitations? I will tell you frankly that it is supposed to be the Madras necklace, belonging to the Duke of Cumberland."

Mr. Peter Bragg bowed gravely.

"Lady Katherine," he said, "if this is the Madras necklace of the Duke of Cumberland, I shall be in a position to tell you so within thirty seconds. If it is an imitation, I shall still occupy no more of your time. Permit me."

He took the necklace to the window, stood there for the briefest possible period of time, and returned. He laid the necklace upon the table, with an almost contemptuous flick of the hand.

"This necklace, Lady Katherine," he announced, "consists of gems of artificial manufacture. I think I recognize the maker—a man named Aren-

THE SONG IN THE DARK

By Edwin Balmer

ON ONE day no one out in the big world had ever heard of him. By noon of the next they were talking of him everywhere. Millions were thrilled by reading of what he had done.

The broadcast radio that evening spoke his name in hundreds of thousands of homes:

> Groton mine disaster. The situation in the Macara mine at Groton, where a serious gas explosion occurred this morning, remains the same. On account of the destruction of ventilating apparatus, rescue crews have been obliged to proceed slowly; but it is still hoped that Nicolo may have succeeded in his desperate attempt to lead the miners to some remote gallery where they may be able to survive.

Millions of people were interested in Nicolo that night; but in time, of course, they were bound to forget. To Jim Steever and Lucy Blaine he became of the utmost importance personally and permanently. It happened in this way:

Jim Steever was reporting "city stuff" for the Telegraph. He was a good newspaper man, alert and clear-minded and in excellent health. He ate irregularly and hastily, but he was only twenty-six and he stood it beautifully. Steever had been "on" the newspaper throughout the four years since his graduation from the university; and in that time had seen and done many things. But he had not married. He had not even asked anyone to marry him. Nevertheless, he was in love with Lucy Blaine. He had not proposed to her, for the simple reason that he was sure she would laugh at him.

Lucy also was a reporter, working on the Express, for which she did some "straight stories"—as she referred to the ordinary, original reporting of news events; but she was best at "spilling the sob"—a trade name for write-ups of the "human" and emotional touches to be found in every big news story. Just now she was on the Bramp divorce case, and she had been seeing a good deal of Jim lately, for he was on it too.

Both of them happened to be boarding on the north side, up by the Edgewater Beach. So when she worked late they sometimes took the same elevated train home.

When it was very late, an hour like one o'clock in the morning, Jim insisted upon escorting Lucy to the flat building where she roomed. "Silly!" said Lucy. "As if I couldn't take care of myself walking home as well as when I'm out late on a story."

Lucy was pretty, with lots of dark chestnut hair which was fine and soft-looking. She had an even, delicate profile and calm blue eyes. She was straight, five feet five inches in height, with good firm shoulders. She had done a lot of swimming at college, and she danced well.

Jim appreciated this, and upon a few occasions, when they had evenings "off," he took her to dinner at the Green Mill or the Marigold Garden and danced with her outdoors. Then they discussed people and general topics incisively and frankly. They discussed marriage—impersonally. They agreed that marriage was and ought to be an "evolution."

"Toward what, do you think?" asked Jim.

"Toward more complete freedom for the woman, obviously," said Lucy.

They discussed the advantages and disadvantages of an arrangement which had been made by a lawyer and a woman novelist of their acquaintance. In this arrangement the husband and wife kept their own establishments and met only when they were inclined to and when the business of their separate careers seemed to make it possible.

On this night, when so many people were becoming excited over Nicolo, Jim had finished the write-up of his late interview on the Bramps, and had turned it in, hoping to hear Mr. Marshfield's "That's all, Steever" in time to catch the elevated train at quarter to one. But just then the managing editor came in.

"They're still calling up about Nicolo," he said to the city editor. "Hadn't we better send somebody down there?"

"I began to think so some time ago. Say, Steever, what's doing with you?"

"Nothing, sir," said Jim. And a moment later he had his assignment to Groton.

Groton was down-State about a hundred and thirty miles. The disaster at the Macara mine would have been a "big" story even without Nicolo, for forty-six men had been trapped by the explosion and the following fire. Twenty-two had been rescued, but the other twenty-four were "missing."

From the office Jim hurried to a railroad station where a train was starting down-State a few minutes after one. It was made up mostly of express cars, but there was one day coach. As he entered, Jim saw a slim girl in the aisle near the middle of the car under the garish glare of the gas-light. She was putting a coat in the rack above the brown plush seats. It was Lucy.

Apparently they were going to have the car to themselves except for two men, evidently salesmen, who were already slouched down in their seats and trying to sleep.

"Hello," he hailed Lucy quietly, so as not to arouse the slumberers.

She turned. "Why, hello, Jim!" she said and gave him her hand.

"Going to Groton?" he asked.

"That's it!"

"People have been calling your office too?" Jim asked.

"Haven't they!" said Lucy.

"And probably it's all a bunch of bunk about Nicolo," declared Jim.

They talked "shop" for a few minutes, then Jim asked: "Where's your ticket?"

He took it and thrust it in the binding of the plush of the seat in front of her. "Go to sleep now," he advised. "I'll tell the conductor where to wake us up."

He retreated to a seat across the aisle and a row back, where he would not be too intrusive but from where he could watch over her. Present, when her head disappeared behind the seat he got up and looked at her.

She was asleep. She had an elbow on the narrow window sill and her hand supported her head, which swayed slightly with the movement of the train. She was a little flushed and her lips were softer-looking and fuller than he had ever seen them. She had long dark lashes and very white lids. Little curls of her hair came awry, making her altogether adorable.

Half past four at Groton was a black, rainy hour. There was a dripping station shed, dimly lit by a smoky kerosene lamp. There was a short row of dark, dripping roofs across a morass of road; beyond was nothing but drench.

Jim learned that Macara mine was about three miles to the southwest down a switch line for the coal cars. There was also a road, which might be traversed in the automobile of one Buxby, who was sleeping at present in a house across the way.

Buxby proved to be wakable, and agreeable to a before-dawn drive to Macara mine. He brought out an old touring car with curtains up. Lucy and Jim got in behind.

"Idiot, you're soaked!" Lucy rebuked him, and she put a hand on his coat.

"Wouldn't you have been?"

"No. My coat's waterproof."

She withdrew her hand and they sat apart and silent while the car lurched and splashed through the mud. Buxby, on the other hand, was decidedly talkative. He was a large man, past middle age, of genial, philosophical disposition.

"I never see a newspaper man traveling with his wife before," he commented.

"You haven't seen one now," Jim put him right. "This is Miss Blaine; she's come down for the Express."

"So that's it!" said Buxby, cheerfully. "My mistake. Well, I never before see a lady reporter either." He seemed to feel this put him entirely to rights. "Though I often read their writin's. It's sure queer work for a girl, but helpful, maybe; yes, I wouldn't be surprised if it proved right helpful. Not a bad idea, when you think it over, for a girl to see a lot of life, as well as a man; she'll be that much better to raise her children later."

Jim decided it was time to take this colloquy in hand.

"There's a man named Nicolo down here," he put in.

"Nicolo Baresi!" the driver exclaimed with feeling.

"Know him?" said Jim.

"Him and Amata and all five."

"Five what?" asked Lucy.

"Children, lady," Buxby explained. "They're about a year apart; the youngest come just last Christmas; and each prettier than the next one. Amata's crazy about every one; she's one of them women that children don't never seem any trouble to. And Nicolo, he's just a born daddy." Buxby began to hum.

It appeared to be impossible for anybody who knew Nicolo not to feel livelier and like singing, or at least like humming, when thinking of him.

Jim asked: "Exactly what did he do, as you make it out?"

Buxby waited a minute. "Well," he said, "it was this way:

"Here's your mine with your shafts up and down and your cuts and cross-cuts leading away from the shafts way underneath at every level where there's coal. You got two shafts, or airways—your downcast air course to carry air into the mine and your up-cast to carry it out. They're close together, but you got air stoppings, you understand, and doors and brattices to keep your air from short-circuiting and not goin' where it's needed. You got blowers overhead to keep it movin' into the mine. If air ain't coming in all the time, you don't live below; you understand that.

"You use up the air; and, besides, gas collects from the coal—three or four kinds of gas. Even when everything's in order, your blowers goin' and your air courses all right, gas somehow gets ahead of you—fire damp or flash damp, or maybe too much fine coal dust gets hangin' in the air.

"I don't know as they decided which did the business in Macara yesterday. Maybe it was all of them. Anyway, here comes your explosion in your lowest level; and your air's gone. The explosion's used it up; your doors and air bridges and brattices are gone, so they can't get more air down to you from above even if the blowers are all right—which they ain't.

"There was forty-one men workin' in that level in Macara when this come. Some of 'em—eighteen—was between the shaft and the explosion; the rest was on the other side of it. They was twenty-three. Nicolo was with the eighteen who naturally took for the shaft to get out of the mine before the second explosion come. For everybody knew there was goin' to be another.

"I've heard the engineers say how it happens they come in pairs, mine explosions The first one is fair local, you see, usin' up all the air right where it goes off and blowin' down doors and timbers, as I've said; it leaves a lot of hot gas and some burning; but after the explosion's gone off, there's a reaction; and air from other parts of the mine is sucked in to where the fire is. For a few minutes it's all busy mixing with the gases, making ready to explode again.

"That's when the miners, who are placed lucky, got a chance to get out of the mine; and when the other boys want to beat it as far into the mine as possible. For the second blast's about ready to go; and then there won't be no more. For there's no more air for breathin' or for explodin'. There's no air—just poison—afterdamp!"

"Now, Nicolo Baresi, I'm sayin', was with the eighteen that had a chance for a ride out of the mine before the second explosion. He was as near the cage as any; he had as much chance and right as anybody for a place in the only hoist there was goin' to be up that shaft.

"But just at that minute, he seen some of the other bunch—the twenty-three that had been further off—running toward the shaft. And Nicolo—he yelled and run back to 'em.

"They didn't have a chance to get up that shaft; and every one of 'em would have known it if they'd stopped to think. But they wasn't stoppin'. They was just runnin' right to where the next explosion was about to come off. And Nicolo, he'd left the shaft and was runnin' at 'em to head 'em back. That's all anybody knows now; for that's the last that anybody saw that got out of the mine.

"The cage was just startin' up; and the explosion came off just as the cage was reachin' the top and gave it a lift at the end. So nobody knows what Nicolo done; I mean, what he put over and how much he got away with. For that second blast was the real boy. But I'll say Nicolo thought of somethin'; he sure gave up his ride out to the air for the sake of tryin' somethin'!"

After steering through several more puddles, Buxby considered aloud: "What

BLOCKING THE TRAFFIC

The goat traveled four times as fast as the donkey. Let us say that the donkey had taken X minutes to go one-third way over the bridge. If the goat backs up the donkey will be able to cross in an additional 2X minutes. Then the goat would be able to cross in ¾X minutes. If the donkey backed up it would take 2X minutes' time, a total of 5X minutes to land both animals. Therefore, by the goat backing up, 2¼X minutes would be saved.

THE COOK'S PROBLEM

Let us call the original number of men, X. Then 24 X would represent the number of individual daily rations in the pork barrel. Then came 16 more Jacks, which cut the pork barrel's term to 16 days. Thus we get the simple equation: 24 X divided by (X plus 16) equals 16, and the value of X is 32. There are now 48 men in the camp.

THE POLICE DOG ENTHUSIAST

By Clifford McBride

I have always tried to be rather fashionable, even in dogs, so when I saw a police dog out giving his owner an airing the other day I struck up a bargain and bought the dog. The owner said he was a fine motor dog - wouldn't let anyone get in the car or come near it, so when I parked to make a call I left him on guard.

I noticed from the window that he barked at everyone who passed.

After congratulating myself on finding such a faithful pet I endeavored to climb into my car.

It was plain my dog was taking his duties too seriously.

After several unsuccessful attempts at rescuing my car I at last gave up and hailed a friend.

He kindly consented to tow me down to the city zoo — where I persuaded them to buy the dog — sold him for a timber wolf. We would have preferred using the dog and car separately but were not able to arrange it.

his sensitive dark face shadowed and flushed.

"She doesn't know." He lifted his lids, laughter and sorrow shining out of his hurt eyes.

"Then it's you who keep her in the dark. I've been wondering what you meant by saying that she was deaf and dumb and blind."

He rested his elbows on his knees and stared past her.

"Why . . . please?" she asked him.

"I'm a failure—a disappointment. She married a successful man and found herself very soon harnessed to another, drearier sort of fellow."

"I wish," she gasped, "that I had married a failure. Little does she know . . . about successful artist husbands. But—suppose this book you're writing now turns out to be a huge success?"

Again he flushed, but very much more deeply, as though he were shrewdly stung. His face drew itself together, even his body, as though to present as small as possible a surface, to shrinking for blunt touches. She laughed as sadly as though she had wept. "I understand. It would hurt now . . . to win her back for any success . . . What a shame!"

Their party, so recklessly Martian in its beginning, ended in the sudden overshadowing of April's influence.

"I wonder how they'll manage to pull us down again from the housetop," she asked, delaying for an instant his departure.

Barnaby set his mouth. "I've pulled up the ladder," he said.

. . . . . .

Shortly after that boast, he finished his book. It was the end of May, a very warm close evening. Across their tiny dinner-table he announced his achievement gravely to his wife. Maydie's small face tinted itself.

"It's quiet . . . at the library . . . I suppose."

His eyes laughed stormily. "Q-U-I-E-T—" he quoted.

Maydie's delicate May day pink ripened to June.

"You'd have been quiet enough here lately," she said in a very small voice. "They—haven't been coming."

"What do you mean—haven't been coming? . . . Your family?"

"Mama and the girls are angry with me. We—we quarreled last March just before they went out to the country."

"Quarreled? You—quarreled—with Margaret—Ruth . . . ?"

"And mother and Ellen . . . all of them . . . yes!" Her gesture expressed an epic.

"But—for heaven's sake, what about, Maydie?"

"About you," said Maydie in her very smallest voice, and scraped ice-cream carefully and childishly from her plate. Her eyes flashed up at him, beseeching, timid.

"Shall we go to the theater, Barnaby? We ought to—celebrate."

Ah, Barnaby thought, she knows this book is going to be a success! Maydie always had a nose for good fortune. He would never have won her in the first place if it hadn't been . . . He checked his comment with a whip of self-contempt.

But his foresight and perhaps the instinct of Maydie justified themselves. From its initial reception through all its prosperous history the book was a success. Original . . . witty . . . dramatic . . . beautiful . . . profound . . . an epoch-making achievement . . . Barnaby turned giddy with praise.

Maydie, however, concealed from him any giddiness the sudden augmentation of their bank-account might well have caused her. No prospector ever showed less elation at the striking of a vein. She watched Barnaby, was silent, a little pinched. But Barnaby took her elation for granted, was generous and unobservant. Feverishly, secretly, every day, the successful author visited his housetop, where in the delicious sunlight and the small harbor winds of adventure, he paced, as lonely as a cloud.

Toward the middle of June, no plans having been spoken of by Barnaby . . . "It's very hot in town," said Maydie. "Mama has asked us down to Seabright."

They were at breakfast. Barnaby pushed back his chair with a harsh, rebellious sound. "You can go . . . if you like, of course. I'm spending the summer here."

Her eyes remained upon him, less bright than usual. "Very well, I'll go tomorrow."

She stood up. She was very thin in her sheer rose-colored dress. She lingered for an instant near his chair. "You—you're writing something else—already?"

"No."

"But you're still going to the library?"

"Er—I'll be ready for something, I dare say—soon—something quite different . . ."

"I see." She went out. A perfume lingered on the air . . . an evanescent perfume of roses. Well, wasn't it somewhere . . . June?

On the housetop it was August, it was desert weather, it was Arabia, Sudan. The city thrummed with an Oriental monotony of sound. The smell of hot asphalt reached his nostrils through the smell of warm harbor-water and rotting wharves. The Tuesday morning clowns were languid ghosts, criminals deservedly hanged by the neck till they were dead. The washerwoman muttered her "Mornin'" plaintively.

Maydie had been gone two days when on a sultry thunderous afternoon his neighbor came up to him.

"I've read about it," she said, coming close to stand beneath his cliff. "I knew it would be a success. Is she pleased?"

"I don't know," he answered dully.

"You don't look elated. Give me your hand. I want to come up to your housetop." Beside him, after a comprehensive look about his quarters, she went on in her casual fashion of speech. "We're spending all June and part of July in town. My poor ostrich husband tells me he has a piece of work to finish. A certain pretty actress's play runs until the end of the month, maybe longer . . . Poor Horrie! Oh, I forgot to tell you—that Egypt has found her way into an exhibition. She is labeled 'Reincarnation' and is considered 'clever.' I brought you three clippings . . . two about 'Reincarnation,' and one announcing a new novel by that distinguished author, Barnaby Graem."

"How did you know?"

"There's a picture of Barnaby Graem, very unlike Solomon of the Housetop, who always had rumpled hair . . . I think I like Solomon's looks best—not that the public would agree with me. Mr. Graem is charming, reserved, clever-looking—almost sleek." Her restless and unhappy eyes, fitting about, rested on the studio skylight. "Your housetop is better than mine. You haven't a peephole." She laughed. "You don't know what a temptation that skylight has been to me—and by the way, I wish Horrie would close it. There's going to be a real thunderstorm in a few minutes . . . Shall I call down to him? I've wanted to so often. Poor Horrie! Little he knows!"

"Looking down is against the code of a Martian," said Barnaby.

"But . . . think . . . what I might see, myself unseen. I wonder if he ever looks up—or thinks about the roof? Horrie has never craved a housetop. We're going to be caught in that storm, my dear author . . . do you know?"

"I like storms."

Fear caught at Barnaby's heart. He clutched her arm . . . they were leaning side by side against his coping . . . "Don't . . . don't look down," he besought her harshly, and, as though to save himself in her, he caught her tight, held her, and, in a rush of starved emotion, a craving for life . . . for consolation, reassurance, he kissed her mouth.

All her body drew itself in, the strangest diminishing, shrinking of flesh and spirit.

"I'm sorry," he gasped, letting her go. Her face was turned from him.

"Even in the corner of a house top," she sighed . . . "This means that I must . . . indeed . . . go down."

But before she, leaving him desolate, dry-lipped, burnt by the shame of a betrayal, could reach the cliff edge, there came an enormous windy blackness over their high world, a crashing of cloud and air, the rain trampling across the city. Barnaby ran to her, dragged her close into his chimney-angle. "Don't dare to cross that roof! The wind might throw you over. It's a hurricane."

In fact they had to cling to each other, press against the bricks of their shelter in order to hold themselves to earth.

"They want us back in Mars," she laughed uncertainly, the wind whipping her voice away.

Barnaby could neither speak nor laugh. The storm was as much within him as without: madness, tumult and violent, tragic rain.

At the first lull he guided her across his roof, helped her down to her own, and started beside her toward her own trap-door. The thunder was already distant, the rain still falling, the wind gone.

Life reached up to them at that instant in a cry . . . a human cry, tearing their wet stillness . . . an agony . . . a name . . . Marion . . . Marion . . . Marion . . ."

They found themselves together near the skylight, in Martian possession of the horror of humanity . . . a man below there, blind, in anguish, fighting with a physical hell of smoke and flame.

. . . . . .

Oriental rumor starts always on a housetop, but it was in the black and white and western gossip that Barnaby read the sequel to his neighbor's tragedy.

"The celebrated artist, Horace Steele, was terribly burned yesterday in his studio apartment at —th Street and —— Avenue. Returning from a matinee and not finding his wife in the apartment, he had gone to his studio to prepare for her a cup of tea in case she should come home wet and cold. By that time the storm was in full fury, thundering across the housetops of the drenched and wind-torn city. Mr. Steele refilled his alcohol lamp, which seemed to have been blown out by a gust of air. The flame was merely flattened, not extinct. His bottle exploded in his hand, scattering its blazing contents about his head and shoulders. He was found unconscious by his wife on her return. She, with a neighbor, Mr. Barnaby Graem, the distinguished author, arrived only just in time to put out the flames and save Mr. Steele's life.

"Mrs. Steele is with her husband at the hospital. His eyesight is injured, but it is believed not irreparably. His present disfigurement will no doubt be greatly ameliorated by the skill of surgeons experienced in the World War. As soon as he is sufficiently recovered, Mrs. Steele will take her husband to Europe . . ."

Barnaby read with a bitter sort of relish, a distorted sympathy

The failure she had longed for had drawn that desperate intruder down altogether from her housetop to a darkly radiant giving of her necessary self, her most necessary love. Barnaby could not forget that voice crying for "Marion . . . Marion . . . Marion . . ." Her quarrel with life was ended. Romance, wrapped in disfiguring brown paper, had opened in her hand. But . . . let her in her memory do the lord of the housetop justice! From him she had learned the lesson of patience; it was he who had saved her for that next uplifting tragic wave of life. He had taught her; now he must reteach himself. He would go up again.

As he came up on the roof, a soft desirous wind flowed into his face and cooled his eyes. The sky was a garden of small pale blossoms. He moved across the flat dim space, pensive, very much alone. But the tranquil pulse of solitude and contemplation suffered a desperate great leap. There, on his own roof, crouched against his coping, tense, dark, slim, her head bent rigidly toward the depth . . . a figure dressed in black! The blood of his body thundered in his ears. Something had gone wrong . . . her husband . . . dead . . . He was beside her in his flash of terror—caught her in his hands. She cried aloud and looked up.

Maydie . . .

His Maydie—looking down? Hating her loveliness? Thirsty, body and soul, for that sudden peace of death? . . . What had frightened him, angered him for the other woman, made him, for his own blind, dumb Maydie, mad, so that a white mist crossed his brain. He could not even hold her safe . . . his hands were weak. She lay against him, weeping in long breaths. He could see her pitiful small white neck. She was stammering, her dumbness shattered into speech.

"I n-never helped you . . . your success has nothing to do with me . . . you were ill . . . I let them sneer at you . . . I sneered at you myself You left the house—to escape from me . . ."

"To escape from—everything . . ."

"I've been so lonely—so desperate, hating myself. I couldn't tell you. . . all winter . . . you seemed so far away . . . as if you had gone . . . up somewhere out of my reach. Tonight when I came in . . . reading about that other husband frightened me so . . . When I came in and didn't find you at once, I wanted suddenly, to die. You'd gone so far away from me. I came out into the hall and saw the stairs going up. I couldn't bear to go down into the street . . . I'd been crying—and yet I couldn't bear to wait for you . . . you might not be coming at all . . . I wanted air and space, and to be alone—out of doors. I ran up and found myself here and quite close to the edge looking down. Oh, Barnaby . . . how did you find out where I was? Thank God for your arms! Just before I felt them . . . I had such a horrible . . . desire . . ."

She crept to him as though she wanted to creep into his very heart. He trembled; his body seemed to open for her like a rock, cleft deep.

"Let's go down. There's nothing here for either of us . . . Love me again."

"Not . . . again . . . If this book had only been a failure, then I could make you believe in me . . . again . . . I only needed to be alone a little . . ."

"Alone? . . . I hate this housetop . . . Let's go home."

German Secrets of War

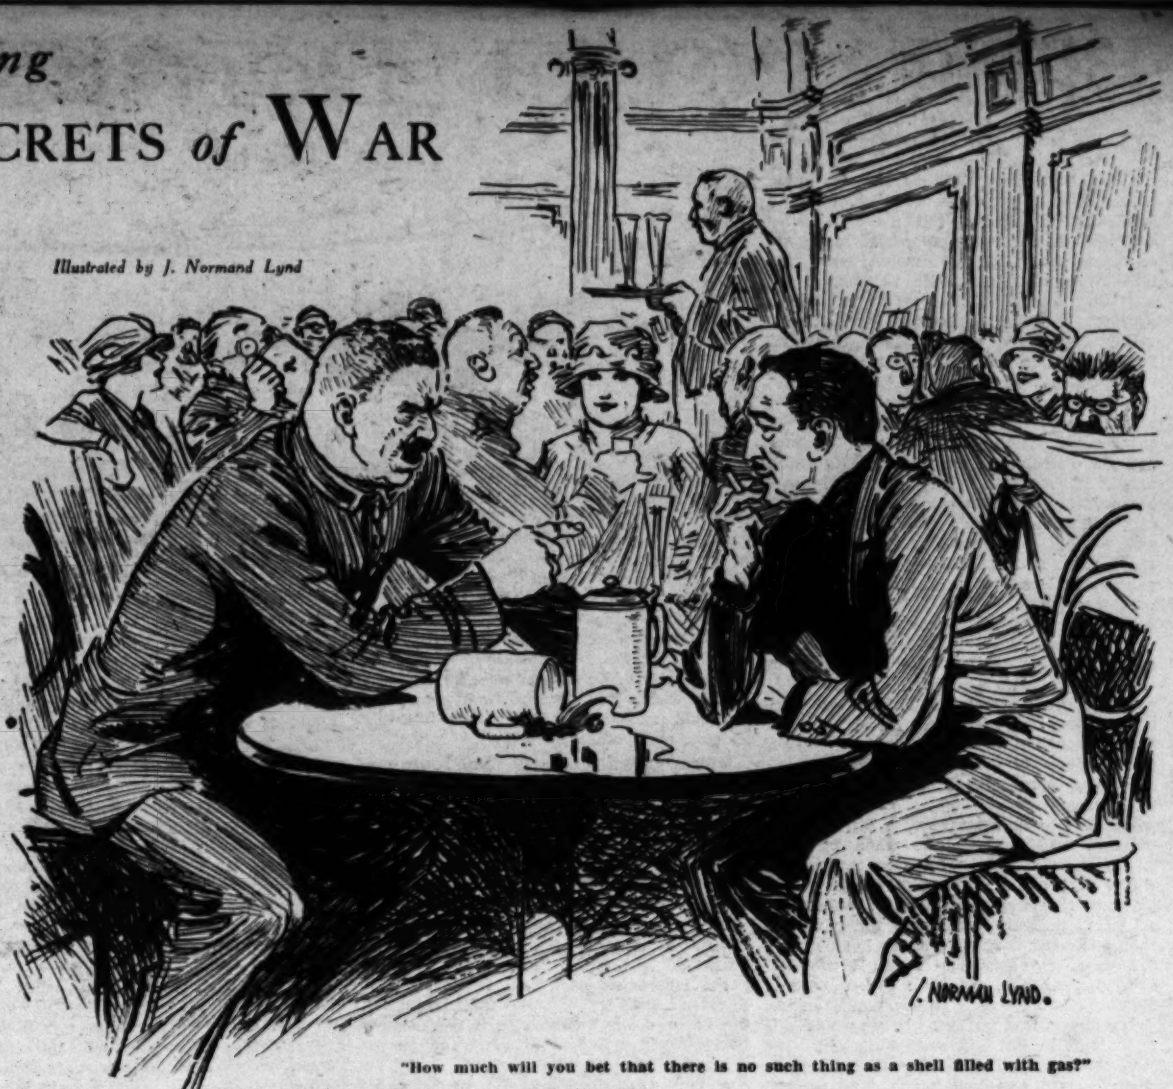
Illustrated by J. Normand Lynd



"How much will you bet that there is no such thing as a shell filled with gas?"

As may be seen, none of these gases were blistering gases. They were suffocating and tear-gases. Even this was enough to put Germany outside the pale of civilized society, but these were quite harmless compared to the gases they used later—which raised such havoc in the Allied ranks.

Having forwarded this information to the main office in the usual way, I started for Essen to see if I could find out what was being done with the enormous quantities of gas sent there. I was destined to learn things of high importance.

As is easily to be seen, one can not just walk into factories like those at Essen. The dynasty of the Krupps, that powerful auxiliary of the dynasty of the Hohenzollerns, has, since 1811, been granted many special privileges, foremost among which is the right to a private police force whose duty it is to guard their trade secrets. And I assure you that some of their secrets are really terrifying.

The factories in which there were a hundred thousand people at this time, covered an area of 1200 acres, 250 of which were covered by buildings. One of the mills—the one that most interested me, as it was the most difficult to gain access to, was separated from the rest by an actual cordon of soldiers.

Yet human nature is such that the very existence of a secret makes people want to discover it. Moreover, in a community of working men like Essen, it is practically impossible to hide any trade secret whatever. There are two reasons for this.

In the first place, the men who worked in that secret mill were specialists and received much larger salaries than the others, incurred jealousy, bitterness, and even hatred—which was quite natural. In the second place, each one of these men was under oath to say absolutely nothing about the work he was doing. Thus they were all under the constant and disquieting scrutiny of the other workers, the latter always attempting to worm their secrets out of them. It was all a matter of psychology!

To get the information I desired, I had hung around the saloons and restaurants where the foremen and skilled mechanics would gather, keeping my ears open. Their conversation was of technical details. But by piecing together various seemingly unconnected scraps of information, I got, for example, a pretty fair idea of the number of machines of all kinds produced per day. I was also able to make a rather accurate estimate of the number and caliber of the shells turned out. Such information was, of course, important, but it was not the information I wanted.

How could I get this? Should I take the necessary risks and try to worm my way into the factory, by disguising myself as a workman? But to do this would require long and careful preparation. It was up to me to get results at once!

Back there in the trenches, all the way from the North Sea to the Vosges, the Germans were about to use a new weapon of offense. It was being prepared here right under my eyes . . . To destroy the effectiveness of this weapon, we had to know what it was. Above all, we could not risk having it come as a surprise. We must have our defenses ready before they put it into operation.

I was still plugging away at my inquiry when one day as I was having lunch at the "Essener Hof" (that weird restaurant which, like everything else in Essen, is owned by the Krupp family,) by the merest chance, I heard that within a few days they were going to try out a new kind of projectile. The Kaiser, Ludendorff, Hindenburg, and an Austro-Turkish military commission were to be on hand. They hoped that the wholesale use of this new shell would inevitably bring about German victory.

That was vitally important news!

Moreover, it was unquestionably reliable. The men who had given it to me—two superintendents in the factory—were in on this secret of the gods!

The news was confirmed that very evening by one of the special policemen who guarded the factory. I had made friends with him by drinking with him often. He closed his remarks with the statement that, "Those damned Frenchmen and those thrice-damned Englishmen would shiver if they knew what they have coming to them."

As I pretended to attach slight importance to what he was saying, he became more definite.

"We are going to produce a new projectile, one so powerful that nothing will be left alive within a radius of a hundred yards of where it hits!"

"Bah! Some more gossip," I answered. "They've been talking that sort of stuff for six months!"

Vexed to hear me question his statement, the policeman burst out, "Gossip! Why the other day I saw them with my own eyes putting the charge into one of those shells!"

"Yes, they were probably putting a mysterious magic powder into them," I laughed. "Someone has been stringing you! Why, if they really had such an important secret, do you suppose they would let a common policeman like you in on it? Oh, if you were an officer or an engineer—but a common policeman!"

At once the man became furious! Not merely had I questioned the truth of his statement, but I had belittled his self-importance . . . It was too much! He banged his fist on the table so hard that he knocked over our steins of beer, and yelled, "Der Teuffel! A common policeman like me knows more than a fool like you! He knows more than an officer, and more than a good many engineers. There are some places where neither you nor the engineers nor the officers can ever go."

"You can just look around in those places. You don't know what's going on."

"Just look around! Donnerwetter! I saw them put gas into the shells with my own eyes!"

I stopped laughing! I understood . . . But I wanted to push the policeman completely out into the open.

"What do you take me for?" I smiled. "Do you want me to believe that you can put gas inside a shell? Why not water in a wire cage!"

My policeman became absolutely rabid. His eyes were popping as he exclaimed, "So that's it! You take me for a dumb-bell! I don't know what I'm talking about! Well, how much will you bet that there is no such thing as a shell filled with gas!"

I burst into laughter, "But my good man, think a minute! You are going to lose your money!"

"That's all right—how much will you bet?"

I pretended to think for a minute, and then I said hesitatingly, "Look here. I'm a good fellow. I don't want to bankrupt you. Well, I'll bet a thousand marks the only gas shells are in your mind!"

"Shake on it," he said, bursting into a broad grin.

After which I asked him, with the air of politely trying to make conversation, "When are you going to show me those famous shells?"

"Oh, whenever you want. But I suppose it would be best, just so you won't have any doubts left, if you watched the test. Of course, you understand, you must keep all this strictly to yourself."

"Of course! But what test do you mean?"

"The one they are going to have in the presence of the Kaiser in a few days!"

"The Kaiser at Essen! You are dreaming! What on earth makes you think that the Kaiser is coming to Essen? Someone certainly has been stringing you now!"

The policeman started to get mad again; but he stopped, thought a minute, and then asked me, "How much will you bet the Kaiser won't be here Friday?"

"Well . . . Another thousand marks."

"Done! I'll meet you here on Friday morning at ten o'clock, and I'll show you if I'm a liar! And don't forget to bring two thousand marks!"

"Agreed!"

When we had shaken hands, he started off down the road singing at the top of his voice.

When an agent is sent to a foreign country, he must include among the documents he hands in some photographic proof of the authenticity of his report. On this trip I was able to send my chief a photograph of the Kaiser, Hindenburg, and Ludendorff, checking up on a map a report that they had just received from an officer attached to General Headquarters.

The photograph had been taken that very

Editor's Note: This is the first of a highly arresting series of articles by a brilliant French operative of the Allied secret service system in the Great War.

In these articles, corroborated by many excerpts from official documents, M. Lucieto describes the amazing hidden warfare, indefatigably carried on behind the armies by the two contending systems. In startling detail he reveals the scope and intricacy of the German service, and the counter-measures taken by the Allies to meet them.

My Books Are My Friends

By W. E. Hill

[Copyright: 1927, by The Chicago Tribune Syndicate.]

For those who think they think. No mother who values the life of her darling offspring will leave her baby for any length of time with an amateur psychologist. A year old baby becomes just another experimental ground to a student of stimulus and reaction. In this instance the psychologist has been discovered by Lenore's mama in the questionable act of coupling baby Lenore's fright sensations, caused by a toy spider, with sensations of bliss at the sight of a peeled banana, psychologists are very unfeeling at times.

The daring novel. Aunt Etta has been reading "Green Cesspool," one of those naughty modern novels, dealing with life in the open sewers openly arrived at. All the naughty words are spelled right out and everything. One or two of the worst ones seem to have stuck in Aunt Etta's mind, for without any warning she has up and addressed her niece in language that would startle a longshoreman. Unless, of course, he were a very sophisticated longshoreman.

The lending library. Mrs. Maginnis belongs to a select lending library where they have the very latest books if you can get hold of them. This morning Mrs. Maginnis, with fire in her eye, is taking back a book to the librarian. Imagine! "The Old Man's Doll" was the title. Mrs. Maginnis wanted something sweet to read aloud to her little godchild, Ethel Anna. Well it turned out to be a very frank book about a terrible girl who had a husband and a sugar daddy all at once."

Keeping up with science. "I'll take this book to read on the train," said Joe, who likes a bit of heavy stuff about atoms and molecules, etc., once in a while. Then, just as Joe was finding out whether the atom came from the molecule or vice versa, the magazine vendor sold him a copy of "High School Humor" and science lost out.

The gloomy novel. Francie is awfully low spirited this morning. Almost suicidal. She's been reading one of those novels about the depressed tenth. All about a grocery clerk with pernicious aenemia who hated groceries and never outgrew his environment. He hated his wife and she despised him for being aenemic, and each longed to kill the other.

Detectivitis. John and Julia belong to that great public which devours feverishly one detective yarn after another. Julia has been reading "The Mystery of the Blood-stained Claw" aloud to John, and only a quarter of the way through the plot they know who clawed the aged spinster to death.

Literature for the long winter evenings. There's nothing like a good thick mail order catalogue to while away the hours in a rural delivery community.

The borrowers. Reading from the left, we have the lady who lends the borrowed book to all her friends before returning it; the man who says, "Gee, I must remember to return your book," and then forgets; the girl who returns the book plus chocolate cake stains and with a great many pages turned down at the corners; and the young man who at the end of a year or more returns the wrong book to the right person.

BILL

By James J. Montague

Each time they passed or repassed they made a lunge at him.

WHEN we learned Bill's true character we decided to withhold the favors we had been showering so lavishly upon him. We were hurt by the deception he had been practicing—hurt, and a little ashamed to think our judgment had gone so far astray. Also we resolved upon certain disciplinary measures to employ the next time he abused the privileges accorded him.

His appearance was so decorative, and he attracted so much admiration from visitors, that it seemed wise to keep him around the place, if he could be taught to behave himself. But inasmuch as he only acted unethically between sunrise and six o'clock a.m., it was hard to catch him at it. And discipline, unless it follows immediately upon the offense, is useless. Only milkmen are astir at this time of day, and we knew it would be useless to persuade them to act in the capacity of disciplinarians, because to do so would interrupt the bottle rattling with which they delight to wake up the neighborhood.

Fortunately the business of administering retributive justice was taken out of our hands. Bill's conduct is exemplary now. He went a little too far one morning, picked the wrong victim for his pranks, and thereby inadvertently effected his own reformation. It was the kingbird who attended to him—how, I shall now proceed to relate.

We first became aware that Bill was not the squirrel he should be when for four or five mornings in succession the robins, whose nest was on the capital of one of the porch columns, set up a terrific racket. In an effort to learn what was the cause of this outbreak, I would put my head out of the window and always I would see Bill scurrying up the elm tree either with a bulging cheek or with yellow stains on his countenance and breast. It was not difficult to tell what had been going on. Our Bill, whom we fed with walnuts, nicely shelled, from our own hands, was an egg thief. One could never suspect, as he ambled confidently up to us, elevated his tail behind him and sat up on his haunches to nibble the food from our fingers that he could be anything but the personification of innocence. Throughout the day he occupied the same tree with the birds, and appeared to be answering their chirps with his chatter. We often remarked on the fact that they were all happy up there together, and that a sort of camaraderie existed among them. We did not note any discord in the sounds which came from them, and we could not know that they were probably abusing each other bitterly.

When guests came to the house we would take them out into the yard and whistle, and presently Bill's pointed gray nose would glance out of the leaves on a branch overhead. If we held up a nut he would scramble down and lope over the lawn to receive it. Sometimes he would eat the nut greedily.

Again he would snatch it swiftly and take it away some little distance. Then he would dig out a little hole with his paws, insert his nose into it to make it rounder, and deposit the nut, trampling the earth down firmly over it. We knew from watching him that he would never remember where he had put this future repast, and that he would dig up holes all over the garden, looking for it, the next time he grew hungry, but it was interesting to watch him engaged in what he believed to be acts of conservation and it always pleased the people who helped us watch him. So we set great store by his presence, and I seldom came home at night that I did not bring peanuts and walnuts and almonds by which to keep him firmly attached to our establishment.

The discovery that he stole eggs was disquieting. Much as we liked him, we couldn't have that sort of piracy going on about the premises. The wrens, who never build save indoors, and behind a door that will admit nothing larger than another wren, were secure from him. So were the orioles, who hang their nest on a twig so slender that no squirrel will entrust his weight to it. But the robins were an easy prey. And we began to consider measures for their protection, which included driving Bill from the place if this should be necessary.

But it wasn't necessary. A pair of kingbirds, creatures who usually rear their young outside the town boundaries, determined to build a nest in one of the maples in the back yard. The nest was in a low and easily accessible branch, and Bill apparently looked on while it was being built with anticipatory and evil thoughts in his head. I was awakened one morning by a terrific commotion, and put my head out of the window just in time to see Bill hastily descend the maple tree, leap across the grass and climb up an electric light wire pole in front of the house. Directly behind him during the journey was a gray-chested, black-capped pursuer, who was using language which, if translated, would probably not be printable.

And behind the father kingbird came the mother. Then I witnessed a maneuver which put out of my head all notions that animals do not reason. The mother bird, instead of following her husband, flew to the next pole and perched there while Bill was driven out on the wire. In a few minutes two other kingbirds came along. One of them took up his position on the first pole. The other joined the father of the eggs Bill had evidently been trying to steal, and began making tacks back and forth across the line which sagged under the weight of the thief. Each time they passed or repassed they made a lunge at him, and a little puff of gray fur came out of his back.

This continued for half an hour, during which time Bill was fairly stripped of his clothing, and I discovered to my astonishment that half-clad he seemed only about a quarter as big as I had supposed he was. All the time this was going on he was putting up loud supplications for help, but there is apparently no tribe loyalty among squirrels, for none of his people came to help him. At last, able no longer to endure the stinging stabs from the sharp beaks of his tormentors, he dropped off the wire thirty feet from the ground, and managed to limp to cover under the front porch before he could be assailed any more.

His coat is pretty well grown again, and he still comes to be fed. But he gets along on nuts which we give him and on other food which he sometimes finds in the garbage can. His appetite for eggs has utterly vanished, and any bird can build in any tree in the yard without fear that he will pay them an unwelcome visit.

FATHOMING GERMAN SECRETS OF WAR

day by the official court photographer, whose duty it was to follow the Kaiser everywhere and to "Record for History" the various acts of the "War Lord." Of course, this photograph did not pop into my briefcase of its own will. No more did a second photograph that I procured, which showed the Kaiser just getting out of his "field automobile."

If the photographer was important enough to be a member of the Kaiser's personal staff, he should have known that it was a serious mistake to leave his apparatus in the cloak room, especially when it contained such interesting plates as I found in it.

A few days later, just to let them know that we were aware of everything that went on in Germany, we sent copies of those two photographs to Berlin. They created widespread uneasiness. Think of it! A French agent at Essen at the very time that the Kaiser and all those dignitaries were there!

I don't know whether this poor photographer, M. S.—, ever knew what had happened. I do know that bright and early one morning he was arrested and "put away." He stayed there seven months and, of course, lost his job at Court.

On Friday morning my policeman came for me as we had agreed.

His first question was, "Have you my two thousand marks?"

"I have," I answered. "Here. Where are yours?"

"Humph!" I see you haven't much confidence in me!"

"Sure! But you've been telling such extraordinary things I've got a right to be a little suspicious."

"Well, get ready to see some even more extraordinary things! Let's get started, before sentries get there and keep everyone out of the artillery range. I know of a little place, just big enough for us where you will have a fine chance to watch the firing."

We started out and had to plow through impassible roads before we reached the range. Near the middle of it, some 1200 yards from the battery that was to conduct the test, I noticed a flock of sheep.

"What the devil are these sheep there for?"

My companion smiled, "Those sheep are supposed to represent the damned Frenchmen and thrice-damned Englishmen! See how many of them are alive in a few minutes!"

Farther down, toward the outskirts of the target range, lines of soldiers were moving. Near the gate officers were getting out of automobiles and standing around waiting for the Kaiser to arrive.

Soon he came . . . Accompanied by his personal staff, he inspected the guard and shook hands with a few. Then he started for the field where one could see a 77 and a naval gun of larger caliber.

My policeman and I had already got into the little hole, and were anxiously awaiting further developments. Suddenly we heard two short orders called out. They were followed by the sound of two shots. We could see the shells explode within a few yards of the sheep.

Immediately after the explosion a cloud of yellow-green smoke arose and was blown toward the flock of sheep. It seemed to cover them like a veil. When the smoke had cleared away nothing alive remained near the spot where the sheep had been. Even the grass seemed to have been burnt, and the stones and the ground looked as if covered with rust.

The official observers burst out into loud hurrahs, and the band played "Deutschland uber Alles."

My policeman gloated. "Well, Mr. Skeptic, what do you think of that?"

"Colossal," I exclaimed.

"Ya! Kolossal!"

It's also terrifying. Nothing could stand before such shells, especially if used in large numbers!"

"That's exactly what we are going to do! I assure you, we'll soon be in Paris."

"That," I thought, "is something else again."

Taking out of my pocket-book the two thousand marks that I had lost, I gave them to the policeman, remarking, "I assure you that's a lot of money for me to lose, but I'm not sorry!"

"It's weird, isn't it?"

"Nothing could be weirder. I still don't understand how they get gas into the shells."

"No one knows that, except the special workmen."

"Oh, of course not! But listen, old man, would you have any objection if I hunted around and found a piece of one of those shells, so I could keep it as a remembrance of this unforgettable day?"

"I don't see why you shouldn't. All the same I think it would be better if I went out there myself and picked it up."

And he did!

Three days later, back in Paris, I gave the proper authorities my various documents, also the photographs and that little piece of steel.

Our laboratory analysis showed that the shell had been charged with phosgene and chloroformiat of trichloromethyl, a suffocating gas of the highest power.

There was only one defense against that: the adoption of a special gas mask.

An Episode in the Married Life of Helen and Warren

"DEAR, I know Carrie! She won't give a thing. You have to do everything for the whole family—you always do!"

"Now don't start on that," Warren knocked his pipe on the ash-tray. "She'll do her part."

"Yes, donate her old clothes—and let you send the money," Helen drew the shades against the late afternoon sun. "That's her idea of helping."

"Well, that's up to her. But somebody's got to stake Aunt Julia.

"That means you will. Oh, there she is!" at a sharp ring. "Dear, make her feel she ought to do her share—"

"Now leave this to me," he growled. "Don't you horn in!"

Another impatient ring before Katie answered the door.

"Look, Uncle Warren!" Bobbie raced in. "I got an airplane! It flies, too!'

"Don't wind it any more, precious—you'll break it. Oh, I'm almost dead," Carrie dropped into a chair. "Last time I come in town while it's this hot."

"Sit over here," Helen turned on the fan. "Don't fly that so near the mantel, Bobbie. You'll knock something off."

"Oh, will you put this in the ice-box 'til I go? It's fresh caviar—we're having the Reeds tomorrow."

"Yes, of course," Helen took the small neat parcel out to the pantry.

Fresh caviar! Twelve dollars a pound, at least.

Carrie always had money for any make-a show extravagance—but desperately poor when any of the family needed help.

They were talking about their Aunt Julia when Helen returned to the library.

"What happened to Uncle John's insurance money? Come here, pettie, let mother tie your shoe. She can't have spent all that."

"Only two thousand," shrugged Warren. "His debts took most of it. Don't know what she's lived on since."

"What's the matter with Henry? Why should she expect us—"

"You know he's no good. Down in Mexico somewhere. If she ever hears from him—it's only to make a touch."

"That candlestick!" Helen jumped up. "He almost knocked it off. Don't fly that in here, Bobbie. What? Why, it's almost dinner time. Well, run ask Katie."

"If she lets the house," Carrie picked up the discarded airplane, "why can't she live on the rent?"

"On twenty a month?" grunted Warren. "All she can get out there—only a one-story cottage."

"Just what did she say? That fan's right on my back. There, that's better."

"Got her letter somewhere," rummaging through his pockets. "Here it is."

Dear Warren:

I have a chance to rent the house. Am getting too old to live alone. I can board with Mrs. Barnes—you remember her, Ed Barnes's widow—for thirty dollars a month. She is alone, too—will be glad to have me.

The house needs paint and a new roof. Twenty a month is all I can get (many houses for rent here.) I hate to ask you, Warren—you have done so much already. But I have nothing left. I am wondering if you and Carrie could see your way clear to help me just a little. I have been worried sick these last few weeks.

With love to you all,

Aunt Julia.

"What does she expect us to do? Oh, precious, don't get crumbs on the rug."

"We ought to send at least fifty a month," Warren pocketed the letter.

"Fifty? Why, that's absurd! Twenty for her house—that makes seventy. Why does she need all that?"

"Has to pay taxes and interest on the mortgage. Huh, you spend more'n that for pin money."

"That's very different—Where's your handkerchief, Bobbie? Way out there—"

"Guess she has to have some clothes—even out in Kansas."

"Well, I'm willing—No, take the plate back to Katie. Mother said No! I'm quite willing to send her clothes."

"Yes, she's just about your size," Helen could not resist this thrust.

"What do you mean by that?" bristled Carrie. "And I'll send her a check Christmas and Easter—but I couldn't promise any monthly sum."

"Aunt Julia has to know what she can count on," Warren jabbed a cleaner through his pipe. "I can send the fifty—but I thought you'd want to help."

"Yes, of course," hastily. "But I can't see that she needs seventy dollars. In that little town—and an old woman, too."

"Well, think it over, Carrie. Don't have to decide now. I'll send a check tonight. We can fix it up afterward. Anything you say—we'll not squabble over a few dollars."

"Of course not. Why, I'm always doing for Aunt Julia. Stop teasing her, darling, she'll scratch. I've sent her a box every Christmas since I can remember."

"Well, Aunt Julia needs more than Christmas boxes now," ventured Helen, rescuing Pussy Purr-Mew.

"Really, Helen, she's not your aunt," acridly. "Warren and I can arrange this."

"You mean Warren can. That's how it always ends!"

"What are you trying to insinuate? I'm sure I do my share. You haven't two children and a country place to keep up. And our expenses this year! That new sleeping porch and Bobbie's tonsils! I really think, if Aunt Julia could manage at all, she shouldn't expect us to—"

"Aunt Julia's down to her last dollar, or she wouldn't ask," brusqued Warren. "Mighty good to us when we were kids. Here's our chance to help—"

"The Lollipop Boys are entertaining you through the courtesy of the Toothsome Candy Company, makers of Toothsome—"

"Turn that thing off!" roared Warren. "Bobbie, keep away from that radio! What's that? Lookin' for a good tanning? Then do as I tell you."

"He can get all the stations on ours," beamed Carrie. "He has a real gift for mechanics. Going to be a great engineer, aren't you, honey?"

"Gonna be a taxi driver!"

"Get your cap, precious," drawing on her expensive washable suedes. "I want to make that six-twenty."

"Here, what's the idea?" protested Warren. "Aren't you staying for dinner?"

"No, I told Lawrence we'd be back—and it's so hot here in the city—Oh, new slips?" inspecting the linen chair covers.

"Yes, we got them last week," Helen waited for the inevitable criticism.

"Why, your old ones were perfectly good! Faded? So are ours! But we're not getting new ones," self-righteously. "Can't afford everything we want."

"Don't forget your caviar," Helen scored. "Bobbie, run ask Katie to give you that little package in the ice-box. At least we don't have caviar at twelve dollars a pound."

"Only ten now. And I just got a quarter pound. I had to have something for the Reeds—they entertain us so lavishly. But I might've known you'd have something sarcastic to say."

"What about your comment on the slip covers?" flushing.

"Here, you two drop it!" broke in Warren. "Coming in Thursday for dinner? Club night—Lawrence is going with me. Might as well eat here. You can stay with Helen."

"Yes, do," urged Helen dutifully, shrinking from an evening alone with her antagonistic sister-in-law.

"Well, I have to come in for a permanent. I'll see if he'll take me Thursday."

"Oh, my airplane?" shrieked Bobbie.

"There it is, dearie—caught in the curtain."

"You'll tear it—let me," Helen disentangled the fine net.

"Come, pettie, we must hurry! Mother'll carry it."

Nothing more about Aunt Julia. Carrie had "talked it over" without committing herself to anything.

With the closing door Helen's fixed smile faded.

"Dear, she might just as well not have come! She didn't promise a thing. I knew she wouldn't! She always manages to get out of—"

"Now, don't start on that! Always knockin' Carrie. Guess she wants to talk it over with Lawrence. Well, I'd better write Aunt Julia now—so she'll get it Monday," crossing to the desk.

Helen bit her lip. He could never see his sister's selfishness.

"How's this?" when a moment later he threw down his pen.

Over his shoulder she scanned the note, his usual telegraphic brevity.

Dear Aunt Julia:

Enclosing check for fifty. Just had a talk with Carrie. We will send you this amount every month. Now don't worry. This won't break us. We want you to be comfortable. Glad we can help.

Will write more later. Helen sends love.

As ever,

Warren.

"How about it?" he reached for an envelope. "O.K?"

"Why, yes, dear, but why should Carrie get the credit when she's not going to do a thing? You know she isn't! Except send some of her old clothes."

"Well, it'll make Aunt Julia feel better. Won't think she's so under obligations to me. Whered'you keep your stamps?"

"In that little drawer—where they always are," straightening about after Bobbie.

Sealing the letter with a vigorous fist, he stalked out to the hall chute.

"Well, that's that," when he banged back. "Guess we can afford to stake Aunt Julia. But anything I do for the family—the howl you set up—"

"Dear, it's not that I don't want you to help your family—you know it isn't! You should! It's only that Carrie never does a thing," brushing cake crumbs from the couch. "But you're so big and generous—and I'm glad you are. I won't say another word."

"Not till the next time," he grunted. "Well, we'll do the right thing. If Carrie doesn't—that's her funeral. But you needn't pan her for being close," reaching for his paper. "Some nickel-nurser yourself. Dinner 'bout ready? Too early? Well, I want it early. Tell her to show some speed!"

BILL

By James J. Montague

WHEN we learned Bill's true character we decided to withhold the favors we had been showering so lavishly upon him. We were hurt by the deception he had been practicing—hurt, and a little ashamed to think our judgment had gone so far astray. Also we resolved upon certain disciplinary measures to employ the next time he abused the privileges accorded him.

His appearance was so decorative, and each time they passed or repassed made a large hole at him.

of the window just in time to see Bill hastily descend the maple tree, leap across the fence and climb up an electric light wire pole in front of the house. Directly behind him during the journey was a gray-chested, black-capped pursuer, who was using language which, if translated, would probably not be printable.

And behind the latter Kingbird came the mother. Then I witnessed a maneuver which put all of my head all notions that

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE WALL

Gerald was killed instantaneously, but by some merciful act of Providence my wife was thrown clear.

By H. C. McNeile

Illustrated by George Wilson

"THIS afternoon," remarked the celebrated doctor, "I have had one of the most salutary lessons of my life."

He carefully cut the end of his cigar, and his keen, sensitive face seemed unduly serious.

"You've all of you at one time or another," he went on, "felt with regard to something you've just done—'That is very good. I, personally, have done it very well. I am a big man, or, at any rate, a distinctly, bigger man than my neighbor.' Of course, wild horses wouldn't drag such an admission from any of us. Should an acquaintance mention the fact of our bigness we wave a deprecating hand. But we also regard that acquaintance as a distinctly observant fellow, whose own good points we have scarcely done justice to up to date. And we strut a little, and pug out our mental chests, while the gods above laugh. They always laugh—we're so damned comical—but very often we don't hear the laughter. This afternoon, I did.

"It was two years ago almost to the day that a card was brought to me in my consulting room. The name was unfamiliar; the man had not got an appointment, and it was after my usual hours. And for a few moments I debated as to whether I would see him or not. I was a bit tired—I'd had a ticklish operation that morning—and I was leaving London next day for a month's holiday.

"I suppose my indecision was obvious as I turned the card over in my fingers, for my secretary suddenly spoke:

"'I told him, Sir John,' she said, apologetically, 'that I didn't think you would see him, and that you were going away tomorrow, but he seemed so terribly distressed that I hadn't the heart to refuse to bring you his card.'

"'Show him in,' I said, and the next moment I was shaking hands with Mr. Robert Tremlin.

"He was a man of about forty—clean-shaven, and dark. He was turning a bit gray over the temples, but his whole bearing and appearance proclaimed him an out-of-doors man.

"'It's very good of you to see me, Sir John,' he said, as he sat down on the other side of my desk; 'but I really am in the most desperate trouble, and I feel I can't go on much longer. It's about my wife.

"'I don't know if you saw in the papers a fortnight ago the account of a terrible motor accident in Devonshire. At any rate, there was one, and the car in question was mine. It contained my wife, and Gerald Weymouth—a very dear friend of us both. He, poor chap, was driving when it happened, and there was no one else in the car. He was taking her over to play tennis with some friends of ours who live about ten miles away, and there is one extremely bad hill to go down. What happened no one will ever know. Gerald was an extremely good driver; moreover, he had often driven the car before. Presumably the brakes failed to act, and the car got out of control on this hill. There's a turn halfway down with a couple of big trees beside the road, and into these two trees the car crashed. Gerald was killed instantaneously, but by some merciful act of Providence my wife was thrown clear. The car slewed sideways after the accident, and she wasn't even cut by the windscreen. She was just pitched over the door—the car was an open one—and landed on her head on the grass. And when the people from a neighboring house came rushing up they found her there, unconscious, but otherwise apparently unhurt save for a few bruises. The car was like scrap iron, and poor old Gerald was dead.

"'They carried her into their house, Sir John, and telephoned for a doctor and for me. By the time I got there he had already made his examination, and he met me at the door.'

"'"A miraculous escape, Mr. Tremlin," he said, gravely. "Of course your wife is still unconscious, but there is no need to let that alarm you. The great thing is that there is nothing broken, and when she comes to herself again, I think we shall find that beyond a severe shaking, there is nothing the matter. Only in view of the appalling nervous shock she must have had before the crash came, I consider it would be most ill-advised to tell her of Mr. Weymouth's death. She will, of course, have to know in time, but until she has fully recovered from the shock she should be kept in ignorance of what has happened. If she asks any questions we can easily say that his leg was broken—or something of that sort—and that he has been taken to a hospital in Exeter."

"'"Can I see her, Doctor?" I asked eagerly.

"'"Certainly," he answered. "She naturally won't know you as she is unconscious, but I repeat there is nothing to be alarmed at."

"'So I went and saw her, and then I went out to see what remained of Gerald Weymouth, my greatest friend, Sir John; he'd been the best man at my wedding, and now . . . However, I don't want to bore you with all that; sufficient to say that it must have been instantaneous, thank God!

"'I must come to the point.'

"My visitor moistened his lips and I pushed over a box of cigarettes.

"'Smoke if you care to, Mr. Tremlin,' I said. 'I shall see no one else tonight.'

"He took a cigarette and lit it, and his hand was shaking.

"'My wife recovered consciousness the following morning, Sir John,' he went on after awhile. 'I wasn't with her at the moment, but the nurse who had been sent for came and told me. We were both in the same house to which she had been taken after the accident; it belonged to friends, and the doctor didn't want her moved. I went at once to her room and found her sitting up in bed. She just stared at me blankly for a moment or two, and then turned to the nurse.'

"'"Where am I?" she said "And who is this man? Have I been ill?"

"'I knelt down beside her, and started to explain.

"'"There's been an accident, darling," I told her. "You're in the Ashbys' house."

"'But she still stared at me blankly, and after awhile it became obvious that I was only distressing her by remaining. So I left the room, and waited until the doctor came.

"'Did she know the doctor?' I asked him.

"Mr. Tremlin shook his head.

"'She knew no one; she knows no one now. And this is where I come to the distressing part for me personally. All through this last fortnight she has shown an ever-increasing aversion to me. I may say, Sir John, without fear of contradiction, that ours has been a wonderfully happy married life. That's what makes it so hard to understand. I adore her, and I think I can say that she feels the same for me. Or rather felt the same, until this ghastly thing took place. Now she can't bear me in the same room with her.'

"'Have you any children?' I asked him.

"'None,' he answered.

"'And where is your wife now?'

"'Still in the same house with the Ashbys.'

"'Well, Mr. Tremlin,' I said, 'from what you tell me, your wife seems to be suffering from complete loss of memory. Her aversion to you is not an uncommon feature of such cases, so you may reassure your mind on that point. A dislike to those who are nearest and dearest is a frequent symptom of brain trouble, and when memory returns the feeling is blotted off the slate and vanishes like a dream.'

"'But when will her memory return?' he burst out. 'Sir John, this is absolutely killing me. A fortnight has passed, and there is no trace of improvement. Doctor Rodgers assures me that it is only a question of time, and that we can do nothing except wait. But though I have the greatest faith in him as an ordinary practitioner, a case of this sort is out of his beaten track. It stands to reason it must be. And that is why I've come to you. I was going to ask you to come down and see my wife, but your secretary tells me that you are going on your holiday tomorrow. Well, now, I've got an idea. I don't know what plans you've made, but would it be possible for you to spend a few days with me at my house? I can give you some fishing, there are four or five horses it would be a kindness for you to exercise, and there's golf. And then perhaps you could examine my wife, and tell me what you think.'

"Well, I hadn't made any plans that couldn't be broken, and the long and the short of it was that I promised to go. The poor devil was pathetically grateful, and we arranged to travel down together the next day."

The celebrated doctor blew out a cloud of smoke thoughtfully.

"So much for Mr. John Tremlin; now for his wife. She was an extraordinarily pretty woman about seven years younger than he, and when you met her there was absolutely nothing to indicate that anything was amiss. Tremlin motored me over to the Ashbys' house the day after I arrived—which necessitated incidentally going down the hill where the accident had occurred. The marks of the car on the trees were still plainly visible, and he showed me exactly where his wife had been pitched to. And, by Jove! you fellows, when I saw the gradient, and reconstructed the accident in my mind, it seemed inconceivable that she should have escaped death. However, that is by the way.

"Doctor Rodgers was waiting for us when we arrived, and he could only shake his head at my host's eager question.

"'Just the same, I'm afraid, Mr. Tremlin.'

"He turned away wearily.

"'I'll wait for you in the car, Sir John,' he said.

"'A very strange case,' said the local doctor, drawing me into a room off the hall. 'I make no pretensions to be a specialist or expert in brain matters, but I am prepared to stake my reputation on this being no case for an operation. I can find no trace of local pressure anywhere which would account for it.'

"'A case of severe shock producing complete loss of memory,' I remarked. 'And, of

THE STORY OF CIVILIZATION

other side was war. The history of Egypt begins with Menes, who won his way to fame in the way dear to crowds by coming out of the South, conquering the Delta, and forging South and North for the first time into one kingdom. Menes built a capital near Memphis (twenty miles upstream from Cairo,) and established the First Dynasty there in 3400 B. C. (The wise reader will insert the word "about" before all dates in Egyptian history.) After him comes a dreary desert of Dynasties with tragic relief supplied chiefly by war; in the Third Dyansty (2980-2900 B. C.) King Khasekhem boasts of taking captive "forty-seven thousand, two hundred and nine rebels." Nevertheless it was in this dynasty that King Zoser began the characteristic architecture of Egypt with his "step-pyramid" at Memphis. It was, like every pyramid, a tomb; but unlike its predecessors it was made of stone, not brick; and rose to a height of two hundred feet in five stages, each smaller than the one beneath. From this quaint structure came the pyramidal form of Egypt's most famous monuments.

Toward 2900 B. C. the figure of Cheops (or Khufu) emerges dimly from the chaos of kings; we know him only as the builder (or master of the builders) of the first and greatest pyramid, which stands with three others in the "cemetery" of Gizeh outside the modern Cairo. Here stones have been piled Pelion upon Ossa as if they were the most abundant of Egypt's natural resources: 2,300,000 blocks, averaging two and a half tons in weight, measuring in all one-seventh of a mile in length, one-tenth of a mile in width, 481 in height, and in area 525,000 square feet. The mass is solid; only a few stones were omitted to leave space for the royal tomb. And every stone was fitted to the next with indistinguishable joints. It was a miracle of masonry.

Historians have marveled at the mechanical skill, the economic organization, the royal wealth and power revealed by this monstrous mausoleum; and philosophers have marveled at the patience of the hundred thousand laborers who remained tied to this heavy task for twenty years. Herodotus has preserved for us an inscription which he found on one of the Pyramids, recording the quantity of radishes, onions and garlic consumed by the workmen who built it. Strong food was necessary for such toil.

That is all we know of Cheops; and of Chephren (or Khafre) who followed him and Dedefre on the throne, we know again only the story of his Pyramid. It stands near Cheops', just smaller than that colossal tomb; and part of the granite casing which once adorned it survives at the top to suggest how the Pyramids looked in their primeval glory. Smaller still is the Pyramid of Chephren's successor Mycerinus; and its cover is no longer of proud granite but of prosaic brick—as if the flood of wealth that had poured into Egypt with the copper of Sinai had trickled into a thinner stream.

Egyptian decoration in gold bas-relief showing war captives in their bonds.

Nearby the Sphinx looks calmly at the inquisitive visitor and the eternal plain. It is a savage monument, as of some towering centaur seen in fearful dreams: the body of a lion passing into the head and face of a man. The body was once 198 feet long; but most of it has been destroyed by time and the mortality of stone. The great feet remain, dug out from the encompassing sand in our own day; and, rising to the height of ten men, the gigantic head, broken here and there, but human enough nevertheless to make some students believe it a portrait of King Chephren.

The world classes the Pyramids as art; but of course they are merely tombs, built not for beauty but for duration; fashioned not to please the eye but to conceal a carcass, and perhaps to impress a people. The honest traveler feels a little cheated when he comes upon them today; photography can catch everything but dirt, and ennobles objects with vistas of land and sky. One stands humbly where Caesar bade his legions realize that centuries looked down upon them; one feels the centuries, and acknowledges the persistency of the Pyramids. But it is the memory and the imagination of the beholder that make these monuments great; in themselves they are trivial heaps of stones. There is some science in them, but little art; a simple geometrical figure, like a child's house of stocks or cards; rocks heaped upon rocks in dull precision and array, but with no design, no adult sense of beauty—only a primitive fetichism of number and size. It is not civilization yet; it is barbarism.

What the Pyramids reveal is the solid organization of a state that could command a hundred thousand workmen to carry stones for twenty years; a savage power reaching for its ends through blood and suffering without a qualm. The ancient inscriptions show us the "Great House" of government in which these works were planned and from which the nation was ruled. In this Great House (which the Egyptians called Per-o and the Hebrews Pharaoh) the king lived with his harem and his attendants—wig-makers, perfumers, launderers, bleachers, guardians of the imperial wardrobe, and other dignitaries. One tomb describes its occupant as "Overseer of the cosmetic box, overseer of the cosmetic pencil, sandal-bearer to the king, doing in the matter of the king's sandals to the satisfaction of his lord."

Chief aide to the king was the prime minister or vizier; and under him in every province were local governors who combined the functions of administrator and judge. Here, 3000 years before Christ, law reached its earliest formulation; we know that a highly elaborate code of legislation existed, though it has perished utterly. The oldest legal document in the world is a written brief, preserved in the Berlin Museum, and presenting to a court a complex case in inheritance. Judges apparently required all cases to be offered not in oratory but in writing—which compares favorably enough with our windy litigation. Add to these judges a host of scribes or secretaries, a parade of soldiers, and an army of tax-gatherers (all pictured for us on the monuments,) and we distinguish the outlines of the oldest state in history.

Those early dynasties (III-VIII) constitute the "Old Kingdom:" it is the age of organization, pyramids, and chieftains made powerful with weapons harder than any that men had known before.

The great figures of the Empire are a warrior and a philosopher. Thutmose III, who maintained himself on the throne throughout the first fifty-four years of the fifteenth century B. C. pushed his armies ruthlessly into Asia Minor, won the Battle of Megiddo, and subjected Syria and Palestine to Egyptian rule. Napoleon, attempting the same campaign in 1799, failed.

Then, after an interlude of colorless kings, we come out of a forest of names and dates upon the bright and romantic figure of Iknaton. A splendid portrait-bust of him, discovered on the site of his ancient capital Ahketaton, reveals to us the first distinct personality in Egyptian history. It is a profile of incredible delicacy for the infancy of art; a face almost feminine in its softness, and poetic in its idealistic sensitivity. Only such a man could have dreamed of the audacious revolution which Iknaton, in the face of a reactionary priesthood, struggled to bring about in the religious and moral life of his people.

In the next installment Dr. Durant will tell of the rising power of the priests in Egypt and of her art that is Egypt's most glorious heritage.

LADY KATHERINE'S BETTER NATURE

feldt, in Hounslow, who has, once or twice, deceived experts. He has a considerable connection with the aristocracy in duplicating their precious possessions."

Lady Katherine remained quite silent for several seconds. Then she closed the case with a snap.

"You see, Kate," Angus explained apologetically, "I couldn't very well include that necklace in the policy at anything more than a hundred pounds or so, could I?"

"Naturally not," she admitted. "Send your friend away, please."

Mr. Bragg departed with a curt nod of thanks from Lady Katherine and a stealthy wink from Angus. She then crossed the room toward her writing-table.

"Will you execute a little commission for me, George?" she begged.

"Glad to," he answered.

"What did you say the name of your insurance company was?" she inquired.

"The"—Angus made a desperate grab for the card upon the table—"Protective Insurance Company. First class, I can assure you. Never failed to pay a claim yet."

"Very well," she answered, "you can come 'round again tomorrow morning and bring me a policy. I may have something else to put in then. At present, if you'll be a dear, you'll take this note and the necklace—I'll do it up presently—round to Rattles."

"You won't get me into any trouble with Rattles?" Angus begged nervously. "I want him as a client."

"Certainly not," she assured him.

Lady Katherine dashed off her note, packed up the necklace very tidily, and dismissed her caller.

"If you would like to dance at Claridge's at half past four"—she suggested.

"I should be delighted."

The Duke of Cumberland emerged from his town house and paused disconsolately upon the steps, wondering where to lunch, just as Angus drove up in a taxi. He had a small brown paper parcel in his hand. The duke's eyes were glued upon the packet.

"You haven't got it, George?" he exclaimed.

"Come and see for yourself."

The duke pushed him into a morning room, tore off the brown paper, and opened the case. The gems of the famous Madras necklace flashed up at him.

"My word, you must be a magician!" the duke exclaimed.

"Read the letter," Angus suggested.

The duke opened the envelop and, for his friend's benefit, read the contents aloud:

"Dearest Rattles:

"Forgive me, please. I couldn't really do such a horrid thing. I think it must have been jealousy. The idea that Mona should always wear the necklace when I wanted it so much maddened me. But you were right. It belongs to her, and I mustn't have it. You can give me what you like, instead. Those emeralds you spoke of yesterday would be wonderful.

"We dine tonight, of course.

"KATHERINE."

The duke breathed a huge sigh of relief.

"Tell me, George," he insisted, "how did you manage it?"

Then, for several moments, Angus thought very hard. Rattles was a pal and a good sort; Lady Katherine was also an old friend whom he had treated badly. Atonement was due. He came to a great decision.

"Rattles," he confided, "I argued for nearly an hour. I prevailed upon her better nature."

There were tears in the duke's eyes.

"Dash it all!" he exclaimed. "I'll buy her the emeralds this afternoon. And you—well, come and have lunch, old chap."

No Chance

A Mid-Westerner was trying to convince a Bostonian that President Coolidge, judging by the words in his brief statement, was still willing to run again.

"Well," remarked the Bostonian, "if you went to a Vermont bank and asked for a loan and the banker said, 'We don't choose to lend you the money,' you'd soon find out what the word 'choose' means up there."

"Precisely,' he answered gravely. 'Though naturally I haven't told him so. It's pathetic, Sir John, quite pathetic. I think they were the most ideally happy couple I have ever met. His devotion to her was almost doglike, and since the accident it's really been harrowing to see the way he has suffered. With his brain he understands the reason of it; with his heart he can't understand why he, of all people, should have been signalled out for this acute dislike. Because it has turned to that now. To such an extent, in fact, that I have had to forbid him even to see her. And there's another thing too . . . However, I don't think I'll mention it. I'd like to see if you notice it yourself, or whether it's my imagination. Shall we go up?'

"She was fully dressed, and as we entered the room she turned her head eagerly to look at us. As I've said, she was a strikingly lovely woman, and her whole face was lit up with anticipation. And the next second the look had completely vanished; her expression was quite lifeless again. It was most noticeable, and I seized on it at once.

"'Good morning,' I said. 'Are you expecting someone?'

"'Yes, I am,' she answered.

"'Who is it?' I asked.

"'I don't know his name,' she replied wearily.

"'Can you describe him? Because perhaps we can get hold of him for you.'

"But she seemed to have lost interest in the matter, and I could get nothing coherent out of her at all. She submitted to my examination listlessly, and after awhile we went out and left her alone.

"'There's no mistaking it, is there?' said Rodgers. 'I thought it might be my imagination, but I've never seen it so clearly. And I've never spoken about it to her as you did.'

"'You mean that look of expectation on her face,' I said. 'If we could find out who it was and produce him, it might do the trick.'

"'Well, it's certainly not her husband,' said he grimly. 'However what do you make of the case?'

"I won't weary you with professional shop, beyond saying that I concurred with him over the question of the operation. I could find no trace of pressure anywhere, and I told her husband so. It was a strange case, but by no manner of means a unique one. We were up, so to speak, against a blank wall. All that she knew and remembered was the fortnight or so of her life that lay on this side of it; we had somehow to get her to the other side.

"'Is it going to be a long job, Sir John?' he asked me.

"'There's no good buoying you up with false hopes,' I said. 'I can't tell you. I don't know. It might be that she will waken tomorrow morning perfectly normal; it might be—years.'

"'Oh, my God!' he muttered under his breath.

"'Anyway, the first thing to do is to get her back to her own house. The familiar surroundings there may help her to get to the other side of the wall. And once we've got her there we've taken an enormous step forward.'

"So Mrs. Tremlin returned to Redlands that day, and I watched her with the greatest curiosity. In fact, that night I went to bed considerably more hopeful. She had walked, for instance, out of the hall straight into the drawing-room and sat down in the chair which, her husband told me, she generally used. She had seemed, in a way, to recognize the servants; at any rate, she had accepted them. And she had gone upstairs to her bedroom without having to be shown the way.

"But there it ended. Amazing though it seemed, she still failed to recognize her husband, and the poor devil was almost distracted. In vain to point out to him the vagaries of the brain; he couldn't get beyond the fact that there must be some glimmerings in her mind of what lay on the other side of the wall, if she could find her own way to her bedroom. And if that was the case, why was the most important thing in her life—her marriage to him—hidden from her?

"I think it was the second day after she came home that I found her in her husband's study. I'd had to tell him to keep out of the way as much as possible, because, although she no longer displayed actual aversion to him, his presence worried her. She had her meals with us, since my chief idea was that everything should proceed exactly as it had before the accident. And at times she didn't seem to mind him. It was only when he got close to her that she began to get fidgety.

"And now she was standing by his desk holding a big photograph in her hand. There was a queer, excited look on her face as she turned to me, and I was instantly reminded of the first time I'd seen her.

"'Who is this man?' she said.

"'As a matter of fact, the very first night I arrived Tremlin had told me.

"'That's Gerald Weymouth,' I answered. 'Do you know him?'

"'Where is he?' she cried, taking no notice of my question. 'I want to see him.'

Unsuspecting Visitor: Goodness, child, what ever are you up to—sitting there so still?

"'Is he the man you are expecting?' I said. 'The man whose name you forgot.'

"'I think so,' she answered, passing her hand over her forehead. "It's all so muddy. I seem to remember . . . Gerald Weymouth . . . Gerald . . .'

"Her voice died away, and I didn't press her. To excite a case of that sort is fatal, but it started me off on a new line of thought. And that night I mentioned it to her husband.

"'It may be,' I said, 'that those few ghastly seconds, whilst the car was dashing down the hill, and she was facing what must have seemed to her to be certain death, have imprinted on her mind a recollection of him. How clear it is, I can't tell—but it's there. And if only she could see Weymouth now it might save her.'

"'Since the poor old chap is dead, and buried,' he said, wearily, 'I'm afraid that doesn't advance us much, Sir John.'

"'I know all that,' I answered. 'The point is—how clear is that recollection? Would it be possible to get a substitute?'

"He sat up with the light of hope dawning in his eyes.

"'What do you mean?' he said.

"'It's only a vague idea, Mr. Tremlin,' I answered. 'And I haven't even begun to think out the details. Have you ever heard the story of the man who was driving with his servant along a road he rarely used? And as they went over a rather noticeable wooden bridge, he said to his servant—"Do you like eggs?" And the servant answered, "Yes, sir." A few months later he again drove over the same bridge, not having been on that road in the interval. And as the trap got to exactly the same spot where he had put the first question, he said, "How do you like them?" And the servant answered, "Fairly hard-boiled, sir."'

"He stared at me as if I had taken leave of my senses.

"'I assure you I'm quite serious,' I said. 'Whether the story is true or not is immaterial, but it illustrates a very well-known law—the law of inherent Connection. The second question was put under exactly similar conditions to the first, and although there was a lapse of months between the two—for the fraction of a second that lapse was non-existent in the servant's mind. Subconsciously his surroundings recalled the first question, just as the second was put to him. Now I am wondering if we could so reproduce the exact conditions which led up to the accident—let us say from the time your wife and Weymouth left the house in the car to the moment when the crash came. Only, this time there will be no crash.'

"He was staring at me fixedly now; he was beginning to get the idea.

"'Understand; it's only an experiment. It may do no good, but I don't think it can do any harm. And if it's successful, we shall have got your wife to the other side of the wall. She will come up to it, as she did on the day of the accident; but this time she will go through it and come out on the other side.'

"'Man,' he cried, 'do you think there's a chance?'

"'I certainly think there's a chance,' I said.

"'But how can we arrange about Gerald?'

"'There lies the principal difficulty, I admit. At the same time, I think it quite possible that a reasonable likeness will be sufficient for the purpose if all the other details are exact.'

"He was wearing flannels and a big white blanket coat. And he also had on a pair of motoring goggles. By Jove! Sir John,' he almost shouted in his excitement, 'if you put on a small black moustache, I believe you could do it yourself. You're grayer, of course—but a hat conceals that; and your eyes are quite different, which doesn't matter either behind goggles. You're exactly the same height and build, and your voices are much the same.'

"He was pacing feverishly up and down the room.

"'By gad, man!—you've given me hope. Don't let's dream of failure; don't let's even mention the word. You're going to succeed; I know it.'

"And then we set to work to discuss details. The first thing was to get another Panlar car—an exact replica of the one that was smashed. He wired for that in the morning. Then we had to find out as nearly as possible precisely what took place before they started. The butler could help there, for Tremlin himself had been out for lunch. So we called him in and explained the situation.

"'I remember perfectly, sir,' he said. "Mr. Weymouth drove the car up to the front door, which was open. He got out and entered the house, speaking to me as he passed. Mrs. Tremlin was in the drawing-room, and Mr. Weymouth went to the door and opened it. I heard him say, "Are you ready, Monica?" Then she came out and I handed her her racket and shoes as I opened the door of the car. I said to her, "Shall I put them behind, ma'am?" and she said, "Oh! it doesn't matter; there's plenty of room here." Then they drove off.'

"'A point to remember,' cried Tremlin. 'There was a tonneau cover over the back seats.'

"'That is so, sir,' said the butler.

"Well, we sat far into the night discussing details, and by the time I went to bed I was as excited as he was. The whole scheme, which had started as just a vague idea, began to crystallize in my mind; I realised the possibilities. Of course, the fact that I had to play the part of Weymouth was the weak link, but during the next week, under Tremlin's direction, I managed to get his voice more or less. Also we had two dress rehearsals for appearance. We had down a man from London who was an expert in the art of making up, and with the help of photographs and Tremlin's criticism, he turned me into a very creditable replica of Weymouth.

"And then we had to wait for the right day. I insisted on that; it must be the same sort of weather. The day of the accident had been sunny and warm; as luck would have it we had a fortnight of dull, overcast days. The car had arrived and was being kept in the local garage, from which I had driven it once or twice to get accustomed to it.

"I had left Redlands myself, and taken rooms in the local inn, as I thought it better that Mrs. Tremlin should see nothing of me. I formed no part of her pre-accident existence, and that was the atmosphere in which I wanted her steeped.

"And then at last there came the morning when her husband burst in on me at breakfast.

"'It was just such a day as this,' he cried, and he was shaking like a man with the ague.

"'Steady, Tremlin,' I said, warningly. 'We've all got to keep cool.'

"And, truth to tell, I wasn't feeling too cool myself. Even with all our carefully arranged details there was still such a lot that must be left to chance. However, there was no question of backing out of it, and so we got on with our final preparations. Tremlin was in such a state of pitiful excitement and agitation that he was worse than useless; in spite of my warnings he was banking everything on success. And he had the hardest part, poor devil; he couldn't be there to see what happened. The butler had been carefully coached; the

Jilted

Of course it had been said in a thoroughly tender manner, couched in terms of extreme kindness and sympathy, yet there could be no possible mistake as to its full significance. It meant "the end." He would soon meet some other girl, she told him, who would captivate him on the spot, and it would not be long before he would cease to remember that "she" had ever existed. Surely it was all for the best. She was not worth worrying about, anyway—a selfish, egotistical little creature, with not a thought for another than herself. Indeed, he ought to be happy never to set eyes upon her again.

They had been fond of the same things, it was true, which fact had quite naturally drawn them together, and, what was more, they had cherished the same dislikes. He had always been most considerate, gracious and good-hearted, and she liked him very, very much. As for loving him, however, that was out of the question. There could really never be anything between them.

It was her fault, she admitted. Oh, yes, it was all her fault and, of course, she felt that she should also tell him that there was another. Yes, some one who could give her something that "he" never could. There was a certain spark—well, anyway, she could never feel that way about him.

The young man gazed fixedly at the carpet and muttered something incoherent. Then, with a tremulous good-by, he turned and passed out of the room. The front door closed behind him and he found himself in the street. Unsteadily, he walked to the nearest lamp-post, which he leaned against for support. Then he began to reflect. Who, in the name of seven pink giraffes, would ever have guessed that she was going to spring this on him when he had called with the express purpose of telling her precisely the same story, himself?

Historical Preface to Golf

The game of golf, like many other modern sports, owes its derivation to the ancient Copts, so termed because in the first international tournament it was they who Copt the championship. It was originally an aquatic pastime, the participants rowing over the course, their oars secured in row-locks or tholes. It is from this primitive phase of the game that we derive such expressions as the Eighteenth Thole and Nineteenth Thole.

Another golf term may be traced back to the Emperor Justinian, or "Finney," as he was affectionately known to his friends. Justinian once essayed a round on a day when he was suffering from a heavy cold, and, his ball landing in a bad lie, was handed a club by his caddie.

"Use this driver and you'll eat it up, Emp," advised the youth familiarly.

"I do'd wad to ead id up," answered the imperial victim of hay fever whimsically. "I just wad to do a liddle nibblick (nibbling)." The word nibblick is in constant use today.

Italian devotees of golf long sought to interest their national hero, Garibaldi, in the pastime, but the latter preferred fishing. One day, as Garry was sitting by the bank of a stream intent upon hook and line, a delegation came to him with a petition that he give golf an official status by decreeing the material of which the balls should be made. The great warrior paid no attention; but suddenly, feeling a tug on his line, cried excitedly: "Gotta perch-a!"

Misunderstanding, the committee thanked him and withdrew. Suffice it to say that gutta-percha has since been the material in favor.

Many another fascinating story might be told of the early days of golf. But, unfortunately, there are none.

TIP BLISS.

She: Well you know what you can do with it.

His Fate

Johnson: The last pedestrian died this morning.

Blake: Motorist run over him?

Johnson: No—an automobile salesman talked him to death.

The Unwritten Law

The assault, to all appearances, had been unprovoked. The victim, an affable little man, was of the sort incapable of making enemies. And yet, on the night in question, he had been most brutally assailed, he knew not by whom, and left unconscious upon the pavement near his home.

What made the case so baffling to the police was the fact that he had not been robbed. His watch, his modest roll were still on him. For sheer diabolic frenzy the attack could be matched only by those of Mr. Hyde.

It would have been docketed with the unsolved mysteries had not a richly dressed man motored to police headquarters and given himself up. He made, as police reporters say, a full confession.

"Deal with me as you will," he said. "I deserve it. But at the time I struck him down—with this loaded ebony cane—the provocation was too great, God help me, to resist. He is my wife's brother, a poor little runt with a mechanical bent. And, damn him!—"

Here the confessor's teeth were suddenly clinched in a return of the paroxysms in which his crime had been committed.

"He made a little radio set for four dollars and a dishpan that would hook on programs which I couldn't get on my guaranteed outfit that cost three hundred and fifty bucks, not including the aerial. His only aerial was a bedpost, a common enamel one at that. And—and he taunted me!"

A soblike murmur of sympathy, a rare visitor there, had swept through police headquarters . . .

Little remains to be told. The ultimate outcome was a suspended sentence and a silent handclasp from the court.

Sanctuary

Long search for a career that would not mean quarrels and strife—for his was an ever-shy nature—brought Edgar Ransome at last to the purchase of a publishing house which printed nothing but children's tales and nursery rhymes.

"Now," said he to himself, "I can be happy and peaceful. The world cannot quarrel with anything in this."

"There's just a little unfinished business here," his predecessor told him when the deal was completed. "Protests from nuts all over the country, but we have to do something about them."

"What are they?" Edgar inquired, in quavering tones.

"Here's one from a Sunday-school superintendents' conference objecting to the story of the ugly duckling. They say it's an indecent reflection on the mother duck," the outgoing publisher replied.

"And here's a set of resolutions from the Stepdaughters of the Siwash asking us to eliminate 'Fee! Fie! Foe! Fum!' from the story of 'Jack the Giant Killer.' They claim it borders on profanity."

"The West Harmony Undertakers' Association wants us to stop printing 'Babes in the Wood.' They object to it on the ground that it contains an inferential slight on their profession," he continued.

"Then there's the Ideal Clothing Merchants, Inc. They ask to have 'Baa! Baa! Black Sheep!' discontinued on the general theory that the less said about wool the better."

"Just a moment," Edgar interrupted, "are there many like that?"

"Hundreds," said the departing one. "They come in every mail."

After a moment's pause Edgar spoke again, hesitatingly.

"Would you," he inquired, "would you reconsider our deal?"

"Not on your life," the seller assured him heartily. "I'm glad to get out. Now I'll be able to have some peace once in a while."

"'I'm afraid I must be very dense,' he said, 'but for the life of me I don't see what you're driving at.'

"'I'm driving at this. You'll agree that for a man to ask his servant suddenly if he likes eggs and then to say no more is a peculiar thing to do. And its very peculiarity stamped itself on the servant's mind, so that when identical conditions were repeated, it immediately came to his knowledge. Moreover, it came in such a way, and so naturally, that his answer to the second question was quite spontaneous. Now suppose he passed. Mrs. Tremlin was in the drawing-room, and Mr. Weymouth went to the door and opened it. I heard him say, "Are you ready, Monica?" Then she came out and I handed her her racket and shoes as I opened the door of the car. I said to her, "Shall I put them behind, ma'am?" and she said, "Oh! it doesn't matter; there's plenty of room here." Then they drove off.'

"'A point to remember,' cried Tremlin. 'There was a tobacco cover over the back seats.'

"'That is so, sir,' said the butler.

The Story of Civilization

Cheops and the Epic of Egypt

This is the Sixth of a Series of Articles on "The Story of Civilization"

By Will Durant, Ph. D.

IN THE Egyptian desert, west of Thebes, two colossi stand, giant statues of an ancient Pharaoh, Amenhotep III. Centuries of sand and wind have worn them down, so that the lordly features of the king can hardly be discerned; and careless generations have battered them almost to fragments, leaving great holes like wounds in the apparently impenetrable stone. On one of the figures may be read the scribbling of Greek tourists who came there some decades before the birth of Christ; already these monuments were gazed upon as relics of a distant past, ancient even to antiquity. Behind them lie two fragments of a massive stela or slab, pockmarked where once it was encrusted with precious jewelry and gold, and bearing a proud inscription by Amenhotep the King. "My Majesty has done these things for millions of years, and I know that they will abide in the earth." Yes, as we shall all abide in the earth.

Those statutes were built about 1400 B. C.; the immense temple of which they formed one approach was destroyed two hundred years later by Amenhotep's descendants. To the Greeks, the statues seemed very old; and yet they were nearer in time to those Greeks than to the Egyptian history three thousand years before. Can we ever realize that Cheops was an ancient to Pericles (who heard with wonder Herodotus' account of Egypt) as Pericles is to us? How the centuries were buried, slowly and patiently, one after another, by those wind-swept sands! Still today the sands are burying them; and while we write and read the Pyramids struggle to preserve themselves against the eddies of the desert.

Greece flared up and died away in half a thousand years; Rome lived little more than a millennium; but the epic of Egypt begins with the introduction of the calendar in 4241 B. C., and does not end till the conquest by Rome in the generation that saw the coming of Christ. It is to the story of Greece what Homer's Odyssey is to a Pindaric ode. Nowhere has a civilization lasted longer. Could anything be more ridiculous than an attempt to compress within a little hour those forty centuries of struggle, passion, labor, and creation?

As you enter Egypt at Alexandria you pass (now by dusty train, once by weary foot and caravan) southward along one of the mouths of the Nile. Looking on either side you see the verdant basis of Egyptian civilization—the rich dark soil made fertile by the periodic overflow of the most historic river in the world. On every side are irrigation canals, some of them as old as the Pyramids. Here and there water is being raised from its natural level as it was raised in the time of Cheops—with leathern buckets poised on poles and lifted by counterweights into the rivulets that feed the soil. Peasants run about, indifferently on land or through the streams; they are not much concerned for their clothing, since they make no concession to fashion beyond a loin-cloth. They are called fellaheen now; once they had another name, and before that, another still; but immemorially they have been there.

It is astonishing how long one must ride before reaching Cairo. One thought of it as near the coast; but it is a hundred miles to the south, at the lowest corner of that fertile triangle which the Greeks (from their letter D) called the Delta. Doubtless that triangle—which looks on the map like the leaves of a lofty palm held up by the slender Nile—was once a bay; slowly the great river filled it with alluvial deposits from its endless bed; and it became the granary of Egypt.

Even at Cairo the Nile has but begun; steamers run from the capital six days upstream to Assuan, where the waters are dammed to regulate the overflow; and yet Assuan itself is far nearer to the river's mouth than to its source. All in all the Nile winds through mountains, cataracts and sand for four thousand patient miles. No wonder the Egyptians themselves never knew its origins, and waited for Alexander's scientists to discover the melting snows of the distant Abyssinian peaks as the cause of that vernal flood which made civilization possible in Egypt.

On either side the desert lay, where only barbarism could subsist; for the first requisite of civilization is water. Five miles (and often less) to left or right of the river one comes upon the sand; it flies up bitingly into the face, and only the veiled Bedouins can bear it. From the mouth of the Nile to Thebes, where the ancient capital lay, habitable Egypt was a ribbon of river and soil, 750 miles in length, but in total area less than little Belgium.

And yet in that narrow strip man felt himself favored, and built many temples of gratitude to the gods; for nothing could have been so beneficent as that providential overflow. Herodotus described the inhabitants jealously: they "obtain the fruits of the field with less trouble than any other people in the world, since they have no need to break up the ground with plough, nor to use the hoe, nor to do any of the work which the rest of mankind find necessary if they are to get a crop. But the husbandman waits till the river has of its own accord spread over the fields and withdrawn again to its bed; then he sows his plot of ground, and turns his swine into it freely. The swine tread in the corn; and the peasant need only await the harvest." During the overflow "the country is converted into a sea; and nothing appears but the cities, which look then like the islands in the Aegean." And even those cities were built of bricks from alluvial clay. So generous was the Nile.

Thus encouraged, Egypt made at an early date that passage from nomad herding to settled agriculture which is the beginning of civilized society. Men could live in one place now, building houses, churches, schools and states; they could put behind them the barbaric chase—nurse of cruelty and greed—and give themselves to the pacifying quiet of the fields.

Slowly, as the peasants toiled, an economic surplus grew, and food was laid aside for workers engaged in industry and trade. Some men found their way across Suez to the Peninsula of Sinai, and opened up great copper-mines there. Within a century those mines had made Egypt master of the Mediterranean. First, of course, (since already there were kings) the metal was used for war: bronze swords, helmets, and shields gave the soldiers of Egypt and advantage over every foe. Then came industrial tools: wedges, rollers, wheels, levers, windlasses, pulleys, screws and lathes; drills that could bore the toughest diorite, and saws that could cut the massive lids of the sarcophagi. Egyptian workers made bricks, cement, and plaster of Paris; they glazed pottery, blew glass, and glorified it with color. They knew the arts of enameling and varnishing, and developed chemistry for many industrial purposes. They made tissues of the finest weaving known in the history of textiles; specimens of linen woven by them four thousand years ago show to this day a "weave so fine that it requires a magnifying glass to distinguish it from silk; the best work of the modern machine-loom is coarse in comparison with this fabric of the ancient Egyptian hand-loom." (Breasted.) "If we compare the technical inventory of the Egyptians with our own," says Peschel, "it is evident that before the invention of the steam engine we excelled them in scarcely anything."

A hundred thousand workmen carried stone for twenty years to build the Pyramids—gigantic tombs for the Egyptian Kings.

With these aids transport grew, and achieved marvels without precedent. Canals were dug between the impassable cataracts of the Nile; great vessels were built that could carry logs of cedar from Lebanon across the Mediterranean; blocks of granite thirty feet in length and sixty tons in weight were borne over land and water for hundreds of miles. Everywhere along the Nile the picture was one of lively industry and trade.

Who these people were, or whence they came, no man can say. The Semitic structure of their language indicates an Asiatic origin; but language and race are not always one; and perhaps it was an alien invasion that left a Semitic stamp upon Egyptian speech. Very probably the people of the Nile, like most "races," were of complex origin; some of them were of Semitic descent, some came from Libya on Egypt's west, some were blacks from Ethiopia on the south, some perhaps had come in from central Asia before ethnographers had begun to divide the human race. Gradually they became a people, alike in speech and feature, capable of one order and one state.

Most of them, it seems, were serfs or slaves: men and women personally controlled by baronial lords, or bound for debt, or captured in battle; the development of agriculture made slavery profitable, and put an end to the slaughter of the conquered in war. An old relief in the Museum at Leyden pictures a long procession of Asiatic captives passing gloomily into Egyptian bondage; one sees them still alive on that vivid slab, their hands tied behind their backs or their heads, or thrust through clumsy hand-cuffs of wood. Diodorus Siculus describes them working naked in the mines. Everywhere they toiled, that Egypt might have food, and pyramids, and kings.

Kings

Where there are pawns there must be kings. Kings were never so plentiful as in Egypt; they are so common there that we lump them into dynasties; and even so their history is the dullest story in the world. Yet they gave Egypt order, a boon unfelt by those who have had it long. "I made the woman of Egypt," said Rameses III, "go with uncovered ears to the place which she desired, for no stranger, nor anyone upon the road, molested her . . . I took a man out of his misfortune and gave him breath. I rescued him from the oppressor who was of more account than he. I set each man in security in his own town; I settled the land in the place where it was laid waste."

It was one side of the royal story; the hands were moist, her heart was thumping. She wished she could go out. It was a slow torture to sit here. Tootal's language was appalling. Hooker's nails were bitten to the quick. And the phones rang, and then she tore off the runners and riders. "All go," she said; but all she saw was "Old Glory, Mr. Jack Tarrant."

And all he saw was a crowd and the tapes and the grass showing between the uplifted ears of Old Glory. For his hour was come. The veteran, twice winner of this handicap, but again ignored in the betting, was to do or die.

Jack, crouching there, was conscious of several things: of thoughts of Joyce, of his old father with fanatical confidence distributing his all in the ring, of his own bad luck in being drawn on the extreme outside—the worst position on this sharp course—and of his good luck in having Melody next to him.

Then the webbing shot up, and mare and gelding jumped off in their stride. They know that course—so did he. Before a furlong had been covered Tarrant's stable was on the rails, and, hugging them, streaked down the hill.

Dust flew, their colors—the same but for the distinguishing cap of Melody's rider—winked in the sunshine; they sat still, those two had stolen a march on the others. The air rushed at them, grass and spectators and white railing and posts glided back. And that humbug, Melody, forged ahead as if she could stay forever, with her tongue lolling out and her lungs playing a jazz, as she always ran.

But Jack was thinking of Old Glory. The horse was running with its dash of two years ago. It could stay this mile at top speed, knew every yard of the ground. His hopes rose, he almost knew he was going to win.

And then—hell! Melody cracking swerved into him and let up Wild Drake on the coveted rails. His great chance seemed gone. The mare dropped away beaten, but he was no longer in the lead. He groaned. Another horse had crept up on his right—the favorite, Roseate Morn!

So they wheeled 'round the local Tattenham corner neck and neck. Nothing in it, all three full of running. The jockey on Wild Drake changed his whip to his left hand, Roseate Morn crowded Old Glory on the right. The going was hard but to win was harder. Leather creaked and hoofs rattled in the sweat of it all; glasses flashed in the sun from the stands and crowds lining the course let out a roar.

Nothing in it, but everything at stake! A girl—the girl Jack hoped to marry. He sat down to ride with hands and legs and brain as never before he had ridden in his life. He was breathless and tingled, sounds dinned in his ears. An ecstasy was his, but not fear. They were in the dip, they were breasting the rise to the winning post. First the favorite had his nose in front to give way to "the job," only to test the metal of the double victor of the Town handicap. Could he win it again?

And then—Oh, God—he faltered, threatened to fall on his head. What had happened? It was ghastly. The old chap's forelegs were climbing the air!

Climbing! Then Jack thought of Donoghue—the worst predicament he was ever in. Riding Seaforth in a race at Liverpool—but he won!

Jack, frozen, sat as still, strained, too, every muscle to keep his poor old horse on his feet. But he was bumping and boring—and with the race all but won! The jockeys either side cursed, and he groaned—for he knew well enough what had happened.

Like Seaforth, Old Glory had gone totally blind!

He somehow kept him on his legs, prayed for no objections if he won, thanked heaven that the winning post was near and he was able to gain confidence by the sound of hoofs on each side. And they flashed on.

To defeat or victory? No one knew. Not the best reader of a race in all that multitude. All three were shouted, hats waved, hands made megaphones for open mouths, the roar was deafening. An old man shivered. He had trained the winner of a Hunt and Stewards' cup, but had he trained the winner of an inconspicuous Town handicap?

His boy. That boy's girl. His old veteran blind in one eye, for none supposed the sight of the other was gone. None supposed anything. They only saw three horses which a sheet could cover, the colors, the judge in his box. There was a silence uncanny after the noise, as they swept, locked together, past the post. A number to go up. Which?

In the London office a girl and two men waited by the tape. It had tapped out: "2:30 off 2:36." Then it had whirred, then stopped. It was inscrutable. She, whose head was going round, saw it as a devil which knew but wouldn't tell, because it liked to torture her. Tootal breathed heavily, Hooker sagged—they stood to lose hundreds on either of two horses—Wild Drake or Roseate Morn.

She thought for him up there. His pluck, the strain. But wasn't it worse for her? He knew already. They moved away, these men—they couldn't stand suspense. "You'll see W or R come up as sure as fate," said Tootal, and he poured a double while Hooker shook.

But neither letter came up. She uttered a cry, they swung 'round. Tap, whir—tap, tap, tap— She pointed a hand, her face was emotion.

"Favorite?" asked Tootal.

"Job?" gasped Hooker.

She breathed: "Oh, heaven, it's Old Glory!"

Yes, his number had gone up in the frame, and if a horse can think in human form, he must have thought this number was up, too. The old fellow could hear and touch and smell and feel, but he couldn't see. Noises assailed him, such as that shout, "Don't pay!" He was terrified—his brown neck was a white foam under the rein. He trembled with fright.

Jack had pulled him up. He knew by the rules of racing he must ride into the unsaddling enclosure, but he daren't move. "Don't pay! Objection!" He went cold. There were police, a running crowd. The gay colors of the returning pockeys passed him and then he saw his old father looking up. A man yelled at the same time, "Dismount!"

"No fear!"

"Get off at once."

"You may," said his father. "It's Sir John Beab, a steward."

There came through to the London office on that marvelous, frightening machine, tap, whir—tap, tap, tap—and it spelled out. "Town handicap—Sensation—Old Glory thirteen years—won race three times—went blind—"

She moaned: "Went blind!"

Tap, whir—tap, tap, whir—

"Won by short head—dead heat—owners, trainers and riders of second and third decide not to object—no objection from stewards—ovation for Mr. Jack Tarrant—winner went stone blind inside distance—3. Oh, runners and riders—"

The phone rang—but she couldn't answer phones. What did they matter when only he mattered? What if Harry Scott or Mrs. Lindsay-Brown wanted a price for the Cambridgeshire? Let them get it in the morning.

But the phone was insistent. She had to answer it to still it.

"Are you Gerrard—? Hold the line—Trunks want you."

And he said "Joyce!" from Redleigh as if he were over the way.

How she thrilled! "Oh, Jack, is that you?"

"We won—Heavens, I was scared stiff."

"I know—it was all on the tape."

"They might have had the race. My Lord, there are sports! The vet. says the old chap will see again."

"I'm so glad."

"Oh, and Joyce—we've been in the limelight. Old Sir John Beab—he's sending a string of jumpers to father—and I'm to ride them. So will you?—you know—turn up at some jolly old church—"

She laughed—but couldn't speak. An aged plater had shaped their lives. She wanted to be with Jack, she was going to marry him. Some jolly old church! She visualized him now—a straw in his mouth—eyes and lips laughing. Her hero, her man. He had swept up mines in the North Sea, but like the rest of them he never spoke of that. He had won a race on a totally blind horse, but that, of course, was an every day occurrence! She stammered: "I wish—"

But you can't kiss through a telephone!

whole staff had been warned just to behave normally.

"The man from London started on my face in the morning, reserving the final touches till after lunch, which Tremlin had with me. But he couldn't eat anything, and it was with a feeling of relief that I saw him go after the meal. He was getting on my nerves rather badly.

"And then at two o'clock I left and drove up to the house. Every detail in the car was correct—side-wings, two spare wheels, tonneau cover, everything. The expert from London had done his work well, for the butler gave a positive start as he saw me.

"'Magnificent, Sir John,' he whispered. 'You're the living image of Mr. Weymouth.'

"So far, so good; that had been one of the many difficulties to contend with.

"'And she has on a similar dress, Sir John; her maid managed that.'

"'Excellent,' I said. 'You've got the racket and shoes? Then we'll get on with it.'

"Nervous, you fellows—I was as nervous as a cat. Would the whole thing, after all the trouble we'd taken, be a ghastly failure? However, there was no use hesitating, so I went to the drawing-room door and opened it.

"'Are you ready, Monica?' I said.

"It was the crucial moment, and I saw a look of dawning amazement come into her eyes, to be replaced almost at once by an expression which defeated me. At least, it defeated me in one way only; it defeated me when I saw it on the face of a woman who was devotedly attached to her husband. Except from that point of view, its meaning was too obvious.

"I stood aside, feverishly trying to think out this new and unexpected development. Then she passed me and walked quite normally toward the car. The butler was splendid; there was not a hint of hesitation in his voice as he opened the door for her.

"And we drove off.

"'Gerry, darling,' she said, 'I thought you were coming to lunch. You said you would.'

"Now here was the devil and all of a predicament. I had assumed that I might have to reply to an ordinary disjointed conversation on general topics, but a love affair, and a serious one, was a different matter altogether. And I was just racking my brains as to what I should say when she spoke again.

"'I know you couldn't help it, dear heart, but I grudge every moment you're away from me.'

"It wasn't pleasant, I assure you. It was obvious that Mr. Gerald Weymouth had been a pretty awful swine. Certain it was that he had eaten Tremlin's salt, and then done him the greatest injury one man may do another. Certain it was also that he had had no intention whatever of sacrificing his freedom and becoming involved in the meshes of the divorce court. There was no need for his answers to be spoken aloud; they were obvious without that. His career, unnecessary scandal, poor old Bob's feelings—all the old, old stunts rattled off glibly.

"And suddenly a feeling of awe came over me. Just so had this thing happened a month previously; and even as the man I represented talked of his career, death was five minutes away from him. And then my professional instincts took charge; it was so wonderfully interesting. I hardly heard some of what she said; I was so frightfully keen to see what was going to happen when we got to the hill.

"'Why did you do it, Gerry?' Her voice suddenly arrested me. 'I used to love him so much, and now I can't bear him near me.'

"The doctor in me noted that point; the strange aversion was accounted for.

"'Of course, I disguise it—but I can't go on. You've—you've bewitched me.'

"And now we were at the top of the hill.

"'Gerry—be careful. Not too fast down here. What's the matter—brakes gone? My God! Gerry—turn her; turn her into the bank . . .'

"I was letting her down pretty fast, you'll understand.

"'Turn her, Gerry.' Her voice rose to a shriek. 'Slip in a lower gear. Oh, God!—you've lost your head. Bob wouldn't have . . . Bob . . .'

"Her weight fell heavily against me—she'd fainted; the car was past the two trees. I pulled up, and laid her on the grass beside the road. Then I ripped off my disguise and brought her round. Now we should see whether it was success or failure.

"She stared at me wonderingly.

"'Who are you?' she said at length.

"'My name is Sir John Caston,' I answered. 'I'm a doctor.'

"'But what on earth . . .' she stammered in amazement.

"'Listen, Mrs. Tremlin,' I said quietly, 'and I'll explain things. You had a very bad accident some weeks ago, and were thrown out of a car on your head. Mr. Weymouth was driving you . . .'

"'But he's just been driving me . . .'

"'Oh, no!' I said. 'I've been driving you. Perhaps you imagined it was Mr. Weymouth. You had a nasty knock on the head, you know, and that produces delusions.'

"'I don't understand,' she said wearily.

"'And I don't want you to try to,' I answered. 'Don't worry your head about it at all. Let's get on back and see your husband.'

"'Bob! Yes—Bob wouldn't have lost his head.'

"And that was all she said. She got into the car, and we drove back quietly. I talked on outside topics and she answered quite coherently; the thing was a success. She had got to the other side of the wall.

"An utter, complete success," he repeated. "Little by little we broke the truth to her, and she took it normally and calmly—even to Gerald Weymouth's death. But the morning I went she asked me a question.

"'That dream, Sir John; that terrible dream, when I thought you were Gerald. You're sure I didn't say anything?'

"'Perfectly sure,' I answered calmly.

"And under her breath I heard her say, 'Thank God!'

"All that was two years ago, and at intervals I have said to myself—'Good. You did that very well. No one knows her secret, save you; you have restored her to her normal mind, and from information received they are still a devoted couple. In fact, you are distinctly worthy of a pat on the back.' And during those two years the gods have been laughing; this afternoon I heard their mirth.

"I lunched with them both at the Ritz, and afterward she had to go out shopping. So I sat on, talking to him.

"'Pretty satisfactory, Tremlin,' I said, full of the righteous glow of Fin champagne. I'm proud of that little experiment of ours.'

"'Are you?' he said, with a twisted sort of smile.

"'But dash it, man,' I said, aggrieved. 'Aren't you?'

"He looked at me, and his eyes were weary.

"'At any rate, she called for me when she thought the end was coming.'

"I positively stuttered at him.

"'What under the sun do you mean?'

"'Only that I was hidden under the tonneau cover at the back.'"

TARRANT'S LUCK

ON a summer morning a girl with gold bobbed hair and the sky reflected in her eyes strolled into a yard, looked 'round and whistled. She was a dinky little thing, who deceived people. She looked so very soft and alluring, but she was all there. Just now she was clad for riding. Well cut whipcord breeches and a green jumper, and she flicked her shining leggings with an ash bough she had torn from a hedge.

Glancing 'round at the empty boxes, the paintless woodrot of the open doors, the broken weathercock, the weeds at her feet, she said aloud, "The Tarrant Racing Stables! Can you beat it?"

She was pretty and extremely capable. They had said at the inn, "You might try the Tarrant Racing Stables." Though they were not well known to her, she had hardly expected to find them quite such a relic as this. She had heard the name Tarrant; he occasionally popped up with a plater at a long price. No doubt he was buried.

She moved on to find some one. There wasn't even the smell of horses. There was a ferret hutch, but it was empty; there were pigsties, and so were they. Then she turned a corner, and did smell horses at last. She thrilled. The sweet aroma was so reminiscent of her girlhood that she felt her hair as in a plait again.

The boxes here were in better condition; she stopped at one. A brown head with a white blaze looked out and gentled her. She caressed it, and then found the poor creature was blind in one eye. Anyhow, it was a horse, and if she could discover some one, she might yet get a ride.

She looked 'round. Not a soul about. Strolling through to a sort of farm, she saw a moth eaten haystack. A wire fence surrounded it, but had been trodden down. And then, moving further 'round, she spied a couple of heifers eating their fill when there was plenty of rich green grass.

Her farming instinct rebelled. It wasn't her hay, but hang it—! She drove the cattle out.

And then, as she was trying to put up the fence, a man's amused voice called, "Don't spoil your hands."

She looked up and replied hotly: "You might jump in and spoil yours!"

So he did; and when the posts were upright she was able to appraise him. A young fellow with a rough, sunburned sort of handsomeness, the kind of eyes and mouth that laughed together. He wore a cricketing shirt, open at the neck, khaki breeches, and rolled a straw between his lips. As he did so, he showed the most perfect teeth.

"Good for you," said he. And eyes and mouth were laughing again.

She turned to the stack. "That's in a pretty mess, whoever it belongs to."

"Yes—they may as well eat it while they can;" and he smacked the redder of the two little cows, so that it curled its tail in the air and with a buck and a kick made off.

"I don't wonder the place is tumbling down," she said.

"Nor I."

"Are you the head man?"

"And the stable lad."

"Well, can I hire a mount?"

"Can you ride?"

"I don't want lessons."

They looked at each other admiringly under the hot sun.

"You might be all right on Melody," he said at last.

She took that from him. "Is that the blind one?"

"No fear. Melody roars, but otherwise she's quiet enough. The other's Old Glory."

"Oh, I've heard of him."

The straw in his mouth changed sides as he laughed. "What, a girl like you follow horses?"

She said vainglorously while they walked along, "who doesn't?"

"Who's your bookmaker?"

"Tootal and Hooker, London."

"Do they pay you out?"

"Every Saturday."

"How do you do it?"

She wasn't going to tell him. He stopped, put his hand over the lower half of a door and opened it.

"You ride astride?" he said, glancing at her attire.

She nodded.

"That's good; we don't keep a lady's saddle."

"But can't I ride Old Glory?" she asked, following him in.

"Not much. He's had his exercise."

"But surely—?"

"His legs are our fortune, and they're brittle," said he, and went up to a bay mare which bared yellow teeth in the shadows.

She looked long at them both—the rough and yet charming young man, and Melody, who roared.

"Has she won races?"

"Did, two years ago."

"How old?"

"Year younger than Old Glory, and he's thirteen."

"Have you no others?"

"Not at the moment."

"How on earth does Mr. Tarrant live?"

"On hope."

She felt a chill run through her on this summer's day, but the young man said cheerfully, "If you'll disappear?"

So she did, and he led Melody out. There were saddles in the shed beyond the ferret hutch; bridles, too.

"Chuck away that wisp," said he.

She dropped it; and then he helped her up.

"Any more tips?" she asked sarcastically.

"Only one. Don't pull her or she'll bolt."

"Then how do I stop the beast?"

"Her wind will."

"Good heavens!"

He looked up at her. She was so jolly in that green jumper. Melody harmless enough, but could she ride?

She interrupted his musings by asking: "How do you charge?"

He rolled the straw. "Oh, I don't know."

"Better say, hadn't you? By the hour?"

He grinned. "She won't last that."

"What do you keep her for?"

"Old Glory loves her."

And she was away. Jove, she could ride She was some girl, all right. Where had she come from? He watched them till they were over the brow, and then, hands in his pockets, straw in his mouth, he rolled with the gait of a sailor to the only loose box that was occupied.

A warm, soft nose nuzzled him. There were two eyes in Old Glory's head, and one was a rich, translucent violet black, while the other was a gray film.

He said: "One more, old chap?"

"Well, did you get a ride?" asked the hostess of "The Rising Sun" when Joyce got back.

Yes, rather."

"See old Tarrant?"

"No, a fellow called Jack."

"His boy."

The girl's brows lifted. "His son? Good gracious! But he's hardly a boy."

"No—about your age. He spent a year in the North sea blowing up mines."

"Did he?"

"He's not done much since, though. Comes in here sometimes. They make a fuss of him—see, he twice won the Town handicap on Old Glory."

"Rode it himself?"

"That's right. It's an amateur riders' race—bit of a gamble. They were all on it 'round here. But the Tarrants' luck's dead out at present. Ran second last year—third the year before."

"They must live on air?"

The buxom woman shrugged. "Oh, his father did well enough when Mr. Stenson was alive. Then the boxes were full, and old Tarrant was up on the gallops with his string before sunrise, dodging the touts. It was a rare sight to see them, and the yearlings in the side reins. They once found the slickest horse that ever came from these parts by the clock. Papers laughed—but the Pensioner won the Hunt cup one year and the Stewards' cup the next, and the ring knew it."

"The Pensioner?"

"Grandsire of Old Glory—but you'd like your lunch, wouldn't you?"

Joyce said she would. Slipping on a frock, she couldn't help thinking of Jack Tarrant. He had said that if she cared to come along about seven in the morning, she might have a stripped gallop on the downs. Jack Tarrant!

He had done his bit in a mine sweeper and won races on a half blind horse, but he seemed to be idling away his life. He had told her they might get one more race out of Old Glory—he seemed to be living for that.

She returned to the sitting room. Lunch was on the table. And when she had finished she withdrew to the garden with a book. There were hives and honey bees, and the scents and colors of flowers—she was bored by her book. Her legs, too, were stiff from the unaccustomed riding—well, that would soon work off tomorrow but try how she might she couldn't get Jack Tarrant out of her mind.

He seemed to take everything as a joke. Not cynically, but good humoredly. His father lived on hope, the son seemed to live on laughter. She visualized him, a fit, amused, slim, desirable creature with that grin on his face.

Did, too, next morning as she entered the yard on the stroke of seven. She felt this was the kind of game she had always wanted to play. She wasn't in love—except with life. It was so good to forget that you had to strap hang from a suburb morning and night for eleven and a half months of the year.

He called, "Hello!" and either Melody or Old Glory neighed as they came into view. She gazed at the picture—that hard-as-nails young man between those lean, aged horses. No flesh about them, so light and on the leg.

He held her stirrup, she swung up on the mare. And he was on the gelding and they were riding through the yard. The empty, dilapidated buildings, the smashed weather-cock, the ragged hayrick, she had no memories for these as they creaked up the hill.

"So you didn't forget?"

"One doesn't forget this kind of thing," she said.

"You like riding?"

"I get none. That's why."

And he rolled that straw in his mouth as he patted the arched neck of the half blind horse.

"When is the Town handicap run?" she asked.

"Five weeks Monday. Second race of the day up at Redleigh, in the north."

"Can't Old Glory win anywhere else?"

"Never does," he said with a twinkle.

"You take him up there?"

"Every year."

"Alone?"

"No"—he nodded to her mount—"she goes, too."

"Whatever for?"

"He won't start without her."

"Suppose she won?"

"If the Lord gave her a new pair of lungs we'd argue the point. She fades away like an old soldier at the end of four furlongs, and I make noises to cod Old Glory she's following on."

She gave a burst of laughter. "What a way to live!"

"Isn't it? But we shan't unless the old chap catches the judge's eye this time. He's about through."

They reached the skyline. "That oak's a mile," said he. "Let's canter down."

They did. Old Glory was pulling double, Melody blowing already like a bellows.

"He loves her!" she gasped, the wind in her face, her eyes on the gelding.

Jack turned 'round with a grin. "Oh, yes, he loves her!"

They reached the tree and wheeled. For half a mile it was a race, and then Melody's unmelodious noises were only drowned by Joyce's laughter as she heard the young man ahead imitating her roarer as Old Glory went sailing away.

She pulled up, seeing only the back view of the race horse and its rider crouched to its neck. She tried to think. Was he serious? Did his father really depend on a gamble materalizing to get them out of a hole? It seemed ludicrous. Tarrant senior had been a trainer of note, must know better than she the uncertainty of pulling off a coup. Besides, in the language of Tootal and the sporting papers, what had Tarrant in his stables to tell him the time of the day? This musical mare she was on? A beast that four furlongs found out and five broke down?

She turned in the saddle. Those buildings at the foot of the downs told her how poor they were. Yet they had seen better days, had trained cup winners.

The young man's return at a slow canter interrupted her musings.

"You'll never win anything with him," she said.

"Oh, shan't I?"

"Yes, you were right—I do like him. But I've never met anyone quite like you. Surely, he was joking when he said he was 'raising the wind' and putting two hundred on Old Glory?"

"No, he was deadly serious."

"But do horses win at thirteen?"

"Plenty over the sticks."

Of course, but this race is in the flat."

He grinned. "There was a little horse called Mount Felix."

"One!"

"And, I think, Mustapha."

"Two!"

"Practically none at their age are in training."

"How can you be so hopeful?"

"'Trust to luck' has always been our motto," he said. "It's served us—till lately."

And half amusement, half ecstasy showed on his face, so that sitting there in the sunshine, lithe, clean, attractive, as much one with his horse as a centaur, he seemed to give out confidence. It infected her.

"Tomorrow?"

"Oh, yes, tomorrow."

As days passing ran into the second week they became close friends, but he never made love. Yet she knew she appealed to him as he did to her. She told him something of her life; he revealed something of his. "'Trust to luck' has always been our motto," he said. "It's served us—till lately."

"Your father must be worried to death."

"Not he! You'll like him. Come and lunch with us."

Stephen Tarrant, though he was rising seventy, had the seraphic, pink, round face of a cherub, and the last thing he suggested was being hard up. He showed her the cups he had won, talked in the future. "When the stables are full." It seemed to her pathetic that they were empty and tumbling down.

"Well?" asked Jack, as he was strolling back with her.

"Old Glory has won the race twice," said he.

And every morning on the gallops, hearing his laughter ring out a flushed partridge or Melody's noises or just the feel of the air, she couldn't understand his spirits. Care free. "Don't you ever worry?" she asked him once.

"What's the good?"

Which was true.

Her last morning they were standing in the yard on the return from the downs, he had boxed the horses. Around him was ruin, but he grinned, a straw in his mouth.

"You're extraordinary."

"Aren't I?

"All you can raise on an old, half blind horse!"

"It's sink or swim."

"And if you sink?"

He looked hard at her. "Well, I know what I shan't get."

She colored and thrilled. There was a challenge in his voice, an innuendo in his words. For what did he expect to get if he "swam?"

She said unevenly, "Why are you looking at me like that?"

"Can't you guess?"

"No," she lied.

He laughed. "Well, I shan't tell you."

But he had. She knew that long before she reached "The Rising Sun." Knew now that she was desperately in love with him. She spent all the afternoon in the garden, but he didn't come. She had said good-by to him, who had but pressed her hand.

She had tea, but returned to the garden She was romantic now. Life didn't much matter without him. And she was going back to London tomorrow, probably never to see him again, though, of course, she would write. But if he lost up at Redleigh! That he was almost certain to made her go hot.

The sun moved to the west, birds sang their farewell. Surely, though he had said good-by, he would find some excuse to say it again. Knowing how hopelessly she loved him, she rose at last, entered the inn.

One of her friends among the dart players greeted her. "So 'e's tipped the old 'orse agin. Did last time it come 'ome at a 'undred ter eight—three year ago—an' I 'ad a bob on 'ee."

"Tipped it?" she said. "Is he in here?"

"Come an' gone."

She sighed. She felt it was the most she would be able to say of him in the years after—that he had come and gone. And they had never so much as kissed. She wanted him to kiss her before she returned to London, before he traveled north on his hopeless errand.

That drove her along the road to him while the red sun was sinking over the hills. In the falling dusk her emotion rose, till it filled her so that she trembled. She thought then of a girl clerk they had once had at the office whose young man had waited for her every evening. She had thought it soft, she had despised her. But she hadn't then known love.

It makes fools of us all, she thought, as she hurried through the twilight.

Yet she couldn't call for him. There was no excuse. Turning from the house among its black clustering trees, she crossed a paddock, so entered the yard. He might not have done the horses for the night. Among these ruined buildings, treading on weeds, she felt she was in an enchanted place.

How silly! But she didn't care. We're all silly. An owl sailed over her, moonlight flecked its white plumage with silver. Then the stillness was broken by the scraping of the shod hoof of a horse, and she opened an upper door, and a filmy eye showed from the darkling.

Her throat contracted. She put her face against that warm, silky, sweet smelling head. A horse. An aged, half blind plater, thirteen years old. It fondled her; her arm encircled its soft neck. Old Glory! On so slender a reed she knew that she relied for happiness. For, though she would marry Jack Tarrant if he hadn't a penny, he would never ask her to. He wasn't the kind. The horse raised its head, whinnied; the wet sides of its lips on her cheek were like a kiss.

She clung to it. Night and her emotion covered her. She heard no one approach, guessed no one was watching. So when a hand touched her, she started. He looked down.

Moonlight lit them. He said, "Hello." So like him.

And she quavered, "I came to say good-by."

"To Old Glory?"

"To Old Glory." And she thought: "The horse kissed me, but the man won't"

He said, "Only to him?"

"That's all."

"Not me?" His hands pressed her arms.

She trembled. "I can never say good-by to you."

Still he tried to hide his love, the chivalrous fool. His voice shook in a poor kind of laugh.

"'Say au revoir but not—'"

"Don't—don't be funny. If you lose—don't lose me. You will write?"

"You bet."

"Don't you care?"

His mouth was a line in the moonlight. Didn't he care? There was no laughter in his eyes now. He had never cared till this girl had strolled into the yard from nowhere. He had sworn with men on the North Sea and at minor meetings; chaffed women, drunk his pint of ale; risen early of a morning, loved the sun and the rain; but that was all at an end

There was a new life here. He felt as he had never done. The odds against his being able to marry her were surely hundreds to one, but the odds on his kissing her now were as big.

"Oh, damn!" he said. "I can't help it, can I?"

So she returned to London in a whirl of tempestuous thoughts. Her love was requited, but she was not engaged. He had nothing, he had said. He had just let the old place rip. But it was different now. Something to work for. If only he could lift that handicap!

The train rocked, rushing her to London and facts. You can't marry on nothing—he was right. Whatever her romantic self might tell her, two can't live on air. Their destiny was unknown, but one thing was plain. The running of a horse must decide their lives.

It seemed dreadful. Her rooms, the offices, the crowded tubes and busses got on her nerves. She wrote to him, he sent her a wire. And life went on.

Life for her made up of the apoplectic Tootal, who long ago had ruined his constitution by drink, and the business by backing his fancies; of his partner, the anaemic and rather hungry looking Hooker, who was terrified to stand a tenner on the favorite. And the one cursed and the other bit his nails, and the phones rang, and the tape machine tapped and whirred, till her nerves were like a wound.

Yet she showed nothing. "Forty shillings each way Scarlet Square. Thank you, Captain Wilson." No one guessed or would ever guess, though, her ordeal ahead, her having to stay in this office and wait for their fate to come up on that machine, became more and more impossible every day.

Came the Saturday before the Monday. She found the program in a paper, ran down the names. There they were:

	yrs	st	lb
020—Old Glory, Mr. S. Tarrant, owner.....	13	12	7

and lower down:

900—Melody, Mr. S. Tarrant, owner.....	12	10	5

It seemed incredible to believe that they were the two old horses he and she had ridden on the downs. The phone rang.

"Tootal and Hooker's? Fifteen pound mixed doubles the favorite for Joe Black."

She called back the bet, scribbling it down on a pad mechanically, though her thoughts were such miles away.

There was a train going north, and a horse man on it. Either side of the partition stood a racehorse, and in a kind of pen at the end sat a fellow sucking a straw. He opened a peephole. Saw a filmy eye. He just watched the old horse.

Going north—to Redleigh with these two aged platers. He had done it four times now, it had never seemed to matter before. It was damned dark in the tunnel, but he laughed—it would be daylight the other side.

For he believed he was going to win. Something told him so. Any one of a thousand girls from London might have stayed at "The Rising Sun" without wanting to ride—without knowing how to, for that matter. Joyce. She was in an office now, thinking of him. He looked ahead. It was all or nothing, for it was she or nothing—that was clear.

Redleigh races are a north country holiday Monday affair. Mines and factories close, shops shut at one, crowds flock to the course. It's left handed, down hill all the way a sharp rise to the finish—a replica of Epsom. The draw counts, there are big fields, it's not a favorites' meeting.

She knew all that, who was sitting in a London office, as well as those two on the course. Tootal had told her. There were sixteen probables for the Town handicap scheduled for two-thirty. The forecast of betting anticipated a six to one favorite, but Hooker said hungrily it might be sevens or eights the field. There was a "job" in the race, too—Wild Drake, and a form horse of rather better class than most—Roseate Morn. They had money for both, but nothing else was backed. It was the kind of race where only fools rush in.

It was also after two. The result of the first race was up, the runners and riders for the handicap were tapping on the roll. A phone rang. Hooker snapped: "Full up with Wild Drake!" "Take it!" roared Tootal. And they had another fiver for "the job."

But she wasn't thinking of "the job." Her

Don't Forget Our Big Party Next Saturday Evening!

CONTESTS, PRIZES, PLUS A GOOD TIME

ALL IS IN READINESS FOR OUR PENNY DANCE; GET YOUR TICKET NOW!

Hey! You collegiates, how about that ticket? Halloween is over and Thanksgiving is drawing near, and this means heaps of fun for older members of The Times Junior Club. Of course, everyone knows that there's a rip-roaring party scheduled for next Saturday, November 19, with many prize contests arranged. So mark the date in your happy book, Saturday, November 19.

To begin with, this affair is to be held in the beautiful hall of the Manufacturers' Exhibit, 150 South Broadway. A veritable fairyland is being built for your approval. Refreshments will be served on long boards, covered with checkered cloths, and tin cups, paper plates, cider and old-fashioned cakes will be provided.

What's more, and perhaps the greatest treat of all, will be the appearance of "T. J. C. Playboys," five crack-a-jack musicians, with hats cocked over one eye.

Many interesting contests are lined up, with a huge "turk" as the grand prize. Two other attractive gifts also will be given away. Then there is, of course, the thrill of a "penny dance." Ropes are to be drawn about the hall, and a penny each time our members whirl about the room. These pennies will be handled by trusted members of the house committee, who intend redecorating our clubrooms. The walls are to be tinted, floors covered with attractive tiling, and new cushions, drapes and curtains

Aunt Dolly's Letter Box

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I have been reading your question box and letter box every Sunday for some time and must say that it is very wonderful and fine that the young people who are in trouble can write to some one who really cares and understands.

I have never been a member of The Times Junior Club, and am very sorry that I am too old. I am 22 years of age. But I surely do get a lot of good out of the paper.

The main reason I am writing to you is to get Ed's address. (I have inclosed the letter which was in today's Junior Times.) I would like to write to him. And I also would be very glad to send him what good wholesome reading matter he would care for, as I can understand how hard it is to get so far away from civilization.

I can also understand how lonesome he really can be. But what you said in your letters to him is more truth than he probably will think it is.

I hope that some time I may have the pleasure of meeting you. But until that time I extend my best wishes and congratulations. And may good luck always be yours.

Yours very truly,
Your friend.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

Just a few lines to let you know I'm still "plugging along" and I really mean to "cop" some of those big prizes, Aunt Dolly. It's the thrill of a lifetime, Aunt Dolly, to go to the mail box and find a letter from you.

I'm living in Pasadena now, so I'm much closer. I'm ashamed to say, Aunt Dolly, I've never been to one of those "peppy" meetings. But I'd sure love to. Please write and tell me just when is the best time to come and see you. I'd love to meet some of those cartoonists, Aunt Dolly. I certainly enjoy those stories in our T.J.C. paper and I never fail to read every "bit" of the Junior Times.

I'm sending in some drawings, Aunt Dolly. I won the cover design once and I'm just dying to win it again, and I will. Please write soon.

A real booster.

THE GHOST OF FAIRFIELD INN

Written and Illustrated by Robert Depew, 359 Ogden Drive, Hollywood

Fairfield Inn was built on a bluff overlooking the sea. Below stretched a narrow strip of white sand and to the left extended a long row of summer cottages. Most of these were occupied, it being midsummer.

In the first cottage in the row, the one nearest to the hotel, a family by the name of Evans were staying. Their little daughter, a child of 10 years named June, was under the doctor's care following a long spell of sickness. She was well on the road to recovery but the doctor had advised plenty of exercise and fresh air. As a result, the entire family moved to the seashore for the summer and so we find them in cottage No. 1, Fairfield Row.

June was a born nature lover. She loved the birds and trees and flowers were her especial delight. So it was that the flower garden that was all around the inn took her fancy, and she wasted no time in making friends with the old gardener who cared for it. He was a very old man with a kind face and a ready smile for anyone who liked his flowers. To him each flower was a friend to be looked after and cared for.

Old Bradner, for that was his name, and June soon became fast friends and spent many a sunny morning together. He told her many things about the trees and flowers in the garden. His store of knowledge on this subject seemed inexhaustible. He told her legends of the flowers and of the enchantment of a garden in full bloom on a moonlit night. He told her that if one should come to a garden when the moon was full, for three nights in succession and make a wish, the wish would come true.

So it happened that June had a longing to try out this legend, and she would often sit and think about it and wonder if it were really true. She waited until the moon was full and when it was well up and everyone was fast asleep, she stealthily wrapped herself in a white robe she had and quietly stole out of the house.

Silently she went through the bright night, the stillness broken only by the wash of the incoming tide.

Upon reaching the garden she opened the gate and entered. Slowly she walked the entire length of the garden unaware of anything but the enchanting beauty of her surroundings. On reaching the far end of the garden she stopped, turned about facing the way she had come, closed her eyes and made her wish. Then taking a last look at the garden she went along the side of the house under the office windows and out the rear gate and home.

June had not been aware that her

A BOY'S LAMENT

By Barbara Woodward, R.F.D. No. 10, Box No. 94c, Seattle, Wash.

In ev'ry village,
In ev'ry little town,
It seems to me there is a schoolhouse,
I wish they'd all fall down.

I'd like to be a giant,
With big and brawny arm.
And when I neared a schoolhouse,
The Kids would take alarm.

I do not like the school slates,
I can't remember dates,
I can't get my "rith-me-tick"
With decimals and rates.

I never get my English,
I do not learn the rules,
And if I could have my way,
They'd banish all the schools.

THE BUILDER

By Esther Hauschild, 1625 Argyle avenue, Los Angeles.

A man once approached three men who were helping to build a cathedral. The stranger asked the first stone-cutter what he was doing. The first man replied, "I am cutting stone." The second man said, "I am getting $6 a day." The third man answered, "I am building the cathedral."

So it is with all of us. Some work because they have a job and get so much a day; but some work because they feel they want to do something big for the world.

We are all builders. We build our lives and our dream worlds. We construct wonderful dream characters and then we try to follow the patterns. The world loves large buildings and requires two kinds of goodness from them as from men: First, the doing of their practical duty well; then, that they be graceful and pleasing in it.

Criminals in England are becoming less brutal, especially in their treatment of children and weak persons, declare leading criminologists.

RIDDLES

Last week's riddles stirred up lots of interest. Hundreds of letters were received, but only two members guessed the right answers.

Vivien Halden, living at 4567 Hancock Way, San Diego, solved No. 1. The answer was "The Sky."

Dick Granley, living in Compton, R. R. No. 4, thought "a potato" was the correct answer for No. 2, and he was right.

Here's one for this week. See if you, too, can't guess the correct answer and win some of the lovely prizes offered.

What is it that
"Enters your house,
Creeps up the stairs,
Gets under the carpet,
And ruffles your hair?"

We are offering boxes of candy, flashlights, Daisy air rifles, books, vanity bags, strings of pearls, Scout knives and axes, and dozens of other marvelous prizes. Try your luck and solve this riddle.

SECTION FOR TINY TOTS WINS PRAISE

STORIES, POEMS, ART WORK FOR JUNIORS AND BY JUNIORS NEEDED

Our junior section is an established success. Hundreds of letters have testified to the fact. Tiny tots from all over the world have written in, expressing their opinion, one and all proclaiming it the best ever.

However, the proof of the pudding is in the eating, so judge for yourself. What magazine, having the same allotment of space gives you more interesting reading matter, keener puzzles, riddles and really valuable information? Look our junior over, then write in, criticise if you wish, suggest, and help contribute.

We want stories by juniors, poems and art work, but unless your full name and address, also age, are written in upper right-hand corner of your copy we cannot bother to judge your work. Sorting and segregating magazine material is the hardest sort of work, please co-operate and we will do the same.

In the meantime, voice your opinion. Tell us what you like, what you'd eliminate if you were editor, and what type of articles you would like to see in your junior.

Remember tempting cash prizes are offered for stories, poems and art work. Juniors, come on, show the seniors that you, too, have heaps of talent.

formal proceeding had been observed from an open window on the third floor of the inn. The peering eyes belonging to a Mrs. Carter, a widow who spent many a sleepless night sitting by her bedroom window. She could not sleep because she was a very superstitious old lady and was always imagining things. When she noticed June's approach she stared in fright. Could it be a ghost? No, it couldn't be. But yet—it must be. She was dumb with fright and closing the window pulled down the shade in haste. It must be admitted that from a short distance away June probably did resemble a ghost in her white robe and with her short golden hair bathed in moonlight.

Mrs. Carter was thoroughly alarmed, thinking the hotel was haunted and in repeating what she had seen made some of the other old people rather uneasy. This annoyed the manager, for he was in fear of such gossip spoiling the peaceful reputation his hostelry enjoyed. He did not put any faith in what the old lady said, but she threatened to leave if he did not look into the matter. So he agreed to watch that night with her and several others in the old lady's bed chamber for a repetition of the ghost's parade in the garden.

That night as they sat waiting, it began to get late and conversation in low tones began to lag, and finally hushed altogether. They strained their eyes and looked.

The gate at the far end of the garden opened and forward came the "ghost." It was June, of course, on her second visit to the garden. The moon was not so bright tonight and she looked more like a ghost than ever in the same white robe she had worn the night before.

As soon as she appeared, the manager and two other men who had been watching, crept downstairs, intending to follow the ghost and find out what it did and where it went. This they did at a safe distance without making their presence known. As the "ghost" turned the corner of the building just under the office windows and disappeared from sight, the men stopped enthralled. For there in the office they saw a light on the wall and in the sphere of light a hand turning the knob of the wall saf

Silently they crept to the inner office door, and bursting in suddenly soon had a struggling, kicking prisoner. The captive turned out to be just an ordinary crook who had broken his way into the hotel office and was about to loot the wall safe when he was captured. He was turned over to the town Sheriff and they all went to bed.

The next day the catching of the thief was the all-important topic of all the gossip in the little summer colony. Funny as it may seem, nothing was said about the "ghost."

The manager, however, had not forgotten. He and the other two men who had caught the burglar wondered if he was the ghost. The manager said no, the ghost had nothing to do with the robber, because the ghost was all in white and was so very much smaller. No, it looked like the ghost was the real thing and no mistake.

...at night they again watched for the ghost, but from the office windows this time where they would be nearer to the ground and pursuit would be easier.

At about the usual hour, June appeared on her third and what was to be her last visit to the garden, to make her wish come true.

She followed her same program as on her previous visits, and then started toward the office to go out the rear gate and home.

As she turned the corner of the building a pair of strong arms grabbed her and held her. At the same time some one played a bright, glaring light on her face. She wanted to scream but couldn't. It was like a nightmare.

"Who are you, and what are you doing here?" demanded the manager.

"I-I-I'm June Evans," she finally managed to stutter, "and-and I was only making a wish."

"A wish!" said the manager, perplexed.

"Let's take her inside and let the child tell her story," suggested one of the other men and they all went into the office, turned on the lights, and sat down to hear what it was all about.

"Now," said the manager, more kindly than he had spoken before, "tell me. What were you doing, child?"

Then June told them of the legend the old gardener had told her and how she had come there to make a wish in hope of it coming true. When she had finished, one of the men broke into unrestrained laughter. Upon finishing, he said, turning to the manager.

"There's your ghost!" emphasizing the word "ghost."

"Well," replied the manager, "without our little 'ghost' we would never have seen and caught the burglar who broke into the office. And there was a good deal of money and other valuables in that safe."

"Then you're not going to scold me?" June questioned.

"Scold you! Why, I should say not, child," the manager replied. And reaching into his pocket he drew out a crisp $5 bill and handed it to her. "Take this," he said, "and go home, as it's getting late. Also, please try not to frighten old ladies who can't sleep, out of their wits by appearing as a ghost."

"I'll try," promised June, and as she was walking back home in the waning moonlight she suddenly stopped.

"Why!" she exclaimed. "My wish has come true!"

For hadn't she been wishing for a set of garden tools all her own? Now she could buy them with her $5 bill. As she walked the rest of the way home she thought to herself that the legends and traditions that old Bradner had told her were true after all, no matter how much some people may laugh at them.

PEGGY'S SACRIFICE

Written and Illustrated by Dorothy Jordan,

1970 La France avenue, South Pasadena.

Peggy's tired little feet skipped merrily down Broadway tonight. At last there had come a chance for her to buy herself a new dress. Before this, every last cent that she could spare had been sent to poor little Mother O'Gray, but this sweet little lady no longer needed her help.

"Wasn't it lucky, having this extra money, just when he invited me out?" she thought. Yes, her Fairy Prince had come at last.

Not long after Peggy had entered her cheap little room, Kate, Peggy's dearest friend, came running in and was soon pouring out her sad story.

"You see, it's this way," she sobbed, "Mother has been sick for several weeks now and—and, the medicine will cost $10 and my last dollar went to little Bobby at the hospital."

Peggy was just almost to say, "well, what can I do?" but knew how little Peggy knew too well what she could do. She would give Kate her dress money.

Her Prince would be scared away by the old blue crepe just like the rest. He would never make a date with her again. Young men like Dick liked smartly dressed girls, girls that they would be proud to introduce to their friends. But Peggy knew that while a dress would soon wear out, her sacrifice would live on forever in the hearts of her friends.

After the overjoyed Kate had left, Peggy cried. Not because she was sorry for what she had done, but because her dream had broken like some beautiful bubble. She had seen Dick roll up in his cute little French roadster; she had pictured herself in the new dress, all frills and ribbons, stepping lightly into the car, or else being introduced to his rich friends. She could not possibly repicture herself in the old blue crepe for anything. She would be awkward and dull, and, alas! The first time she went out with her Prince Charming would be the last.

The next night found Peggy in her old faded crepe, but resolved not to let her sorrow spoil her sacrifice. She went to the club, was introduced, danced, had supper and came home. Dick seemed not to notice her dress, but his friends noticed and commented. Peggy knew.

A week passed, but Peggy had not seen Dick. She had seen Kate, though, and a loving, grateful Kate, she was. Peggy had not poured out her troubles to her friend this time, for fear of hurting her feelings. This night she sat at the window reading, when suddenly up rolled a beautiful French roadster and out jumped a young man. Her Prince Charming had come back!

The dress was but a worldly fancy, but for her sacrifice she was rewarded by One above.

KLO-KLO LAND

(Note. It is with the greatest of pleasure that Aunt Dolly is republishing her story of "Klo-Klo Land." This fairy tale was one of her first stories to appear in our Junior Times, four years ago. Tiny tots still remember the magic bird who turned into a Trufy Boy, and as they have begged Aunt Dolly to publish it once more, she is jotting down the first installment this Sunday.)

BY AUNT DOLLY

Few people have heard of the Klo-Klo Bird, and the reason is simple as one, two three. He lived in the far-away days when everyone had gardens, and in the gardens were sun-dials. These, dear children, were most frightfully important to the Klo-Klo Bird, for he built nests upon them.

At sundown he would flap his wings and wink at the frog who lived in Lysa's garden, near the dial.

"Now you," he cried, "may watch over her throughout the night. I am going to make myself deliciously comfy and go to sleep."

The frog sniffed. He didn't think much of the offer, although he, too, loved the crippled child who played in their garden.

"I'd like to sit on the wall and sing," he croaked.

"Ah, me!" sighed the Klo-Klo Bird. "If you could see yourself sitting on a wall. You look like a barrel."

"You're very rude," the frog snapped. "I am sure your mamma never spanked you."

"You're right," his friend agreed. "How does it feel? You see, as I never had a mamma and as I am two weeks and one minute old and will never be any older, how could I ever be spanked?"

"True," sniffed the frog, and remembering that Klo-Klo Bird had said he looked like a barrel he began plotting mischief.

"Would you care," he asked in honeyed tones, "to find out, dear little Klo-Klo, just how it feels to be spanked?"

Although the frog's manner was kind and his voice sweet as syrup, Klo-Klo, being a magic bird, was wiser than seven owls. He was afraid something was wrong. What if his friend played him false; then Lysa locked up in her white nursery would be without him. Who would comfort her, who would throw shadows on her wall and pluck fairies from her open hearth? But he was curious, all Klo-Klo birds are curious, and that is why they never live very long.

"Please," he said cautiously, "I should like to find out, but spank gently, will you?"

The frog grinned and chose a stick as long as himself and thick as a banana.

"Count one," he commanded.

Klo-Klo shut his eyes. "One," he whispered.

"Two," his friend called.

"Two," Klo-Klo repeated.

"Three," shouted the frog, and spanked with all his might. It was terrible. Klo-Klo fell off the dial; he fell into the dust and gathering up his legs, went howling into the wilderness.

He ran and he panted and he flew, calling the frog many unkind names, for never had he dreamed such a dreadful thing could happen. Then all of a sudden he remembered Lysa. She was alone, waiting for him to appear, as he always did at midnight.

"Dear, dear," Klo-Klo sighed, "I must go to her. This will never do."

But he was tired, so tired he could not journey back through the wilderness. He looked about. He was in a desert and only one tree stood in its midst. Boldly he strutted up to it, pecked at the bark and flew into its branches.

Now it so happened that this tree was owned by a witch who brewed powerful magic on the other side of the moon.

No sooner did he rest his tired body upon a limb than——

GIRL SAYS BOYS

ARE EFFEMINATE

SAYS THEY ACCEPT FAVORS, AND PROVE SELVES POOR SPECIMENS OF MANHOOD

Here is the week's prize-winning letter in our Flaming Youth contest. Who will be the next winner? Aunt Dolly.

Aunt Dolly dear:

Flaming youth! What a subject in this day and age, and what an opportunity to set jangled thoughts on paper. What do I think about rolled stockings, flasks on the hip, rides to the beach? Well, it just amounts to one thing, progress or no progress, woman is always the loser. And may the girl who forgets this be pitied.

Just the other day, while on the campus I heard a group of boys discussing certain friends of mine, and although I did not want to eavesdrop, I could not help it very well. Aunt Dolly, you would have called these boys cads. They took two girls out the night before, flattered them, made love to them, and then made them the butt of coarse jokes in college. I wanted to slap their faces, but what could I do? Even that privilege is taken away from a girl.

One of the fellows said, "Gee, she was easy. Guess I won't bother taking her out again." So let that go down in our good log of human experiences, chronicled in the T.J.C. What is easy to get, is spurned, and why do girls keep forgetting this?

Another thing, Aunt Dolly dear, so many boys accept favors from girls, let them pay for sodas, give them cigarettes, etc. Surely this is not real manhood. In fact, if you ask me, I would say manhood is sinking, not coming up. The real gritty, he-men are passing out, and the soft, effeminate types are coming in. They remind me of dancing dolls; fit decorations for a drawing room in the time of Louis XIV, but mighty poor specimens to go through life with in 1927.

I hope you will not think this letter bitter. I am merely stating what I think.

three blue envelopes, all of which were addressed to me. Oh, boy! Aunt Dolly, I was sure "tickled pink" when I opened them. I seemed to forget all my "blues" and I was "settin' on top of the world."

If you only knew, Aunt Dolly, how your letters cheer a guy up. You'd never stop writing. The very next time I'm in Los Angeles I'm going to look you up, for I'd just love to have a chat with you, Aunt Dolly.

When I looked over the list of names that were present at your "Night in Forty-nine" party, I thought: "Oh! What lucky fellows they are." Well, Aunt Dolly, I'll have to say goodnight for I have to get down to business and learn that "golden rule."

Do write soon.

With love,

[Signed]

HERBIE ROTHWILL,
4277 Jackdaw street, San Diego.

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

I was simply overwhelmed with delight, and over such kind of pleasing emotion when finding the dollar prize for my editorial, which is to have the grand and glorious honor of appearing in our own Junior Times. Thank you, Aunt Dolly, loads of times. Will you mind very much if I send in lots and lots more contributions? Life is at its very brightest when a beautiful blue envelope awaits them from a dear friend, especially after a gruesome, grinding day at school.

Much, much love,

From your niece,

[Signed]

AGNES MITSCHLER, 1317 West Forty-first street, Los Angeles.

Dearest Aunt Dolly:

I know you have almost two million members to write to, so I will not expect an answer for my last letter yet.

I am very much interested in your plans for the Christmas gifts for the poor children this year and will try to do my part. I would like to join your sewing circle, but as I do not live in Los Angeles, it is quite a long way for me to go. I want to come to some of your parties, so I have read of your preparations for different ones.

I was 14 years of age this July, so I can go to the senior party and I would also like to meet you, Aunt Dolly. I have an ambition to be an authoress, but after I have read all the discouraging articles on the subject, especially one by Gene Stratton Porter, I am not quite so enthusiastic.

I read The Junior Times every Sunday and I would like to compliment Rosemary Wiese, Margaret Kostowal and Helen Siebenthal on their splendid literary efforts. I am sure each of these girls has talent that she may be able to use if she cares to be an authoress.

[Signed]

DOROTHY DORR,
920 Harvard Road, Burbank.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I am so glad you let me join your club. My schoolmates see my pin and ask where I got it. I told them I got it at The Times Junior Club. I hope I will get a letter soon.

[Signed]

MARSHALL TOMPKINS.

Dearest of Aunts:

Congratulations on the best inspiration you've ever put over, your big Christmas drive. You didn't surprise me a bit though by your early Christmas call, for ever since the beginning of school vacation I have been working on varibus things for your Christmas drive. I have finished already a baby dress and slip, an apron and baby doll and outfit. Am still working though, in all my spare time. I am awfully sorry I live so far from the club rooms and the exhibit hall. If it wasn't for that handicap, believe me, I surely would be on hand every Saturday afternoon. I'll be there in spirit anyway, if not in body, so if you see a ghost looking like a dark, horrid, freckle-faced girl, please give it a welcome, won't you, Aunt Dolly?

In another envelope are inclosed a couple of essays. I hope you will like them. I am getting dreadfully sleepy now so I shall just say goodbye till next time.

[Signed] DOROTHY GARDNER.

Frank Blair's Strange Trick

BY FRANK A. RECORD

IT WAS a hazy day in July. Bees droned in the alfalfa and clover and a spotless sky of azure resembled a big upside-down bowl over the countryside. A happy crowd of boys splashed in the inviting waters of the creek flowing just beyond the orchard of Old Man Long, as he was called by those who knew him well. This man bore the reputation of being the stingiest person ever, and it was related of him that he never got a good night's sleep, from the time his fruit began to ripen, until the harvest was all gathered and safely stored away.

Boys, traversing a road anywhere near the orchard did not care to be seen munching an apple or peach during season, for fear of encountering the old man and being accused of theft.

As Walter Mason, who had been in the water a long time, crawled to the creek's bank and began dressing, he shouted between chattering teeth and over very blue lips, "Hey, fellows! I'm thinking that Old Man Long may happen hereabouts, so when you come out be sure not to bother his orchard."

"And if he did 'happen' to show up, what would you kids do about it?" a gruff voice inquired, as the very person mentioned appeared through a clump of bushes, scowling and carrying a stout stick.

"Nothing!" meekly answered Walter, while the boys in the Creek ducked and came up on the other side of the stream. Safe over there, Frank Blair shouted, "Nature works pretty well for you; but I don't believe she ever intended all that fine fruit for just you!"

"Well," sneered the other, "the land is mine and what is grown on it is my very own. I don't wish to catch any of you boys pestering inside the wire fence, either!"

"Huh!" grunted Frank.

"Wait until you know somebody wants to!" Walter retorted.

"Suppose you'd like it very much, if Nature would kindly arrange to provide you and your crowd with some fruit, eh? Wouldn't that be fine? Well, good Dame Nature knows who is deserving—those who work!" called out the man, as he struck at a bunch of grass with his stick by way of emphasizing the fact that he carried it.

"Nobody is going to steal any of your apples, Mr. Long!" cried another of the lads on the opposite shore. "If you'd find my name on an apple I believe you'd scratch it off to keep me from claiming it!"

"Name on an apple!" sneered the owner of the orchard. "Indeed, if Nature should put the name of one of you boys on an apple or any other of my orchard beauties, I'd willingly allow such boy to have the whole tree. But—" and, stopping to think a moment the crafty old fellow added, "no name scratched on an apple by hand would count."

"Nature does not scratch," Walter Mason ventured, rubbing his wet hair and starting off downstream, "except when a fellow gets into a bramble-bush or a patch of nettles!"

As he left the spot Old Man Long called over his shoulder, "Every thing in the orchard is green, so you boy's needn't bother there, unless you want to go home with stomach-aches!"

"We are not thieves, Mr. Long," hotly cried Frank Blair.

"As to that," again spoke the miserly man, "I wouldn't say."

On the way back to town Frank was thoughtful. This boy was an apprentice at a nursery and, besides being an industrious and dependable lad, had the very commendable trait of observation. Suddenly he stopped short in the road. As if to mark the arrival of a firm determination he kicked a clod of dirt to one side and remarked to his companions, "I have an idea. What it is I shall not now explain, but I want one of you fellows to volunteer a visit to Old Man Long at his home and—"

"Why not go yourself," quickly Mason inquired.

"For a very good reason," quickly came the answer. "Listen. Someone is to get a promise from the old man that, in case an apple or apples on any tree in his orchard shall bear the name of one of our crowd, the tree's fruit shall be entirely ours. We'll divide equally."

"When we get it, and that will be seventeen years after the moon has fallen from the sky!" giggled one of the boys.

"I guarantee that, barring storm accidents or the like, we will give Dame Nature the job of picking out a tree—and it'll be a good one, believe me—for our very own!" cried Frank.

Blades of grass were gathered, torn into different lengths and all the lads, excepting Frank Blair, "drew lots" to determine who should visit the obnoxious old man. The short length fell to "Stubby" Wells and he made a very wry face.

"There it is, Mr. Long!" The man's eyes fairly bulged out of his head as he looked.

"That's it—pick me, the fattest in the bunch, so if a fellow has to run I'd have no show!" said "Stubby."

It came to pass, one evening later, that all the boys gathered at Frank Blair's home garage, and, after literally pushing "Stubby" out of the door, with a last bit of advice, the lad departed on his strange quest, returning a short time later radiant and with a slip of paper. "Read that!" young Wells cried, throwing down a folded bit, upon which was an agreement roughly scrawled:

"If the neighborhood boys do not bother my orchard during the entire season, I, Martin Long, promise to award a tree filled with apples and one with peaches, to the said boys, in case the names of one or more of them appear upon one or more apples or one or more peaches; names not to be scratched or otherwise made by human beings. [Signed] Martin Long."

"He laughed and seemed pleased," said "Stubby," relating his experience. "H told me that no doubt we would attempt some trick, but that the whole thing is so ridiculous he'd not give it another thought, except to hold us to the promise not to bother his orchard. I firmly agreed we'd not so much as pick a flower inside the fence."

"That's hunky!" laughed Frank Blair.

"It is, except that we are not to write our names or scratch our names, or in any other manner make them, ourselves, on the fruit, he says!" growled Walter.

"And how are we to get our names on the fruit, if we don't go there?" inquired "Stubby."

"I'll look after that, but I'll not bother the orchard—not pick so much as a flower and will not even trample any of his grass—but I'll see to it that we win out!" Frank exulted. "I'll neither write, paint, scratch nor print any names."

A few moments later the boys separated, after Frank announced that he would personally do the rest, "Along in September, when the blush is on the fruit I promise, barring accidents, that we will win two trees!" he assured his friends. How, was a mystery that Frank did not offer to explain.

"Stubby" carried the agreement to his father's safety deposit vault box. "May never have to use it," he declared, "but if we do, I'll have it handy."

About sundown Frank Blair walked down the road toward Old Man Long's orchard. Outside the wire fence he made his way, scanning the loaded trees and, at last finding one that fairly creaked with the breath of every little tramp breeze the boy stopped, climbed to the top wire and from that vantage fumbled for several moments. Chuckling, when the job he was engaged in was completed, Frank walked on through the grass and weeds, still outside the fence. A bunch of peach trees next engaged his attention and young Blair selected a spreading tree with green fruit well matured hanging from every branch. Again the boy set to work and, without having set foot inside the inclosure, without even trampling a blade of grass in the orchard and without even knocking one peach to the ground, Frank Blair, whistling on his way, set out for home, well satisfied, no doubt, with his venture.

Another meeting was called in the Blair garage, at which Frank reported. Said he, "Well, I have arranged with Dame Nature so that she will positively print the names —Walter Mason, "Stubby" Wells and Frank Blair—on apples and peaches. Mind you, fellows, the good dame will do all this on the best fruit on the largest and heaviest-laden trees, too!"

"Been eating a book of fairy tales?" Walter asked, grinning.

"Nix!"

"He has had a curious dream, I take it!" exclaimed "Stubby." Then, after a moment's serious thought, "Stubby" added, "Don't try to make a fool of me, Frank, I know it was a silly thing for me to do, to go to Old Man Long with that proposition; but it's no fair showing me up!"

"We'll give you first pick of the trees, and that's fair enough!" enthusiastically declared Frank.

Golden early fall days came and Old Man Long's orchard began to ripen its harvest. Oftener now the owner of the place loitered in the vicinity to forestall any desire on the part of poachers to help themselves to his fruit; and came a time when the old man began scouting about the near-by town in search of reliable people to gather his crop. He was a little amused when Frank Blair and Walter Mason applied for work. With a twinkle in his eyes the orchard owner remarked, "So you want to get a look at the trees, do you? Suppose you hope to find that Dame Nature has marked your names on some of the fruit—haw, haw!"

"That's what we hope," firmly answered Frank.

Auto-trucks loaded with empty baskets and workers backed up to the Long orchard and the first to tumble out of one of the vehicles were Frank and Walter. Neither essayed asking for allotment of work, but the formerly eagerly hurried to the first of the trees he visited at the time he went to the wire fence alone, some two months previous.

"Stay close to me, Walt!" said the lad, nudging his companion; and in a few moments a loud and joyful cry brought Old Man Long to the spot where, pointing gleefully to a luscious apple, Frank Blair cried, "There it is, Mr. Long! According to your signed agreement, this tree is the property, so far as the harvest is concerned, of myself and my companions."

The man's eyes fairly bulged out of his head as he looked. Hanging to a limb was a big apple and across its blushing side was—not written, not scratched, not painted but made there by the sun and dew and the rain, with Dame Nature's help—the name, "Frank Blair."

On another limb hung another apple bearing Walter Mason's name, while still another plainly showed "Stubby" Wells's name across its side.

Old Man Long nearly fainted. He passed a hand over his eyes and looked several times at the apples; then he rubbed at the names, evidently thinking they could be erased, but Nature had grown them into the very skin of the fruit!

The peach tree that Frank selected was next visited and, to the surprise of the owner, the names of the three boys appeared upon as many ruddy peaches.

From his pocket Walter produced the signed agreement, which he flashed in the man's face and then drew it back. "We came to pick our own fruit—not yours!" declared Walter, although he was as much surprised as the owner of the trees. All he knew was that the names were there and that he and his chums were entitled to the fruit the two trees bore.

"This is uncanny!" shouted Old Man Long. "I'll stick to the agreement, for none of you, so far as I know, ever bothered the orchard; but if you'll tell me how it was done I'll throw in a few extra bushels of apples for the information."

"Nature!" quietly spoke Frank Blair.

"I know it, but how did Nature do it? How did you boys know it could be done? You had something to do with the affair, else you could not have known about it. It didn't just happen," mused the man.

It was all very simple, even though mysterious. Frank Blair, at his work about the nursery where he was employed, was enabled to observe many queer things and it was he who conceived the idea of pasting the boys' names cut from strips of paper, around the apples and peaches, being careful not to form an entire band which would have kept the fruit from growing. As the sun brought the blush to the apples and peaches the names pasted over the skins kept out the light and warmth and the result was that in the midst of the red the names of the boys remained, white and yellow. Rains and the dew and the winds removed the strips, in the course of time, and thus the orchard owner was really beaten by Nature.

HEY—POLICE! QUICK! WE MAY BE IN TIME TO SAVE HER!
THE PLATINUM WIRE IS IN A CONCEALED SAFE IN THE NEXT ROOM—THROUGH THE DOOR BEHIND YOU.
I OPENS DE DOOR AND YUH LEADS DE WAY!
MAYBE I OUGHTA KNOCK YOU COLD AND TIE YOU UP ANYHOW. BUT WHAT HARM CAN A "OLD-FASHION" GOIL DO? NOW IF YUH WAS A MODERN GOIL ATHALETE, I WOULD BEAN AND TIE YUH!
MY LITTLE PLAN WORKS OUT!
OLD-FASHIONED AS CAN BE IF MEN ARE RUDE TO ME WHAT CAN I DO BUT SWING OLD-FASHIONED WALLOPS?

THIS BIG FELLOW LOOKS LIKE YOU, UNCA WALT.

THIS LITTLE FELLOW ACTS LIKE YOU DO, SKEEZIX.

UNCA WALT! IT'S TIME TO READ ME THE FUNNY PAPER.

GREAT SCOTT! HAS ANOTHER WEEK ROLLED AROUND! IT DOESN'T SEEM TWO DAYS SINCE THE LAST SESSION.

WHAT DOES THE BIG FELLOW SAY, UNCA WALT?

WELL YOU SEE HE IS LOOKING BEHIND THE DOOR AND HE SAYS "WHERE ON EARTH ARE MY SHOES?"

AN' IN THE NEXT PICTURE HE'S LOOKING UNDER THE BED. WHAT DOES HE SAY?

HE SAYS, "I'M SURE I LEFT THEM RIGHT IN THIS ROOM."

HERE COMES THE COLORED MAMMY THAT WORKS FOR HIM. WHAT DOES HE SAY TO HER?

"I'M LOOKING FOR MY SHOES. HAVE YOU SEEN THEM WALKING AWAY?"

THEN SHE SAYS SOMETHING. WHAT IS IT?

"I AIN'T SEEN NOTHIN' OF 'EM, SAH. THEY COULDN'T OF WALKED VERY FAR."

HERE HE'S UP ON A STEPLADDER WITH A PAIR OF FIELD GLASSES LOOKING DOWN AROUND AND ALL OVER THE FLOOR.

WHAT DOES THE BIG FELLA SAY?

HE SAYS "NOT A SAIL - I MEAN SOLE IN SIGHT."

WHAT DOES THAT MEAN?

THAT MEANS HE CAN'T SEE A SHOE ANYWHERE.

OH! THEN WHAT'S HE DOING HERE?

HE'S STARTING OUT TO LOOK FOR THE LITTLE BOY.

THEN IN THIS PICTURE HE FINDS HIM IN THE BATHROOM AND WHAT DOES HE SAY?

"YOU LITTLE RASCAL" HE SAYS, "WHAT HAVE YOU DONE WITH MY SHOES?"

AND WHAT DOES THE LITTLE BOY SAY?

HE SAYS, "I WAS PLAYIN' CANAL BOAT WITH 'EM IN THE BATHTUB BUT THEY SUNK!"

THAT'S A GOOD ONE. IS THAT ALL?

YES, BUT I THINK HE OUGHT TO HAVE SPANKED THE LITTLE BOY IN THE LAST PICTURE, DON'T YOU?

NO, UNCA WALT. MAYBE THE LITTLE BOY COULDN'T HELP IT.

Detective Burns Faces Charge

...nd of Agency Declared t... Have Urged Silence by Oil-Jury Informer

"Taking Care" of Him Sai... to Have Been Promised If He Kept Still

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. (AP)—Mo... revelations touching the operation... of the Burns detectives in the Fall... Sinclair oil trial jury scandal were... made public tonight by government... declarations by William J. Burns... that the story told to the counse... counsel.

This is by way of reply to publi... by William J. McMullin and contain... ing startling accusations against the... internationally known detective is a... tissue of lies."

Coincidentally, counsel stated that... Burns will be given an opportunity... tomorrow to make his third appear... ance before the grand jury to pre... sent his statement and submit him... self to cross-questioning on the... basis of the affidavit made by Mc... Mullin, who was sent here by the... Burns agency to shadow the jury... and who reported to the gov... ernment within a week.

CAUTION RELATED

Among other things government... counsel said McMullin told them... that he had been cautioned by Burns... and his son, W. Sherman Burns, to... "stick to his story" and to "tell... it" before the grand jury and that... it would be "taken care of" later by... the Burns organization.

McMullin, who was known to the... Burns people as William Y. Long... with the code designation, L-96, told... government counsel that he expect... ed a "real hand-out" from the elder... Burns. He was told that if he re... ceived any reward at Philadelphia he... must report immediately to Owen J. Rob... erts, of special dill counsel there and... that any reward was given him here... to report to Dist.-Atty. Gordon.

McMullin's account, as related by... government lawyers, is that the... association with the Burns, father... and son, took place at the Union... station after a mistrial had been or... dered by Justice Giddons and the... grand jury had started its investiga...

ADVISED BY COUNSEL

The young detective and World... War veteran who kept the govern... ment advised of what was going on... in the ranks of the operatives em... ployed by Henry Mason Day, confi... dential associate of Harry F. Sin... clair, is quoted as having said that... William J. Burns and his son in ad... vising him "to stick to his story"... before the grand jury referred to an... affidavit McMullin made in effect ac... cusing Harris R. Lamb, a special as... sistant to the Attorney General,... with having made contact with one... of the jurors.

McMullin made this affidavit on... the advice of government counsel and... it became the basis for charges by... Burns that the only persons who... had approached any of the jurors... were a government agent and a... newspaper man. Its basis is a re... port which McMullin declares he... signed by direction of his superiors... and which was false.

Explaining the circumstances sur... rounding the drafting of that affi... davit, government counsel said Mc... Mullin's understanding was that the... original report was to be used by the...
